Bound together as we are in various relationships in the ordinary life of every day, no man liveth, or can live, unto himself. It is true that in the depths of our nature we must always be alone, that there are many questions which none but ourselves can understand, and that for our special doubts and difficulties, sorrows and struggles, trials and temptations, burdens and cares, there is no human help or partnership. In these and in the final issues of our life we are alone, and our fellows cannot take account of us: to God alone we render the record.

Yet the common ground between us is both broad and clear, and in our national, municipal, social, Church and family life we are in a very real way linked to one another, and we stand most intimately related. Here there is a certain amount of responsibility incumbent upon each. By the law of human society no man is permitted to be a law unto himself. We cannot repudiate our obligations; if we attempt to do so, our fellowmen properly and promptly demand us to give account of ourselves, and follow with punishment criminal neglect of certain responsibilities.

But besides these legal duties there are others even more binding on all true followers of Christ, and on these St. Paul lays special emphasis. In particular, there are the duties of love and honor and service demanded in closest and dearest relationships in life. St. Paul's great desire is that the spirit of Christ should be carried into all these relationships, and that men should recognise that their religion is feeble and nerveless unless it show itself as a real power in life, animating and dominating the most trivial thought and word and act of every day.

"A new commandment give I unto you," said Christ, "that ye love one another." That is the great law by which our conduct must be ruled. It insures happiness, for it cuts directly at the root of all selfish thought and action. If only we could fathom the depth of meaning in that new commandment, if only we were more ready than we are to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ," what a different world this would be! What an accession of all the Christian graces, of brotherly kindness and forbearance and forgiveness! What a gain to our hearths and homes in love and unselfishness and good temper and happiness and brightness! What a boon to our social life in the disappearance of much envy and backbiting, and jealousy and foolish rivalry and vanity which now disfigure it! What a blessing to our business relations in greater purity and honesty and more straightforward dealing! And what a benediction to the nation at large in that righteousness which alone exalts a nation and testifies to the holiness and happiness of its individual citizens!

Now St. Paul desired above all things to see this spirit cultivated and flourishing in the near relationships of the Home. It is a prayer that finds an echo in all our hearts. For we have been specially blessed of God in that we are privileged to know the meaning of home better than most, and no small part of the greatness of our land and the glory of the race rests on the beauty and power that are enshrined in all that that sacred word implies—home! that subtle association of ideas and feelings that no words can frame or walls contain—a name that suggests for most of us sacred hallowed memories, the discipline of joys and sorrows shared, the atmosphere hearts that speak to each other in clearer tongue than words, the lives that, watched with loving care, grow on from infant's days to manhood's years, the common trials and hopes and fears and the thousand pulses of the hearts that go to make a home!

Blessed are we if our early memories cluster sweetly round a happy home. Its influence follows us through life. Its light shines upon our darkest hours, and our lives are brightened by the holy memories of early days.

We cannot but look with concern upon the forces in modern life that are tending to weaken and belittle the influence of the home and the family; and if we believe that the welfare of a healthy state is to a great extent dependent on the welfare of the families which compose it, then we ought to oppose any philosophy of life which teaches a loosening of family ties, and we ought to deprecate any legislation which tends to minimise the responsibilities of parents in the home.

Well may we pray for an abundant measure of the spirit of Christ in the homes of our land; for the presence of that spirit is the only safe-guard of happiness and peace. The practice of the Christian graces in the inner home life is not always easy. There is much to try the temper in the petty cares and minor worries of every day, and constant demands are made on our Christian spirit of cheerfulness and hope. It is only by "submitting ourselves one to another in the fear of God" that home happiness can be secured and reciprocal duties faithfully performed.

Then the love that is in constant practice in the life of home will not end in any form of family selfishness (not altogether unknown) but, if it be true to its source, it will show itself in circles far beyond. For it is a spirit which cannot hide, but which brightens and lightens the responsibilities which the various relationships of life bring with them. A true love to Christ impels to loving service to our fellowmen and to a right discharge of all our obligations to each other.

Nor shall we then rest content with a mere fulfillment of our reciprocal duties, but in the name and in the spirit of Christ we shall say with one who sought to follow Him, "I expect to pass through this life but once. If there is any good thing or any kindness I can do to my fellow-beings, let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once."

God grant that this spirit may rule in our hearts to the blessing of our souls, to the good of our fellows, and to the praise and glory of His Holy Name!—W. Lyall Wilson.

The Problem of the Drunkard.

Justice Joseph F. Mulqueen of the New York Supreme Court holds that the drunkard is a greater social menace than the burglar. The logic by which this grim conclusion is reached is that the burglar is bound to have his wits about him, while the inebriate's brain gets so befuddled that he is a public peril and a prodigious problem. Dr. Henry Graham Furday, who is at the head of the New York mission settlement, declares that it is a more difficult task to reform a chronic drunkard than it is to cure a tuberculosis patient in an advanced stage of the disease. To transform a consumptive into a person of fairly robust health strikes Dr. Furday as a simpler achievement than to reclaim a rounder.

These sayings indicate the difficulties of converting an habitual drunkard into a social asset. A bill providing for the erection of a $300,000 institution for the treatment of victims of inebriety is to be pressed in the New Jersey Legislature this winter. The underlying theory of the scheme is that drunkenness is a disease, rather than a crime, and the proposed institution is to be called a psychopathic hospital, to which have acquired fixed habits of drunkenness and have lost the capacity for self-control may be committed in two or three ways. As New Jersey maintains nearly 8000 liquor saloons, an institution which is capable of housing a few hundred habitual drunkards will not go far toward solving the colossal problem of inebriety.

The jail method of dealing with the drunkards is a failure, and it involves a breakdown of the machinery of criminal administration. The hospital treatment is somewhat better, but it is no worker of miracles. Perhaps a farm colony to which confirmed inebriates may be committed for indefinite periods and at which they may be put to such steady work as they are capable of accomplishing, largely in the open air, is perhaps the most hopeful policy. One encouraging consideration is that inebriety is usually acquired under the age of twenty. If a person has not developed the drink habit before he is twenty-five the probability that he will become a drunkard is remote. To prevent minors from getting a thirst for liquor should therefore be the first aim.—Boston Transcript.

Lot had left Sodom. It was with reluctance that he turned his back upon that city, but angels had hurried him away and on to a place of safety. All unmindful of the impending doom, affairs in the cities of the plains were taking their usual course. The orgies of the night were spent, and day was breaking over the table-lands of Arabia. It was not different from other mornings—the same dewy freshness was in the air, the same twitter of birds, the same awakening of life and of hope in the human heart. Suddenly all was changed. The sky became lurid and threatening, and ere the sun had arisen, destruction dire and merciless came. "The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all." Over this world of laughter and gayety, hidden by its bright skies and natural glories, a more terrible doom awaits. All unmindful of its certainty and nearness, the people of this age pursue each his favorite pastime; human progress and culture, equalled only by folly and iniquity, goes on unhindered, and men speak and act as though no change in the present order were possible, yet Jesus said in connection with his words on the destruction of Sodom, "Even thus shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of Man." Let us, then not be deceived, but, holding lightly the things of the world, be ready to move at a moment's notice.

Not Feeling But Faith.

There are many who think—or at least this is indicated by many expressions—that Christianity is largely a religion of feeling, emotion, or sentiment; that its chief evidence to its devotees is the feeling which it arouses.

It is freely granted that this misconception of Christianity exists among many professed Christians. They are only Christians when they are wrought into an ecstacy of feeling at revivals, under powerful exhortations, or at some warm social meeting! Unless such excitement, incitement, or association continues, the religion wanes. Such religion must necessarily be ephemeral and shallow.

Christianity is based on life union with Christ Jesus; and the channel of that life, the bond of that union, is faith, faith in God's eternal, omnipotent Word. Genuine, lasting faith is absolute submission to God persistently maintained. The soul yields to God's commandments, yields the sin God's law condemns, yields himself that God's promises may work out in him the will of God, and grasps joyfully the forgiveness, the righteousness, the life, the joy there is in Christ Jesus. Faith to the Christian is just what the trolley is to the electric car; it connects with the life of God, the Source of power.

The Christian's confidence, therefore, is not based on feeling, not on feeling, but on God's Word. And that Word does not change. Feeling may be absent, emotion may die away, but God's Word abides. We are sinners; but Christ purchased us as sinners; and we, therefore, confess our sins and yield all to him. He forgives the sins, for so has he promised. It matters not whether we feel like it or not, the sin is forgiven, because we have submitted to the conditions, we have made connection with the Power which takes the sin away. In that promise we may rejoice. Satan may recall those sins by taunting us with them; we may be grieved by seeing their results before us; dark clouds may at times shut out the light of heaven; but God's Word changes not, and our faith rests on the Word. The sins are forgiven, for God has spoken.

This faith will be more manifest in the time of trial. The worldling and Christian may walk together in sunlight and prosperity with little to distinguish between them; but let sorrow come, business reverses take place, friends forsake us, our good name be reviled, death remove loved ones from our presence, then it is that faith is tested. He whose hope is based on the seeming, the feeling, the immediate surroundings, will fail, while he whose hope is in the sure promises of God, will stand secure in Christ Jesus. His house cannot fall; it is founded on the Rock. This is genuine Christianity and its basis. Would there were more of it.—Signs of the Times.

A Constistent Life.

Do not forget that our lives may be the only Bible our neighbor ever reads. Our words, our actions, are spread ever before him like so many pages to be read. He is forever scanning us, looking for a blot here, a blemish there, or some absolute mistake. We may think lightly of some inconsistent action; he does not, and is quick to take advantage of such to defend his own shortcomings. "The one argument I never could answer," said an infidel, after conversion, "was the consistent life of my Christian mother."

We can hold our places for a little while only. Others are crowding us out; we must pass out; we must pass on, and the place that now knows us will know another. To get an idea how easily he can be spared, one only has to step aside for a little, and note how easily his place is filled, and how soon he is forgotten. Then, old companions are separated from us by circumstances, old friends form new friendships, comrades of other days die; and we are often alone. But if we walk with God we have a constant and never failing companion. In every way of life, in all its varied experiences, we find the divine love unfailing. Never are we isolated, never forsaken. Even when we come to the boundary line between the here and the hereafter, at the approach of which the most trusted and intimate associate draws back and says good bye, his presence is with us. If we walk with God we are never alone.—Crisis.

How about this day? Has it found you cheery, busy and kind of heart? If it has, then it has been a good day, no matter whether you have put anything in the bank or not.

Who Should Take Communion?

(Continued from Page 8.)

comes. Hence it was given to them, and to them only.

Now the question is, who constitute the "Called out of God?" Or in other words, Who constitutes the Church of God, or Christ? It does seem to me that all are compelled to admit that none but the Church, or the called out ones, have any right to partake of these emblems. Surely it will also be admitted, that only those who hear the gospel, believe the gospel and obey the gospel, are "called out of God." The Church of God is the body of the Christ, and there is only one way to become a member of that body, and that is by hearing the gospel, believing it, and obeying it. Christ said, just before his ascension, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 16.

Can you see how anyone could claim the promise unless they complied with these terms? Suppose one hears the gospel and claims to believe it, but refuses to be baptized, could he claim to be saved? No, for he has not complied with the terms. On the other hand, suppose one hears something that is said to be the gospel and believes it, but it is not the gospel, could he claim to be saved? No, for he has not believed the gospel. He has believed a perverted gospel, therefore his faith is a perverted faith, and not the faith of the Bible. Hence such a one would not be a member of the body of Christ. Paul says, "By one spirit are we all baptized into one body." Therefore we are baptized into the body, or church of Christ, and we cannot become a member any other way. Hence we conclude that the Lord's supper is for those, and for those only, who have heard the gospel, believed it and are baptized. We should never offer it to any one else, for they have no right to it. Now we think this is a correct conclusion, and do not see how anyone can evade the conclusion. We sometimes let our sympathy get away with our better judgment. You may call this "close communion." Call it that if you will, it is the truth. But it is not in fact close, for it is free to all who will hear, believe and obey. It looks to me, that no others should even claim a right to it.—T. J. Daniel.

Clean Hands.

A jewelry salesman, noticing his hands to be somewhat soiled, said: "This is very trying to me. Of all persons I should have soft and clean hands. It is awful to offer a diamond or pearls of any sort, to a possible customer when my hands are not perfectly white and tidy. It makes a repulsive background for the piece of jewelry."

The Christian should have clean hands and a clean life. Whoever he may be, minister or not, he recommends Jesus Christ and his salvation to the world. His life should not be a sorry and repelling background. They who bear the vessels of the Lord should have pure hands. The salesman was very sensitive, and rightly so. He had cultivated taste. Each professing Christian should be scrupulously careful to maintain a consistent life.

We wish to announce the Bible School which will convene at Coats Grove, Michigan, July 22-30. Bro. Lindsay will have charge again. It is needless to urge those to come who have had the privilege of studying under him. We know you will come if you can. To those who may be interested and have never attended we extend a cordial invitation, and press upon you to come. Come one, come all. You will be more than repaid for your effort. Entertainment will be furnished by the Coats Grove brethren, and they desire that a good number be present. Inform Brother A. K. Richardson, Route 5, Hastings, Mich. that you will be there so you can be cared for.

Coats Grove is seven miles from Hastings, on the C. K. & S. Railroad. If you cannot make connections on this route, go to Hastings on the M. C. route, informing Brother Richardson beforehand and you will be met. Bear in mind the date—July 22-30; the place—Coats Grove. Come with Bible, pencil and paper, and a will to work and learn; that we may study to show ourselves approved unto God workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

Yours in the Master's service,
ROSE MILLER, Sec.

Ebenezer. 1. Sam 7, 12

The copy for this department of THE RESTITUTION is supplied by Brother Robert G. Huggins, of 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Please send all letters and communications intended for this section direct to him, and save delay.

Let us Pray.

Oh infinitely holy and righteous God our Father:—We rejoice that the First day of another week has dawned upon us. With the return of the hour of prayer oh teach us how to pray and what to pray for. We are weak, and come to thee for strength; we are ignorant and come to thee and thy Word for wisdom and strength, and heavenly favor, to sustain us in our conflict with the world and the flesh, and in our defence of thy truth. Conscious that we often err, are often so remiss that we are not worthy to be called thy children, we were undone but for the precious name thou hast given us to plead before thee—in the name of Jesus we pray thee to forgive all we have done amiss since we last assembled here, whether in thought or word or deed, so that we may feel thy pardoning love, and sit together in heavenly places today. Our Father, daily and hourly we are the recipients of thy bounty.—Our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. We have food and raiment and shelter while thousands are destitute, we have a glorious hope while myriads have no hope and are without God in the world. We magnify thy holy name that thou hast called us according to thy purpose to fill the earth with thy glory. We praise thee for this exalted privilege and pray that thou mayest use us for thy glory by showing others the way of life. Oh God, we think with sorrow of hearts today, of those far away, who are anxious to obey thy truth, and say to thy children, "Come over and help us." Oh thou who hearest prayer, is it too much to pray the Church throughout the land may respond to thine appeal today. Oh God, what a debt of love we owe thee—help us to be faithful to our trust and disseminate thy truth. In Jesus' name.

Charity "thinketh no evil," but of course, is not blind and insane. Christ is the true type.

Do not seek "some great thing." Set to work to obey Christ in the "few things," and great things will come along in due time.

There is scarcely a proverb or trite saying current but what can be traced to the Scriptures, and found to be only a human dilution of divine wisdom.

God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead. Acts xvii. 30.

Jewish Scruples About Mixed Marriages.

The Jewish Chronicle has the following paragraph under the heading of "Dr. Nordau and the Zionist Leadership."—In the course of an interview which Herr Brainin, the Hebrew writer and correspondent of the journal Hazofeh, had with Dr. Max Nordau, the latter, replying to an inquiry, said that for various reasons he could not accept the leadership of the Zionist movement. It was not for the lack of courage or for selfish reasons that he had come to this decision. The leader must be a good Jew in the full sense of the word, without a blemish, and although his (Dr. Nordau's) life was spotless, his family life would give material for attack to those who sought it. The great tragedy of his life was that he had not been a Zionist thirty years ago. In his drama, "Dr. Cohn," he had protested against mixed marriages, and the protest was thus directed against himself. He had censured a well-known author, and warned him not to marry out of the pale, but he did not follow his advice. We say, "Ought Jews inwardly to be less scrupulous?"

Destruction of Jerusalem by Abominable Powers.

1, Do all the verses in Matt. 24th chapter from the 3rd to the 21st refer to the destruction of Jerusalem?

II. What is the Abomination spoken of in the 15th verse?

MRS. FLORA A. WOOD.

EDITOR'S REPLY.

All the verses from the 4th to the 28th inclusive refer to the destruction of the Holy City. The prophecy intimates this repeatedly by terms of local and circumscribed import. In Mark's report of the same prophesy the 9th verse of Matthew is given a Jewish finge, for he mentions the "councils" which were peculiarly Jewish, and also "synagogues." Matthew mentions specifically the "holy place" (v. 15,) which means Jerusalem and its environs, the "Sabbath day" (v. 20,) which was a Jewish day of rest, and finally and conclusively, he names "Judea" (v. 16) as the Country and Jerusalem as the City in which the prophecy was to be fulfilled. Vs. 1, 2.

The prophecy was fulfilled in A. D. 70. In spite of the troublous times predicted in the foregoing verses of the chapter in verse 14 he states that the gospel would be preached in "all the world for a witness, and then shall the end (of the world-Jewish) come." This work was accomplished before A. D. 70. Mk. xvi. 20; Acts i. 18; Rom. x. 18; Col. i. 6, 23. "When ye therefore shall see the Abomination of Desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet stand in the holy place." v. 15. The "abomination of desolation" points to the Roman ensigns—the symbols of an idolatrous, Pagan power. To the Jews their ensigns and images were decidedly "abominable." Josephus says the Romans brought their ensigns into the temple and placed them over the eastern gate, and offered sacrifice to them (Mar. b. 6. c. 6.) Appropriately enough then, the Roman army is called "the abomination," and the abomination that "maketh desolate," as it desolated and wasted and destroyed Jerusalem. When this pagan and unclean power stood in Jerusalem it stood "where it ought not" (Mark xiii. 14,) for the City was the "holy place," including immediate and considerable compass of territory surrounding it. Daniel's prophecy from which our Lord quotes, reads: "For the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate." ix. 27. If the pleonasm of this translation is confusing, you may simplify and read it in literal harmony with the original text: "Because of an overspreading of abominations there shall be a desolating even to destruction, and that decreed shall be poured out upon the desolator." "Abominations," notice, in the plural. The things to be destroyed when the desolation should be consummated were the people and the "holy place" or City; and the desolator was then in turn to be destroyed too. More than Romans are meant, for various "abominations" have, since the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A. D. 70, occupied it—it has been "trodden down" by all kinds of Gentiles since. Lk. xxi. 24. The Romans,—Greek, Persian, Saracen, and Ottoman "Abominations" have alike desolated the city and its sacred places. Hence there has been "an overspreading of abominations" in the work of desolating. The "City of the Great King" is still "overspread" by enemies. Upon the expiration of the 1290 days (Dan. xii. 11,) the greater part of which time has been under the Moslem "abomination," "that decreed" will be "poured out upon the desolator," as foretold in Daniel.

Charity.

The subject I have chosen is "Charity," and is founded on the thirteenth chapter of 1 Cor. Paul says in the first verse, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

What is charity? The dictionary says this, "a disposition to relieve the wants and distress of others, kindness, love, benevolence, liberality to the poor, disposition to think well or judge favorably of others, supreme love to God and universal good-will to man." People of the world usually think that charity means to give as great a sum of money as one can (without denying themselves) to some great institution that will make a great fuss over it or blow a trumpet about it. But in Christ's teachings found in Matt vi chapter, first to fourth verses, He says, "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them, otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Therefore, when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward. But when thou doest thine alms, let not thine left hand know what thy right hand doeth. That thine alms may be in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly." This shows us that we are to give but we are not to make a show of our gifts for if we do this we will have no other reward than the praises of men. But if we perform our acts of love in secret God will reward us openly. Not now, perhaps, but surely at the resurrection. The word alms does not necessarily mean large sums of money, but a kind word, a flower or even a glass of water. The right things, however small, given at the right time and in the right spirit may be just as charitable as any big donation.

Paul says in the third verse of the xiii chapter of 1 Cor that even if he should bestow all his earthly goods and possessions to feed and help the poor and even give his own body to be burned, (which would surely mean death), it would be of no gain to him if he had no charity. So we see that just the giving of anything, however great, is not charity. But to give with love is charity.

John in his first epistle and third chapter urges and exhorts us to love. In the eleventh verse he gives the command that we love one another. Paul says in Heb xiii 1, "Let brotherly love continue." John iv 20 reads, "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" The seventeenth verse of the 19th chapter says that, whosoever hath of this world's goods and necessities and seeth others who lack these things and are in need, he should give unto him who hath not. If he doesn't do this, he hasn't the love of God. For, as the other verse tells us, if we hate our brother whom we hath seen, we cannot love God whom we have not seen. If we love charity and brotherly love we will not see others suffer for earthly necessities if we can help them. John says in the 18th verse of the 19th chapter, "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth. This is charity.

1 Pet iv 8—(1) If we love one another with brotherly love we will want to shield each others faults and sins, and not expose them to cause strife. Pro x 12 says, "Hatred stirreth up strife, but love covereth all sins. And in the 17th verse of the 9th chapter, Solomon tells us that anyone who covers a transgression, seeketh (or the margin says procureth) love, while one who repeateth a matter is liable to cause a separation of friends.

Phil ii 4.—(2) This does not mean that we should desire or covet another's property, wealth or belonging, but we must seek after them, and we must not always think of ourselves, please ourselves and provide for ourselves, but rather do these things for others.

1 Cor x 24. 1 Cor x 33.—(3) Paul says in 1 Cor xiii 5, "Charity thinketh no evil." So many are too ready to see the faults and shortcomings of others and are always ready to think wrong of someone. But if we have loved one another this would not be so. We would not be watching for faults. "Charity rejoiceth not in iniquity." If we have true, fervent charity we will hate iniquity or wickedness. Rom i 32 says, "who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them." In Psalms x 3 David complains that the wicked boast and are proud of their evil doings and rejoice in their iniquity, but charity rejoiceth not in iniquity.

In the last verse of the 13th chapter of 1 Cor Paul says, 'And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity." This is true, we know, because faith and hope can end, but charity is everlasting. For when that which we hope for is realized, we no longer have hope, and when that in which we have faith comes to pass our faith is ended, but charity or love endureth forever. Let us put on charity, for love is the fulfilling of the law, and if we fulfill the law we will be sure to hear those welcome words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Enter into the joys of thy Lord." May this be our happy lot!

ALICE BLAYDS.

Irreverence in Sacred Places

Irreverence is defined by Mr. Webster as "not entertaining nor manifesting due regard for the Supreme Being." There is an alarming degree, of irreverence of spirit in, and treatment of sacred places and services; and doubtless some churches go unblest of God because of somethings tolerated in the house of God in times of sacred services.

To begin with, a house that has been solemnly set apart to God for his worship, should never be turned into an irreverent playhouse; and a church organization that does this, or that tolerates irreverent conduct in God's house thus dedicated, will go unblest if it has ever so much talent in those services. There is wide difference between the product of ecclesiastical machinery, and the blessing of God, and its results.

Whispering, tittering and giggling in the services, perhaps during the prayer time, is an awful insult to worshipful people, and a disgrace to those who are guilty of such irreverence, and especially if practiced by adult people, or even children from Christian homes. If children come into a gospel service from un-Christian and irreverent homes, a congregation can afford to be very patient with them, and some good people should change their seats and sit with them to keep them quiet. But what apology can be offered for young church members who so conduct themselves as to attract attention from all directions, and disturb everybne around them, so that even visitors have been known to turn round, and rebuke them for their irreverence.

The writer knows one church where loud whispering during the communion service has been indulged, and such things as the following have been distinctly overheard, "Be careful not to drink too much or you will get drunk." Another, "I am going to get full tonight." These shocking remarks referred to the Savior's blood. In that same church two young men were seen at the Lord's Supper to touch glasses in saloon style, and drink a toast (individual glasses being used) in the Savior's blood—"this is my blood" Matt xxvi 27, 28.

A church that tolerates such members, partakes with those who count the blood of the Covenant an unholy thing, and are doing despite unto the Spirit of grace. Heb x 29. The next verse reads of vengeance. Can we wonder that the apostle talked about some eating and drinking damnation to themselves, not discerning the Lord's body? 1 Cor ii 29.

The apostle wrote in 1 Cor v 5, about delivering some one over unto Satan for "the destruction of the flesh," etc.

A church that tolerates such members is a partaker of their evil deeds, and will most likely need a great deal of machinery to keep things going, for God will be likely to take but little part in their endeavors.

The old-fashioned preparatory service at the monthly meeting is not usually attended by these desecrators of this sacred service. This element has but little use for a faithful pastor who would teach them the fear of the Lord. Psa xxxiv 11; and yet if a pastor is to be chosen this same card-playing, theater-going, cigarette-smoking, dancing, communion-desecrating, meeting-disturbing, irreverent element, is the very one that comes to the front for gratification in the choice of a man who will not be too straight-laced in sacred things. The candidate for the pastorate must be broad, up-to-date, and not likely to notice these little things.

God calls for separation, and a clean people, and there will be a cry of leanness until there is a cleaning up among the churches. The tendency is to a tremendous letting down for the sake of holding some one to the church, which is itself rapidly sinking to the level of those that must be held. Perhaps, there may be instances of spiritual fruit borne by pleasure-loving, pleasure-seeking, pleasure-making, hilarious church clubs. Such are becoming quite fashionable now-a-days from the smoking club up, or down, to the last one.

One member of a church club confessed to the writer in these words: "It saps the very life of my spirituality," and yet that member keeps up with the club. Some one has written something about "Clubdom vs. Kingdom."

No person should, by either association or practice, indulge in what lessens spirituality, and increases irreverence in the sacred house, and God will hold some one accountable for this condition of things.

Some people are still sincerely praying "Thy kingdom come," and are trying to hold attention to that subject.—O. H. Wallace.

Captive Thoughts.

Bringing into captivity every thought (subjugate all reasoning—Syriac), to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor x 5.

The difference between captive balloon and the other kind is this: the former has a rope attached to it with a mechanical device to bring it down after it has gone up a thousand feet or so with its sight-seers. The other kind are free to roam at pleasure, the Lord only knows where; and sometimes I think he doesn't know, or care, where.

The thoughts of mankind are often as flighty as a balloon, only they do not get far from mother earth; some times they seem to sink deeper in vice than from where its surface ought to be. How they do roam from one thing to another, from one end of the earth to the other, now catching on for an instant but soon letting go of the very things they ought to hold on to; and then becoming fastened to the very things they should escape for to skyward, and taking pleasure in dwelling there until they mature into acts that are astounding. The incubator of evil thoughts never lost a chick, but some of them have come home to roost and made it uncomfortable for their breeders. If one wants a good brood let him take care what he puts into the hatchery.

Our thoughts, like the afore-mentioned balloon, need a string to them; that cord is "the obedience of Christ." Some may think we cannot help our thoughts. Well, the Lord can. Some one has said that "we cannot prevent evil thoughts, like crows, from flying over our heads, but we can stop their building nests in our hair." There are those who champion what they term "free thought" and look upon Christian people as in the most servile bondage to what they believe; but, as a matter of fact, Christians, as a rule, are the most free-thinking people there are in the world, because their hearts and minds have been expanded by all that is good, holy and true to make the most and best of life, and consequently, they live a life that is richer and broader in experience than others not so favored. Why, they throw out of their back doors into the garbage can things unfit to entertain that form the staple living of their critics.

What do good people need to think about anyway? They are told in Phil iv 8, that "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report," if it is a good thing to keep the mind busy, "think on these things." That ought to give sufficient rein to a normal mind to keep it healthy, and to rummage about at leisure. Talk about "free thought," no sensible person should make a sewer pipe of his mind for the conveyance of filthy literature, vile stories, scandals, and the like; but in divine channels he finds plenty to occupy his time and talents—room enough for his thoughts to run without friction—to "scamper," as it were. The captive bird sings and is happy in its cage, but would die if given the freedom of an unfavorable clime.

There is, however, nothing like concentration of thought, and good people should habituate themselves to harness their minds to work in the thills of concentration and method. In other words, get on to a subject, or line of thought, stick to it and work it to an ultimate conclusion; not in the sense of a hobby but in order to see it in its finished and best sense. In the preacher this is most important; but in all Christians it will be manifest when prayer meeting night comes around. Such will have something new, fresh and helpful to give to others. Prayer meetings will not be so dull and unprofitable as they are too apt to be where the mind has been given free rein, or no rein at all—at least no checkrein—to run at will amongst current literature, the silly stories of the day, and to gossip about everybody and talk of everything except what they ought to, and spending no time in the Word or at private devotions.

No wonder there are hitches and long pauses in the social meetings, when a hymn number has to be announced to fill in, and the leaves are rustled to find it and some one marches to the organ to start it. When the minds of Christians are taken up with right things that will not be the way it will work, but "the Word of Christ dwells in them richly in all wisdom," and they will be "teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in their hearts to the Lord," they do not get it so classical as some. They'll have the gold if they do not have the glitter.

What kind of wood is being worked up in a sawmill can be told by the pile of sawdust being blown out of the back door. Let us not fool away our time sawing rotten wood, but get the best lumber and make things useful as well as ornamental and be of some utility in the circle in which we move. So let our minds be thus well occupied and our nets will take care of themselves. The Book of Acts comes to us the results of such work.—C. E. Copp.

Brother Huggins:

"And comfort one another with these words."

"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear."

"But he that glorieth let him glory in the Lord—for not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth." Amen. 1 Cor. x. 13; 2 Cor. x. 17-18; xi. 1-4.

Notice the gender applied to the serpent, that he beguiled Eve. And Cain was of that wicked one, because of his works, 1 John iii. 12. Later such folks were called serpents, Matt. iii. 7; xxiii. 33, both by John and Jesus, and Paul lays the sin on Adam, Rom. v. 12, and says that Eve was deceived, 1 Tim. ii. 13 14, and the margin of Hosea vi. 7 says like Adam, Job xxxi. 33.

Today see how the world is going to gratify the lusts of men, in the white slave trade, etc. Last but not least, your pertinent question of August 11, 1909, Heb. x. 28-29, was correctly answered by H. F. Cordill in THE RESTITUTION of Aug. 18, the day our dear David died, and in less than twelve months three of our family had to go the way of all the earth, Josh. xxiii. 14. Let us take heed to such Scriptures as 2 Peter ii. 21; Luke xiv. 28.

Your brother in hope,

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Gold Dust.

If you are not doing good to others, you are doing much harm to yourself.

The best of men and the most earnest workers will make enough mistakes to make them humble. Thank God for mistakes and take courage. Don't give up on account of mistakes.

Reflect upon your present blessings of which every man has many, and not upon your past misfortunes, of which all men have some.

You cannot live every day in perfect fellowship with God without giving up time to it. Hours and days, and weeks, and months and years are gladly given up by men and women to perfect themselves in some profession or accomplishment. Do you expect that religion is so cheap that without time you can find close fellowship with God? You cannot.

ANNA DREW.

Who Should Take Communion?

It is a fact that our Savior instituted the supper for the church, and for the church only. It is not our purpose to tell when the Church was set in order, or instituted, because I do not believe there is a living man who can tell the exact time. The term Church means "called out." When Christ started out upon his mission, he began to call out his apostles, and by the time he instituted the supper, he had them all called out.

Now on the night in which he was betrayed, he instituted his supper. It was the very night, or evening, that they eat the passover. He had a desire to eat the passover with his disciples before he suffered, and he told two of his disciples to go into the city and that they would meet a man bearing a pitcher of water, and he told them to follow him and to ask him "where is the guest chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples." They did so, and he showed them a large upper room, furnished and prepared, and there they made ready for him to eat the passover with them. And when the evening came, he came with the twelve and they did eat the passover. Now as they did eat, Jesus took the bread, and blessed and brake it, and gave to them and said "Take, eat; this is my body."

He took the cup, and after he had given thanks, he gave it to them, and they all drank of it. And he said unto them "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many. Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine until the day I drink it anew in the kingdom of God." And when they had sung a hymn they went out into the Mount of Olives, Mark xiv. 15-25.

Now in 1 Cor. xi. 25-30, Paul says the Lord said, "This do ye, as oft as ye drink it in remembrance of me. For as oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he comes."

Thus you see it was instituted right in the midst of the called out ones, or church, and they were commanded to keep it up, for every time they ate the bread and drank the wine, they showed forth the Lord's death till he

[Continued on Page 2.]

Obituary.

Hattie E. Paddock, wife of Edward F. Paddock, was born at Buskirk, Van Buren Co., N. Y., and died at LaDelle, S. D., June 9, 1911, after a long and painful illness of dropsy. She joined the Church of God in 1890, under the preaching of Almus Adams.

She had all faith in the promises of God and was faithful to the end. She was the mother of four children, three of whom are living—a daughter having died in 1895. The funeral was held June 11.

EDWARD F. PADDOCK.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later.

SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Northwest 24th Annual Conference of Oregon and Western Washington, will convene at Corvallis, Oregon, from June 22 to 25, inclusive. All the brethren are earnestly requested to attend and take a hand in this good work.

Yours in hope.

FRANK SMALLEY, Pres.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord.

G. ELDRED MARSH, Sec.

Special Notice.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Illinois Bereans—Notice.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Notice.

The Church of the Blessed Hope, (Church of God) in Chicago, has secured th VanBuren Hall, Corner California ave and Madison st, for services every Sunday from 10:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. Order of services,—Bereans meet from 10:00 to 11:00 on 1st and 3rd Sunday and Adult Bible Class meets from 10:00 to 11:00 on 2nd and 4th Sunday of each Calendar month. Regular Church Services from 11:00 to 12:30 every Sunday. All are welcome.—R. W. THOMPSON, Sec'y., 544 N. Willow Ave. (Austin Station) Chicago.

PLEASE don't send to this office for W. H. Wilson's works, nor for John Foore's tracts, nor for D. C. Robison's tract. We do not keep them in stock, as they are handled by the authors direct.

Notice!

Those desiring Berean Booklets can get them from Alma Roose, Sac City, Iowa, for eleven cents a book, postage prepaid to any address.

LOOK, LOOK.

Here Is a Good Big Chance.

We want a lot of New Subscribers, and with a little effort you can get us one or more. We do not ask you to work for us for nothing, but will pay you for what you do. Here is our offer to you:

For a New Subscriber at the regular rate of $1.50 per year, we will send to any address you name

10 copies of "A Letter to a Friend" or
One Pound of other Tracts,
or
One-half Pound of Tracts and 5 copies of A Letter to a Friend.

This will enable you to earn a supply of tracts to distribute among your friends, and perhaps start some one on the way to the Kingdom.

LOOK AGAIN, PLEASE

We have a number of copies of "The Word of the Kingdom" which originally sold at $1.50. This is a work gotten out by Brother John O. Woodruff before he died. Only a few copies remain, and they will make excellent presents. While they last we will mail you one Free, if you will send us

Two New Subscribers.

JUST LOOK AGAIN. PLEASE

We have on hand some copies of the Emphatic Diaglott. All of our readers known what it is—a word for word translation of the New Testament, by Brother Benjamin Wilson. There is a column with a line of Greek and beneath it the equivalent English words so the reader may know just the word that is used. A very valuable help in Bible study. We will give you one of these books Free if you will send us

Four New Subscribers.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given below, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the doners request. When left for the Publisher to decide, it will be used only for those who themselves state their circumstances, or whose case is presented by some trustworthy person.

E F Randolph	2 00

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compells all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

"A Century of Indiana" is the title of a new history written by State Senator Edward A. Moore, and published by the American Book Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, price 75 cents. The volume contains 340 pages, and gives the earliest history of the State on down to the present day. Indiana today stands second to no state in the Union, and this work gives the whole history of the State in concise and attractive form, carefully indexed, so that it has an added value as a reference book. It is a splendid book for the home, and for Indiana Students it is of priceless value. No library is complete without it. If your book dealer cannot supply it send as above and get a copy. There is pleasure in reading it, for every Indianian is proud of his State, and besides enjoyment there is real profit in this work.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother James W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith, and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once, and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth, and can be had by addressing W H Wilson at 625 North Willow av. Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all. Send and get one.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32 page tract, is plain and scriptural in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where a number of editions are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

THE LAST CHANCE.

We have a number of books published by our late Brother John O. Woodruff. We have only "The Word of the Kingdom. During the last years of his life Brother Woodruff issued these books at great expense. Many were supplied through his generosity. The remainder ought to be out doing the good he desired they should, and to enable you to get one we will send them to you post paid for 75c each.

THE article on "Salvation. What is It?" which appeared in our issue of Sept. 15, has been translated into German and printed in tract form, the size to send in an ordinary envelope. The cost is 2 cents each, 50 copies for 65 cents, or 90 copies for one dollar. It is printed in full in English so that those who do not read German can see exactly what they are sending to a German friend. Send all orders to S. Juergensen, Barberton, Ohio.

BROTHER H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

IMPORTANT.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post office, and state, plainly and distinctly. We know a great many names and addresses, but we may not remember yours.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Indiana."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order, or express order, NOT by personal checks. Money sent in either of these ways is safe, and with no risk of loss. Stamps stick together and are useless. Money even paper money is easily detected and is at the mercy of a dishonest clerk always. Money sent in a registered letter is not guaranteed by the government.

Always examine your money order and see that it reads as in the name of "The Restitution," and that it is payable at "Plymouth, Ind." Let it not be payable at "Plymouth, Ind." but see that the post master has written Ind. not Ill. or Pa. or Ohio.

When you wish your address changed give both old and new address.

In sending renewals always give the exact name in which it has previously been sent, and state if you wish the name changed and we will gladly do so. The reason why this is important can be readily seen. For instance, the paper is sent to Mrs. Susan Williams, and her husband George, gets a money order in his own name and send it, saying to renew the paper for a year. We have no reason to suppose that Susan is his wife he did not say she was—so we enter his name and send him the paper. Susan's paper goes delinquent, and afterwards when we notify her about it both become offended. So stupid in case everybody knows Susan and George are husband and wife.

Get the last issue of the paper when ordering books and tracts, and order from that. If a work is advertised as supplied only by the author, send to him—please and do us.

SPECIAL TO AUTHORS.

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

An author frequently spends considerable of time and labor on an important subject, and when it is ready picks up an envelope that has to be stamped to hold it, addresses it, puts on a single stamp and drops it in the box. He has labored hard to produce his finished work, then neglected three important points he did not enclose it in an efficient wrapper. he failed to fully pay the postage, and neglected to put on his return address. A hint to the wise is enough.

Try THE RESTITUTION [illegible] a year

SUBSCRIBE FOR

THE RESTITUTION

Published at

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA

The Price is

ONE DOLLAR AND

A HALF A YEAR

[illegible]

THREE [illegible]

OF

ONE YEAR'S [illegible]

SAMPLE COPIES.

The [illegible] of [illegible] and Elder John A. Wines. [illegible] were published [illegible] since in THE RESTITUTION. They are well written, lucid and convincing. It is a living question, and one that was the subject in the mind of Brother Wines to do good as his part in arousing his fellowmen to a sense of duty to God, and encouraging them to do it. The price is set at 10 cents single copy, or 12 for $1.00. Those not able to pay what is asked a copy will be supplied free of cost on application. Order from the Author at Pierceton, Indiana, or from this office as is most convenient.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Carvill, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration to Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photos of each writer. The question discussed is "The Seed Question, that the true Israel [illegible] been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Carvill denies.

The price of the book is 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Yours loving brother,

T. J. DANIEL.

Syriac New Testament.

A new [illegible] Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have no arrangement with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Works of Mrs. Bible Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per package. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a clear, impressive, and homiletic manner, particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are untied and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Ministers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the doors of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and Texts—come in and bless you and your family. 500 pages, 5x7½ inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth [illegible] title embossed on back in [illegible]. At the [illegible] $1.00. Two copies or more [illegible]. Order from this office. Send convenient checks or [illegible] [illegible] interested those who [illegible] through this office.

SOMEBODY SEES.

[illegible] was informed of a lady who [illegible] brought to her knowledge a [illegible] of the facts by handing her one of those small tracts offering "One hundred dollars reward" to a person finding certain pulpit phrases, which many people suppose are in the Bible.

This lady felt certain that somebody had them, and so took her Bible and concordance, and searched diligently in order to find them. She failed to find them, but found in their place, the Pearl of Great Price, which was much better.

The following publications are doing much to enlighten the people:

Standard Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages. It is designed as a guide to students to a right comprehension of the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, as made plain upon the Sacred Page. It deals specifically as How to study the Bible, and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cts.

Pine Wood's Bible Class, a book of 160 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a Class and its Teacher. This method not only makes the teaching plain, but interesting and attractive, like reading a story. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages Price 10 cts.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? 4 pages, 25 cts per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cts per 100.

Address W. H. Wilson, 625 North Willow Ave, Austin Station, Chicago Illinois.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

We Will Give You Free Patterns [illegible]

[illegible] 236 to 246 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

A [illegible] weekly. Largest circulation [illegible] Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

THE MESSENGER

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of Eternal Life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rotho, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cts, 2 copies 69 cts, 3 copies 97 cts, 5 or more copies 25 cts each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

BIBLE PEARLS—2 page tracts Suitable for wide distribution. 1 The Gospel. 2 Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1880. 3 Immateriality. 4 Kingdom of God. 5 Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6 Two Advents. 7 What is Religion? 8 Restitution Age. 9 Destiny of the Wicked. 10 Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cts or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cts.

FOUR-PAGE TRACTS.

Can You Believe? a series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of the Dead. A collection of proofs [illegible] on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the [illegible] case.

Age to Come Sermons, by H. V. Reed.

10 for [illegible], 25 cts—100 for 40 cts.

Future Probation. Is that awaiting [illegible]? A [illegible] pamphlet by Wm. G. an Montrose, Penn. [illegible]

Work in Earnest. The Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Personality of Satan. A pamphlet of [illegible] pages, by W. Dodds, giving in detail all there can be said on this subject, and conclusively proves the Devil the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. The work ought to be sold [illegible] cts a copy, but the author was so anxious that [illegible] should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters. Have you loved ones whom Unkingdomity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall we do to be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. L. Tomlinson 10825 Orville Ave, N. E, Cleveland, O.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different from the meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents. Send for it to W. H. Wilson, 625 N. Willow Ave., Austin Sta. Chicago, Ill.

Scripture Searchers Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents, order from W. L. Tomlinson, 10837 Orville ave, Cleveland Ohio

The Elements of the Kingdom of God, is the title of an eighteen page tract by Brother T. J. Daniel of Magazine, Ark. He sets forth that a kingdom cannot exist without a King, his salaried officers, territory, a capital city, subjects, laws. Brother Daniel will send this little tract to you at 10 cents each, or $1.00 a dozen. Send direct to him for them.

The Restitution

ON TRIAL

Three Months for Twenty-five Cents

WILL YOU TRY IT?

The Restitution.

—ISSUED WEEKLY BY—

A. R. UNDERWOOD, Publisher

210 West Adams Street.

PLYMOUTH, - - INDIANA.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $1.50, Six Months 75 Cents
Three Months 40 Cents.

The Restitution.

"THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS."

VOLUME LX. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 5, 1911. NUMBER 25.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon

Poetry.

Eternal Life.

The God of truth and light is he,
The God through all eternity.
'Tis he made all that now appears
Revolving now in these vast spheres.

Who planned this wondrous ball
And all that lives both great and small,
On Him they all depend for breath;
He that withdraws, and they become death.

This God has offered life to all
Who do in truth upon Him call,
And who accepts just what he says
And do not follow their own ways.

Who follow Jesus with the cross
They often have to suffer loss
The truth defend with tongue and pen
Nor christ and He like other men.

This path is narrow, straight and rough.
But Jesus leads and that's enough
For he will lead in the right way
That leads us to eternal day.

Take up the cross, no less, no more,
The King of kings has gone before;
For he will raise up David's throne
And bring his loved ones to their own.

A. Wallace Dawson.

Carry Us Home.

Carry us home to Eden restored.
There's where the tree of life, will evermore grow,
There's where the birds, warble sweet in the sunshine;
There's our new home, and we're longing to go,
The prophets of old, have long since foretold it;
To Abraham and David, it's joys were extolled.
There's no place on earth, they loved so sincerely,
As Eden restored, with it's streets of gold.

Carry us home to Eden restored;
'Tho o'er the hills, and the vales let us stray,
There by the stream, in the dell let us wander,
There will we live, while the ages roll away.
Some of our comrades, have gone down before us,
Soon we will meet on that beautiful shore.
There we'll be happy, and free from all sorrow;
There we will meet, and nevermore part.

Carry us home to Eden restored;
King Jesus will reign there with the saints all united;
All the faithful and true that are prepared.
The great wedding feast, to which all are invited
By the saints of all ages, then shall be shared
The nations astonished use their swords for plowshares;
In peace and plenty, 'neath vine and fig-tree shade.
The laborer shall be rewarded as the Scriptures declare;
And the craft of the warrior shall evermore fade.

J. E. Hosmer.

Communicated.

The Massing of Forces

The gigantic concentration of forces of every description, is a marked sign of the approaching end of this Gentile age. Rev xvii 16, 17: "And he (one man) shall make all, both little and great, rich and poor, freeman and bondmen, to have a character in their right hand, or on their foreheads. And that no man might buy or sell, but he that hath the character, or the name of the beast (civil power, or government backing this one man) or the number of his name." Latin Vul. This Scripture plainly indicates that all commercial forces of every kind will be merged into one massive organization dominated by one man.

The time for the exercise of its power will be seven years, the last week of the seventy weeks of Daniel. See Dan viii 23 25: "In the latter time of their kingdom, (the four divisions of the Grecian empire, one of which still exists) when transgressors are come to a full (still future) a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up." See verse 25: "And through his policy he shall cause craft (trade, commerce, concentrated in one mighty merger) to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace (marg. prosperity) shall destroy many; he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes (still future); but he shall be broken without hand," at the close of the seventy weeks.

This massive merger is being rapidly formed. In 1850, the commerce of the world amounted to $4,000,000,000. In 1890, it figured up to $25,000,000,000. This is rapidly being concentrated into the hands of a few.

Chauncey Depew said: "There are 50 men in the city of New York, who can stop every wheel on the railroads, close every factory, and shut down every coal and iron mine in the United States."

A short time since: "Nine big concerns headed by Vickers and some and Maxim, have absorbed thirty-six concerns, giving control of ninety per cent of steel produced in Great Britain."

Gifford Pinchot, in a government report said: "If the public does not see to it, that the control of water power is kept in the hands of the public, we are certain in the near future, to find ourselves in the grip of those who will be able to control with a monopoly absolutely without parallel in the past, the daily life of our people."

A writer speaking of the prophecy quoted from Rev xvii said: "This passage of Scripture patiently before us a world-wide merger which will control the marketing of all commodities —'no man may buy or sell save' by its permission. Does does such a condition seem incredible?"

James Bryce, an observant writer said: "Every observant person must admit that the concentration of wealth, whether it be in corporations, trusts, or individuals, has reached a point dangerous to the future prosperity of the nation."

This merger does not stop with the merging of capital. Labor is concentrating its forces. All trades are being merged into a world-wide organization, called "The Federation of Labor." This organization has already a membership of 2,000,000.

Frank Weston recently said: "An international labor movement has been started with the idea of regulating hours of labor and wages the world over. Possibly in the near future we may find a committee sitting at some great center, who will dictate what men in all trades, in all countries shall do, and the wages they shall receive. This is what the international labor movement aims at, and the progress of the last decade does not make this a fanciful dream, but a comparative easy possibility. In many cities it is an impossibility now for a tradesman to secure employment unless he belongs to some order, to which he pays tribute, and by which he is ruled."

The time is coming, when the will and the net will be absorbed by the merger, he must absolutely obey the dictation of the head of the merger. It is largely the case now in large cities, but will soon become absolute when the international organization becomes stronger.

There is a tyrannical power growing, such as the world has never yet experienced. An imperial power consisting of the concentration of all power, whether political, commercial, social or religious, which all "both rich or poor," must absolutely submit to or die.

A dreadful reign of terror must inevitably result. Locally these things have already happened; but this will be as universally over the habitable world, as the flood in Noah's day.

Preachers are prophesying smooth things, teaching the people that the world is getting better and better. But a mighty on-rolling torrent will engulf them like a snare. "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you."

This seething boiling spirit of unrest, contention, fleshly ambition, and variance, has even invaded the sacred precincts of the church of God itself, and many professed followers of the meek and lowly Jesus seem to be utterly oblivious as to what it all means. There are noble exceptions, however, who have learned from the prophetic Word what it means. They know that Peter said, "For the time is (has) come that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God." This judgment is separating from us, those who are not in fact of us.

While to hold tenaciously to the fundamental principles of the Christian faith is essential in securing the final victory, yet all this will be of no value, unless love in the heart is supreme above all. If this love abides within, it will manifest itself in external activities. While love within may beget a meek, quiet and gentle disposition, it also may manifest itself in stern, vigorous, righteous indignation in its warfare against wrong doing in every form. It will also rebuke sternly efforts to throw suspicion upon the good name of a brother or sister, which is sometimes done to gain some selfish purpose. Selfishness is a marked and predominate feature of the closing days of this age. It is selfishness which prompts the formation of combines and trusts, even if it does oppress the people.

Love takes no pleasure in beholding wrong in another, it will refrain from holding it up before the public gaze, but would rather quietly, and privately seek to direct his steps in paths of purity, righteousness and rectitude.

If we ever expect to reach successfully the great consummation, love must be the sole predominate feature guiding our footsteps in our journey to the city of Eternal Rest. Not to perceive and practice this, will find us knocking on the outside of the gate, when the Master and his bride has passed into the glorious rest prepared for the overcomers.

If anyone has an ambition to become a successful contestant in the race for the prize of the high calling, such an one has not a single moment to spare in making every effort tell for victory. I tell you prophetic students can now speak with positiveness that we are now in the last days of this Gentile age, they do not any longer surmise or think so, but it has become a matter of positive knowledge. I would that I had the power to arouse the Church of God to a full realizing sense of this fact.

From this time forward let us give a wide berth to all who would distract and rend the body asunder, and pull together as a unit, holding fast to "sound doctrine," in the spirit of love, overcoming the short comings and that we may have a personal realizing sense of weakness that beset our pathway. Let us criticize ourselves more, and others less, and it will not be long before a better condition of affairs will exist.

The foundations of the great political deep are breaking up: massive preparations for war are alarming the world. Men's faces gather blackness, the world is quaking for fear. Awake! church of the living God! Awake for a realizing sense of the solemn days (not coming) but now upon us.

I am anxious to be out in the field proclaiming these things by living voice as well as the pen. Do you want my services in your neighborhood? I can go anywhere, if my expenses are paid, and what else you can afford toward the support of my family. I would go without any charges if I were able to do so. Let me hear from you. Let the people be warned.

In the Blessed Hope.

W. H. Wilson.

Loyalty.

There is no grander quality in the Christian than unswerving loyalty. He may be imperfect in his development of character, his knowledge may not be extensive, his education may be defective, his experience may be limited; but he may be loyal to his God, his King, his Redeemer. Others may fall and desert the ranks, he will only gird the armor more closely and be unceasingly vigilant. Others will prove false when some great leader falls, but the loyal one stands firmer to duty than ever. Others may follow the multitude, he remains loyal to the law of his Lord, though he stands alone. Oh, for more zealous, loyal soldiers of God in the days of sickening lukewarmness and basest treachery.

Selections.

The Extra Mile.

The Youth's Companion relates the following incident:

A certain man had one son, and loved him more almost than was good for [illegible]. Being a widower, and having [illegible]se to love, he gave his one child [illegible] was possible to a man [illegible] the means. Education, a reasonable amount of spending-money, a fair business opportunity and a blameless name were the young man's heritage. But the young man sold his birthright for a mess of pottage.

The time came when the son was a wanderer, and men said to the father, "You have done your full duty. No more could be required of any father than you have done. He is unworthy; let him go."

The father bowed his head in sorrow and made no answer. He did no more, for there was nothing more that he could do then. And he was not sure but the neighbors were right, and he had done enough.

The father found his answer one day from the Sermon on the Mount: "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." It was a little lesson all his own, which he drew from the verse by an exegesis such as the heart finds at such a time.

Thus far duty had compelled him, and he had done what, in the eyes of men, was enough. He had gone the mile which parental responsibility required. Some day God would give him strength to go the other mile which love enjoined.

He did not stop to argue with teachers of ethics as to the relation of love and duty, and the impossibility of exceeding obligation; he measured duty by the length he had already gone, and marked out in his affection an added mile which one day he would travel for love's sake. His heart assured him that he was right in his plan. He put a mark in his Bible, and from time to time he read that verse, and wondered in what direction he should be called to travel the other mile.

He found his son at last, God knows how; and God forbid that it should need to be told where he found him. The "extra mile" took the father halfway across the continent, and into places strange and foul, and he found his son, sick, penniless, near to death.

Then all that he had done in former years seemed small. Money, time, weary toil the father squandered on the unworthy boy. And he saved him, body and soul. Clean, penitent and upright he became, in time, born again through unstinted love.

To some of his friends the father told the story of the years of tragic struggle and sorrow, of the questions whether duty had reached its limit, and the resolution to measure effort not in terms of duty, but of overflowing love.

"It was duty all the time," he said, "and no man can exceed his duty. But I forgot the duty in the thought of love, and I learned that it is not the mile that duty compels, but the mile that love enjoins that finds the lost and works redemption in human life.

God had given us law and conscience, and perhaps might have been content to let us go with that. But the post that marks the extra mile of God's redemptive love is the cross of Christ. God goes the extra mile to seek the lost, and that is how He finds him."

God grant that none of us may ever be called upon to go the "extra mile" in the heart-breaking search for child of ours. But, oh, fellow-laborers, there are thousands of children in this land of light and plenty who are in the dark and cold, miles and miles away from all that is brightest and best. Let none of us shrink from going the "extra mile" to redeem them and restore them to their God-given heritage of an opportunity to become upright, honorable, Christian men and women, useful to the community and the world, and of service to the Master and mankind.

To Remember.

There are two things we need remember in our study of the Scriptures. One is, that there are beauties and precious things in every part of the Bible. No spot is barren; not a chapter is there in the whole book, but has in it something that may bless a soul; some fragment of the gold truth, some disclosure of the divine heart or divine will, some cluster of nourishing fruit, or [illegible] as amongst the [illegible] rocks on many hillside, some cool spring of water flowing out to quench the heart's thirst.

The other thing to be remembered is, that the Word of God must be searched diligently, lovingly, carefully, thoroughly. Such searching will always be rewarded. Careless, superficial reading will never yield the greatest blessing. Into every obscure nook, into every seemingly bare and empty field, into every chapter of facts, into every ancient chronicle and genealogical list, we must press our quest, if we would find all the precious things our Father has prepared for us in his Word. Unless we thus search, there are many of the best things we shall never find, because many of the best things lie where only the thorough seeker will find them.

A Beggarly Account.

We hear much from time to time, of riches "not honestly come by," and it is true that a great deal of the wealth of the country is from sources that would not bear inspection. But it is worth remembring also, that there is much poverty not honestly come by, and that the heaviest taxes are not those we pay to city, state, or national government, but those that the devil exacts, and that have to be paid even before the taxgatherer can collect his share.

Now let any man look into any poor-house under heaven, and what will he see? "The Lord's poor," very few; "the devil's poor," more numerous; the poor wrecks, made such by rum, out-numbering all. The stamp of the rum devil's hoof is on almost every brow. Maniacs, made such by rum; old imbeciles, filthy, rum-soaked, and tobacco poisoned; moderate drinkers, penniless, because they have spent their money for disease and death; destitute widows of dead drunkards; children made homeless and orphans by rum; girls seduced through intoxicating drinks; idiots begotten by drunken fathers; mothers whose drunken sons cannot or will not support them; and all this that a swarm of unprincipled foreigners, with a few renegade Americans, too lazy to work, too proud to beg, and too timid to steal, make a living by dealing out poison, death and damnation to their fellow men.

This the State licenses them to do, and then taxes every honest man in the country to pay the damage caused by their deviltry. Doubtless three fourths of all the pauperism and crime spring directly from this infernal vice, which is eating out the nation's life.

Bible Meaning.

We are told that the Bible does not mean just what it says. Then it says what it does not mean, and how are we to know what it means, if it does not say it? If we claim that it must mean what we think, and we think differently from what the Bible says, and teach what we think, are we not in danger of teaching another gospel? If we do not think as the Bible says, then let us revise our thinking.

Many people seem to despise doctrinal preaching. They prefer to be left to their own thinking as to the Bible. But doctrine is simply teaching. Do they dislike to be taught, because it requires an effort for a lazy mind to think? Brethren, in your earnest writing and preaching don't leave Bible doctrine too much in the shade. "The Spirit and the Word agree," we are often told, and so we believe. Those who partake of the Holy Spirit should have their thinking well rooted in the truth, that they may endure, and be found faithful at last.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Fountain Head.

A stream may be defiled. A reservoir may become polluted. A cup may be poisoned, but the fountain will still remain pure. The Gospel comes to us today in many forms and through many channels; it comes to us tinged with the feelings, thoughts, and fancies of a multitude of men of passions like our own, and often the honest inquirer is perplexed and misled by the [illegible] strife [illegible] ent teachers who profess to draw their differing faiths from a common source, and to bend their steps to a common destination.

There is nothing better for us to do under such circumstances, than to go to the fountain head. The Christ who died on the cross still lives; the Holy Spirit which brings all things to our remembrance yet abides in the world; and the sacred Scriptures, which contain the truth as it is in Jesus, are within our reach. Nothing but our idleness and indifference can prevent our searching for ourselves, to see if these things are so; and if we turn away from the advices of man, and draw our faith from the Fountain Head, the Word of God, we shall attain a knowledge of the truth, pure and unadulterated, which we may not hope to gain in any other way.

"Search the Scriptures!" Within the pages of that Word which "liveth and abideth forever," the inquiring soul may find his doubts resolved, his faith nourished, his soul purified, and his heart made glad; for he shall find that the Holy Scriptures are able to make him "wise unto salvation, through faith that is in Christ Jesus." —Armory.

Don't Wait Until Tomorrow.

Oh, my dear friends, when you are letting miserable understandings run on from year to year, meaning to clear them up some day; you are keeping wretched quarrels alive because you cannot quite make up your mind that now is the day to sacrifice your pride and kill them; you who are passing men sullenly upon the street, not speaking to them out of some silly spite, and yet knowing that it would fill you with shame or remorse if you heard that one of those men were dead tomorrow morning; you who are letting your neighbor starve, till you hear that he is dying of starvation, or letting your friend's heart ache for a word of appreciation or sympathy, which you mean to give some day—if you could only know and see and feel, all of a sudden, that "the time is short," how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do.—Phillips Brooks.

Truth in Proverbs.

You can never make a crab walk straight forward. Dress an ass like a man, but it will bray like a donkey. Drive away natural tendencies, but they will come back at a gallop. You may change the coat of a wolf, but you cannot change his disposition. What is taken in the milk of the mother, runs through to the end of life.

Such is human opinion as to the unalterable perversity of human nature. These are old proverbs, uttered in different countries, in different ages and language. They are in entire harmony with the Word of God: "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" Nothing but the power of God can make such a change. But that power can. Lions and beasts of savage name have put on the nature of the lamb. Conversion is such a change. A change of heart—of nature. "Old things pass away," and "all things become new."

There are multitudes of men and ministers who are wasting their time seeking for a place where they feel they can fully serve. The fittest place for every man's best success is the place where he is serving.

Notice!

Those desiring Berean Booklets can get them from Alma Roose, Sac City, Iowa, for eleven cents a book, postage prepaid to any address.

The Restitution.

A. R. UNDERWOOD, OFFICE EDITOR

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 5, 1911.

To Our Friends and Patrons.

For some months there has been opposition in certain directions to the management of THE RESTITUTION, based on matters that if taken up in a Scriptural way as our Lord bids us in the Lord Jesus Christ, would be quickly settled long ago, and the attitude of love given them. With over-stretched ends all matters mentioned [illegible] of old date, that had [illegible] and still [illegible] made both [illegible] to take up my [illegible] had there was [illegible] settle it to [illegible] the principles [illegible] been received [illegible] been a [illegible] small things, [illegible] listening ear [illegible] on the mind of the [illegible] contrary [illegible] brotherly love [illegible] Word, and for me to [illegible] work, and their praises to have love and charity [illegible] brotherly love" that we have to [illegible] comprehend.

However these [illegible] unpleasant for me to mention as the Editor and Publisher of THE RESTITUTION, and a [illegible] the bond to other [illegible] paper of Truth may be spared [illegible] not trust in the [illegible] regret that we take these steps when we con over the many expressions of confidence and esteem received from a very large number of [illegible] sisters scattered far and near. We love you, and while not able to write and thank each [illegible] for this sympathy and trust we assure you each that your good [illegible] appreciated, and that we shall endeavor to remain true to the faith of the gospel, and some day hope to meet you in a better, a changed condition.

We feel that we have been unjustly treated by some, and that there has been a degree of persecution that never was warranted. We feel that even if we were guilty of all that is charged by our enemies, even then they have chosen a way to "bring in righteousness" that has no sanction in God's Word, hence is man's way, and cannot merit Divine approval. While we think some have conscientious motives that are too pure, we also believe that a number have [illegible] commit themselves to our opponents without understanding fully the matters in hand, their minds have been blinded and their judgment warped. Such have our sympathy, and when they come to realize the enormity of the error they have committed we hope they will seek forgiveness at the Throne of Grace while it may be had, for no man can afford [illegible] judgment with such on his conscience.

"The Church of God Publishing Company" is being formed, with headquarters at Cleveland, Ohio, or Chicago, where printing facilities are the best, where office rent [illegible] is free, and where a Brother has offered to run the paper free for a year. This Company is not a faction of the Church of God, but is thoroughly representative, there being stockholders in different states and in Canada. There is still some outstanding stock, which may obtained by any brother or sister sound in the faith. The business management is placed temporarily in the hands of Brother Emil W. Nutt, 3303 E. 110th Street, Cleveland, Ohio, to whom all business communications and all money should be sent. All manuscripts and business should be sent to Brother H. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. These brethren will not until the stockholders shall select officers to conduct the work. We are pleased to announce that the Editorial policy of the paper will remain as it is.

For those who succeed to this work of the Lord, we wish to bespeak a fair trial at your hands. Some become prejudiced when a pet theory of their own is called in question, and form adverse opinions regarding a brother. We ask you not to be hasty, but see if really there is cause for your prejudice. Some times we get a dislike for another because some third person has an adverse word to say. Don't be influenced by such things, but test the new management by the only true standard—the Bible—and see if really they do not merit your confidence and patronage. Let the friends of Truth as it is stated in the Word of God, respond to the call, and support the paper that is to stand for so many years in defense of the cause we hold dearer than this life even. Work for THE RESTITUTION, and encourage by every means in your power the new friends who now take the burden on themselves of publishing the paper, and may it be a means in God's hands now, as in the past, of doing much good in sounding out the living truth.

Again thanking the many friends who have so nobly sacrificed to aid us in this work in the past, and wishing from the depths of our heart that God will bless you, we say—Good by, as Editor and Publisher of THE RESTITUTION.

A. R. UNDERWOOD.

Announcement.

A [illegible] has been published heretofore, in the year 1871 there was organized in Plymouth, Ind., what was known as the "Christian Publishing Association." It was a scheme that was put [illegible] by H. V. Reed, who was elected to edit THE RESTITUTION which [illegible] was acquired from Thos. Wilson. Stock was sold and the money used to run the business as far as it would go. After two years Brother Reed stepped out, and Brother Cheney ran it for a number of years. The finances were in bad condition, and [illegible] year became worse, until in 1887 it was found that the Association owed on contract to the printer a debt of near six hundred dollars. The question of paying this debt and continuing the paper was considered, and it was shown that no more stock could be sold, and the old stockholders would not stand an assessment on their stock. The stock had never been considered of commercial value, being simply subscribed to start the enterprise going, and not supposed to pay dividends, and was not supposed to be subject to assessment. The only thing to do was to stop, and that would not pay the debt owing. At this time proposition was made by the printer, A. R. Underwood, to take the business and print the paper for what the receipts might be, and cancel the debt due him. This being the only thing offered as a way out, the proposition was accepted, and a contract so made. A semblance of business order was gone through with each year, until the last meeting in 1897, and though notice was given for meeting three years after that time, no meeting has been held, and no business done by the association. Many of the old stockholders have sent in repudiating their stock, one of the last Board of Directors is dead, and three others have turned in their stock and resigned.

By abandonment and repudiation it therefore seems that the Christian Publishing Association has ceased to exist. There is no Board of Directors even to call a meeting if one was desired. A meeting of stockholders could only be called by one-fourth representation of all the stock, and with so much of this having been relinquished this action could not be had, hence as the holder of a large part of the original stock, I concur in the opinion of Brother Willey, who was the last President of the Board of Directors, that the Christian Publishing Association is "a thing of the past—that it is dead."

A. R. UNDERWOOD.

The following letter explains Bro. Willey's idea of the standing of the old organization:

San Diego, Cal., June 27, 1911.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Your letter of June 22 is at hand, and contents noted.

You ask what is my opinion of the condition of the Christian Publishing Association. My opinion has been for years, and is now, that as an association it is a thing of the past. In other words, that it is dead. When I handed you my five shares of stock, I considered them of no commercial value. To my knowledge there has been no meeting of the stockholders, or of the Board of Directors, since about 1897, some thirteen or fourteen years at least.

Yours in love,

J. H. WILLEY.

Word from Brother Alexander D. Donaldson of Brooklyn, N. Y., says that his mother died July 3rd and the funeral service was to be held July 5. We have no further particulars at this time.

It is noble to be able to ignore criticism, to crucify vanity, and to consider the good of our fellow man. It requires a heart full of grace to do these things. Criticisms deep into a sensitive soul, vanity clings tenaciously to human hearts, and selfishness sits snug in the soul, until a mighty power, higher than ourselves, releases us from their dominion.

Mr. Doubleface.

One of the most contemptible specimens of humanity found in the category is the fellow who can weep with one eye and wink with the other. He can take cocktails at the club, or water at the love feast; he can sing the "Little Brown Jug," or "Nearer My God to Thee," apparently with equal gusto. Like a piano he can vibrate in celestial harmony to "Holy Angels" or reverber te to the touch of the "Devil's Trill." He runs with the sheep and is equally at home with the wolf pack. He subscribes handsomely to church funds and makes up the expenditure by swindling an wheat, or giving short weight or shoddy goods. An India rubber conscience is a mighty handy thing for some people. It is for the Sunday school boy's scripture definition of a lie—An abomination unto the Lord and a very present help in trouble." The astonishing fact in connection with these amphibious lumbags is that some of them [illegible] to persuade themselves [illegible] are not "off the [illegible] downright crook a prize to these moral chameleons than after their color to suit their circumstances. Go and take a jimmie and make a living lifting other peoples back windows, and you will be respectable compared with the oleaginous scoundrel who saddles pedunculated shreds [illegible] neighbor. Be something or other, an honest man or a thug.—Truy Shots.

The Resurrection of Christ.

Paul says: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain and your faith is also vain." This was the climax of all miracles. The apostles preached Jesus and the resurrection. All the evangelists record this crowning miracle, and the Epistles refer to it more than fifty times. A belief of this in the heart is joined to confession for salvation.

Let us examine the testimony. It is as easy to identify a man who has been dead, as any one else, and these disciples were as good witnesses as any philosophers or modern skeptics could be. They were not in darkened rooms and were not excited fanatics. They were even slow of heart to believe, and required the best of evidence.

They did not expect him to rise, but prepared to embalm the body. They had expected him to erect the Kingdom of Israel at once. They refused to believe the first reports of the women and regarded them as idle tales. They were even slow to believe the testimony of the angel. Their energies remembered his promise of resurrection better than they did.

He appeared to them in open daylight, about a dozen times during forty days. They had all the evidence of his bodily existence that they had of the existence of each other.

The disciples were sincere and artless men and women, with no motive to deceive, and with a belief in the most dreadful doom for liars. All four writers agree in the record. They gained nothing by the report, but suffered scorn and persecution. They lived lives of unequaled excellence, purity and honesty. What motive had they for falsehood?

The fabrication the disciples stole him away while the guards slept was not believed. A million of people were at Jerusalem, the Passover moon was full and the sepulchre was just outside the city. Probably the Centurion and Pilate believed in his resurrection. No fact in history is better established.

Any candidate for the gospel ministry who "sees difficulties," "has doubts," or is "indifferent," [illegible] "unsettled" concerning these essential doctrines of Christianity, would be untrue at Jericho awhile [illegible] gospel he is supposed to preach—a message not of cunningly devised fables, but one of which one of its preachers said it was that "which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon and our hands have handled"—no "doubts" or "difficulties" about that.—E. P. Marvin.

Stand for the Right.

While none of us liveth to himself, and none of us dieth to himself, while human beings are linked together in fellowship, in sympathy, and in mutual endeavor; it is nevertheless of the utmost importance that every man maintain his own individuality, to that extent that he have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, and utterly refuse to yield his convictions of right to majorities, however numerous they may be, or to individuals, however influential they may seem.

We have no right to do wrong, whether to please ourselves or to please others. We have no right to follow the multitude to do evil; and if it be insisted that we shall stand alone if we take a right position, let us remember that when the Lord shall reward evil doers it will be very pleasant for us to be alone and separated from those who have done wrong.

I know the influence of older men. I know the persuasive power of majorities. I know the seductions of compromise, and I know that many souls have been ensnared and wounded by such devices of Satan. The only safe course is to stand for the right, unalterably determined to do the right thing, and refuse to yield one hair for majorities, or cohorts, or for friends. We may bear wrong on our own part, but we must not countenance wrong doing toward others. We must stand for God if we stand alone. We must stand for right if all the world oppose us.—Christian.

Doing What One Pleases.

The man who asserts that he has a right to do what he wishes seldom wishes to do right. That is an independence which puts everybody else under bondage. It is a mistaken idea of liberty that gives license. One's sphere is not altogether his own if that of some one else is in part superposed upon it. In a world of relations and connections, dependence and interdependence must be marked more strongly than independence. Any man will destroy his usefulness quickest by a disregard of the rights and desires of others.

"He who always does what he wants is not wanted very often for what he does." We all love such a man in the sense that we wish him to be better. The natural course is to love him at a strong affection. Seeing that one esteems another most when that other has due regard for the rights of his fellowmen, it follows that one must esteem himself most when he, too, exercises care touching the privileges of other people. Recently a friend remarked that the essence of Christianity is to think of the other man first. Selfishness and Christianity are as much opposed to each other as day and night, as much as hemlock and nectar. By precept and example Jesus Christ has marked out the way, and the way passes far on the other side of self conceit and oppression.

Failure and Liquor.

The first and most seductive peril, and the destroyer of most young men, is the drinking of liquor. I am no temperance lecturer in disguise, but a man who knows and tells you what observation has proved to him; and I say to you that you are more likely to fail in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any or all temptations likely to assail you. You may yield to almost any other temptation and may reform: may brace up, and if not recover lost ground, at least remain in the race, and secure and maintain a respectable position. But from failure caused by the drink habit recovery is almost impossible. I have known but few exceptions to the rule."

Life's best things are within the reach of all. The ties of human affection are the possession of the poorest. The beauty of earth and sky lie within no man's enclosure, and are monopolized by no title-deeds. The grand succession of the seasons is God's exhibition of gracious and mighty power, for which no fees are charged. The sense of physical well-being which we call health is more commonly possessed by those who have to toil for their bread than by those who get it without the labor which bestows appetite. And, above all, the o'er-arching love of God is free to all, and may be had for the taking.

There is a story of an artist-pupil, who has wrought long on his picture, trying to make it to please his master. But the work seemed to be a failure and he sat down by his easel in sore discouragement and dropped asleep. Then, while he slept, the master came in, and, understanding the boy's disheartenment, quietly took the brush and finished the picture. So our Master comes to us in our discouragement, when we have done our best, and with his own hand puts the finishing touches on our work and makes it perfect.

Character is one of the few things that we cannot purchase, nor inherit, nor get from another in any way. Whatever else a person may have borrowed, or appropriated of another's, but his character is all his own. There is but one way to get a strong character and that is to build it.

Religion a Cleansing Force.

The vileness of sin and the cleanliness of righteousness is a prominent theme of the Old Testament and the New. Outward cleanliness means life and health. Professor Fisher says that cleanliness—clean cities, clean streets, clean water, clean milk, clean food—would almost banish all the diseases which now lay the heaviest tribute of death on the people.

But there is a higher life. There is a moral and spiritual life for the individual and the community. This life is promoted by social purity. The law of cleanliness applies to the whole man and to every department of human activity. Wherever there is defilement there is decay. If our cities are to be great and strong cities, if our nation is to be a great and strong nation, we must be a clean people. Wealth will not save us. Purity is the salt that saves a city and a nation. We must be a people of clean speech, of clean literature, of clean entertainments and of clean hands.

How shall we become a clean people? Some depend on the Legislature, on the executive officers of the city and State. They say let us elect a good mayor, a good city council, and our city will be cleaned up. We shall see an end of murders and crimes and graft. But they are always disappointed. It is not possible for a mayor, however excellent he may be, to clean up a city. He can do many things, but not this thing. The Legislature, the courts, and all the machinery of government may be as good as ever a State possessed, but corruption will go on for all they can do. Others depend on education. They say the people are bad because they do not know the advantages of being good. Ignorance is the cause of all our trouble. Pour in the light of science, and we shall have cleanliness and peace.

After all, the real remedy for uncleanliness which is the cause of the decay of nations, is an old remedy. Long ago, the prophet represented Jehovah as saying to a people who had ruined themselves through their uncleanness: "I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and you shall be clean: from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you." A fountain has been opened for sin and uncleanliness. It is religion, the religion of the Bible, the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, the religion of repentance and regeneration through the atonement of Christ. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses from all sin." This remedy is thorough. It goes to the bottom of the evil. Other remedies are superficial. Their effects are confined to the surface. This begins with the heart. "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward part, and in the hidden part thou wilt make me to know wisdom. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." "Create a clean heart in me, O Lord, and renew a right spirit within me." What every city needs is a revival of spiritual religion. What every State needs is a shower of grace which will make the people clean. We must have a revival of repentance, of regeneration, of holiness.—Christian Advocate.

A Letter to a Preacher.

Your sermon tonight, though perfectly true as far as it went, failed in this respect: the mercy of God in the gift of the Lord Jesus was not mentioned. Though you urged the need of salvation, the unconverted man left the church as ignorant of the way of salvation as when he entered it. Oh, do forgive me for writing with so little reserve; but seeing as I do, every day, how much the Lord owns the simple proclamation of the full Gospel, I feel constrained to press upon you the importance of preaching in every sermon that which, by the grace of God and the teaching of his Spirit, can, and will make your hearers wise unto salvation. In every sermon tell of sin and its consequences; tell of what Christ has done for the sinner, of the punishment laid upon him, of the atonement made, the righteousness imputed, and the peace and good works which follow the simple acceptance of the salvation thus provided. These are the elements of the Gospel of Christ, and therefore preachers often take it for granted that their hearers know them well, whereas a very large number may be virtually ignorant of them. I feel sometimes overwhelmed with the responsibility of those who stand up to preach to men who in a short time must be in eternity. To the preacher, Christ is precious, yet he frequently only speaks of repentance, of the danger of delay, of the blessings of "religion," of good works, perhaps of faith in the abstract. These are all right and good, but these alone will not save. The men before him are dying—this may be their last opportunity of hearing any message from God. Oh! why does he not give at least a part of his sermon to tell how the Lord Jesus came to seek and to save the lost, and how he procured this salvation with his own blood? He has said, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Surely, if all who know him did thus "lift" him up from Sunday to Sunday, we should not hear so many lament that they see no fruit of their ministry.

Miracles.—It is not, if we understand it rightly, a sign of decreasing, but of increasing spirituality, that miracles have ceased. And so it is a truer discrimination that recognizes the presence of God in men, the saints that are in the world, not by the miracles they work, but by the miracles they are, by the way in which they bring the grace of God to bear on the simple duties of the household and the street. The saintliness of the fireside and the market-place—they wear no glory round their heads, they do their duties in the strength of God; they have their martyrdoms and win their palms, and though they get into no calendars, they leave a benediction and a force behind them on the earth.—Phillips Brooks.

As in the days when Malachi's virile revelation rang in Israel's ears, God is looking for an honest church. Does he find it? I dare not judge. What would Malachi say? If the church is in any degree dishonest, it is because individuals in it are dishonest. And anyone who knows anything at all, knows that there are such men in the Church of God. Many a man who would violently resent the imputation of dishonesty has not even thought of being honest in first things. He is not honest with God the Highest, even on the basis of dollars, which is the lowest level of honesty. And the church is discredited in the eyes of men by individuals false to their faith.

All that hate me whisper together against me; against me do they devise my hurt. Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me. Psalm xli. 7, 9.

Conference Report.

The Churches of the Northwest Conference of Oregon and Washington met in Corvallis, Oregon, June 22 to 26.

There was a good representative attendance from the different churches. The ministers present were A. W. Darby, N. D. Titchenel and William Skeels, who gave able and helpful sermons. A good portion of the time was given to social meeting and praise service. The singing was indeed soul inspiring. A spirit of love and harmony prevailed throughout the business sessions and discussions. The question of sending delegates to the National Conference was considered and unanimous opinion was expressed, that while such a Conference would be a good thing for mutual improvement and helpfulness, they were all opposed to formulating a creed or binding all to subscribe to certain articles of faith which would cause division and scattering of the household of faith, which now are united on foundation principles. An open Bible and free investigation for the increase of knowledge was the prevailing thought.

Evangelists reported as follows: Bro. Titchenal reported 28 sermons preached; money received at the different places eighty-eight dollars and thirty-five cents; Bro. Darby held meetings in two places, and took in twenty dollars, nine dollars and fifty cents of which he turned into the treasury. The treasurer reported 79 dollars and fifty cents still in the treasury, and received during the Conference in money and subscriptions one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Frank Smalley, President: A. W. Darby, Vice President; Libbie Palmer, Secretary; Goldie Darby, Treasurer. A. W. Darby was chosen for evangelist for the coming year. There was one came for baptism but on account of shortness of time and other reasons it was delayed until Monday afternoon, when they went to the river and Bro. Darby baptized Sister Minnie Harlan into the Christ.

Altogether our Conference was one of the most profitable and pleasant that it has been our privilege to attend for some time.

LIBBIE PALMER, Sec.

Ebenezer. 1. Sam 7, 12

The copy for this department of THE RESTITUTION is supplied by Brother Robert G. Huggins, of 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Please send all letters and communications intended for this section direct to him, and save delay.

The Great Tribulation 'Shortened."

Does Matt xxiv 21 refer to the destruction of Jerusalem; if so what does Daniel mean in Dan xii 1? Mrs. Flora A. Wood.

EDITOR'S REPLY.

"There shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." The calamities and miseries which befell the Jews are without a parallel in history. Their unparalleled sin was recompensed with an unparalleled punishment. Our Lord wept at the foresight of their calamities. Matt xxiii 36, 37, 38. Emphatically "days of vengeance, that all things which were written might be fulfilled." Lk xxi 22. Days in which the calamities predicted by Moses and Daniel and other seers, as well as those foretold by Christ, met in one event, and was fulfilled in a most literal and terrible manner on that generation. The horrors of the time went back into history and collected the miseries of the past, and duplicated them; for the temple was burnt by the Romans on the same month and day of the month, on which it had been burned by the Babylonians. Josephus' War, book vi, ch. 4.

But terrible as was God's judgments at this time, unparalleled in history, yet in view of Daniel (xii 1) putting the Coming of Christ and the resurrection at a time of trouble "such as never was," we are made to ask: If the epoch of resurrection is the greatest time of trouble, the "such as never was," how can the destruction of Jerusalem be so described? The answer is obvious when we notice the modification the Lord makes in Matt xxiv 21, 22. The great Jewish tribulation was unparalleled, but, adds the Master, "Those days shall be shortened!" Daniel's "time of trouble" is unparalleled and unmodified, while our Savior's is unparalleled but localized, limited, and modified. Josephus computes the number who perished at the seige of Jerusalem at eleven hundred thousand. (War, bk 6, ch 9). If the Lord gone on destroying in like manner the whole Israelitish nation would have perished. But for the sake of God's elect, the Jews, but more particularly the Christians, those awful days were "shortened." This merciful "shortening" gave opportunity for a remnant to afterwards be gathered out. "They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and I shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Lk xxi 24. What is the meaning of this statement? Well, it implies that a time is coming when Jerusalem shall cease to be "trodden down by the Gentiles;" which it was then by pagans, and since then by Mohammedans. Again, it implies that this treading down of Jerusalem is to cease when the "times of the Gentiles are fulfilled." The meaning of this appears from Rom xi chapter. In the 25th verse the statement of our Lord in Lk xxi 24 is reproduced. The "fulness of the Gentiles be coming in," and the "times of the Gentiles be fulfilled," does not mean, as generally understood, "till the Gentiles are all converted;" but, "till the Gentiles have had their full time of that place in the Church which the Jews had before them." After that period of Gentilism, as before of Judaism, Jerusalem and her people, no longer "trodden down by the Gentiles," but "grafted into their own olive tree," shall constitute, with the believing Gentiles, one united people in the Kingdom of God. This blessed result is made possible by the shortening of the days of Jewish vengeance.

Suggestions.

Brother Huggins:

Your reply to Sarah F. Morgan, whose husband I used to know, and I love not her also, if she is the Morgan of Virginia, is the first sensible public printed article I have read on the subject, yet it is a subject that is so plain that none need have any difficulty, and yet everybody seems to stumble over it. I was very much impressed with this a week or two ago. You must understand that in Maryland there is considerable agitation as to women suffrage, and there is an anti-suffrage movement as well. I, like David, went down to the battle several times, and on every occasion have been impressed by the surpassing power of the women on the platform. As public speakers, taking them by and large, in my opinion they far surpass the men. I have not yet heard a poor woman speaker, but I have listened lots of times to drivelling men.

But what I started to say was this: that on one occasion in a large hall with a full audience, a certain Max Eastman, a Professor in Columbia College I believe, was speaker of the day, in favor of "equal rights for women." At the close of his discourse questions were handed up to be answered, and one of them was worded something like this: "Did not Paul forbid women to speak in public?" Instead of correcting the idea at once and turning it down suddenly, as it ought to have been done, he allowed the premise and went on to dilate, very nicely though, on the very different attitude that Christ held to women from that of Paul, mentioning how Christ most tenderly revealed some of his best doctrines to a lone woman at the well of Samaria, and she not a high character of a woman at that. In fact aside from the mistake he made in putting Paul at variance with Christ, he made a very excellent reply.

Now if people would only notice that Paul is the first that enfranchised womanhood, and set it on the exact same plane as manhood in the often quoted text "there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male or female." On this basis the Church was founded, holy men and women to the contrary. As to the question of the man's supremacy in the household it has no bearing in this matter whatever. The captain of a ship is superior in office to the mates and all the other cabins, but he has no more rights before the law than they. The same can be said of judges on the bench to whom we all rise in salute when they assume office, still they only count one out of the judgment seat like any of the rest of us. So for my part, I thoroughly agree with Paul in the ollirial supremacy of the man in the household—not of the kitchen though—and at the same time maintain that in the matter of public rights, and church rights there shall be neither male nor female.

Last week I was called on to serve on the criminal jury, and there came up before us cases such as "the moon sees" and the police winks at, that exposed a condition of things that would not exist if the women had anything to say in the matter. It is no good, for instance, rhapsodying against the "white slave trade" while it is run as open as the barber shops, and the police knows it and the judges know it, and we all know it. Do you know that "the Lord is going to create a new thing in the earth and a woman shall compass a man." I don't know what the original text signifies, but I am certain that in more ways the redemption and up lifting of the human race will largely devolve on the women, and besides the way we usually understand it "her seed will bruise the serpent's head."

Yours in Christian love,

J. F. GELLETLY.

Was Jesus Raised From the Dead on Saturday?

Some would answer "yes," and some would say "no." Let us go to the Word. We will ask our friends who affirm a Saturday resurrection for a proof passage. Perhaps Matt xxviii 1 will be given. It is the only one that could be given; but in the light of Mark xvi 9, it cannot teach a Saturday resurrection.

Let us examine it: Chapter divisions do not belong to Bible-writers. They were introduced—the same as verse divisions—centuries afterwards. Matt xxvii 66 belongs to Matt xxviii 1, and if we read it thus, we will have: "So they ("the chief priests and Pharisees," Matt xxvii 62) went and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch in the end of the sabbath." Then, "As it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre." In blessed harmony with this Iden says Mark (xvi 1): "And when the sabbath was past (about the time Matthew calls the dawn toward the first day of the week), Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James.....had brought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him." Luke says: "Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they (the women, Luke xxiii 55) came unto the sepulchre, bringing spices." Luke xxiv 1. John says the same, but mentions only Mary Magdelene (John xx 1.)

Mark xvi 9 reads: "Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week (on the first day of the week, Revision,) he appeared first to Mary." This is plain isn't it?

But those who teach Saturday resurrection are not content to leave this, but change the punctuation. Changing punctuation is allowable only on the basis that it makes the sense clearer and doesn't do violence to other Scriptural statements regarding the same thing.

It is claimed with the punctuation changed so as to read: "Now when Jesus was risen, early first day of the week he appeared first to Mary Magdalene," it would speak the truth. But we boldly assert—and the proof is on hand—that it speaks an untruth; that it contradicts the Bible and facts relative to this whole matter.

If Mary made a visit to the sepulchre on Saturday as Saturday-resurrection advocates claim, then she saw the risen Christ on Saturday, for as she arrived the Lord was out of the tomb, and she and the other women obeying the angelic injunction ("Go quickly and tell his disciples") "met" Jesus on that day. If this is true—and it is just as true as that he was raised on Saturday—then the risen Christ did not appear "first" to her on the "first day of the week" as their punctuation of Mark xvi 9 would teach. Hence their message as punctuated does not tell the truth.

Query: We wonder if our Saturday-resurrection friends can rely on Luke xxiii 56 which says that these very women "rested" on Saturday? If they rested on Saturday, they were not going around viewing the sepulchre. This is certain.

And if Mary saw the Lord on the sabbath (and Saturday-resurrectionists teach it), then pray tell us, why did she come on Sunday morning to anoint the Lord—especially when she saw on Saturday that "the stone (was) rolled away?" One thing is absolutely certain: If she saw the stone rolled away on Saturday, she would never have come early Sunday morning to anoint him. But she was there on Saturday and saw the stone rolled away, if the Saturday-resurrectionists are correct.

In claiming the resurrection of our Lord on Saturday, they claim that the crucifixion took place on Wednesday. But this would make the "preparation day" fall on Wednesday. But according to Astronomer Oliver's printed tables of Paschal full moons, "not a single 'preparation day' fell on Wednesday during Pilate's whole administration," says the able William Sheldon.

In Luke xxiv 1, 13, 21, 29 we read that Sunday was "the third day"—not the fourth—since these things were done. And they said that when the day was "far spent," and that day was the first day of the week. So it locates the crucifixion on Thursday, if we all count back correctly.

We hope none of our people will accept the Saturday-resurrection theory till they investigate it thoroughly; for it is not the Bible doctrine as touching the time of our Lord's walk out of the new tomb."—J. G. Schaumburg.

Gold Dust.

Deeds are fruits, words are but leaves.

More have repented of speech than of silence.

Have the courage to obey your Maker, at the risk of being ridiculed by man.

It may make a difference to all eternity whether we do right or wrong to-day.

When you know a thing, maintain that you know it; when you do not, acknowledge your ignorance.

No one thing does human life more need than a kind consideration of the faults of others. Everyone sins; everyone therefore needs forbearance. Our own imperfections should teach us to be merciful to others.

ANNA DREW.

What a tame world this would be if we had not perpetually the shock of adverse judgment and opinion. Storms root the oak, fire tempers steel, great epochs make history, and adversity well borne makes character.

Our peace ought not to rest simply on the work, but on the worker; not only on the finished work of Christ, but on Christ himself, who has finished the work. We too often think of what he has done without connecting it with himself: and by dwelling too much on truth and doctrine our souls get barren: for the soul must feed upon Christ as its portion—who he is, as well as what he has wrought.

Selections.

Why Incredible?

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" Acts xxvi 8.

This "why" has been ringing down the ages. This thought that any should so limit the power of God as to question for one moment his ability to raise the dead, is enough to make angels wonder. Poor, puny man living in the beneficence and tender mercies of a compassionate God, and dependent on him for his very breath, questioning, doubting, and even denying the resurrection of the dead. The God who could construct and form man out of the dust of the ground, can he not revivify or make alive as easily as he could make man in the beginning? Where is the limit to his power or knowledge? Can we find it? We think not. If it were so that there could be no resurrection of those who have been dead for hundreds or thousands of years, even, then God's power would be limited; but not so; the prophet declares, "thy dead men shall live." Do we believe it? I hear some lonely pilgrim respond, "I do." Well, thank God! I am glad that some believe it amid the mysticism and unbelief that is flooding our world today. There are many that have faith in God, and account that he is able to raise the dead.

And mere nominal assent that God is able to do it is not what we want. Will he do it? Christ says, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he be dead yet shall he live again, and he that liveth and believeth in me shall never die, believeth thou this?" Paul says: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ raised, and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins, and they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

Paul hinges the whole plan of salvation on the resurrection of the dead; without this everything is gone by the board. No Christ, no salvation, no future life; nothing beyond this life if there be no resurrection.

Let Paul speak again: "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man (Adam) came death, by man (Christ) came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive (1 Cor xv 20, 22)

The death in Adam is physical and means a cessation of being, a returning to dust, which is the "appointed once to die." Through the resurrection shines the blessed hope of seeing our blessed Redeemer and uniting with loved ones sleeping in death. The few that will be living when Christ comes will be a small minority of the vast multitude of God's host who are sleeping, and who will awake at the last trumpet sound, and shout for victory over death and the grave. When the mandate from the throne shall be to the "north give up, and to the south, keep not back, bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth," then shall be brought to pass the saying, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—M. W. Piper.

The Reason Why.

"As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor ii 9.

When the apostle affirmed: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him," he could not have been a believer in the theory that pictures out this world as a kitchen of Deity, with heaven as his parlor, and death as the door through which we pass out of the kitchen into the parlor, where at once eyes see and hearts feel and ears hear the full reality of the Divine preparation. He could not have believed that even then a thousand times more eyes than this world contains were beholding, in the celestial parlor, the preparation of Jehovah, and a thousand fold more hearts were already there, being thrilled with eternal realities, and ears already hearing the songs of the saved.

The reason why he believed that eyes had not seen, ears had not heard, nor hearts felt the great preparation, was simply because there were then no eyes, ears, nor hearts in the promised realm of the ransomed ones—the new earth—that realm not being ready for their reception. Though not seen yet, "God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit," and we view them prospectively. So we look "at the things which are not seen, which are eternal;" not with the natural eye, but with the eye of faith.—William Sheldon.

An Object Lesson.

They stood upon the corner waiting for the car, a lady and her two bright eyed sons.

"Boys," said the mother as her eyes fell upon two figures moving down the street, "I want you to notice those two old gentlemen who are coming toward us."

The boys looked up eagerly. The foremost figure was that of a slender, erect old man, whose eyes glanced keenly from under his snowy hair. His step was firm and resolute. There were kindly wrinkles about his eyes and mouth, those wrinkles that come from frequent smiles. Time had indeed touched him, but quite lightly and lovingly.

The appearance of the other old man was strikingly different. His body was unwieldy. He moved with difficulty, grasping his cane with a hand that trembled continuously. His nose was swollen, his eyes bleared. He crept by the little group upon the corner with a vacant stare.

"Boys," said the mother, when at last the strangely unlike pair passed out of hearing, "your grandfather knew both of those men in his boyhood. The gentleman who passed us first, Judge Brand, is the older. He was a Christian boy, and he became a Christian man. His home is one of the happiest I ever knew. He has never become wealthy, but in the truest sense of the word he has won success. Though he is now almost seventy, he finds life as full of interest and pleasure as he did some fifty years ago."

"The other," the lady continued after a pause, "began life with a determination to enjoy it. He was an attractive boy, with a host of friends, I have heard my father say, but he became a selfish and dissipated man. His wife died broken-hearted. He is quite alone now. Even his vices no longer give him any pleasure."

The boys looked silently after the vanishing figure.

"Remember" the mother added, "if you live to be old, you will resemble one or other of these men. Which it will be, you must choose for yourselves."

A gong sounded, the street car came in sight, and as the trio stepped on board the little sermon was ended. But in the memory of the lads the image of that broken down man lingered as a warning placed at the entrance of that path which seems attractive to the young, but whose end is death.

He Loved Unto the End.

The Savior might have argued, if he had been narrow or less magnanimous, I am relieved from further faithfulness to this miserable little band of Jews. They are so ignorant; they will forsake me tonight and take care of themselves; they will fall asleep while I pray, though I asked them to watch, needing their sympathy; they will strive for the chief seats; one of them will deny me; they have no good working organization; their financial officer will go to the opposing religionists for pay; they lack learning; if they write about me hereafter their Greek will be incorrect; they are not cultivated; it was unlucky that I fell into their society in Galilee, and continued to associate with them; perhaps I might have made terms with the Sanhedrin and become an honorable counselor; this miserable company will lack clearness of vision, and my work will be hampered by their petty strifes; some will be of Paul, and some of Apollos, and some of Cephas; they will fail to understand that my gospel is for all the world, for Jew and Gentile; they have already made a traitor their treasurer; they lack executive ability; they will put incompetent or treacherous men into office; they will dispute among themselves on doctrines; in preaching to the heathen, they will "resist each other to the face" (Gal. ii. 11) about unimportant practices; they will have factions and "dissimulations;" Thomas for a time will doubt my resurrection; they are petty, narrow, uncultured, bigoted Jews; and I will turn to those who can better appreciate me. . . . So he might have reasoned; but he did not. "Having loved his own that were in the world, he loved them unto the end."

And we love Jesus, because he loved his own and was faithful to them.

And this was becoming to him who used the word faithful so much, and always with approval. Notice this point; it will do us harm:

"Who then is the faithful and wise servant?" Matt. xxiv. 45.

"Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things." Matt. xxv. 21.

"Who then is the faithful and wise steward?" Luke xii. 42.

"He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much." Luke vvi. 10.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

Jesus practiced the doctrine he taught, and "having loved his own, he loved them unto the end." He was the "faithful and true witness."—J. J. Summerbell.

Push On.

You have been hindered in your work. Something has gone wrong. You have been injured, grieved, wounded, and have felt discouraged, and you have halted and ceased to push forward and do the work which the Lord had appointed you. You cannot forget the unkindness and unpleasantness you have felt. You brood over it.

Do you not see that this is just what the adversary wants? The great object he has in view is to keep you from doing the work which the Lord has set you to do. He cares nothing about your feelings or your rights, but he wants to hinder the work, and the longer you halt and hesitate and complain, the better he is suited!

Now there is just one thing to do in such a case and that is to push on. Do not halt or hesitate. See to it that you are in the path of duty, doing what the Lord would have you do, and then go forward and let Satan clear the track. If you are running to the Lord's time table you certainly have the right of way, and Satan cannot hinder you unless he can frighten you. Your business is simply to go forward,—to push on. You cannot wait for the devil, or his servants to make things right. They never will do it.

You have been defeated. Your plans have failed. Gather your strength and make new plans. Determine that Satan shall make nothing out of the delay, but that you will push on and do more work than if you had not been hindered. Push on. Life is fleeting. Time is short. Death, judgment, eternity,—all are hastening. In a little while your working days will be ended. How sad it will be to find at last that you have been deceived and deluded by Satan, and have neglected your proper work and failed to fulfill the ministry which you have received of the Lord.

Of course you have been wronged. Who has not? You have no doubt been abused, slandered, lied about. Were you not forewarned of this? You did not think it would come in this way? Of course not; and Satan knew you did not think it, and that was the reason why it did come in precisely this way. But never mind. While you hesitate the devil is busy. While you are mourning he is exulting; and while you are lamenting over the wounds and bruises you have received, he is planning for another attack just as malicious, just as devilish as this. Now the thing for you to do is to gird up your loins and push on. Make haste and do the Master's will, and all the power of Satan will fail to disturb or overthrow you. Push on, the Master soon will come; and when he comes he will straighten all things, even the crooked serpent himself. You will be here when your enemies are gone. You will hold the field when the fight is over; and God shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly. Forward, march! Push on.—H. L. Hastings.

One Sin Less.

A single sin, however apparently trifling, however hidden in some obscure corner of our consciences, a sin which we do not intend to renounce, is enough to render real prayer impracticable. A course of action not wholly upright and honorable, feelings not entirely kind and loving, habits not spotlessly chaste and temperate—any of these are impassable obstacles.

If we know of a kind act which we might but do not intend to perform—if we be aware that our moral health requires the abandonment of some pleasure which yet we do not intend to abandon, here is cause enough for the loss of all spiritual power.—F. B. Cowpe.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The 28rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later.

SAMH MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord.

O. EDGAR MARSH, Sec.

To the Brethren scattered abroad:

I have decided to devote my whole time to evangelizing in a general way during the next year, and expect to be ready [illegible] the work Sept. [illegible] providing I receive enough calls between now and then for such work in different states and territories. I expect to go forth and do the best work I am capable of, depending upon support from the brethren who are interested in this kind of work. I ask no stated sum. I expect to freely give, and it will depend upon my supporters as to how freely I receive. I am offered a very lucrative position in secular work, which I shall be forced to take if the brethren do not consider that my services are worth as much spreading the gospel as they are to commercialism. Its up to you, brethren, to decide the matter. Send me no money, but send in your pledges as to how much you will give during the next year toward the work of spreading the gospel. I do not however, expect you to raise a sum equal to what I am offered in secular work. Address me at Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

O. J. ALLARD.

Special Notice.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings en route. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Illinois Bereans—Notice.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in THE RESTITUTION some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or direct from this Office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid, or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day.

Notice.

The Church of the Blessed Hope, (Church of God) in Chicago, has secured the VanBuren Hall, Corner California ave and Madison st, for services every Sunday from 10:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. Order of services.—Bereans meet from 10:00 to 11:00 on 1st and 3rd Sunday and Adult Bible Class meets from 10:00 to 11:00 on 2nd and 4th Sunday of each Calendar month. Regular Church Services from 11:00 to 12:30 every Sunday. All are welcome.—R. W. THOMPSON, Sec'y., 544 N. Willow Ave. (Austin Station) Chicago.

PLEASE don't send to this office for W. H. Wilson's works, nor for John Foore's tracts, nor for D.C. Robison's tract. We do not keep them in stock, as they are handled by the authors direct.

LOOK. LOOK.

Here Is a Good Big Chance.

We want a lot of New Subscribers, and with a little effort you can get us one or more. We do not ask you to work for us for nothing, but will pay you for what you do. Here is our offer to you:

For a New Subscriber at the regular rate of $1.50 per year, we will send to any address you name

10 copies of "A Letter to a Friend"
or
One Pound of other Tracts,
or
One-half Pound of Tracts and 5 copies of A Letter to a Friend.

This will enable you to earn a supply of tracts to distribute among your friends, and perhaps start some one on the way to the Kingdom.

LOOK AGAIN, PLEASE!

We have a number of copies of "The Word of the Kingdom" which originally sold at $1.50. This is a work gotten out by Brother John O. Woodruff before he died. Only a few copies remain, and they will make excellent presents. While they last we will mail you one Free, if you will send us

Two New Subscribers.

JUST LOOK AGAIN, PLEASE!

We have on hand some copies of the Emphatic Diaglott. All of our readers known what it is—a word for word translation of the New Testament, by Brother Benjamin Wilson. There is a column with a line of Greek and beneath it the equivalent English words so the reader may know just the word that is used. A very valuable help in Bible study. We will give you one of these books Free if you will send us

Four New Subscribers.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given below, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the doners request. When left for the Publisher to decide, it will be used only for those who themselves state their circumstances, or whose case is presented by some trustworthy person.

E F Randolph	2 00

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compells all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

"A Century of Indiana" is the title of a new history written by State Senator Edward A. Moore, and published by the American Book Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, price 75 cents. The volume contains 340 pages, and gives the earliest history of the State on down to the present day. Indiana today stands second to no state in the Union, and this work gives the whole history of the State in concise and attractive form, carefully indexed, so that it has an added value as a reference book. It is a splendid book for the home, and for Indiana Students it is of priceless value. No library is complete without it. If your book dealer cannot supply it send as above and get a copy. There is pleasure in reading it, for every Indianan is proud of his State, and besides enjoyment there is real profit in this work.

Will it Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother James W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith, and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once, and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth, and can be had by addressing W H Wilson at 626 North Willow av. Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all. Send and get one.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32 page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, post paid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

THE LAST CHANCE.

We have a number of books published by our late Brother John O Woodruff. We have only "The Word of the Kingdom. During the last years of his life Brother Woodruff issued these books at great expense. Many were supplied through his generosity. The remainder ought to be out doing the good he desired they should, and to enable you to get one we will send them to you post paid for 75c each.

THE article on "Salvation. What is it?" which appeared in our issue Sept. 15, has been translated into German and printed in tract form, the size to send in an ordinary envelope. The cost is 2 cents each, 50 copies for 65 cents, or 90 copies for one dollar. It is printed in full in English so that those who do not read German can see exactly what they are handing to a German friend. Send all orders to B. Juergensen, Barberton, Ohio.

BROTHER H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

IMPORTANT.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post office, and state, plainly and distinctly. We know a great many names and addresses, but we may not remember yours.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Indiana."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order, or express order, NOT by personal checks. Money sent in either of these ways is safe, and without risk of loss. Stamps stick together and are useless. Money even paper money is easily abstracted and is at the mercy of a dishonest clerk always. Money sent in a registered letter is not guaranteed by the government.

Always examine your money order and see that it is drawn in the name of "The Restitution," and that it is payable at "Plymouth, Ind." Look and see that the post master has written Ind. and Ill. or Pa. or Ohio.

When you wish your address changed give both old and new address.

In sending renewals always give the exact name in which it has previously been sent, and state if you wish the name changed, and we will gladly do so. The reason why this is important can be readily seen. For instance, the paper is sent to Mrs. Susan Williams, and her husband George, gets it in his name to his own name and send it, saying for me to send the paper for a year. We have no reason to suppose that Susan is his wife—he did not say she was—so we enter his name and send him the paper. Susan's paper goes delinquent, and afterwards when we notify her about it both become offended. So stupid in us—everybody knows Susan and George are husband and wife.

Get the last issue of the paper when ordering books and tracts, and order from that. If a work is advertised as supplied only by the author, send to him—please not to us.

SPECIAL TO AUTHORS.

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

An author frequently spends considerable of time and labor on an important subject, and when it is ready picks up an envelope that has to be strained to hold it, addresses it, puts on a single stamp and drops it in the box. He has labored hard to produce his finished work, then neglected three important points—he did not enclose it in an efficient wrapper, he failed to fully pay the postage, and neglected to put on his return address. A hint to the wise is enough.

Try THE RESTITUTION, $1.50 a year

SUBSCRIBE FOR

THE RESTITUTION

Published at

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA

The Price is

ONE DOLLAR AND A-HALF A YEAR.

To New Subscribers who have never taken our paper, we will send it on trial for

THREE MONTHS FOR 25 CENTS

OR

ONE YEAR FOR ONE DOLLAR.

SALVATION.

The above is the title of a tract of 44 pages issued by Brother John L. Wince. It contains the subject matter of a series of twelve articles that were published some months since in THE RESTITUTION. This tract is well written, is clear and convincing. It is a living question, vital to everyone. The sole object in the mind of Brother Wince is to do good—do his part in arousing his fellowmen to a sense of duty to God, and encouraging them to do it. The price is set at 10 cents single copy, or 12 for $1.00. Those not able to pay who desire a copy will be supplied free of cost on application Order from the Author at Pierceton, Indiana, or from this office as is most convenient.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

The price of this book is 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $2.00 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 80 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions: and the third expounds in a clear, impressive, and homiletic manner, particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are untied and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of you home; let The Bible—its Principles and Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7½ inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. Order from Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

If more convenient those who wish may order through this office.

SOWING SEED.

I recently was informed of a lady who has been brought to a knowledge and obedience of the faith by handing her one of those small tracts offering "Five hundred dollars reward" to a person finding certain pulpit phrases, which most people suppose are in the Bible

This lady felt certain that she could find them, and so took her Bible and concordance, and searched diligently in order to find them. She failed to find them, but found in their place, the Pearl of Great Price, which was much better.

The following publications are doing much to enlighten the people:

Student's Text Book, cloth bound book 200 pages. It is designed as a guide to students to a right comprehension of the teaching of the Holy Scripture, as made plain upon the Sacred Page. It deals specifically as How to study the Bible, and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cts.

Pine Wood's Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a Class and its Teacher. This method not only makes the teaching plain, but interesting and attractive, like reading a story. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages Price 10 cts.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? 4 pages, 25 cts per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cts per 100.

Address W. H. Wilson, 625 North Willow Ave, Austin Station, Chicago Illinois.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you do it. It is fully up to modern standard in every way, and contains all the latest fashions in clothes and hats. Its New Fashion Designs in each issue are alone worth many times the subscription price. It also contains valuable information on all home and social matters. Only 50c a year. Includes a free pattern. Send 5c for sample copy and 10c for free sample pattern.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing as stylish and as fashionable as that worn by the most fashionable ladies. Please send me your Catalogue. Send for free pattern of Dialogue and Tuck Waist.

We Will Give You Five Presents for getting only two subscribers to your friends. Send for free premium catalogue and Tuck Waist offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

THE MESSENGER

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of Eternal Life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cts, 2 copies 60 cts, 3 copies 97 cts, 5 or more copies 25 cts each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

BIBLE PEARLS—2 page tracts Suitable for wide distribution. 1 The Gospel. 2 Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3 Immateriality. 4 Kingdom of God. 5 Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6 Two Advents. 7 What is Religion? 8 Restitution Age. 9 Destiny of the Wicked. 10 Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cts, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cts.

FOUR-PAGE TRACTS.

Can You Believe? a series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V Reed.

10 for 10 cts, 50 for 25 cts—100 for 40 cts.

Future Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 160-page pamphlet by Wm. Cheon Morcrieff. Post paid, 10 cents

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving the Jesus the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God," "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall we do to be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole same price. Address W. L. Tomlinson 10825 Orville Ave, N. E, Cleveland, O.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different from the meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents. Send for it to W. H. Wilson, 625 N. Willow Ave., Austin Sta. Chicago, Ill.

Scripture Searchers Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents, order from W L Tomlinson, 10837 Orville ave, Cleveland Ohio

The Elements of the Kingdom of God, is the title of an eighteen page tract by Brother T J Daniel of Magazine, Ark. He sets forth that a kingdom cannot exist without a King, his cabinet officers, territory, a capital city, subjects, laws. Brother Daniel will send this little tract to you at 10 cents each, or $1.00 a dozen. Send direct to him for them.

The Restitution

ON TRIAL

Three Months for Twenty-five Cents

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution
is the Official
Organ of the Church
of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace, and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths to "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31.)

ROBT. G. HUMANS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 ● CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 12, 1911 No. 26

LET US PRAY.

Oh, God, we desire to approach thy throne of Grace this morning with child-like trust and confidence. Thy mercy toward us is very great. Amid the dying and the dead we still live and move and have our being in thee. We thank thee for life and all our present blessing and privileges, which are many. While we have food and raiment and shelter, and protection under the powers that be, thousands are destitute, afflicted and tormented for conscience sake, Great God, as reports of these cruelties reach us, we sigh for the coming of the Just One, whom thou hast appointed to rule the world in righteousness. Hasten his coming, oh God, if it please thee, for then the oppressor shall cease and corrupters of earth shall be destroyed.

And now, our Father, we ask thee to look in mercy upon this little band of believers in thy truth. We feel unworthy of thy notice, because when we have done all thou required, we are unprofitable to thee. But through weakness and inadvertence we often do amiss; and we plead in Jesus' name this morning for forgiveness and for strength and help to do better.

Our Father, we come to listen to the Spirits' words to the churches. May every one have ears to hear. May we apply the divine plumb rule and see exactly what we are, and have clear perceptions of thy will, and by thy loving purpose toward us, be influenced to dedicate ourselves anew to thee, and thy cause in the world. Bless the whole church, scattered abroad. Bless the natural seed of Abraham. Do thou so marshall the nations of earth into position where their power shall be crushed, that thy Kingdom may come and thy will be done in earth as in heaven. In Jesus' name.

"ACCORDING TO;"

Or Some of God's Measuring Lines.

A sermon delivered by the editor of "The Restitution" in Cleveland, Ohio, June 4, 1911.

"According to the riches of His grace" (Eph. i. 7).

There is a simple phrase oft repeated in the New Testament and often overlooked, which expresses the measures and steppings of the higher Christian life. It is the phrase "according to," two words which rise like the uprights of Jacob's ladder to the heavens, and across which many of the precious promises may be seen in the vision of faith firmly fastened as heavenly steps leading higher and higher up to all the good and perfect will of God. Let us glance at some of these heavenly measures.

I. The Will of God.

This is at once the limitation and the inspiration of our faith and prayer. "If we ask anything according to His will He heareth us," "The Spirit maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Beyond this our desires and our aspirations cannot go, but beyond it they need not desire to go, for within it lie all the probabilities of blessing which a human and mortal life can receive; and God's chief desire is to get us to see how much it means of blessing for us. As we have often said, there is no vaster prayer within the reach of faith than the simple sentence, "Thy will be done." This will must mean for each of us our highest possible good. We know it includes our salvation, if we will accept salvation, for "God will have all men to be saved." We know it includes our sanctification, for "this is the will of God, even your sanctification." We know it includes our deliverance from physical evil if we will receive it in His name in faith and obedience, for He has said, "I will. Be thou clean." We know it includes every needed blessing that the obedient can require, for He has said, "He will withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly." The apostle's prayer for his beloved friends was that they might have fulfilled in them "all the good pleasure of His goodness;" and that they might "prove that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

Beloved, are you measuring up to this divine rule? Are you meeting all your Father's will? Are you walking "worthy of Him to all pleasing?" and are you having fulfilled in you the prayer, that "He may make you perfect in all things to do His will, working in you that which is pleasing in His sight through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever? Amen."

II. His Word.

"Behold the handmaid of the Lord!" is the sublime response of Mary to the angel's astonishing message, "be it unto me according to thy word." Never was faith put to a harder test. Never was woman asked to stand in so delicate a place of peril and possibility, of humbling shame and glorious, everlasting honor. Realising, perhaps, with every instinct of her maiden heart all that this might cost her, she meekly, unhesitatingly, without one question, one faltering breath, accepted the stupendous promise and responsibility and rose to meet the divine measure, "according to Thy Word," and like an echo came back the heavenly benediction, "Blessed is she that believed, for there shall be a performance of those things that were told her from the Lord."

Beloved, are you living up to this great measure? Is faith resting and claiming, not according to signs and seemings, frames and feelings, but according to His word? Is obedience walking, not according to the course of this word, or the moods of our capricious hearts, or the standards of men, or the example of others, or the traditions even of the Church, but according to His Word? Are we Bible Christians and determined to believe and obey every word within these inspired and heavenly pages? Then we shall be found in "the way everlasting," for "the grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the Word of our God shall stand forever," and "he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

III. The Riches of His Grace.

"In whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins according to the riches of His grace, wherein He hath abounded towards us in all wisdom and prudence." Peter has used a parallel expression. "According to His abundant mercy He hath begotten us again unto a lively hope." This is God's standard and measure of salvation. He works and saves according to the riches of His grace. He abounds towards us in all wisdom and prudence, that is, He adapts His mercy to every variety of guilt, and He anticipates, in His prudence and foresight, every future emergency. He sees Peter from the beginning to the end of his career and accepts him "for better or for worse;" and when the hour of his shameful fall is near, He can say, "I have prayed for thee." So He takes every one of us and adjusts His infinite grace to all the minutiae of our sin and its worst aggravations, our corrupt and ruined nature and all its wreck, our weak and helpless will and all its inability to stand, our circumstances, our temptations and all that besets us. Knowing and anticipating all, He just encompasses us in His everlasting arms and saves and keep us, "according to the riches of His grace."

Beloved, have you entered into the fulness of this measure, and have you understood it in all its all-sufficiency for a lost world and the most wretched and ruined lives over whom you pray and love? Oh, let our faith look up from lost humanity, to the mighty love of God and "the exceeding riches of His grace." And if there be a discouraged and guilty soul within reach of this message, may God help you, beloved one, to put your sins with all their aggravations side by side with God's immeasureable grace, until you shall realize something of the Psalmist's sublime figure when he sang, "As far as the east is from the west, so far has God removed our transgressions from us. As high as the heaven is above the earth so great is His mercy toward them that fear Him." Our sins may have reached to the clouds until they have become like a "thick cloud," but, thank God, "His mercy is in the heavens," and far above the cloud.

IV. The Riches of His Glory.

Can we form any conception of the riches of His glory? Moses asked to see that glory but was told it was too bright for human gaze, and only in the distance and from behind could he dare to look upon it. A little glimpse of it the disciples beheld on the Mount of Transfiguration, but they were afraid of its brightness and their eyes were overcome with slumber under its spell. "The heavens declare His glory, and the firmament showeth His handiwork," and so our conception of the riches of His power and majesty may be gathered from these glorious constellations and worlds of light which science is more fully exploring in these wondrous days. Sometimes we have sat down and allowed our minds to dwell on the multitude of these discoveries and calculations. We have tried to take in the magnitude of yonder planet many hundred times larger than our world, and yonder sun outweighing the world many thousandfold, and stars beyond stars,

"Where system into systems runs
And other planets circle other suns," until our brain whirls and threatens to collapse under the pressure of the sublimity; and "lo! these are part of His ways, but the full thunder of His power who can comprehend?" His hand holds all these orbs; His will commands them all; His wisdom poises all these spheres and directs them in their course without a jar or catastrophe; His sceptre is over His mighty empire; His creating word called every portion of them into being. His province upholds them every moment; His taste and goodness have adorned them with beauty and loveliness and enriched them with bounty and blessing. There is not a creature among their inhabitants from the highest archangel to the lowest insect but owes its being to His power and goodness. And all this is but "the riches of His power," for His omnipotence could call millions of such universes into being in a moment. Nay, all this is but a scaffolding for the glory which He is preparing for the abode of His redeemed. The riches of His glory will not be complete until the new heavens and earth shall have emerged from this state of disorder and the New Jerusalem descended from heaven in the glory of God with streets of gold and gates of pearl and foundations of precious gems, and all the thrones are reared, and crowns are set, and the mansions are completed, and the glorified are shining "as the sun in the kingdom of their Father," and we ourselves are crowned with all "the riches of His glory."

Oh, beloved, we shall then understand something of the meaning of such verses as these: "I pray that God would grant you according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened by His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Or again, "Strengthened with all might according to His glorious power unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness." Or again, "My God shall supply all your need according to the riches of His glory by Christ Jesus." It is according to the riches of His glory that He is working out the new creation in our hearts and preparing the more glorious temple of the soul for His own eternal abode. It is according to the riches of His glory that He is willing to strengthen the heart for all patience and longsuffering. And it is according to the riches of His glory that He is able and ready to supply all our need. There is nothing too hard for such a God; too rich and glorious for His wisdom, grace and love. He looks at the littleness of our faith and cries, "Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not neither is weary? There is no searching of His understanding. He giveth power to the faint and to them that have no might he increaseth strength."

Beloved, let us lift up our eyes and behold the glory of our God and begin to walk as sons and heirs, and claim, even in our minority, something of the riches of His glory.

V. The Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus Christ.

"That ye may know what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward that believe, according to the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power and might and dominions, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the Head over all things to the Church, which is His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all."

The resurrection and glorification of Jesus Christ have become for us the pledge and pattern of all our faith, and hope can claim. The power that God hath wrought in Christ in raising Him from the dead and setting Him upon His own right hand is the very same power which we may expect Him to exercise to-ward who believe. "The riches of the glory of this inheritance in the saints" is the standard of what we may share in our spiritual experience now. God has performed for us the most stupendous miracle of grace and power, and nothing can ever be too hard or too high for us to expect from "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

His future is a very definite as well as a glorious one. Step by step we can follow and its transcendent and celestial heights with our ascending Lord, as we see Him first above the mighty power of earth and then above and far above all principality and power and might and dominion and every name that is named, not only in this world but in that which is to come, until all things are beneath His feet. And then as we gaze upon His lofty pre-eminence we are permitted to sit down by His side and claim all the fulness of His glory as our own. For all His glorification, power and majesty are, not for His own personal exaltation, but that He might become the Head over all things for His body, the Church, and He takes His high pre-eminence as our Representative and recognizes us as already seated with Him in the heavenly place. His resurrection, therefore, involves ours, His triumphs ours, His glorification ours; His rights are shared with us.

Do we require in our behalf the exercise of an authority that transcends all other authority? We have but to remember that He, our exalted Head, is sitting far above all principalities. Do we require a force to be exercised for us over-matching the mightiest forces of nature or of evil? He is sitting far above all power and might. Do we ask something which even natural law would seem to hinder? God already has done something in His resurrection which is superior to all law, for that is what "dominion" means. Are we confronted with imposing names and despised by human pride? We are sitting side by side with One who is exalted above every name that is named both in this world and that which is to come. Indeed, the whole economy of human life, the whole system of providence is a framework for the accomplishment of God's purposes for His redeemed people. Nations rise and fall, human society exists, great cities swarm with their inhabitants and move with the mighty currents of commerce and social life. All the events of the great world as they pass are but movements of Christ's mighty hand, primarily designed for those who immediately take part in them, but ultimately for the good of His Church and the building up of His kingdom; and men and nations are but puppets in the hands of our anointed King, whom He uses for His wise purposes even when they are fulfilling their own pleasure, and then drops them when He pleases. After the resurrection of Christ, and in view of His enthronement there is nothing we need fear to claim according to this mighty measure, as part of the riches of our inheritance.

VI. Christ Himself.

We read in Romans xv.: "According to Christ Jesus." This is the highest of all standards, higher even than resurrection, ascension and glory. As He is, so shall we be when He appears, but "As He is so are we," even here. "Ye are not of the world even as I am not of the world." "Love one another as I have loved you;" "As I live by the Father so he that eateth Me even he shall live by Me." "As Thou hast sent me into the world even so send I them into the world." "When He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." Such are some of the touches of heavenly light which reveal our identity with Jesus and unfold the mystery of His life in us. Not only is He our Example, but He is our life. Miniatures of Christ, God expects us to be, receiving and reflecting Him in all His fulness, our life His life, our love His love, His riches ours. We represent Him, we dwell among men not as citizens of earth, but dead to our citizenship, and walking like Him as if we had been sent specially from heaven on a mission from another world.

Beloved, is Christ our Pattern, our Type, our living Head, our divine Standard and Measure? Are we determined to have nothing less and to be nothing less than even as He? Shall we cease to copy man, and follow only our Lord and Master?

And even though we are conscious of very imperfect resemblance to the Great Original, are we still holding our standard as high as Christ? I have often noticed the artists in the great gallery copying the paintings of the masters. I have sometimes come back weeks afterwards and found them still working on the copy of some great painting. Their work was not complete, but their copy was, and while it hung upon the wall with its perfect form and tints their copy was constantly reaching closer approximation to the great object lesson. But if they had begun to copy the works of the artists around them or to complete the picture from their own recollection or conception of it, it would have soon become a cheap and worthless daub. So let us always keep our eye upon the heavenly standard and be satisfied with nothing less than "according to Christ Jesus."

THE DEMON!

Colonel R. G. Ingersoll, in speaking to a jury in a case which involved the manufacture of alcohol, used the following eloquent language:

"I am aware that there is a prejudice against any man engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worm in the distillery until it enters in the hell of death, dishonor and crime, that it demoralizes everybody that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe anybody can contemplate the subject without becoming prejudiced against the liquor crime. All we have to do, gentlemen, is to think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death; of the suicides, of the insanity, of the poverty, of the ignorance, of the destitution, of the little children tugging at the faded and weary breasts of weeping and despairing wives, asking for bread; of the talented men of genius that it has wrecked, the men struggling with imaginary serpents, produced by this devilish thing; and when you think of the jails, of the almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons, of the scaffolds upon either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this vile stuff that is called alcohol. Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affections, erases conjugal loves, blots out filial attachments, blights parental hope, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows; children orphans; fathers fiends; and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime. It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots. It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffolds. It is the lifeblood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman and the support of the midnight incendiary. It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligations, reverences fraud, and honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue and slanders innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife, and the child to grind the paracidal axe. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God and despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury-box, and stains the judicial ermine. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors statemen, and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend, it calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and, unsatisfied with its havoc, it poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, saps reputation, and sinks out national honors, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does all that and more—it murders the soul (life). It is the sum of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy."

MY HEAVENLY COUNTRY, THEE.

1. My heavenly country, thee,—Heb. 11:16; Gen. 28:13.
   Land which by faith I see,—2nd Pet. 3. 13; Ps. 115:16.
   Of thee I sing,—Is. 35:1-10; 60:18-22.
   Land for which Jesus died,—Matt. 13:44; 36-38; Eph. 1:11-14.
   Land for which pilgrims sighed,—Heb 11:8-16, 40.
   Home of the purified,—Ps. 37:9, 29; Prov. 2:21, 22. 32; 2nd Tim. 4:1.

2. My promised country, thee,—Matt. 5:5; Prov. 11:31.
   Land from the curse made free,—Rev. 22:3; Is. 65:17-25.
   Fair Beulah land,—Is. 62:4, 5; 11: 14-9.
   Land, God by oath decreed,—Gen. 15:7-17; Acts 7:5.
   To Abram and his seed,—Gen., 13: 14-17; Gal. 3; 16, 29.
   When saints from death are freed,—Ezek. 37:11-13; Dan. 7:27.
   And ransomed stand.—Hos. 13:14; 2nd Thess. 1:7-10.

3. O wondrous mighty host,—Rev. 7: 9-12; Rom. 8:23.
   Saved to the uttermost,—Heb. 7:25; Luke 20:35-38.
   Immortal throng,—1st Cor. 15:51-54; Phil. 3:20, 21
   Then palsied tongues awake,—Is. 146:4; 17:15; Dan. 12:2.
   The dead their silence break,—Eccl. 9:4, 11; Is. 26:19.
   On earth in praise partake,—Rev. 5: 9, 10; 14:5.
   In victor's song.—1st Cor. 15:57; Job. 19:25-27.

4. Our God on earth shall be,—Rev. 21: 1-3; Is. 25:7-9.
   No pain, nor death, nor night,—Rev. 21:14.
   And God our King.—Rev. 11:15; Matt. 6:10.

J. AUGUST SMITH.

(Above poem can be sung to the tune of "America."—Editor.)

THE RESTITUTION

Issued four times the month by
THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....EDITOR
HOWELL W. NUTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order, to the business manager, Howell W. Nutt, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exercises of particular texts on the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 12, 1911.

EDITORIAL

In everything give thanks.

Surely not to remember the benefits you have conferred; guard against forgetting those you have received.

We could not be happy with all that the world could give us now. The spectacle of evil would blight anyone's life. Give us the hope of Israel and the world is well lost for it.

Those who are devoted to the truth are like people in business in one respect: they have to "let things go," which, with other and lighter occupation, they might attend to. "Business" excuses everything with people in the world: "duty" will do the same with those who belong to God.

It makes no difference with some if you don't see them for five years: they are the same good friends as before. [illegible] there had been no interval. Others require keeping close to, or their friendship will cool. The cause of the difference is detectable upon examination. There is more of the love of God in the former than the latter.

Discussion with the alien may be a serviceable way of drawing attention to the truth on special occasions, but it is of questionable utility as a permanent feature. It is apt to create a love of debate for its own sake, and to check those true spiritual tastes which it is the mission of the truth to develop. "Love, joy, peace, gentleness, righteousness, faith," do not grow in a polemic atmosphere. They are liable to shrivel in such an atmosphere, while the harsher critical propensities which delight in intellectual friction and finesse, are apt to grow with a strength that blights and deforms the new man.

DEATH AN ENEMY.

We are assured by the believer in the immortality of the soul that death is not what it seems to be, that it is not in reality death, but a mere transition, a change from a lower nature to a higher, and to a more exalted state of being. Hence we are gravely told death is not an enemy but a friend. It is said, "Death need not be the King of Terrors to anyone. To the Christian there are three friends—Himself, his God, and the angel of death." Now all this is mere religious cant, as hollow as it is false. It is not a perversion of truth; it is worse than that. It is an utter denial, a direct contradiction of the express statement of Scripture. Paul plainly declares, "For he must reign, till he has put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Death is not yet abolished. It reigns triumphant the wide world o'er. And until it is destroyed, until "there is no more death," it remains what it ever has been, the enemy of the human race. Is not the grave-side bitterness evidence sufficient to every beholder? Yet hardly are the words from Paul testifying to this fact, passed the lips of the speaker, as the solemn service for the burial of the dead is gone through, than follows the positive denial, "Death is not an enemy, but a friend." True it is that, "Because they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be saved, and for this cause God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a lie." (2 Thes. ii. 2-11.)

"THE DEAR OLD RESTITUTION."

This is a familiar form of reference to The Restitution all over this broad land. Many reasons could be given why its readers give the paper this endearing title, this appellation of affection. From the revival of the truth some sixty or seventy years ago, when God began "taking out a people for his name" from the world in the latter days, The Restitution has made its weekly visits, advocating truth and inculcating righteousness; declaring the whole counsel of God, and exhorting to purity of life. So useful in its mission, so accurate has been its teaching, so beneficial its exhortations, its readers have slated it among the "household necessities"; they feel that it is one of the family circle; and they feel the same affection for it as they do for wife or children.

The good hearted farmer, after a horse has spent years in his service, will put him on pension in his old age. He is often worthless, but the farmer gives him pasture and tender care out of consideration for the good and the work he has done. Were The Restitution as worthless now as an old horse it would still have a competence for life. Consideration for what it has done; the battles it has fought, the victories won, would cause its readers to deal tenderly with it in its old age; with them it would still be "the dear old Restitution."

From this illustration do not draw the inference that The Restitution is old and feeble. The present status of the paper was never better in all its history. It is now in the hands of the church (where it belongs); in the hands of officials known to be successful business men, and also known for their devotion to truth and piety. "The Dear Old Restitution," aged and honorable, barring all controversy, both personal and doctrinal, will continue its weekly visits, bearing to the four points of the compass the sweet message of God's kingdom, and the coming glory of Christ's reign. With this editorial policy we are sure our readers heartily sympathize. Give us then, your prayers, sympathy, financial and moral support. Send the editor good articles for publication; give him every suggestion you have in mind that would improve the paper, that you can to increase the subscription list; and take up this slogan: "Long live the dear old Restitution!"

THE TRIBULATION AND THE SIGN.

WHAT is the tribulation spoken of in Matt. 24:29? Have those signs been fulfilled? You will notice that the signs come after the "tribulation," and that is what gives us trouble. It does not seem to me The Seventh Day Adventist can be correct in thinking these signs were fulfilled in the dark day and night of 1780, and the falling of the stars in 1833; because they were so widely separated and so long a time has elapsed since the first sign. Our Lord says, "This generation shall not pass away until all these things be fulfilled." If and the Lord says, I will give you certain signs by which you may know my coming is near, how can they be signs to any but those witnessing them? Must not the Lord come while these people are living who saw the signs? Now we know the generation who saw the first sign, viz., the dark day of 1780, passed away long since. Still that was a phenomenon unexplained by any known natural cause.

Then again in Matthew 24-29 He says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days," the signs occur. Now I want to ask you, "Are these signs given for believers or unbelievers? Must not the Saints be taken away before "The Tribulation," for they appear with Christ at Jerusalem as the Jews are fleeing from Gog and Gomer and all his band; and if they are taken before the tribulation, how can they see the signs?

We have spent three Sundays on this chapter and I think we all feel as did the eunuch, "How can we understand except some one should guide us?"

Well, dear brother, perhaps I have trespassed too long on your time even in the reading of so long a letter; if so forgive me. May the Father of our Lord Jesus, the Anointed One, keep you in His grace until the kingdom be come.

Yours in the hope of the Gospel,
MRS. FLORA V. WOOD.

EDITOR'S REPLY.

"The tribulation of those days" (v. 29) is the "great tribulation" of the 21st verse; that is, it is the horrible calamities which came upon the Jews in fulfillment of their imprecatory prayer,—"his blood be on us and on our children," Matt. 27:25. It was "shortened" and consummated by the eagles (v. 28) of the Roman army. Jerusalem was like a putrid corpse; her life was gone; and the Romans were like the vultures and eagles—sure to find the carcass and devour it. Since then Jerusalem and the Jews have been "trodden down," but for the "elects' sake" their punishment has been more bearable. The sixth vial has been pouring out upon the Ottoman Empire since 1820; and soon as the "sick man" passes away, the great enemy of the Jews will be out of the way; the way of the kings of the east will be prepared. Christ will come as a thief, and then Jewish "tribulation" will end and their "fulness" begin anew. Rom. 11:12.

With the ending of this tribulation, "immediately but after the affliction," is the literal Greek of Matt. 24:29. The [illegible] Since Adams the tribulation, and instead of giving you trouble should [illegible] you. Do not get the idea [illegible] Dr. Clark did, that by the word "immediately" all time is blotted out or at least [illegible] to a very short period. Immediately [illegible] the Greek is eutheos, and signifies "at once, suddenly," so that it means only the sudden appearance of the sign which Jesus announces, not the shortness of the interval which was to separate it from the "days of tribulation" of which he is speaking. And what is the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven"? The darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, and the shaking of the "powers of heaven." V. 30. Of course the Seventh Day Adventist are wrong here; for they interpret the signs literally, concerning which method of interpretation God has warned us, saying, "Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them." Jer. 10:2. "The falling stars and dark day stories of Adventism are simply heathenism modernized. The signs of the times are political, not astronomical. In prophetic diction great commotions upon earth are represented by the phenomena of the heavenly bodies. The fall of Babylon is likened to the stars and constellations of heaven withdrawing their light; and the sun and the moon being darkened (Isa. 13:); [illegible] heaven being covered, the sun [illegible] blood, and the moon darkened [illegible] 22): Jerusalem, by darking the [illegible] and turning the moon into blood [illegible] 21. When Christ comes and [illegible] "powers of heaven" upon earth will be shaken and destroyed. Rev. 11:15-18. Their overthrow is the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." The sign of the Son of Man in heaven is totally a different thing to the signs of the times which are precursors of his advent. There are two stages in the manifestation of the Son of Man. He comes for His saints at the beginning of the time of trouble, and delivers them from it. Dan. 12-1, 2. Later He comes from the east of Jerusalem and invades the city "with His saints" or "troops," and resettles it from the Russian power of Gog. Ezek. 14: Hab 3:12-16; Jude 14. Here Christ and His saints appear in the political "heavens" for the first time; the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven" is written in letters of blood and fire, and "all the tribes of the earth" cannot deny it (v. 30), for He comes in the clouds of heaven (the multitude of saints, Heb. 12:1) with power and great glory. From His coming to the "end of the world" there will elapse a period of about 40 years. Mi. 7:14-15. "All these things" will transpire within a generation. Matt. 24:34. "These things," embracing the advent of the Lord, and much else besides; "all these things," ending entirely "this world," and opening up "the world to come"—within a generation. The power and great glory of Christ and His kingdom will then shine out in the splendors of a divine kingdom. Matt. 25 chapter completes the picture. The Lord bless Sister Wood and her Bible Class, and the watching and waiting ones everywhere, and keep them praying for the coming and kingdom of our Lord.

A SHORT SERMON ON LOVE.

The following beautiful sentiments are translated from the French:

"You have only a day to live here on earth; act in such a manner that you may spend it in peace.

"If you cannot bear with your brother, how will he bear with you?

"Peace is the fruit of love; for, in order to live in peace, we must bear with a great many things.

"None is perfect; each has his failings, each hangs upon the other, and love alone renders that weight light.

"It is written of the Son of Mary, that having loved His own which were in the world, He loved them unto the end.'

"For that reason, love your brother, who is in the world, and love him unto the end.

"Love is indefatigable; it never grows weary. Love is inexhaustible; it lives and is born anew in the living, and the more it pours itself out, the fuller its fountain.

"Whosoever loves himself better than he loves his brother, is not worthy of Christ, who died for his brothers. Have you given away everything you possess? Go and give up your life also, if needed!

"The wicked man loves not, he covets; he hungers and thirsts for everything; his eyes, like unto the eyes of a serpent, fascinate and allure, but only to devour.

"Love rests at the bottom of every pure soul like a drop of dew in the calyx of a flower. Oh, if you knew what it is to love!"—The Living Church.

HOW NOT TO LOVE THE BRETHREN.

Be absent at the meeting for Breaking Bread, or habitually take your seat half an hour after the commencement of worship. Disparage and discourage the preacher, by (1st) saying that you know as much as he can tell you; and (2nd) always being absent at the public ministration of the Word; or, if present, busy yourself about other matters during the discourse. Study personal comfort before the requirements of the Truth, and treat with levity any remonstrance rendered necessary by dereliction of duty. Pay no heed to any "word of exhortation," and study to be an example to the world of what is not "according to Godliness." Tell the younger members that the pastor of the Church has no right to teach, to rebuke, or to 'speak with all authority,' and that mob-law is quite as good as discipline and order; authority (properly understood) being unknown among a free people. Assist in destroying the Church by injuring its foundation in every conceivable way, and stay away from the week night meeting because "no one of talent" is present to speak. Avoid conversation "as becometh saints," and keep aloof from all society where you cannot indulge in "foolish jesting." Neglect the Bible, and read novels; forget God, and study "nature," "the [illegible] or any of the Truths pertaining to Him; laugh at those who believe heart work to be superior to a superficial knowledge of the [illegible] concerning the devil and hell, etc.; and have no fellowship with those who prefer to talk about heavenly things. Contend for doctrine, but not "the doctrine according to Godliness;" and whenever an opportunity occurs give it as your opinion that "one place is as good as another." Make it a practice of always being tired and sleepy on the first day of the week; and if one thing is to be preferred before the other, let it be the visit of a friend, business requirements, a ramble in the parks, and so forth; anything rather than loyalty to God. Be indifferent to the general welfare of the Church, and ignore all ideas of earnest, whole-hearted co-operation with those to whom the Truth is dear. Dispute the necessity of sacrificing the sweet repose of your home after a hard week's work, of giving up a comfortable meal, or of relinquishing the pleasant recreation of a Sunday morning in order to attend meetings, and in addition to these things, think little of everybody and everything. By these means you will demonstrate successfully that you do not "love the brethren," and as a consequence, have not "passed from death unto life."

DON'T USE BIG WORDS.

In promulgating your esoteric cogitations, or articulating your superficial sentimentalities, and amicable philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous pomposity. Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensiveness, coalescent consistence, and a contaminated cogency. Eschew conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement, and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous discantings and unpremeditated expiations have intelligibility and veracious veracity without rhodomontade, or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittaceous vacuity, centriloquial verbosity and vaniloquence vapidity. Shun prurient jocosity and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent. In other words, talk plainly, briefly, naturally, truthfully, purely; don't indulge in slang, or put on airs, and don't use big words.—2 Cor. 3:12.

It is not well for a man to pray cream and live skim-milk.—Beecher.

CORN SHEAVES
Gathered from Everywhere.

EZEKIEL FROM A NATURAL POINT OF VIEW.—"Like Jeremiah, Ezekiel was a priest; but while to the former the eloquent rhetoric of Deuteronomy chiefly appealed, to the latter the ritual laws were more important. It is true that scholars tell us of an unknown prophet in the days of Cyrus, whose pictures of a happy return to Zion are not inferior to Isaiah's pages; but, with this disputed exception, the prophets of exile, and of the return to Jerusalem, rarely attain the ancient level of thought and word. Ezekiel was not less intent than Isaiah on the events of his own age, but less clearly foresaw the outcome of the struggle among nations. He expected a great Scythian raid, like that which desolated Asia in the reign of Josiah, to be about to burst from the Caucasus; but history does not record any such outbreak. The power of Media and Persia was not foreseen. The disasters prophesied for Egypt did not come till much later than Ezekiel expected. He bewails the ruin of Tyrian trade, and draws a vivid picture of her merchant princes. But Tyre, which had already sent out her great colony to Carthage two centuries before, rose from her ruins to become a source of strength and wealth to her Persian rulers. In the time when Ezekiel was a captive beyond the Euphrates, Tyre was obstinately opposing Nebuchadnezzar, and for thirteen years she kept his armies at bay."—The Hebrew Tragedy.—[The reason why "history does not record" the great Scythian raid is because it is not yet history. It was to be "after many days . . . in the latter years" (xxxviii. 8). And it was to be related to a national resurrection of Israel (xxxvii.) which history is now recording. To be strictly correct we should say that certain movements of the powers of chapter xxxviii. are also now being recorded in history—as the Jewish colonization movement, Zionism, etc. Ezekiel saw more than the distinguished author and explorer gives him credit for. Other points in this extract invite remark; but we forbear.—Editor.]

THE CLERICAL HELL CLERICALLY REPUDIATED.—Cannon Farrar says: "I declare, and call God to witness, that if the popular doctrine of hell were true . . . I would here and now, kneeling on my knees, ask Him that I might die as the beasts that perish, and forever cease to be, rather than that my worst enemy should endure the hell described by Tertullian, or Jonathan Edwards, or Mr. Moody, or Mr. Spurgeon, for one single year. Unless my whole nature was changed, I can imagine no immortality which would not be abhorrent to me if it were accompanied with the knowledge that millions and millions of poor, suffering wretches—some of whom on earth I had known and loved—were writhing in agony without end or hope." [Very good: but what then, Canon Farrar? As a brother said in a recent Canadian paper, you either believe that all mankind will be saved, or that no man possesses an alter ego which must live forever, either in torment or beatitude. If so, where is your clerical orthodoxy?—Editor.]

"THEM THAT HATE US." — Christ commands: how hard sometimes to obey. To tell us to do, we might think easy, but to tell us to feel contrary to natural impulse, none but those who love can respond here. He tells us not only to do good to them that hate us, but, to pray for them that despitefully use and afflict us. This is no doubt partly the same thing, but there is a difference. To pray for a man that hates you (when done in sincerity and truth and not with lips that receive no orders from the heart) is a sublimer magnanimity than merely to send him a loaf in his hunger; it is more; it is a blessing to the man who prays. You cannot pray for an enemy without stilling your resentment towards him and opening out your benevolent regards, and every time you deliberately do this, you are improved. You are lifted towards the elevated plane of the divine character, and the natural man is brought under the circumcising knife of truth. In no point is the difference between the natural and the spiritual man more apparent than here. The natural man is under the sway of his animal feelings only, and cannot even look towards the object of his injured feelings, let alone pray for him. If he could hear the voice of God, a new power would come in, and his very feelings take a new current. The spiritual man hears this voice, and puts away, at its bidding, all bitterness, anger, wrath, and evil speaking; and puts on the new man which is "renewed in knowledge, after the image of Him that created him."—Editor.

It is easier to do right than to escape the consequences of doing wrong.

SPIRITUAL MEAT AND DRINK.

In speaking of the judgment after the resurrection, Jesus said, "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, 'Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink.'" Matt. 25:34, 35. He said further, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

It is generally believed and taught that Jesus meant that those righteous people had fed and clothed the bodies of the needy while in this life, and it is believed by many that charity for the poor is equivalent to Christianity, and that good works of that nature alone are sufficient for the salvation of those who practice it.

While we do not deny that charity for the needy is a part of Christian works, yet it is contradictory to the Scriptures to claim that works alone will save any one. Many people who make no profession of Christianity have good works, and among them charity.

God, by his prophets, His Son, and other inspired writers, uses natural bread and water, hunger and thirst, clothed and naked, to illustrate the spiritual. The prophet Amos said, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." Amos 18:11.

Jesus said unto Peter, "Feed my lambs. Feed my sheep." John 21:15, 16. Peter seemed to regard these sheep as of the house of Israel only, and did not seem to understand the full import of Jesus' assertion that "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and they shall be one fold, and one shepherd" (John 10:16), until after he had the vision of the sheet, let down from heaven with all kinds of four footed beasts, and was told to kill and eat, and then the Spirit and the men sent by Cornelius enabled him to understand that he was to go and preach the gospel to the Gentiles, whom the Jews considered unclean from a national and religious point of view, feed them the bread of life, the word of God. After this, Peter wrote to the elders of the church, saying, "Feed the flock of God which is among you, not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind." I Peter 5:2.

Paul also wrote to the elders of the church at Ephesus, saying, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20:28. Paul writes to the church of God at Corinth. "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able." I Cor. 3:2. What was the meat that Paul had not fed them, and that they were not able to bear? The parts of Scripture more difficult to understand and yet necessary to spiritual growth.

Jesus said, "For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed." John 6:55. How can Christ's disciples give this food to those hungering for it? Jesus said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:63. Also, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." John 12:48. Jesus said to his disciples, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Matt. 28:19, 20. This commission was to teach the Word, to feed spiritual food, which, if digested, that is, understood and believed, would be the means of clothing its recipients with righteousness which is of faith. Christ's representative angel said to John, when in the isle that is called Patmos, "And unto the Angel of the church of the Laodiceans write: I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear." Rev. 3:14, 18. Job said, "I put on righteousness, and it clothed me; my judgment was as a robe and a diadem." Job 29: 14. This is the way that those to whom righteousness had been imputed by faith (Rom. 4:24) were spiritually fed and clothed.

F. M. HOWELL.

The Inspiration of the Bible a Test of Fellowship. No. 9.

The book of Deuteronomy—especially the early portion—embraces a record of events; and, as already shewn, "this book of the law" (Deut. xxxi. 26), if not the whole Pentateuch, was put beyond the vail, which represents the flesh, into the most holy place—the dwelling place of Jehovah. This act possesses a significance of no small importance. It is evidence apart from the fact of Moses being the writer, that the book was inspired; for it is quite inconsistent with the holiness of the tabernacle to suppose that a scroll written by a fallible pen would be placed in the most sacred part of a structure wholly designed by God. Its presence there is compatible only with its complete inspiration, and this indicates, that, as regards written matter, it occupied a place next in importance to the tables of stone written by God. All other inspired writing is on a par with that of Moses, and therefore its relationship to God's handiwork is the same. All are designed for the purpose of developing faith, hope, and love; of which three the greatest is love (1 Cor. xiii. 13). Indeed, love comprises the other two; without love, neither faith nor hope could attain to perfection. Hence the force of Christ's declaration, that "all the law and the prophets" "hang" upon love (Matt. xxii. 40); that which is true of the prophets is true also of the apostles. All the "Holy Scriptures" are but an elaboration of the principles of love embodied in the ten commandments; and these were lodged in the Ark in the holy of holies.

When Paul wrote to Timothy about the "Holy Scriptures," he made reference to writings of a specific character, whose holiness was on a par with the holy things in the Mosaic Law. The design of the latter was not only communicated by God to Moses in the Mount (Exod. xxiv. to xxxiv.) but they were made under the power of inspiration. It is said of Bezaleel that God "filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; and to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work," (Exod. xxxv. 31-33). Those who have any acquaintance whatever with the Tabernacle and its contents should have no difficulty in recognizing the minute detail involved in the inspiration of Bezaleel; and yet his workmanship had to do only with material things to be used as types. Would the Spirit of God be less accurate, detailed, or effective in providing writings intended to "make wise unto salvation?" No one understanding the essential characteristics of inspiration would for a moment entertain such a suggestion. There is no more justification for making one part of the "Holy Scriptures" reliable, and another part infallible than there is for introducing a similar distinction in the inspiration under which the Tabernacle and its furniture were fashioned. And it is equally unwarrantable to make a difference in quality between the "Holy Scriptures" of 2 Tim. iii. 15, and the "all Scripture" of ver. 15, or to say that the former is greater than the latter. The whole construction of the passage leads to the conclusion that the "Holy Scriptures" and the "all Scripture" are synonymous. To say that this is dependent on the position of word "is"—whether before or after "God-breathed" — or whether it should be there at all—is to take a narrow view, not only of the passage itself, but of the whole subject of inspiration. It is most unlikely that God would allow the authorship and character of the Old Testament to rest entirely upon the precise construction of this one statement; and we have to thank Him that such is not the case. There is, in addition, a variety of testimony, both general and specific, which, in its collective form, leave no doubt as to the divine inspiration and consequent infallibility of the "Holy Scriptures" with which Timothy was acquainted. Those Scriptures have been handed down to us through three independent channels—viz., the Jews, the Papacy, and the Saints. The Jews and the Saints have been at direct variance, in consequence of antagonistic beliefs concerning Jesus of Nazareth, and the Papacy has antagonized them both; collusion between the three, or even any two, has thus been outside the range of possibility. The New Testament "holy scriptures" having come to us through the Papacy and the Saints, there is a similar guarantee as to their authority. When to these witnesses we add the internal ones—the authoritative and anti-human style throughout, the relationship of one part to another, and the marvelous manner in which the different sections are so interwoven as to form a perfect picture—there is no room for any other conclusion than that God has produced the whole by His spirit. Incredulity may say there is no proof; it always has said so; and will continue to speak thus until the end of its career. It demanded of Christ "a sign from heaven," but he refused to give it (Matt. xvi. 1-4); there were already signs in abundance, if it would but recognize them. So likewise is it with the Bible; the book itself is the best witness to its own authorship. If any are looking for a voice from heaven, or for an external piece of inspired writing to say that it has all been God-breathed, they show that the existing evidence is not appreciated by them at its right value. It is not in conformity with God's operations in this cloudy and dark day to gratify any such expectation. He has given His word as a light, and He requires us to look at it, not with closed, but with open eyes—that we may see the gems with which it abounds on every page, shining like the precious stones in the high-priest's breast-plate, as he passed the seven-branched lamp on his way to the most holy place. To behold them in their most brilliant hues, as illuminated by the shining forth of the unveiled Spirit from between the cherubim, is impossible in our mortal state; this glorious sight is reserved for incorruptible nature; and it will only be enjoyed by those who rightly use and honor the light with which they are now blessed. To say that that light cannot be identified,—or, in other words, that the correct canon of inspired Scripture cannot be determined—until the High Priest comes forth from the most holy place with the antitypical Urim and Thummin, is, in effect, to affirm that God has shown less care in providing a complete lamp filled with pure oil for the holy place under Christ than for the holy place under Moses: that the type has been more highly blessed than the antitype. Uncertainty such as this is not conducive to blessing the Lord for His "counsel" (Ps. xvi. 7), as did Ezra when he opened "the book of the law of Moses" to read it to the people (Neh. viii. 5, 6). To heartily "bless the Lord for all his benefits" (Ps. ciii. 2), we should be able to include in it a perfect, not an imperfect light, an infallible, not a fallible book. To such as are able to do this, God may by His providence, as He is now doing, throw additional light on the sacred page, to comfort, strengthen, and cheer them, in preparation for the day when the divine author will himself "shine forth," and the "saved" (Ps. lxxx. 1-3) will be presented "before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy" (Jude, ver. 24).

THE BIBLE AS WE NOW HAVE IT

By one who for ten years did not regard the Bible as the Word of God.

To pass through the recent controversy without an inspection of the foundation of truth would be unnatural to all whose eyes are intent on the rising day star. To them nothing can exceed the importance of the issue involved in that "wind" or rather "storm" of doctrine which has blown upon us for eighteen months past. By it the house has been terribly shaken, but not overthrown. Its windows and doorways have been terrifically assailed, and its walls have been battered with virulent and diabolical intent. The fortress, however, stands. And, probably, the drift sand which for years has been accumulating around the base of the structure, and which has now been blown away, is removed in order that everyone may see the nature thereof, and know whether the Rock is the substratum upon which the house is built.

The question of the inspiration of the Bible has led "One who for ten years did not regard the Bible as the Word of God" to think again upon the reasons which led him to so regard it, and also to discover that the child-like faith begotten by evidence indisputable was not misplaced. Every step taken in examination of the question has only confirmed the first conclusion. He looks with some degree of sorrowful pity upon those who have become weak as he once was. Ah me! what will be the end of this controversy to such? The supple twig sprouting forth upon its parent tree, gathers strength, while the sap flows upward. Then cometh strength, and by degrees, the full-grown branch. Does it become weak again and fail, and then grow strong? It may, if it break not off in the changing. But if it do, the whole source of strength (unflowing for a time) must again well up, and give it renewed life and vigor.

Tell me, ye who find fault with the axe used by the Creator to hew you from your natural rock, how came ye out from among men to learn of Him? and I will answer all your doubts by your own arguments.

A youth of seventeen summers, who for over three years had sought in vain to extract truthful harmony from clerical dissertations upon the Scriptures, ventured to express his doubts upon the authenticity of the Bible to a religious friend, and was astonished to find the said friend subject to like doubts. (These, however, he carefully concealed from his fellows.) The youth spoke to others, and almost always with the same result. He pursued the subject further, even with professed religious teachers, and found even some of them sceptically inclined, and others totally unable to cope with Bible difficulties. He felt like one without rest for the soles of his feet. Still, upon the principle that muscles improve with using, and good begets good, he did not entirely cut himself adrift from all religious meetings. He listened for wisdom that he might be wise, and yet found it not where he sought for it. For ten long years the vessel drifted, went nigh some rocks, passed a shoal or two, and came nearly to being carried away by a stream, broad and powerful, but ending in the ocean. At last a new factor appeared upon the scene. A gardener brother, during business visits from the wanderer, with much praiseworthy persistence, spake of the wonders of the gospel. To all of his arguments, forcible and trite, the ever recurring reply arose, "Well, if the Bible were true, if I were sure it were inspired, I would admit all you say." This answer at last brought forth an appeal to prophecy fulfilled as evidence of the inspiration of the records. Daniel, John, and Moses were referred to. And this, the first step, led to a recognition of the truth that the Bible is a book of divine authority. Once accept the testimony of those three witnesses, the logic of the thing carries the believer on to implicit reliance on "The Bible as we now have it." It is no more open for us to doubt again, than it was for Nathaniel to doubt after perceiving that Jesus knew something which only could be known to Messiah (John i. 48, 49). Having had convincing evidence of the divine mission of the Great and Holy One, before whom he stood, he did not require to examine the Messianic genealogical tree, or to doubt that any lack of information upon that point went against the positive evidence already open to his infidel. The "greater contains the less." So mathematics and common sense decide. Therefore when evidence of irrefragible kind is forthcoming to prove the certainty of a matter, the absence of confirmatory proof cannot make void what is proved. The case is not made weaker by reason of the absence of that which is asked for. And except to the doubtful, it cannot be made stronger by the addition of that which is superfluous. Even in law it is agreed that a negative cannot disprove a positive. Therefore when we once admit that God has spoken and that He has spoken in the records which claim to have come from Him, we cannot take from or destroy the force of that which has come from Him by any side issue which may be raised. If His revelation presents difficulties, apparent errors or discrepancies, these must in themselves be subservient to the whole. If fact the less is, in this case, covered by the greater. Granted that God speaks, the medium through which He speaks cannot destroy that which He declares, otherwise the instrument is greater than the maker of it.

Fifteen years have passed since the gardener brother pointed out the divine character of the Bible. The young man who then and there accepted the evidence, did so in full confidence that as the greater contains the less, so the divine oracle must be a complete and perfect work. He felt sure no weapon that was forged against it would prevail, and that all "difficulties" and "discrepancies" (call them what you like) would and must be explainable. During those fifteen years, his acquaintance with the record has been of that familiar nature which we see exhibited by business men in the study of their ledgers and cash books. He has seen many difficulties cleared up, and has never yet met with one but is capable of a reasonable explanation without detracting from the divine character of the records in the least degree. His consideration of the "Bible as we now have it" has caused him to look at the original documents from which this Bible came, and to arrive at the inevitable conclusion that the one is the counterpart of the other so far as God has been pleased to provide it. And that where any difference exists between the one and the other, this difference is permitted as a necessary element in the case, and that without this difference, we should not have before us what God requires for the perfecting of his plan and purpose. It would be just as easy for God to turn out exact duplicates of the die as to strike off the first coin itself. He did not see fit to do this, however, but rather that the duplicates should bear evidence of currency circulation — the image the while remaining true. Now scars upon the face of the Bible, like scars upon the coin, no more deface the writings than the image and superscription on a good coin is removed by usage. The image may require closer inspection to decipher it. Is this an unmixed evil? Again, a negligent government sometimes permits its currency to become defaced by usage. But who will say God has permitted this in respect of the imprint of His hand in the Bible? It might have been so, but God ordained otherwise. If the "Bible as we now have it" does not carry us back to the original from which it came and does not give us a representation of that original, then we have no Bible from God in the strict sense of the term at all. Further, the uttering of false coin, such as an interpolation of an apocryphal writing, only serves as false coinage always does, to show more clearly the true character of the Bible. And defects (if there be any) in "the Bible as we now have it" rather help us than otherwise to understand the nature of the book and sharpen our wits to discern between things that differ—to know true metal from false.

Evidence clear, strong, and all-sufficient exists to convince the child, the youth, the young man, and the aged (and the gainsayer, too, if he were open to conviction). He who does not receive it would not believe it divine if one rose from the dead, and told them so.

Consider Luke xvi. 20-31, oh ye gainsayers and be wise.—A Brother.

CLEAN AND UNCLEAN ANIMALS

The object of this article is to enquire into the meaning of the Mosaic ceremonial in regard to clean and unclean animals. Very little consideration will shew that it was intended to convey a deeper meaning than that appearing upon the surface. Both the clean and unclean being the workmanship of God, and forming part of the Creation pronounced by Him "Very good," it is evident that the distinction between them was not made on account of any inherent cleanness or uncleanness the one or the other possessed. From the fact that many, if not all, of the creatures classified as unclean are unwholesome, it has been argued that the law relating to them was a mere hygienic measure. Had this, however, been the object of the institution the word unwholesome, or one to that effect, would have been employed, for in no sense could the word "unclean" be substituted for "unwholesome." These thoughts lead to the conclusion that the distinction God made between the animals was for some provisional end. The question, therefore, arises, what was the purpose God had in view? A solution of this problem is to be found in the events contemporary with the institution of the ordinance. Israel had just left Egypt and was proceeding to a land which God had promised to the fathers—a land which was inhabited by nations who worshipped false Gods, and perpetrated all that was odious in His sight. "Every abomination which the Lord hateth have they done" (Deut. xii. 31) said Moses. And, after enumerating the most revolting practices, he declared that "all these abominations have the men of the land done" (Lev. xviii. 27). Repeatedly were these Canaanitish nations denounced. Israel was taught to regard them as vile, abominable, unclean. Equally emphatic was the divine instruction respecting the character the Israelites were to exhibit. They were expressly forbidden to indulge in the vicious customs of the land, "When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations" (Deut. xviii. 9). They were enjoined to view themselves as holy, sanctified, clean—as separated from all other people to manifest, by obedience to the commandments given, Jehovah's name in the earth. "Thou art a holy people unto the Lord thy God; the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special (or peculiar) people unto himself, above all people that are upon the earth" (Deut. vii. 6; xiv. 2). "The Lord hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments. And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise; and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken" (Deut. xxvi. 18, 19).

By comparing the leading points in this brief statement of Israel's experience, a remarkable analogy in the principles involved in the ordinance under consideration is apparent. The unclean animals and the Canaanites bore to Israel exactly the same relation—both were offensive and defiling. On the other hand, the clean animals exhibited the condition and position of Israel—holy and separate. From this we may infer that the ordinance was designed to impress upon the children of Israel their favored position, and the attitude it was necessary for them to assume in relation to the nations around, in order to secure the approval of God. The ordinance was thus a token and a symbol—a token of what God had done, and a symbol of what He expected Israel to do.

By this institution the enlightened Israelite was ever reminded of the important truths which it symbolized. In both his religious and domestic life, its requirements were entwined in a way that involved constant recognition. This is one of the many careful, impressive modes of God's instruction to His people, and indicates the great love He had for them.

The spiritual sense of the ordinance is clearly indicated by Moses, when, after reminding the Israelites that they were a people, separate and holy, and exhorting them to shun the manners of the Canaanites, he thus refers to the statute concerning the animals: "Ye shall, therefore, put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between clean fowls and unclean, and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast or fowl, or by any manner of living thing that creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean" (Lev. xx. 25, etc.) The word "therefore" is equivalent to "for this reason." Hence the sense of the passage would run: "Ye are holy, the Canaanites are unholy, ye shall not follow their ways, ye shall be utterly separate from them. For this reason, ye shall make a distinction between clean beasts and unclean, and shall not defile yourself by anything I have separated from you as unclean."

New Testament allusions to the subject confirm the interpretation suggested. In Peter's vision (Acts xi.) non-Israelitish people are symbolized by unclean beasts, and the Israelites by the clean. Another instance occurs in Mark vii. 27, where Christ alludes to Gentiles, thus: "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs." Paul also in 2 Cor. vi. 17, recognizes a parallel between idolatrous worshippers and the unclean.

We may now consider wherein the contemplation of the ordinance is profitable to us. The position that we, as brethren of Christ hold in relation to the world around is in essence precisely similar to that of Israel of old. We have been separated from the world, and constituted clean by the truth believed and obeyed. Addressing the saints in the first century, Peter said: "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises (or virtues) of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Pet. ii. 9). And Paul again: "That ye may be blameless, and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world" (Phil. ii. 15).

For our rule of conduct we also have analogous commandments to those delivered to the Israelites: Be "obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance, but as He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation" (1 Pet. i. 14).—"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God" (Rom. xii. 2). "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them" (Eph. v. 11). In Rev. xviii. 2, the Spirit directly associates the unclean with that system of iniquity, familiarly known as Christendom, concerning which we hear the command: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of their sins, and that ye receive not her plagues."

The present Gentile nations are not more pleasing in Deity's sight than were those connected with the early experience of Israel. Although the worship of idols, and the vile practices recorded in the writings of Moses are not now universally carried on, yet, in view of the additional light mankind has received, there are committed continually deeds equally unworthy. The present age, no less than ages in the past, may justly be described as one of utter disregard for God's requirements. Our own country, superior as it may be to others, well exhibits the deplorable condition of humanity. Sin, ignorance and wretchedness are manifest throughout the length and breadth of the land. Religion, or what is called religion, is a huge subterfuge—an egregious conglomeration of theories and customs of idolatrous times. Those who are under its influence abuse the ways of righteousness, and persecute the saints. Viewed from the standpoint of the Bible, all phases of society testify to the unhappy fact that sin reigns. The commercial world is corrupt to the core; selfishness, lying, deceit, and suspicion are its characteristics. Every right principle is sacrificed by it for the attainment of wealth. The political world is at its wit's end to know how to legislate to cope with the evil that is everywhere rampant; justice is thwarted, oppression and crime prevail. Social life presents no fairer picture; there vice in its many forms thrives unchecked. Even its so-called innocent recreations are enervating and demoralising. Well may the appellation, "unclean," be applied to such a state of things. To sum up the whole matter, there exists a universal hatred to God and to those who are striving to be God-like. Let the truth affect the selfish interests of any section of society, and revenge is the inevitable outcome. In view, therefore, of the fact that it is in the midst of such a Canaanitish people that we have to fulfil the time of our probation, let us profit by Israel's unwise experience (Hos. viii. 12; ix. 3), and let us at all times labour hard to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Remembering the promises of Him who hath called us—"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

"ONLY THIS TIME."

"Only this time," is the drunkards cry,
As he staggers and reals through the bar room door,
His blood on fire with strong desire,
"Only this time, and I'll drink no more."

"Only this time," says the tempted youth,
As he enters the gamblers' gilded den
With a pallid face. "By God's good grace
I never will do this thing again."

"Only this time, only this time!"
Is the frenzied cry of many a soul
That stands on the brink of a yawning gulf,
Till it loses for ever its self-control.

"Only this time," to break God's law:
"Only this time," to tempt high Heaven;
"Only this time," 'neath dust and grime,
To trample the blessings He has given.

"Only this time!" Oh! stop, my friend,
Stop, ere you enter that fatal door,
For he that goes in shall feel the sting
Of the serpent that biteth for evermore.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHARE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date .....

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for .....Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-accessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25% in 3 months, 25% in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to
BUELL W. NUTT
803 Parkwood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed .....

Address ..... street and number

.....
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1900. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Future Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's premises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as Compared with Our Modern Ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different from the meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents. Send for it to W. H. Wilson, 625 N. Willow Ave., Austin Sta., Chicago, Ill.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Order from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

The Elements of the Kingdom of God, is the title of an eighteen-page tract by Brother T. J. Daniel of Magazine, Ark. He sets forth that the kingdom cannot exist without a King, his cabinet officers, territory, a capital city, subjects, laws. Brother Daniel will send this little tract to you at 10 cents each, or $1.00 a dozen. Send direct to him for them.

OUR HELPING FUND.

We whose names are given below, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. When left for the manager to decide, it will be used only for those who themselves state their circumstances, or whose case is presented by some trustworthy person.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8-page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Subscribe for the

Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later.

SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord.

G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALBERT ADAMS.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

NOTICE.

The Church of the Blessed Hope, (Church of God) in Chicago, has secured the VanBuren Hall, corner California avenue and Madison street, for services every Sunday from 10:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. Order of services—Bereans meet from 10:00 to 11:00 on 1st and 3rd Sunday and Adult Bible Class meets from 10:00 to 11:00 on 2nd and 4th Sunday of each calendar month. Regular Church Services from 11:00 to 12:30 every Sunday. All are welcome.

R. W. THOMPSON, Secy., 544 N. Willow Ave (Austin Station) Chicago.

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

SAMPLE COPIES

OF

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp. Send for Some.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

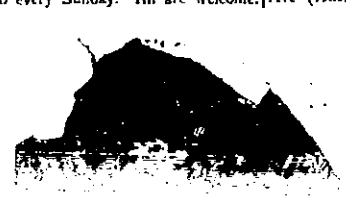
Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions for clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c. a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 370 to 378 West 37th St., NEW YORK



Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution
is the Official
Organ of the Church
of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace, and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31.)

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 | CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 19, 1911 | No. 27

LET US PRAY.

Oh, Holy and Righteous Father: It is with profound gratitude we approach Thee this morning. Our lives have been precious in Thy sight, and we are permitted to meet again where prayer is wont to be made. The cares and toils of the week have had their distracting influence upon us, and we gladly bow at Thy footstool, and beseech Thee, in Jesus' name to forgive all our shortcomings and trespasses, and to love us freely. O, that each burdened soul may be able to shut out the world and worship Thee without distraction. We want to be more like Jesus,—and follow more closely in His footsteps, and more faithfully observe His commandments,—but often the flesh is weak and we follow Him too far away. O, that this day we may so renew our spiritual strength, that in future our progress in the divine life may be more marked,—that we be steadfast,—immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. We would commend to Thee those of our members who by reason of age and infirmities are not able to be with us. We ask for them, too, a Father's blessing this morning,—may the glorious promises to the Father, and the life and work and words of Jesus, and the prospect of soon seeing Him, and of being glorified together sustain them although the outward man perish,—day by day. We would not forget the church scattered abroad,—the isolated ones not priviledged as we are,—the Lord in mercy watch over them for good,—may they maintain a good fight and finish their course with joy by Thy help. Be gracious to us all, we beseech Thee. Bless all the proclaimers of Thy truths this day — may some seed fall upon good ground. In Jesus' name.

WHO WILL "MEET THE LORD IN THE AIR?"

A sermon selected from the Advocate and revised by the editor.

The question which forms the heading of our sermon is based upon the words, "caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." found in I. Thess. iv. 17. Let me read from verse 13 in order to get the question clearly before us:

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

COMFORT.

Whatever the meaning is of this scripture there is comfort in it, for those to whom it was addressed were told this in the last words given. To derive comfort in the true sense, it is necessary that the words be fully understood, for how can one comfort himself with words he does not fully understand? The apostle says, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren." He wished them to fully realize the import of what he was about to say, so that the deepest comfort might be derived therefrom.

THE DEAD ARE ASLEEP.

The apostle's words are "concerning them which are asleep" about whom, it seems, some were sorrowing. It is evident that the popular theory of heaven-going at death was not in any sense considered here, either by the writer or those to whom he wrote. They all believed that those for whom some sorrowed were asleep in the sleep of death, none of them entertaining the idea for a moment that they were alive and better off in realms of bliss beyond the stars. Members of a modern "orthodox" church would have been viewing the sleep as pertaining to the body only, a trivial matter to them in view of their belief that their dead friends are better off disembodied than they were embodied: and a modern "orthodox" preacher would be considered a very poor comforter if he did not, in a similar circumstance, eloquently dilate upon the rapturous bliss their departed friends were enjoying in or beyond the sky. Death-bed and funeral comfort now, as prepared and administered in the religious of Christendom, is a very different article from that of the apostles. The doctors of divinity have a very different theory as to the nature of the case and they have consequently changed their pills of comfort to suit their changed diagnosis of the case. It is often the case in the domain of physics that disease is an abnormal condition of the mind, and doctors deal with it accordingly, allowing the patient to be deluded. In the religious world it is worse than in the medical; for in the latter there is an effort to restore the mentally afflicted to a normal state, while in the former the delusion is pampered and comforted in a manner to increase the religious insanity of the afflicted.

What would be thought of a popular preacher appealing to his people in behalf of their deceased friends in a way to imply that their friends were really asleep in death—really dead and not alive? The people would wonder what had happened to the preacher, and they would inquire of each other, "Do you think our pastor really meant that our departed ones are dead? He tried to console us that they will have a resurrection, but would he have us believe that they lie dormant in death till the resurrection? That's what those people known as The Church of God believe; and does our pastor propose to impose such a doctrine as that upon us? We must see about this, and if he really does believe that our friends are dead and not 'gone before,' and if he has not comfort to give us but a resurrection away in the future, we had better ask for his resignation." This is how matters would run in such a case, and so "like people like priest." The people have been taught and trained to "love to have it so" and preachers are hired to proclaim it so. Hence the words of the apostle in the verses read would fare in the mouth of a popular preacher something like this: "But I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are 'gone before,' that ye sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. For those you sorrow for are not dead, not asleep. They have "read their title clear to mansions in the sky, and bid farewell to every fear and wiped their weeping eyes. They are now basking in the bliss of heaven and when you die you shall join the happy band above, 'mount triumphant there,' while those who have no hope 'devils drag their souls away in infinite despair.' Wherefore comfort one another with these words.'" In this we have "another gospel which is not another," but a perversion of the gospel of Christ, the preacher of which, even if he be an angel from heaven, we are commanded to "let him be accursed" (Gal. i: 6, 8).

Now let us see what real comfort is afforded by the words of the apostle in the case we are considering. Verse 13—Your friends are asleep in death. I would not have you ignorant and sorrowful as others without hope. Verse 14—Jesus died and rose again, and became "the resurrection and the life." God "raised Jesus of Nazareth from the grave," and in this you have assurance that, since those for whom you sorrow sleep in Jesus, God will bring them forth also. Verse 15—Do not suppose that those who are alive and remain unto the coming of, the Lord shall prevent them that are not alive when the Lord comes, that are dead—asleep in the dust of the earth. They shall not remain dead like those who died without hope. Verse 15—For the Lord Himself, not by messenger, nor in a "spiritual" mureal manner, but the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven, the trump shall sound and the dead in Christ shall rise first—before those who are alive when the Lord come shall be caught away. Verse 17—Then those who are alive shall be caught up, or away, with those who are previously raised, in clouds, or companies, to meet the Lord in the air: and so, in the state to which you shall ascend when you meet the Lord in the air, or firmament of His new heaven, "wherein dwelleth righteousness" as in that state shall we ever be with the Lord. Here is your salvation and that of those for whom you sorrow. Now do not sorrow any more, as those may well do who have no hope, but (verse 18) comfort one another with these words.

RESURRECTION OF THE UNJUST.

Some have erroneously concluded from this passage that there will be no resurrection of the unjust, because all who are the subjects of the apostle's discourse here are to "be ever with the Lord." This error arises from a short-sighted view, a failure to realize the fitness of things. There is a time for everything, a time to warn and a time to comfort. At the death-bed side and at the open mouth of the grave are not the places to address sorrow-stricken people upon judgment and punishment. When one calls to comfort the distressed it is not the time to bestow a look of wrath nor to utter words of vengeance. It is a time to speak words of consolation and to give expression to a heart felt sympathy—so far as truth and facts will allow, of course. The man who has nothing but vengeance and wrath in his words and looks has no business in the house of mourning. When one is addressing his friends in the language of hope, he does not stop to mar its beauty by interjections of words of judgment and punishment. The apostle Paul "shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God," but no one knew better than he how to speak according to the "eternal fitness of things"—the right words in the right place. This was a time for words of hope and comfort, and because for the time being he drew a curtain and kept out of sight the possibility of some he was writing to and of some of their mourned friends failing of the glorious triumph he held aloft, we must not conclude that he denied what he taught at other times appropriate—that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."

MEETING THE LORD IN THE AIR.

Now the question is how shall we derive comfort from the words "meet the Lord in the air," "caught up" and "clouds." Our Lord gives us comfort in the words, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth" (Mat. v: 5). The Psalmist declares that "such as be blessed of the Lord shall inherit the earth." "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever" (Psa. xxxvii: 22-30). The wise man also declares that "the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth." All of the redeemed unite in the song of salvation, in which they sing, "Thou hast made us into our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. v: 10). Then again, Christ Himself is to return to the earth in like manner as he ascended (Acts i: 11, and "his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east" and the Lord shall be king over all the earth" Zech xiv: 4-9). How then are we to understand that we are to "meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord?" And in view of the promises that we are to be blessed in the earth and that the Lord is to reign on the earth, how can we derive comfort from these words?

It is in sundry times and diverse manners that God speaks through prophets, Christ and apostles. To receive instruction and comfort from His words we must learn to discriminate between the "divers manner" in which he speaks. Literal language must not be confounded with symbolical, figurative and spiritual. With the ordinary care exercised in reading good secular books we shall not find it difficult to determine when we are reading figurative or symbolic language. The context along with a knowledge of the first principles of the oracles of God will guide us in the only channel that will lead to a proper conclusion.

Every book has a right to claim that it Shall be governed by its own meaning of the technical terms it employs, and surely the Bible has the same right. It is but reasonable that we should compare scripture with scripture to arrive at the sense in which certain words and phraseology are employed therein. The literal is, of course, the foundation of all figurative language. There is a literal earth, but the word earth is used for the people of the earth—"Hear, O earth." There are literal heavens, but the word heavens is also used for exalted position or political power. There are literal clouds, but the word cloud is used for a company of people, threatening trouble, and so on. If we read in our newspapers that there is a cloud in the political heavens we do not look up to the sky expecting to see it there. If we read "there is war in the air," we do not understand that the writer is referring to the literal atmosphere. In the world natural there are sun, moon, stars, cloud, air, etc. When we use a figure of speech drawn from the world natural we must be consistent. Hence, if we employ the word heavens to represent a kingdom we must, to be consistent, allow the sun, moon, stars, clouds, air or firmament is the heaven of which we are speaking. The sun, moon and eleven stars of Joseph's dream were in the household of the little family of Jacob; and Jacob had no difficulty in seeing the meaning of the dream and their application to himself and mother—as the sun, the mother as the moon and the eleven brethren of the stars, with all their servile belongings as the earth ruled.

(To be continued.)

INSTINCT IN ANIMALS AND MAN; OR SOME THOUGHTS FOR EVOLUTIONISTS AND OTHERS.

To the student of nature one of the most marvelous things is the instinct of the lower animals, and the wonder increases as we descend in the scale of creation and observe that the necessary mental endowment is quite as perfect in the smallest creature as the ingenious mechanism of their microscopic bodies.

Instinct may be defined as intuitive knowledge and wisdom or the power to know what, where, when and how to do the right thing to accomplish the desired end. Among insects this unerring power is fully developed, sometimes exasperatingly so. The apple moth picks out her tree in the dark, if it's one in a thousand, and deposits its eggs in the proper place on the blossom. The developing larva, again untaught, knows where to find his way to the heart of the budding fruit. The chestnut moth selects the chestnut tree and proceeds forthwith likewise. The potato bug knows everything but the potato plant, that he will find in the densest crop of weeds and carefully spawn on the under side of the leaf to the dismay of the husbandman.

Then in the wasp family we have an endless variety of instructive intelligence in combination with marvellous skill and foresight. Especially interesting are those who work above ground in the open day where one can watch them, either in communities building themselves huge water proof paper nests or as individuals modeling clay like a potter with the form of a neat vessel as a receptacle for the egg, victualling it with a supply of live stock in the shape of spiders for the nourishment of the developing offspring, then carefully sealing the jar, so shutting out marauder and shutting in the food supply. Then we have the ubiquitous and better known example of the ant that even Solomon commended for human emulation and the much more popular honey bee whose social arrangement far surpasses anything that humanity has done so far.

Again we have a world-wide example of instinct in the migratory birds, most mysterious to those who have studied the subject most. This is an instance that belts the globe and spans the ages: "Yea, the stork in the heavens knoweth his appointed time and the turtle and the crane and the swallow knoweth the time of their coming," remarked Jeremiah three millenniums ago; and one has but to read the latest bulletins on the subject issued by the U. S. government to add to the surpassing wonder of the thing.

But all such is easy to the evolutionist. He has concluded that certain trains of circumstances and experiences graves on the subconsciousness of each individual the memory of all former generations, giving them a sort of prophetic judgment to meet the contingencies of futurity in their own special cases. On the principle that "the fathers have eaten of the sour grapes" and endowed the children with a "cumulative inheritance" of high art and refined taste. Why the thing does not work all round the same way is not explained, nor how we, the supposed off-spring of many generations of weather-beaten apes and tadpoles, happen to be so void of any inheritance of useful instinct—not enough even to find the way home. One of the brightest men of my acquaintance, who had traveled all over the U. S. by rail, on one occasion lost himself near my house in a little patch of woods and brush, and after spending many hours in a vain attempt to extricate himself, had to shout for rescue to a farmhouse that was fortunately within hail, and when delivered he was almost prostrated. That same wood would be made to order for a breeding place and playground for sucking pigs, and no purblind puppy would have erred therein. And so they tell us that the instincts of humanity have been "atrophied" from lack of use and exercise: but have we not for all these toilsome ages been trying to find the way, particularly the way home? Why should we have lost the art? Nevertheless the fact remains that if a man is lost in the thicket in darkness, all he has to do is to mount his mule and give it the reins and it will find the way out. If he has no mule there are chances that the buzzards will find him—they know how, too!

Now this atrophy of instinct by disuse is another mistake, not to say humbug. There was a certain breeder of ducks in New England who advertised his stock as belonging to a breed that for many generations had seen no water in quantity, that they would not know what to do with it. I incubated about thirty of his eggs, but the ducklings found their way to the river so soon after they broke the shell that the steamboat swells left but a remnant and when they grew they didn't seem to care about staying in sight of land. And while on the subject of swimming, it would be well to call to remembrance the fact that all the animal races who do not fly swim instinctively when forced to take to water, the sole exception being the human race, yet the bodily construction of man is so well adapted for swimming when he learns how, that pearl divers and men of the Pacific islands have been known to attack a shark in the sea and kill it with a hunting knife. "Still to "fall overboard" is almost certain death to the human being who has not patiently practiced aquatic gymnastics.

Once upon a time our folk came into possession of a house cat that had contracted habits not in accord with tidy housekeeping; court martial was held and sentence of death duly imposed. Pussy was tied comfortably in a fertilizer sack with sufficient brickbats, and so forth, and I was delegated to be the executioner. As cleanliness is next to godliness, I, with regret, undertook the sad affair, carefully carried my charge to the end of the pier, dropped it in the river and watched it sink, sink, sink, standing by till I supposed the last of poor pussy's breath had bubbled to the surface, and all was still. Then with sentiments appropriate to the occasion, I was about to turn for home when suddenly pussy—who had ripped the sack—bobbed to the surface like a cork, shook the spray from her whiskers, looked all round to see which was the shore side, and struck out like an otter for home and the parlor carpet: and I noticed as she swam rapidly past me that she was "sculling with her tail as a muskrat does. Keeping in mind now that for at least five thousand generations of house cats—since when they were mummified in Egypt—they have never had their fur wet if they could help it, doesn't this "atrophy through lack of use" sound like nonsense?

If some member of the human family—some drawing room statesman or other land lubber hero who had never been in even a bathtub before—had been thus summarily dealt with, and projected suddenly like Monte Cristo from the Chateau D'If into ten fathom of water, what do you suppose would have happened to him? And would it have mended matters if his grandfather had swam the English channel or his mother had navigated Niagara river in a barrel?

Now, there are some theorists who deny that the lower animals have reason, suppose that this instinct is, something on the order of automatic action, the result of some sort of mechanical process that winds them up, sets them going, and turns them loose. Those who have watched some of the more intelligent of the insect tribes, for instance, are well prepared to say that their modes of work, as well as their motives for work, are quite as logical as any human effort, and the results quite as productive in proportion to say the least; moreover, they are capable of being trained to meet the various requirements of different conditions, and when they make a mistake they correct it—and they err sometimes in detail. I remember one mason wasp that was building in my shed, who found some fresh slacked lime that she thought would answer her purpose as well as any other mud, and she actually succeeded in building one cell complete and part of another in the beautiful, pure, white material. Of course the caustic quality of the stuff prevented her from using it long; so like a wise mistress builder, she resumed the old clay and finished the usual way. All beekeepers are familiar with the wonderful resourcefulness of their little workers, how they close cracks, circumvent enemies, throw out the drones when they are useless and so on.

The naturalist, Hans Gadon, speaking of leaf cutting ants in "Through Southern Mexico," says: "It's a fascinating subject leading straight to fairy land, and it's easier to clothe some of the astounding facts in fairy language than to try and express the complicated conditions in scientific terms. According to this author these ants feed on a certain kind of mushroom that they plant and grow themselves, using the leaves of certain trees, not as food, but as a ferment to produce the food; and to this end they chew these leaves into a pulp to make a "mash" whereon the mushrooms grow. In his description he says: "We have in fact walked into a huge scientifically constructed mushroom bed—a farm for the cultivation of mushrooms. That the whole thing is in good working order is soon impressed on us by the territorial army, the garrison of soldiers who are swarming out to attack." In our own climate the "ant cows" or amphides that communities of ants set out on our rose bushes and vines is a similar instance of forethought in husbandry.

H. C. McCook, in "Nature's Craftsman," says: "It seems an amazing instinct that sends slave making ants on predatory raids to recruit the domestic laborers of their commonwealth by mature and larval captives of other species of their own family, but even more surprising is the instinct which leads ants to appropriate to their uses insects of another order and wholly different habits and to create for them a natural and

Continued on Page 3—6th Column.

THE RESTITUTION

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HIGGINS.....EDITOR
BURT W. NUTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order, to the business manager, Burt W. Nutt, 883 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Higgins, 1023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 12, 1911

EDITORIAL

TRUST, BROTHER MINE.

Should your trusted friend betray you,
Brother mine,
Deem not all were false, I pray you,
Brother mine.
Ever dwell this truth divine,
That among life's motley crew
Hearts there are which still are true—
Hearts to feel for you—for you.

If God is "kind even to the unthankful and the evil," we can afford to be magnanimous.

To know the worst is one way whereby to better it.

Popular Faith is the prostration of reason before the throne of superstition. Bible Faith is the hearty belief, the joyful reception, the child-like submission to the attested word of God.

It is something to "study to be quiet and mind your own business." Not a very high attainment surely—but too high for some in all ages.

Good achieved with labour remains when the labor is forgotten. Pleasure attained by evil is soon forgotten, while the evil remains.

It is amazing how enthusiastic some men become "in duty to myself"; and how apathetic the same are when it is a question of duty to God and neighbor.

"The term 'dragoon' (British cavalry) is derived from the Roman draconarii, who bore lances ornamented with the figure of a dragon, and were trained to fight both on horseback and on foot."—Pantlaunge.

You and your company are sure to assimilate. Therefore be particular and exclusive. "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise."

Bro. H. Juergensen, of Barberton, Ohio, writes: "Do you realize, dear brother, how big a job you have taken upon yourself in editing the Restitution? I do not think you do, nevertheless, the Lord will add his blessing to make you strong in your weakness. Then in due time, when we least expect it, the Lord himself will lead us to victory. May the dear Lord find us at our duty."

During August many of our readers will have a holiday. The truth, however, must not be dismissed during your time of recreation. It will help to keep you spiritually minded if you will use a few hours of your time in writing an article for The Restitution. Try it.

MARRIED.

On the evening of July 15th, Brother Wm. W. Horton and Sister Luella Smith, both of Cleveland, Ohio, were united in wedlock at the editor's study. They are both held in high esteem by the church, and deservedly so, for their work's sake. As their pastor we wish them well; and in this wish we represent the sentiment of the entire church. The Lord's blessings be with them as they travel the pathway of life.

BRIEF PRAYERS, SERMONS AND ARTICLES.

In orthodox churches "long prayers" (Mk. 12:4) are in fashion. Short prayers, however, are more appreciated in hot weather, and—a very weighty consideration—they are Scriptural. When our Master taught his disciples to pray he stated all our temporal and spiritual needs in a few choice sentences, and then said "Amen." Matt. 6:13. When confronted by sudden danger of drowning, Peter made a prayer for his deliverance in this short request: "Lord, save me (Matt. 14:30). Had he made a long drawn out prayer like a preacher of today, he would have drowned before he reached the "Amen."

Brief sermons, especially during the summer months, are in season. Save your long sermons, and those of deep subject matter, for winter. Long and labored discourses in hot weather to sleepy auditors is wasted effort. Often have we heard brethren preach sound orthodox sermons and other things that were "sound," when the audience, instead of listening to the excellent discourse, were wondering when the end would be. This is certainly "beating the air" (1 Cor. 9: 26), and hot air, too.

And brief articles: how scarce they are! You read the concise articles; you enjoy the brief commonitions; and you rarely read the long ones, except in part. Others do as you do. If you want your writing read, enjoyed, and appreciated, be brief. Go right to the heart of your subject the first stroke. Do not say you are beginning your article; begin; do not say you are concluding it; conclude. With introductory and concluding surplusage omitted, you will soon learn the art of brevity. Brethren, you cannot write too many articles for The Restitution, but you can write them too long.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP, No. 11.

The Apocalypse is one of the most interesting books of the Bible, and in some respects it is the most remarkable. It is unique among all written productions, in that it comes from one who was for a time in the death-state: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore" (Rev. i. 18). When Jesus Christ gave it to John he had not only undergone resurrection; he had also been endowed with "spirit nature." Of this he gave to the apostles, before ascending to heaven, "many infallible proofs" Acts i. 3). To those who have since become disciples, it is impossible to afford the same proofs; they have not, however, been left without evidence. In this, the latest inspired writing, Jesus Christ predicts the disintegration of the Roman Empire, the development of the Papacy, the rise of the Mohammedan power, and the decay of Turkey, &c., &c.; all of which have come to pass. These and other predictions have been to the "servants" of God—(Rev. i. 1)—"infallible proofs" that their high Priest was in heaven. A more convincing mathematical demonstration of his resurrection from the dead could not, in any circumstances, have been provided. Whatever doubts there may be concerning the authorship of the other books of the Bible there should be none respecting the Apocalypse; and yet without understanding those that have gone before, it is incomprehensible; they are indispensible to its exposition. It may be described as not only "rooted in the prophets," but rooted in all the rest of inspired Scripture.

It is presumable that a book of this character would not be devoid of testimony concerning that to which it is so closely related. Among its opening statements we are informed that John "testified the word of the Deity, and the testimony of Jesus Anointed" (Ch. i. 2, Eureka translation); and before the close of the first chapter it is said that John was in Patmos "for the word of God and for the testimony of Jesus Christ" (ver. 9). Apart from the symbols requiring prophetic or apostolic words to explain them, there are several references to Old Testament historical matters, viz., "Balaam" (chap. ii. 14); "Jezebel" (chap. ii. 20); "Sodom" (chap. xi. 8); "The Song of Moses" (chap. xv. 8); and "David" (chap. xxii. 16). If it were not for the books of Genesis, Exodus, Numbers, Kings, and Samuel, we should be without the means of fully understanding these passages. It cannot be supposed that Jesus Christ would send to his brethren a message from Heaven, referring them for details about the past to uninspired writings; it is highly improbable, to say the least. Indeed, the incidental way in which these events are alluded to is in itself evidence that they are all from the same author. Thus, Christ, since his resurrection, puts the seal of his authority to the inspiration of the books just enumerated, which are all more or less historical. If the inspiration of the Pentateuch be admitted, it is difficult to understand on what grounds the books extending from Joshua to Esther can be otherwise described, for they all narrate events in the history of the Jewish race. It would be a most extraordinary anomaly if the journey from Egypt to Canaan had been written by the Spirit of God, and the events after crossing the Jordan had been left to the spirit of man. If the life and covenant with Abraham needed a divine record, surely that with David required the same.

The epistles to the seven churches contain some valuable instruction as to the attitude ecclesias should assume toward false teachers among the brotherhood. The ecclesias at Ephesus was specially commended for its faithfulness in this matter: "I know thy work, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars" (Rev. ii. 2). After what has already been said about "evil workers" (Phil. iii. 2) it is not necessary to enlarge on the expression "them which are evil." The words are sufficiently comprehensive to include wrong practice as well as false doctrine. "Them which say they are Apostles," can only refer to members of the one body who for the purpose of teaching something contrary to the apostolic doctrine, claimed to be specially sent of God; for none of the faithful brethren would assume a position which was specially restricted to the twelve. Some of these "false Apostles" (1 Cor. ii. 13), endeavored to undermine the work of the Apostle Paul, who says of them that "their end shall be according to their works" (ver. 15). Whether or not they denied in words the inspiration of the Holy Apostles" (Eph. iii. 5) they did so in effect; they endeavored to weaken the influence and authority of one at least; and in acting thus they practically aimed a blow at the whole work of Divine inspiration. If Paul were not sent of God, neither were the other Apostles, between all of whom there was perfect harmony; and if the Apostles were not God's messengers, neither were the prophets, for they all spake the same thing. The Apostle Paul's vigorous contemporation of these apostolic counterfeits is an illustration of the way in which he would have acted in the present controversy. Although he may not have been tried with the rejection of inspired writings, he had to meet an attack [illegible] speaking; one of the grounds being that "his speech" was "contemptible" (Cor. x. 10); between the two there is practically no difference. His opponents appear also, to have raised the objection that Paul was not one of the original twelve. When there is an inclination to reject any of God's appointments it is always easy to find some plausible argument for not accepting it. A man can devise a reason for contesting anything and everything; a wise man weighs the pros and cons, and decides in favor of those which preponderate. The "false apostles" and their followers were "fools" (2 Cor. xi. 19). they ignored the most important facts of the case; to these facts the apostle appealed to refute them (2 Cor. xi. and xii. chapters). What ever effect his exposure may have had at Corinth, it evidently produced a good result at Ephesus; the brethren there rejected those who falsely claimed to be apostles; they made the requisite distinction between the holy and the profane, and for this they are commended.

The ecclesia at Pergamos had held fast the "name" of salvation, and had "not denied" the "faith," even in times of persecution and martyrdom (Rev. ii. 13); but this was not sufficient to entitle it to unqualified approval; the Spirit had "a few things against" it: in its midst, and, therefore, in its fellowship, there were "them that hold the doctrine of Balaam," and "also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes." These names, as shown in Eureka, Vol. I, are symbolic; their application, therefore, is not confined to first century teaching; any false doctrine of an analogous character is within the scope of their designation. That which leads spiritual Israel astray from the word of God is a "doctrine of Balaam;" and that which vanquishes the people of God is a Nicolaitane doctrine. Doubts and denials concerning the divine authorship of parts of the Holy Scriptures cannot but have a greater or less effect in both these directions. The fallible authorship belief is a Balaamite and Nicolaitane doctrine in an incipient form; it is saint-vanquishing, and inspiration-nullifying. It is therefore included in that "thing" which the Spirit says, "I hate," (ver 15). That which is hated by the Spirit must be hated also by those who "have been all made to drink into one Spirit," (1 Cor. 12, 13). The love begotten by the Spirit "rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth," (1 Cor. 13, 6); and like Christ it must be able to show that it has "loved righteousness and hated iniquity," (Heb. 1, 9); it cannot do this, if through sympathy with fraternal flesh, it has fellowshipped those who detract from the accuracy of the Spirit's writing. Love is greater than faith and hope, but only when regulated by the precepts of the Spirit: when at variance with these it is the expression of mere natural feeling. The heart as well as the intellect requires to be circumcised (Rom. ii. 29). True love for God begets love for that which He loves, and hatred for whatever He hates (1 Jno. iv. 6-7). When either characteristic is absent there is a deficiency of the Spirit of Christ," without which we are "none of His" (Rom. viii. 9).

The teaching of false doctrine is considered by some to be the only safe ground for withdrawal from fellowship. This is an unsound principle; unity of mind (1 Cor. i. 10) is dependent on belief, not on public teaching. It is not a question as to whether a brother propounds a error, but as to whether he continues it; if it were not so, those who chose to keep silent, or had not the ability to teach others, would be exempt from defellowship. The charge against the Pergamos ecclesia, was that some of its members "held" falsehood, and the warning given was that if they did not "repent" the Spirit would come quickly unto the ecclesia, and "fight against" the holders of error "with the sword of" its mouth" (ver. 16). To escape such a visitation, the ecclesia would be compelled to discontinue fellowship with the holders of the Balaamite and Nicolaitane doctrines, unless they changed their minds.

CORN SHEAVES GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE CANAANITES. "It is not God's way to justify Himself at the bar of His creatures' judgment. He acts and speaks autocratically. But in this matter He has deigned to explain His decrees. Men read the Bible story in the false light of the evolution craze. They picture to themselves a number of semi-civilized tribes on the upward path of progress, exterminated by an invading horde of religious fanatics. But the Christian knows that they were a degenerate and apostate race, whose destruction was decreed by a God of infinite mercy, because they had given themselves up to unnatural and loathsome sin. Four centuries had passed since Sodom fell. And among the citizens of Sodom not even ten could be found who were clean of the evil. What, then, must have been the condition of the land when God at last called in the Israelites as His executioners? Of the guilty nations there was one that seemed still to merit pity, and on account of that nation the judgment was delayed. If for four generations the favored people were left as strangers in a strange land, it was 'because the iniquity of the Amorites was not yet full.'" —(Sir Robert Anderson, who thus speaks in "The Bible and Modern Christian," adds that the destruction of the Canaanites was a difficulty to his faith until he acquired a larger and more vainful knowledge of human nature through his connection with Scotland Yard.—Editor.)

WORDS, IDEAS AND INSPIRATION.—Words are signs of ideas both common and revealed. Revelation in its restricted meaning, signifies the things revealed or made known by the Spirit of God. Hence the ideas contained in the Scriptures are spiritual ideas or things: and these are expressed in spiritual words and phrases, or signs adequate to their conveyance. Thus Paul says, "Now we have received not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which comes from God, that we might know the things which are given to us by God. Which things also we speak, not in words taught by human wisdom, but in words taught by the Spirit, explaining spiritual things (or ideas) in spiritual words." Now here are two classes of words—first, "words taught by human wisdom," and second, "words taught by the Spirit," the former may be termed the language of Ashdod, and the latter the language of Canaan. It is a rule, which you will find sustained throughout Scripture, that spiritual ideas are never couched in the language of the philosophy contemporaneous with the writers of the word, nor are human traditions clothed with spiritual words. Hence, if a phrase current among the philosophers of old and the people, be not in the Bible, the idea of the phrase is not there either. Now, the phrases "immortal soul" and "immortality of the soul," belong to the first class, namely, of "words taught by human wisdom," for neither of them is to be found in the Scriptures from Genesis o Revelation.

THE CLERGY AND INFANTS.—Why do the clergy make so much ado about infants? I will tell you. They know well the sympathy existing between mothers and infants; to persuade the ladies that their infants were liable to the pains of hell for ever, was a sure way to get them to put their offspring under priestly tuteage; they springle them as a sign that they are regenerated, and therefore elect; this satisfies the mother, and she blesses the holy man. Having thus secured the ladies, by them they control the men; next comes the purse and then the sword, by which they rule the world. This order of things, however, is now considerably broken up; never we trust to be reestablished.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Restitution

My father is still at Falls City, Oregon, stopping with me. His health is not altogether the best, but he is still able to work and do some good in proclaiming the Gospel of the Kingdom. He was granted letters by the Northwest Conference of the Church of God. He holds himself in readiness to answer any and all calls made for him to go to different localities in any part of the Northwest or California and Arizona, as long as he is able to preach. He thinks some of making another trip this fall through Southern Oregon, California, and Arizona, if there are enough calls made along the line of travel and his health permits. He wished me to write for him as his hand has become rather unsteady, although his heart is still in his Master's work

Very sincerely yours,
S. RAPHAEL SKEELS.
Falls City, Oregon

A UNION MEETING.

On Sunday, May 14, 1911, sundry members of the Church of God at Brooklyn, New York, journeyed to Newark, New Jersey, to meet in union service with the Newark brethren in their hall in the "Arcade," Broad street. The day was fine, but the service was finer. Happiness was constantly present, for friendships were renewed, joy abounded, harmony reigned, truth prevailed, faith was strengthened, hope increased, and love was supreme. Thus was man benefited, Christ praised, and God glorified.

The morning session, which was presided over by Brother James Brown, of Newark, was for the purpose of commemorating our Lord's death, which was done in a befitting manner, after which Brother Edwin S. Hardcastle exhorted on "The Significance of the Broken Body and the Shed Blood of Christ," from the text: "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

At 12:30 all sat down to a bountiful lunch, furnished and served by the Sisters of Newark. After lunch and until 2 o'clock, the time was taken up in social intercourse, when the brethren seemed to live much in the past, for those who personally knew Dr. John Thomas seem never to tire of telling the younger members of the glorious times "we" had when the "Doctor" was at the helm: what an able speaker he was, the large meetings; the strict attention paid to every word uttered; the general decorum; the special meetings for the Jews, and above all, the converts made.

The afternoon meeting was opened at 2 o'clock with Brother Wm. Rothe, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in the chair. His subject: "Thoughts Suggested by Studying the First Chapter of First Peter." I will not attempt to give even an outline of his remarks, for as the meeting lasted close on to three hours it would take up too much valuable space in "The Restitution;" but I will give you the names of the speakers and their themes. Brother Benjamin J. MacDonald, "God the Author of the Plan of Salvation;" Brother James E. Leslie, "At the Revelation (or revealing) of Jesus Christ;" Brother Daniel Dietz, "Elect According to the Foreknowledge of God;" Brother J. Alexander Fisher, "Just Three Words, "He Believed God, or Abraham's Faith;" Brother James Evans, "A Pearl of Great Price;" Brother William H. McDonald, "The Evolution of Truth;" Brother William H. Donaldson, "A Peculiar People, Because we Believe God;" Brother James Brown, "A Practical Talk Concerning Peter;" and Brother Edwin S. Hardcastle, "Peter, a Representative Man." All were good; some were better, but whether "good" or "better" all was harmony and on each face was imprinted peace and joy.

We are now looking forward to October, when it is hoped the brethren and sisters of Newark will be the guests of the Church in Brooklyn.

These meetings are very inspiring and calculated to do much good. May we continue in the service of the Master till He comes, and may God have the glory. Amen!

ALEX. D. DONALDSON.
127 Ryerson street,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

SCATTER TRACTS.

Scatter tracts. They are noiseless guns, but quite sure to hit, reaching farther than the sermon, going over the hills into the cottage home and behind the barred doors of the city slums. The boy reads them, is wounded and comes to the Master to be healed. The tired business man picks one up and learns where to go to find rest. The faithless one is started by a little leaflet dropped at his feet, that assures him "There is a God," and he turns to the Book for help and salvation.

The good done by tracts is beyond all calculation. The Reformation was helped on by tracts. Many of our greatest workers from that time down to the present have been converted by tracts. The Advent message was heralded over the world by tracts; life only through Christ has been taught in large measure by tracts.

The preacher who has and holds fast to the truth is all right, but he needs these little guns to supplement his work. Every single individual in our churches can become a preacher of the gospel of a coming King and Kingdom by scattering tracts, books, and papers.

Dr. Joseph Chamberlain, of India, before his death could count 1700 people who had been saved from heathenism by a little tract he had written. J. Hudson Taylor, when fifteen years of age, picked up a tract in his father's library and read it to pass away the time. It changed the whole tenor of his life. It caused him to give himself to God. Jews by the hundred are now being brought to believe that Jesus is indeed their long looked for Messiah just by reading tracts.

Brother Samuel Wilson did not underestimate the value of Christian literature. The paper, the tract, the Bible, must be put into the hands of dying men. A penny invested may mean a soul saved. Send out the tracts! (Amen.—Editor.)

S. ROXANA WILSON.
Tiffin, Ohio.

LITTLE THINGS.

Watch for the little sins, which like little insects, hide away and eat at the heart and life of character. Don't think because little unkind deeds and acts are not seen by all that they do no hurt. Don't blind yourself with such a mistaken idea. Don't lag and hide a wrong thought, for it will make its impression on your character and face. When a person says, "Oh, well; such little things don't matter, for no one knows of them," that person is hiding away in the life little things that are deadening and weakening conscience. Remember a little sin is just as big in God's sight as any other. When a wrong thought pops up, put it way: positively refuse to make excuses for it. Then tempted to say or do some little unkind act, even if so slight that the one intended to be hurt can hardly have grounds to defend themselves, put it out of the heart. Please God from the heart, for He sees the most hidden thought. If we go to work we will find we are growing in grace and overcoming daily, and we will soon hate the things we now excuse and love. Our lives will become clean and beautiful. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5-8. If we obey Him in all things, and go to work and pull out the weeds, good seed will take their place, and we will be among those who await His coming, and to whom He will say: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the 'joy of thy Lord.'" Matt. 25-21.

MRS. CHAS. THOMAS.

OHIO CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The ninth annual conference of the Church of God will be held at Troy, Ohio, August 16-20. Those coming should write Brother Jno. Lehman, Troy, Ohio, R. 5. Come in the spirit of love that we may be built up and strengthened in our most holy faith.

ANNA LEHMAN.

"Though we should be grateful for good houses, there is, after all, no house like God's out-of-doors."

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska will be held in Moorefield; Nebraska, from August 26 to September 3, inclusive. Meals will be furnished at 10c, and lodging free.

Now brethren, let us all make a special effort to be there and help make the conference a success. Especially to the isolated ones and the young people do we say, Come. Do not miss the chance of getting into the spirit of the work and understanding what is needed. This is the time when we can get in touch with one another and learn to love each other, if we come in the right spirit. Remember the conference should be in the interest of Christ and His work, not our desires.

Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio, Editor of The Restitution, has been secured as speaker. The most of us got acquainted with him last year, and will enjoy his second visit. The young people know him through the Berean lessons. We expect to have a "Berean Day" to be given over the young people. Let all be on hand to take part. If further information is wanted, write Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebraska.

ALTA KING,
Sec'y of Conference Board.

OBITUARY.

George Elton was born February 3, 1828, and fell asleep in Christ July 1, 1911, at the age of 83 years, 5 months and 1 day.

He was born in Newton Tony, Wiltshire, England, and was the fourth son of John and Elizabeth Elton, who were the parents of six sons and two daughters, nearly all of whom have been readers of The Restitution, during the later years of their lives, David Elton, of Nottingham, Ohio, being the sole survivor of that large family.

George, early in life, manifested a love for the Scriptures, and carried a pocket Testament about with him while at work, and every odd moment was used, to acquire that wonderful knowledge of God's word, that he possessed.

Early in life he identified himself with the Primitive Methodists, then a little later, became a follower of Alexander Campbell; but still continued to search the Scriptures, and soon learned that Eternal Life could only be obtained through Christ, his attention being drawn to the meetings being held in Cleveland, Ohio, by Brothers Joblin, McLauchlan, Bond, Cherry and others in 1864, which he attended, he was able to learn the way of life more perfectly; and in 1865 put on the Name of Christ by immersion for the remittance of sin; since which time he has been a strong defender of God's word, on every occasion, and will be remembered as a speaker and writer, by many readers of The Restitution.

He was married to Hey Scott, September 23, 1852, and in 1854 emigrated to the United States, settling in Cleveland, Ohio; and to them were born six children, five daughters and one son; one daughter died in infancy, and two later in life; he is now survived by one son, Scott G. Elton, of Richland, Iowa, and Mrs. Fannie L. Saunders and Mrs. Jessie I. Upton, of Cleveland (formerly Collinwood), Ohio; also eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

He was a man that was universally loved and respected, by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, as was manifested by many during his short illness and at the funeral.

After listening to an explanation of his Hope and the reading of some of his favorite hymns, we laid him to rest in beautiful Lake View Cemetery, beside his loving wife whose loss he had keenly felt for nearly two years.

SCOTT G. ELTON.

Richland, Iowa.

HYMENEAL.

At high noon on Monday, April 24, 1911, in the Borough Hall, Brooklyn, New York, Brother James F. Gelletely, of Baltimore, Md., and Sister Charlotte Kerr, of Edinburgh, Scotland, were united in marriage, sundry members of 31—110-R—Hemmeter July 18 .... .. the "Church of God" at Brooklyn and Newark witnessing the ceremony, and Sister Marion Leslie Donaldson and Brother James Brown, acting as witnesses. This was the culmination of a sentimental friendship which sprang up during Brother Gelletely's last visit to Scotland, where he met Sister Kerr, who was a "worker" in the "Rosburgh Street Hall," Edinburgh, a branch of "Baptized Believers," as the Church of God is known in Scotland. Brother and Sister Gelletely have made their home in Baltimore, where we hope, that through their efforts a branch of the Church of God will spring up. "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform" and who knows but what this was His reason for making acquainted this couple. We saw much of Mrs. Gelletely while she was in New York, and we formed a very high opinion of her character, business ability, Christian knowledge and charity; and we hope, trust and pray that the union of these two, who are united in hand, united in heart, till death do them part, shall be a union not only to themselves, but also unto God, and that their service shall be unto Him, and that his presence and blessing shall be with them always.

ALEX. D. HOUSTOUN.

THE BLOOD OF THE NEW COVENANT.

As "all the people" were sprinkled with the blood by which Moses dedicated the covenant he enjoined upon them, before they could attain to the inferior hope it set before them, or also it is necessary that every one, without exception, should be sprinkled with the precious blood of the better testament even with that of Jesus, before he can be come entitled to the better hope. The blood of the New Covenant speaks better things than the blood of the Mosaic. It speaks of the "good things to come," of which Jesus is the High Priest, not Aaron. It speaks of the good things of the better hope, and of the eternal redemption he hath obtained for his people individually and nationally. It is Israel's hope emphatically; and no Gentile man or nation can partake of it, that is not sprinkled with the blood of the covenant that it sets forth. Even Israel's own nation will partake of it in no sense until "all the people" are sprinkled by the covenant blood; for it is by virtue of that blood alone, that they possess the land to be expelled no more; and as for the righteous dead, it is "By the blood of thy covenant, O Messiah, that Jehovah sends forth thy prisoners out of the pit in which there is no water."—(Zech. ix. 11.)

But Moses sprinkled the book and all the people with a bunch of hyssop and scarlet wool. He had a vessel containing the water and the blood within convenient reach; but where is the blood of the better covenant? How can access be obtained to it? How can it be sprinkled upon all the people from age to age, and generation to generation, who shall inherit the hope when the time of its development shall arrive? These are questions easily replied to from the testimony of God. The blood of the covenant was poured out at Jesus' side, bathing his body, and dripping on the dust of Palestine. Had anyone caught the blood in a vessel, and with a bunch of hyssop and scarlet wool sprinkled even believing people around, it would have availed them nothing. It would have been presumptive evidence that those upon whom it was found had been engaged in his murder; but it would have been no proof of their interest in the hope of the covenant which it dedicated. It was, when pouring out, the blood of an unrisen Christ: and, therefore, of no then present efficacy. After Jesus had come to life again, and ascended to the Father, the blood which was dried up was nowhere to be found here; nor, if to be found, was it then known to what use it was to be applied. It is evident, therefore, that the existence of, or accessibility to the material blood, is not a question needing to be entertained; and that it was not intended to be used ceremonially, as Moses used the blood of his will. Romanish priests pretend to manufacture, or rather incarnate, wine into material blood of Christ, which like greedy cannibals, they permit none to quaff but their impious selves. But the common use of the covenant blood in sprinkling or drinking was never intended. The blood of the covenant which sanctifies, is no common or unholy thing. It is too precious to be dispensed indiscriminately in any sense; or to be placed at the disposal of ignorant and fleshly-minded priests. Save the drops that bedewed the dust, Christ took with him his blood to heaven; for "With His own blood He entered in once into the holy place, into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." Standing then before the throne, He appeared as a lamb that had been slain, His wool of snowy white, dyed scarlet with His blood. There is the blood of the covenant; not on earth, but in the holiest of all. The blood of the covenant being in heaven, and we upon the earth, there must be some appointed thing as a medium of access to it. The blood is to justify and to sanctify, or to cleanse and make holy those who are sprinkled by it. Such are said to stand in the grace of God, rejoicing in hope of His glory. If then we ascertain how access is obtained into this place, we also learn how access is obtained by the blood of the covenant. Paul says, "We have access by faith;" a saying which agrees with that of the prophet, "The just shall live by faith." "God," says Peter, "puts no difference between Jews and Gentiles, purifying their hearts by faith." "I send thee," said Jesus to Paul, "to open the eyes of the Gentile, to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them, who are sanctified by faith which is in Me." "A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." "There is one God who shall justify the Jews on account of faith, and the Gentiles, through the faith." Such is the testimony of Scripture on this all important subject, which summarily amounts to this, that the sons of Adam are purified, sanctified, justified, or pardoned, and obtain eternal life by faith or, in other words, as the apostle says to those who had been delivered from their past sins, "In grace ye are having been saved (sozosamenoi) through the faith; and this not of (or originating from) yourselves (exhymon); but the gift of God." By faith in the faith the great salvation is obtained, when the better hope, which is the subject of it, is no longer unseen, but an eternal and accomplished reality.—The Herald.

ROME'S DYING STRUGGLE.

It is difficult for us to see how one can stand with open Bible in hand and view the great panorama of current events in the days which we live, without exclaiming in the words of Peter on the day of Pentecost, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet." Wonderful indeed are the signs of the times, in the light of the "more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed." In these days of higher criticism we certainly have in fulfilled prophecy a great argument for the divine inspiration of the Bible.

One of the many evidences which go to show that we are living near the end of the age is to be found in the present condition of the apostate church of Rome. Thrown from the beast, the reins of temporal power torn from her grasp, her wails are heard as in her grief she bemoans her much deserved humiliation. Hated and tormented in those lands that know her best, she sits on "many waters," and seeks to exert authority whenever and wherever she can among the nations of the world. Her lovers at home having forsaken her, she naturally would win suitors for herself abroad if she could.

But will she succeed abroad in making up for her losses at home? We do not think so. Her history is known too well for that. But that she is making a desperate effort in this direction is evident. It might well be expected; but, however she may paint her face and speak in another tone of voice, the features of the woman "drunken with the blood of saints" shows through, and it is not difficult to detect the accent of her upon whose forehead a name was written, "Mystery, Babylon, the great mother of harlots and abominations of the earth" (Rev. 17:5).

According to one writer, Joseph McCabe, Rome has lost 80,000,000 of adherents in about half a century. Forty years ago the city of Rome was taken from the control of the pope, and the celebration this summer in commemoration of that event cannot be other than most painful to the unhappy "prisoner in the Vatican." The Waldenstans, who for so many centuries were persecuted by the Roman Church in a vain endeavor to exterminate this little body of Christian believers, are about to build a church to seat 1,200 people in "the Eternal City."

Volumes might be written on the calamities of the papacy. One needs but to read the story as recorded by the historian and in the daily newspaper to see that the judgment has sat, and that they have taken "away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end" (Dan. 7:26).—L. J. Carter.

LOYALTY TO GOD.

Isa. 1:16.

"Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes, cease to do evil.' In this verse Isaiah is exhorting the people of Judah to repentance. From reading this verse we would naturally suppose that they had been disloyal to God after all that God had done for them; and Isaiah bewailed their wickedness, because it had been so great. He is trying to persuade them to repent of their wickedness, and show loyalty to God. As we all know, nothing displeases God as much as disobedience, and each time we disobey Him, or do an evil thing in His sight, and do not repent, our garment is spotted that much more, and we are told to keep our garment clean and pure. The people of Judah were so wicked that Isaiah in exorting them, says: "Wash you, make you clean." Before we put on the name of Christ by baptism, our garments were not clean; for our sins had not been washed away; but as we rose from our watery grave, we appeared before God clean and pure. It should be one endeavor to show our loyalty to God by striving to keep our garments clean.

There are a good many ways in which we can show our loyalty to Him; and I hope I can now point out in brief a few of these ways. God does not like half-hearted repentance, and if there are any of our readers who are following after evil, it will not do us any good to turn from it half heartedly; but we are told in Rom. 12:9, "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; leave to that which is good." Let us pray to God as David did, as we read in Psalm 51:9-10-11: "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me." We must seek pardon and cleanliness. The sermon which Bro. Huggins delivered to us last Sunday is one which I know I will not forget for some time; for it forcibly impressed me in regard to prayer. This is the way we seek pardon through prayer to God—and we can rely upon it that God will pardon us for all our sins if we give our whole heart to Him.

Another way in which we can show loyalty to God is to follow after good. We read in Isa. 1:17: "Learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed; judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." This is what Isaiah is telling the children of Judah to do, rather than to continue in their wickedness. There are a good many ways in which we can do good, both to God and our fellow men. When we do an act of kindness at any time, no matter under what circumstance, be it be done to the glory of God, and not to ourselves, and we shall be rewarded, for we read in Matt. 25:40: "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We can rest assured that anything we do for our Lord and Master, it will be accounted unto us for righteousness. Let us remember that all the good we do, must be done in the name of our Lord. God does not love a proud and haughty person, or one that exalteth himself. "He that humbleth himself," is the one that will find favor with God.

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14-15. This is one of the necessary things for us to do to show our loyalty to God. If we really love God with all our heart, we cannot help but keep His commandments; and to keep His commandments to follow after righteousness. As we have been told so many times, we cannot hold God in one hand and the world in the other. There are some of us, I am afraid, who are doing this because we do not realize the importance of clinging to God, and forsaking the pleasures of the world. We cannot serve two masters, and serve them well. What we cannot do well is not worth doing at all. If we chose now to be loyal to one master, I trust we will do it with our whole heart, and be loyal to the one or the other.

All of us have made our choice; and the question is, "Are we serving our Master as we should? If we are, as Bro. Huggins told us on Sunday, we will not have to go out seeking for pleasure to amuse ourselves, or to take up our time. If we do go out seeking for pleasure, let it be to bring others to know God. It ought to be a pleasure for us to work for God. We cannot begin to pay Him back for half He has done for us. You know it does seem as though the more a person does for us the more we expect them to do. It is nothing but our selfish desires working within, and we impose upon that person. We cannot expect God to work out our salvation for us after having made us so many great and precious promises. We cannot ask anyone else to do it for us either. That is one of the things we must each do for ourselves. Are we doing it? Let us show that much loyalty to God and be zealous for the honor of His name. "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake." Ps. 115-1.

We know it was always a great pleasure of Christ to find a lost sheep and bring it back into the fold. We have no need to be idle, and ask what we can do. Brothers and sisters, there is plenty for us to do right among our own little family, for there are some who are lukewarm and indifferent. Christ, our great pattern, was always zealous in the work of His Father, and never let an opportunity slip by unimproved to do something for God. When we think of what God has done for us, and has promised us, we should always be ready and willing to render to Him whatever service we are called upon to do. If we are weak, He will help us, if we but ask Him. Each of us have our cares one way or another, but we should not let the cares of this world take up the time which should be given to God. God knows our abilities and He will not expect us to do more than we can, but we should have love for God's house; and it should be our supreme delight to meet at the house of God as often as we can, and mingle with those of like precious faith. The more we mingle with each other, the greater love we will have for each other, and it will be a pleasure for us to meet with God's people; and we will not desire to go out into the world and mingle with the world. "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts. My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God." Ps. 84:1-2. This is the way David felt and it is the way we should feel.

When I stop to think of all that God has promised to give us, if we are faithful, it is beyond my comprehension; but He has promised it, and I trust each of us will have more desire to work harder for God, so that we may enjoy all these good things. As I have said I have endeavored to point out in brief a few ways by which we can show our loyalty to God, such as putting away evil; turning from evil with our whole heart; seeking pardon and cleansing; following after good; obeying God's commandments; doing good to all in His name; being zealous, trying to bring others to know Him and love for God's house; and now I hope we will hear from others telling us of other ways in which we can be loyal to God.

"Loyal" means faithful to law, devoted, constant; and I trust each of us will strive to be faithful unto the end, and show our devotion for God and his Christ.

BESSIE NORTHUS.

Cleveland, Ohio.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

A $100,000 chair is to be endowed in a western university for the study of psychic phenomena. This ought to give the spirits a ghost of a chance.

Do not say all church members are bad simply because you have found one, any more than you would say all coin is counterfeit from the fact that one such has been detected.—H. A. Mitchell.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three—all they have had, all they have now and all they expect to have.—Edward Everett Hale.

Continued from 1st Page.

wholesome environment. Yet this is what the naturalist finds."

An unprejudiced mind can see from these and myriad other instances that the instincts of the lower animals answers all the purposes of a perfect, practical education in all the "mysteries of their craft," each for each, an endowment which the human family entirely lacks, and which we in a lame and imperfect way, attempt to remedy by the various institutions of so-called learning that more or less pretensiously stud, and sometimes cumber the soil of civilization, and for all of which we have only so far reaped, strife, war, hatred, and unspeakable crimes, for the confusion of tongues is nothing to compare with the confusion of ideas.

James Russell Lowell, in one of his essays, says: "These creatures that we affect to look down upon as the drudges of instinct, are members of a commonwealth whose constitution rests on immovable bases—never any need of reconstruction there." Imagine if you can, a world of creatures, with the high mental and moral capacity of human beings, working together in common cause by the "golden rule" like a hive of bees, for instance, or a nest of hornets for that matter,—can there be a better illustration of the "kingdom of heaven?" Could "angels round the throne" respect and conserve each other's interests more perfectly than ants in their burrows? Imagine a person with this marvelous sixth sense—that looks and sees—that sees and knows, like W. Cullen Bryant's "Waterfowl."

"Lo! by a Power whose care
Teaches the way along the pathless coast
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering but not lost."

And there you have your "prophet like unto Moses." Editor Stead, Prof. Crookes, and Sir Oliver Lodge, calling themselves psychological students, sit for the unravelling of mysteries round a table in a dark room, listening for signal taps from the "spirits" of Oliver Cromwell, W. Ewart Gladstone, et al., but there is as much psychological mystery and a great deal more intelligence in a five dollar pig than in all the ghosts that ever "squeaked and gibbered in the streets of Rome"; for the little porker after you have bought him and boxed him and brought him five or ten miles under cover, will find his way back through bush and brake, to the old home, and the old trough before next morning; if your pen is not pig proof, and where is the ghost that does better or half as well? Then we have Cornell and Yale and Johns Hopkins sending costly expeditions to the poles and the ends of the earth to find out if there is something left that they don't know, but consider, gentlemen, the unsearchable secret of the "setting" hen,—an incubated poulet perhaps patiently brooding, expectantly waiting, fondly greeting and kindly aiding her chicks and tolerating no interference from even a college professor, but in the "highly specialized" case of poor "atrophied" humanity, how different? The doctor, the nurse, the mother-in-law and a whole train of assistants, are considered necessary at such interesting periods and every last one of them has different opinions about the matter on hand, and often get in each other's way,—perhaps at loggerheads. What is the matter with us? We are instinct blind. The light that shines for the rest of creation to light them in their little life journey is not comprehended by our deep darkness.

In one instance, though, humanity has a sad vestige of the untaught and unteachable knowledge—the knowledge of our nakedness, the instinct of shame. Your "scientist" may account for clothes as a matter of keeping out the cold, but kind husbandmen blanket their horses and sometimes their cows, and ladies have dapper little suits made for their lap dogs, some have organ grinders for their monkeys, but monkey, nor dog, nor horse can ever be made to understand the mysterious something that we have discovered; and wherever the children of men dwell, and however hot the weather, they make manifest that they are children of Adam by some sort of a fig leaf rag that corroborates the simple story of Eden, and thus we bear the brand of sin with the royal badge of the divine authority.

J. L. GELLETLY.

Baltimore, Md.

Never step over one duty to perform another. Take them as they come.

"Sleep eight hours of the twenty-four, eat three meals a day, and walk on the sunny side of the way."—Robert Collyer.

The bee that gets the honey doesn't loaf around the hive.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHARE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date._____

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for _____ Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-accessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25% in 3 months, 25% in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to
BUELL W. NUTT
803 Pasewood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed_____

Address_____
street and number

_____
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls.—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Future Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Order from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8-page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

Subscribe for the

Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 29 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Mouse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later.

SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord.

G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

BOYS and GIRLS

Do You Want to Make Some Pocket Money?

It's easy; just drop a postal to the manager of THE RESTITUTION, and he will tell you all about it. Do it now before you forget it. : : : : :

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of high grade prescription work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices.
Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

THE STRONG, KENNARD & NUTT CO. 888 SOHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

SAMPLE COPIES

OF

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp.

Send for Some.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the Latest Fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c. a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with unknown hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 239 to 249 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution

is the Official Organ of the Church of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO [illegible] OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things for establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27; [illegible] the [illegible] coadjuters with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the [illegible] Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel [illegible] Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of [illegible] and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of [illegible]. As a means to this end the [illegible] (Rev. 19:10), and the saints [illegible] the dead (John 11:23, 25); the [illegible] the Life Giver (John 3:16; [illegible] baptism into the name of Jesus [illegible] final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18);

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OH[illegible] No. 28

(Continued From Last Week)

WHO WILL "MEET THE LORD IN THE AIR?"

A sermon selected from the Advocate and revised by the editor.

Now the apostle Peter speaks of the coming kingdom of God as a "new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (II. Pet. iii: 13). In this new heaven Christ will be the sun. "Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his beams" (Mal. iv: 2). The saints aggregately as the bride will be the moon. Speaking of the resurrection the apostle says, "there is one glory of the moon" 1. Cor. xv: 41. The saints, individually, will be the stars. "There is another glory of the stars," and "they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever"—Dan. xii: 3. This heaven must necessarily have expanse, firmament or air: for consistency requires that the figure drawn from the natural world must admit of all the elements in the world or kosmos of which we are speaking. Of course, if we are asked to point out to the natural eye the heaven of which we are speaking we cannot point to a literal thing that can be seen as a heaven. We can only point to the kingdom of God, which can now only be seen in thought, or, as we may say, with the mind's eye. While the natural eye beholds the literal, the eye of thought or reason can look through it and beyond and see the new heavens wherein will dwell righteousness which will, in a higher sense than the natural, "declare the glory of God and show forth his handy work." It is as if we were reading characters clearly visible upon the face of this paper, and then hold up the paper and let the light shine through it. The watermarks will be visible, not the surface, as it were." The sublime aspects of Divine truth are only visible to the spiritually minded by letting the light shine and straining the eyes of the new man to look intensely down to its depths, up to its heights and away into the vast expanse of its illimitable breadths.

Now it would be difficult for one taught in the Scriptures to derive comfort from the contemplation of going up into the literal clouds in the sky, and quite as much so from the idea of flying into the literal air. May we not venture, therefore, to look through the mere literal and try to find that the apostle in the passage in question is applying the words clouds and air to something that has to do with the resurrection of the dead and the change of the living at the Lord's coming, when they shall become elements of the "new heaven" or rulership of the glorious kingdom of God for which they now seek? If anything of this sort can be found in the words by holding the paper, as it were, up to the light and reading the Divine watermarks, then shall we taste the sweetness of the closing sentence—"Therefore comfort one another with these words."

THE AIR.

This same apostle says, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places," or, as in the margin, heavenly places, or heavenlies. Reference here is to the civil and religious wickedness in the Roman and Jewish heavens, the powers which antagonized the truth and martyred many of its proclaimers. Now the Roman heaven would have the elements of the natural heaven, and therefore the word air would be applicable to it. In the political aerial of that heaven were the sun, moon and stars, which ruled the Roman kosmos or world. Hence the apostle says that when the saints at Ephesus were morally unquickened, dead in trespasses and in sins, they walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air—the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience" (Eph. ii: 2). The prince of the power of the Roman air, or expanse, was the emperor, the leading spirit of the empire, both civil and religious. Following the dictates of that prince, as administered by the magistrates and clergy of his pagan God-dishonoring system the saints had in times past walked with the children of disobedience, moved by the same "spirit of the power of the air." For one to "meet" this prince "in the air" would be exaltation to be a star in one of the heavens wherein dwelt unrighteousness; and for one "so to be with him" would be to occupy a position of wicked and tyrannical power. In a prospect of such an exaltation a worldling might take comfort, but not so with a saint. But "to meet the Lord," the Prince of peace, in the new heaven wherein dwelleth righteousness would be exaltation the most glorious, and "so to be ever with the Lord" would be immortality and power, that which should never end. Where is the man who can get comfort himself and others with words so full of meaning as these? He is easily found. He is the man who can only judge after the flesh, and who has no eye to discern the hidden treasures of truth lying beneath the surface of literal language. But where, we repeat, is the man instructed in the truth who cannot drink deep of the sweet comfort of thse words?

It is true that when the Saracenic hosts arose out of the Arabian pit, or abyss, the smoke of their warfare literally ascended in clouds and darkened the air, but the object the Spirit had in stating this to John (Rev. ix: 2) cannot be limited to this comparatively trivial fact. The object was to show, in symbolic language, the effect of the war of the Saracens would have upon the Roman apostasy. Therefore, when it is said, "And the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit," the Roman sun and air, politically and ecclesiastically, are undoubtedly meant. Then, again, when the seventh angel shall pour out his vial into the air (Rev. xvi: 17), and "there shall come out of the temple of heaven from the throne a voice saying: "It is done," the consequent thunders and lightnings will clear the political air of the heavens that are now, in which dwells unrighteousness, to give place to "new heavens wherein dwelleth righteousness."

"CAUGHT UP."

From these testimonies we see that the word air is used for the expanse of political heavens, and now we can better understand the apostle's meaning in the verse in question, and see how the saints in Thessalonica could derive comfort from his words. To be "caught up to meet the Lord in the air" is to be exalted as kings and priests to reign with Christ on the earth. It is worthy of note that the apostle does not say "there shall we ever be with the Lord," as if he were referring to a place; but so, in the condition implied by being "caught up to meet the Lord in the air—"so shall we ever be with the Lord." Many will meet the Lord to be condemned, cast out and to be commanded to "depart;" but these do not meet Him in the air of the new heaven; for when the door is opened in that heaven only the worthy will be invited to "come up hither" (Rev. iv: 1); and such only will be permitted or fitted to "shine forth in the kingdom of their Father" (Matt. xiii: 42) as "stars for ever and ever" (Dan. xii: 3).

MEETING THE LORD

These are to meet the Lord in a higher sense than will those who meet him and are commanded to "depart." When it was said to Moses, "And in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee, and there I will meet with thee" (Ex. xxv: 21, 22), the meaning of the word "meet" is very different from that of the words "a lion met him by the way, and slew him" (I. Kings xiii: 24). There is a deeper meaning. It signifies a oneness, a communion. So to meet the Lord in the air is to become one with Him in nature, to be "like Him, for we shall see Him as he is" (I. John iii: 2). Those, therefore, who shall meet the Lord in the air are the faithful children of God of whom the apostle John says, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure" (I. John iii: 3).

THE CLOUDS.

As there are clouds in the natural heaven, so are there in the political; and so there will be in the new heaven of righteousness. A company of people is called by the apostle Paul a cloud—"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us" (Heb. xii: 1). The word cloud is used figuratively in various ways, the thoughts conveyed being derived from the natural heavens, in which there are thunder-clouds, clouds without rain and clouds with rain. In time of drought clouds that contain no rain inspire hope and then tantalize with bitter disappointment. When the earth is dried up, vegetation scorched and burned and man and beast are parched for water, how anxiously men will wait and watch for a little cloud, and if they can catch a glimpse of one, even though it be but "like a man's hand," what hope and joy it brings. Now we speak of "clouds of sorrow," "clouds of darkness," "cloud of war," etc.; and the book of Jude (verse 12) speaks of deceiving men as "clouds without water, carried about of winds." The groaning millions of our times are looking into the political heavens and watching the clouds, hoping for a rain that will bring relief to a thirsty world; but alas! the clouds have no water to quench their burning thirst, no rain to give life to the withered and blighted fields that are ready for the sickle of the swiftly coming harvest of wrath. But after this clouds will appear in the new heavens, from which there shall come down "rain upon the mown grass and showers to water the earth" (Psa. lxxii. 6).

The goodness of natural Israel has been "as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away" (Hosea vi: 4); but when spiritual Israel's goodness shall appear as the morning cloud and as the early dew" it shall not pass away. It will not be a cloud without water; but it shall be a "cloud of dew in the heat of harvest" (Isa. xviii; 4), that shall rain down heaven's blessings to make "the wilderness blossom as the rose and the forest to clap their hands. These are the clouds of saints that are to "meet the Lord in the air," composed of that company that will have been redeemed out of every nation and kindred, and "in the light of the king's countenance they have found life," and now they are to the world "his favor as a cloud of the latter rain" (Prov. xvi: 15). The Lord will make these "clouds his chariots," "ride upon them as a swift cloud," and in this cloud will appear His glory (Ex. xvi: 10), the glory that shall fill the earth as the waters cover the deep.

This passage in the epistle to the Thessalonians has special reference to the morning of the resurrection, and it is in connection with this these figures of speech are used, used to adorn and beautify a glorious subject—one, the one with whose words we can truly "comfort one another." The prophet Isaiah treats of this subject in the grand words, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwelleth in the dust; for thy dew is as of the dew of the dawn, and the earth shall cast out the dead" (Isa. xxvi: 19). The dew of the morning comes from the womb of the night, and under the rays of the rising sun is drawn into the air to be formed into clouds to give rain upon the earth. So are the true saints to be the dew of the dawn of millennial glory, upon whom the Sun of Righteousness shall shine and draw up [illegible] clouds to give after rain of blessing, and as showers to water the earth.

"MY BOW IN THE CLOUDS."

When thus this cloud is in the air or the heaven, and the glory of the Lord appears therein to the joy of "all families of the earth" whom the Abrahamic covenant promised to bless, it is then that there will be the glorious fulfillment of the words, "I will set my bow in the cloud" (Gen. ix: 13), and the everlasting covenant shall find its full, [illegible] and sublime exemplification.

It is then that it will appear and be a reality in the sense that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard." It is then that those things which are now matters of hope and promise will "materialize" and be a gladsome and gladdening glorious reality. O, the beauty and transcendency of our hope! what gladness it brings even now in this cloudy and dark day: but "what will it be to be there" to experience the rapturous joy of realization?

NECESSARY CONDITIONS.

Conditions are necessary for the appearance of the rainbow with all its prismatic beauty. There must be the shining sun, the cloud and descending rain. For the appearance of the rainbow of the everlasting covenant the Sun of Righteousness is ready, but as yet the dew of the coming dawn is enveloped in the womb of the darkness of death and the grave. The morning is about to dawn, the dew to appear, the sun to arise; and then, when "we are caught up in clouds to meet the Lord in the air," the shining sun, the cloud from the morning dew and the descending rain of heaven's blessings will show that God has filled full His promise, "I will set my bow in the cloud," and to the joy of the whole earth the everlasting covenant [illegible] shine forth as the sun, pour [illegible] blessings as the rain and the appearance of the bow in the new heaven will command the astonishment and admiration of "all families of the earth" blessed in Abraham's seed. If we are worthy, brethren, if you, friends, prepare yourselves for this great and high calling, we shall all be able to say, "so shall we ever be with the Lord" and in reality "comfort one another with these words." (Concluded.)

THE IMMORTALITY OF THE BIBLE VERSUS THE IMMORTALITY OF PAGANISM.

Sermon by the Late Bro. Joblin.

"At a council of the Lateran held in A. D. 1513, 398 years ago, the profligate Pope Leo the Tenth pronounced the immortality of the soul an article of Christian faith. A canon enacted at this council and published by Caranza, condemned all who asserted the intellectual soul mortal to be punished as heretics. Luther, in his reply to the decree of the council, said: 'I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as, the soul is the substantial form of the body—the soul is immortal, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals.' But while Luther, Tyndall, and other reformers call this a monstrous opinion of heathen origin, a doctrine subversive of the scriptural doctrine of Christ's second coming and the resurrection from the dead, it is a fact that the doctrine has found its way in a nearly of faith and is now regarded as a Christian verity. I was pleased to learn through the press that the question is being discussed by our religious teachers, whether the idea of the soul's immortality was derived from intuition or from revelation. Better late than never, though I can but regret that the inquiry, as to whether it was of man or of God, was not made before it was believed and made a fundamental tenet of the Protestant church. By a unanimous vote of this church I am requested to answer the question, and I proceed to do so in the fear of God, and to the extent of my ability.

ALL THE PROTESTANT CONFESSIONS

"I argue that the Bible is God's book, and informs us on subjects inscrutable to all others. It tells us who made man, why he was made, of what he was made, the nature of his existence, the destiny that awaits him, leaves no room for speculation and no need of intuition. My answer to the question, therefore, is: The idea of the soul's inherent immortality is neither derived from intuition nor from inspiration.

"2—My reply to the argument, 'that as Socrates, Plato, and other heathen philosophers had the idea without a revelation, it must have been intuitive,' is this: I understand intuition to imply knowledge independent of reason or deduction. Socrates tried to reason out the idea. But, from a conscious lack of proof, or of weak places in his argument, he was as often doubtful as confident. This does not indicate intuition. Besides, he says in Phædo, that most men assert that this soul of ours, on separation from the body, is immediately dispersed and destroyed. If the idea were intuitive all would possess it, but the proof is before us that but few possessed it. Cicero affirms that all understand future life and rewards and punishments to be silly fables and fictions. Seneca, writing to a bereaved one, says death restores us to the same tranquility in which we were before our birth; Epistle cii. Elsewhere he says: —

Chaos and hungry time devour us all:
Inevitable death the body kills
Nor spares the soul.

Ritter's History of Ancient Philosophy, vol. 2, p. 301, says Plato held the doctrine of the soul's eternity. He also taught the migration of souls through various human and brute forms. The Hindoos taught that the soul was immortal because eternal, and dispensed with a creator entirely. Herodotus says that the Egyptians were the first to teach the immortality of the soul, its transmigration through animals, and its return to a human body after 3,000 years. Tatian treats the doctrine as an arrogant opinion of the philosophers. The Eleatics held the One and the All, and that the creation of the soul was impossible. The Epicureans said let us eat and drink.

FOR TO-MORROW WE DIE.

The Pyrrhonists doubted everything. Again Socrates says: To affirm positively that these things are exactly as I have described them does not become a man of sense. That however, this, or something of the kind, takes place with respect to our souls and their habitations appears most fitting to be believed and worthy the hazard, for one who trusts in its reality, for the hazard is noble. Just think of what was a noble hazard to Socrates, groping without a ray of divine light, being made a fundamental doctrine of Christianity! He presently adds what exhibits his doubtfulness still plainer, as follows: 'Though I be mistaken, I gain at least this much, that the expectation makes me less weary while I live, and my error will die with me.' That many of these men really did not believe their own teaching could be abundantly proved. [illegible] quote a sentence from Varro as a specimen of the morality of these great men. Says he: 'There are many truths which it is not expedient that the vulgar should know, and many falsehoods which it is expedient for the people to receive as truths.' Now listen to the Elder Pliny as he accounts for the idea of the soul's immortality: 'The vanity of man, and his insatiable longings after existence, have led him to dream of a life after death. Man is full of desires and wants that reach to infinity and can never be satisfied.' Poor Pliny, if he had the revelation from heaven he would not have talked thus. He would have learned that man was capable of immortality, and that it was offered as a gift on condition of faith and obedience. Oh! what a muddy stream to drink from. They do not claim to be authority for themselves, much less for us. They do not agree; they speak of these matters as opinions and hazards, and the soul's immortality is attributed to its eternity and to the desire for it; and I trust you will not forget the words of Socrates, that if things be not something of the kind would [illegible] and then you will see what a [illegible] foundation the immortality of the soul is built upon. If you believe in the inherent immortality of the soul because they taught it, why do you not believe it has existed from all eternity? Why do you not believe in the transmigration of souls? What right have you to mutilate their doctrine, and tell what suits you? Then authority is equal on all these points. It is something or nothing.

JUST AS HE SAID,

"3—The idea of immortality, as popularly held, involves a separate conscious existence after death. I solemnly affirm that this is nowhere taught in the book of God. The very discussion of this question itself proves it has been taught and believed without knowing the source of the idea. There is no resemblance between the immortality of the heathen and the immortality that God only has (I. Timothy iv. 16), and which is offered to those who seek for it by a patient continuance in well doing (Romans ii. 7). Immortality is the divine nature of existence, imperishable, undying. By faith in and obedience to the gospel promises men are made partakers of divine nature, providing they first develop divine disposition (see II. Peter i. 4). I challenge criticism when I say that the life and immortality brought to light by Christ in the gospel was not the reassertion of an idea that had become extinct through the darkness existing in Christ's day, but a future, glorious, and everlasting existence by a resurrection from the dead. Go to the divine record and you will see that the man formed of dust was placed on trial for immortality. Obedience was the condition. Disobedience was and death, in pronouncing the sentence, was explained to be a going back to dust—the unmaking of the man that had been made. They were approached by the serpent, who assured them that they should not surely die. Not to die is to live forever; to live forever is to be immortal. The Adam male and female believed this, but although death proved it to be false the serpent is still believed. Men are determined to believe they do not die. To prevent man becoming immortal as a sinner he is driven away from the tree of life. If you ask why? I answer because it would give God the lie, it would make the serpent a truth-teller, it would prevent the execution of the death threatened, and constitute man as an eternal rebel that no Saviour could die for, and prevent the offer of future life through a Saviour to come; and God retain the power to end a wretched existence if the second offer be rejected, or its conditions not complied with. Faith in this Saviour before death overtakes man does not enable him to evade death at all, but entitles him to live always by a resurrection from the dead at the second coming of Christ. Says the apostle, 'When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory.' Say Christ: 'I am the resurrection and the life.' 'I am come that ye might have life' this is existence, the glory is thrown in, the happy condition of the life in addition to this is abundantly secured. The fact that Christ died for the ungodly proves that death awaited the ungodly, and the masterly argument of Paul in the 15th of I Corinthians proves conclusively that the problem of a future life for any of Adam's race was not solved till Christ rose from the dead. He is the first fruits of them that slept. 'If Christ be not raised your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins; then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ have perished. (See verse 17-18.) Everything depended upon Christ's resurrection. In harmony with all I have said are the following Scriptures: 'The dead know not anything'; 'the dead praises not the Lord'; 'their breath goeth forth, they return to their earth, in that day their thoughts perish'; and, 'that God only hath immortality. (See I Tim., iv. 16.)"

[illegible]

THE RESTITUTION

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....EDITOR
BEULE W. ACTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent: The editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 1023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of the restitution typed manuscript. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in THE RESTITUTION, his responsibility does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exercise of particular views in the arranging of contributions.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 26, 1911.

EDITORIAL

SMILE.

Smile a smile,
While you smile,
Another smiles,
And soon there's miles and miles
Of smiles. And life's worth while
If you but smile.

—JUNE THOMPSON.

A good name, like good will, is got by many actions and lost by one.

The only man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything.—Theodore Roosevelt.

One thing is certain,—the man who sets out to give you a piece of his mind hasn't much to give.

Repentance without amendment is like continually pumping without stopping the leak.

One gains courage by showing himself poor; in that manner one robs poverty of its sharpest sting.

Jesus says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Some believe, but refuse to be baptized. Therfore, they cannot be saved.

A man must know the the Gospel before he can believe it; he must believe it before he can obey it; he must obey it before he can be saved.

Please read the instructions for sending money to The Restitution office at the top of the editorial page. Make remittances payable to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

Christian! reflect on the privilege of speaking a word for Jesus and his truth, and not in the light of duty alone. You are called to the fellowship of the Son—to the joint heirship with the Son, and should lose no opportunity to win souls that shall help swell the grand anthem when Jesus is crowned King of kings and Lord of lords.

A disappointment, a contradiction, a harsh word, an annoyance, a wrong received and endured as in his presence, is worth more than a long prayer; and we do not lose time if we bear its loss with gentleness and patience, provided the loss was inevitable and was not caused by our own fault.—Fenelon.

CONSISTENCY A JEWEL.

The often quoted phrase "Consistency's a jewel," the origin of which, says the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, has so puzzled literary critics, appeared originally in Murtagh's collection of ancient English and Scotch ballads. In the ballad of "Jolly Robyn Roughhead" are the following lines:

"Tush! tush! my lassie! such though resigne;
Comparisons are cruell.
Fine pictures suit in frames as fine,
Consistency's a jewel.
For thee and me coarse clothes are best;
Ruffe folks in homelye raiment dress.
Wife Joan and goodman Robyn."

The Cleveland Press of July 18th says that "Rev." Wm. A. Sunday, the ex-professional baseball player, has refused an offer to go back to the "majors" at $500 a month. The reason of his refusal is obvious; for on July 18th he closed the evangelistic season at Erie, Pa., ten months' work netting him $70,507.77. He is earning (rather getting) more money than the president of the United States. Sunday has a better job than playing baseball or being president. Compared with the apostle Paul, however, who "suffered the loss of all things" (Phil. 3:8) when he espoused Christianity, Billy Sunday is revealed in his true character—a Balaamite who "loves the wages of unrighteousness." 2 Pet. 2:15.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP.

No. 12.

The toleration of false teaching is specifically condemned in the epistle to the ecclesia at Thyatira:—"Thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calls herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed to idols" (Rev. ii. 20). This was the chief item of the "few things" with which the Spirit charged the Thyatira ecclesia. The principle on which the accusation was based had been previously enunciated by the apostle John:—"If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed: for he that biddeth him Godspeed is partaker of his evil deeds." (2 John ver. 10-11).

That is to say, however sound a brother's belief may be, if he knowingly permits or fellowships the believers of false doctrine, he is accounted a partner in their evil work: hence the necessity for withdrawing from such.

The name "Jezebel," like "Balaam" and "Nicolaitane" is symbolic; it applies to any system, doctrine, or theory which has the effect of leading God's servants to follow a thing of nought; it is synonymous with "the strange women" which "flattereth with her words, which forsaketh the guide of her youth, and forgeteth the covenant of her God" (Prov. ii. 16-17). To accept false teaching is to listen to her voice in preference to the voice of wisdom; and this is one step towards forsaking the written "guide" of divine appointment. On no grounds can we exclude from Jezebel's flattering words the doctrine that some parts of the "guide" are erroneous; we must not, therefore if we desire divine commendation, suffer her so to teach.

The ecclesia at Thyatira was not an unfaithful one; its origin is to be traced to Paul's visit to Macedonia (Acts xvi. 12-15); when the Apocalypse was given, it had been in existence about forty years. Its members had exhibited "works," "love," "service," "faith," and "patience," characteristics which give evidence of both intelligence and maturity in the truth. They had, to a considerable extent, "crucified the flesh" (Gal. v. 24), and given heed to "the things of the Spirit (Rom. viii. 5); but they had not done so with that wholeheartedness which the apostolic word had inculcated: they suffered the teaching of "Jezebel," who falsely called herself a prophetess;" in other words, they tolerated the corrupting influence of some who falsely claimed to be God's prophets, and thus countenanced an evil work which nullified the results of inspiration. For this they are reproved; a warning to those at the present time, who, however sound their "faith" and however perfect their "works," "love," and "patience," decline to repudiate the fellowship of such as teach that some parts of the Bible are of fallible authorship.

The ecclesia at Philadelphia is the only one of the seven churches of Asia to which no reproof is administered, and the only one which receives the following commendation:—"Thou hast kept my word and hast not denied my name . . . thou hast kept the word of my patience," (Rev. iii., 8-10). The Spirit being the speaker this is equivalent to saying that the brethren at Philadelphia had kept the complete word of divine inspiration. They had in practice applied the words of the Psalmist:—"I have said that I would keep thy words." "So shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth" (Ps. cix. 57, 88). To "keep the Lord's testimonies" (ver. 2), "precepts" (ver. 4), "word" (ver. 17), "law" (ver. 34), and "righteous judgments" (ver. 106), it is first necessary to recognize that they are from God; to attribute to any part of them a fallible authorship is fatal to such keeping. Of this the brethren at Philadelphia were not guilty; "they had learned," says a writer, "the things of the kingdom, or 'the word,' and the 'things of the name.' That kingdom was the subject matter of 'the word,' styled by Isaiah 'the law and the testimony;' and which is the rule of speaking for all who walk in the light" (Eureka i. p. 378). The writer of these sentences clearly made no distinction between the inspired "word" and "the things of the kingdom;" with him they were synonymous. The Old Testament Scriptures are almost wholly concerned with matter pertaining to that kingdom either in type or antitype; to deny the divine authorship of any part is to endanger the "word of the kingdom" (Matt. xiii). The New Testament treats principally of "the things of the name." When the apocalypse was given, the Gospels and apostolic epistles had not been collected together as had the writings of Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms. There was thus a good reason for the Spirit speaking not only of "my word," but also of "my name."

The Philadelphia ecclesia had not in its midst any who held false doctrine, neither did it suffer such to be taught. Instead of keeping the word of man, it kept the word of God. None of the other six ecclesias were as faithful in this respect; a fact which explains the absence of a similar commendation. Nineteenth century ecclesias must strenuously exclude religious falsehood in order to receive the Spirit's verdict of approval, "Thou hast kept my word," and hast not denied my name."

The "word of my patience" is a very appropriate designation of the Old Testament books, which "were written for our learning that we, through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope" (Rom. xv. 4); they are a source of "comfort" in that they record many illustrations of the Spirit's statement through Isaiah: "To this man will I look even to him that is poor, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word" (Isa. lxvi. 2); and they are a source of "reproof" and "correction" in that they exhibit the divine wrath against those who "despised the word of the Lord" (Num. xv. 31). The Israelites in the wilderness "despised the pleasant land, they believed not his word; but murmured in their tents and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord: therefore he lifted his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness" (Psa. cvi. 24-26). Their "carcasses fell in the wilderness," and 'they could not enter" into the land of promise "because of unbelief" (Heb. iii. 17-19). On the basis of these facts the inspired writer to the epistle to the Hebrews says, "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God" (Heb. iii. 12). That "unbelief" has relation not only to unfulfilled promises, but to "the word," etc., concerning the present. Thus Moses and Aaron were the subjects of divine disapproval, because, when told to "speak unto the rock," Moses "smote the rock twice," accompanying it by these words, "Must we fetch you water out of the rock?" "And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them" (Num. xx. 8-12). The action and speech of Moses appear at first sight comparatively insignificant; but a little consideration presents them in a different aspect. To smite instead of to speak to the rock was to substitute a human method for the divine; to say "must we fetch you water" was to attribute the miracle to the flesh instead of the Spirit. Inspiration and miracle, though different manifestations of the same Spirit, are alike in attesting the power, wisdom, and goodness of God; they are twin witnesses, each confirming the other. It is equally dishonoring to God to pervert either. To ascribe a human authorship to the inspired Word is on a par with attributing the miraculous to the flesh; in either case God is not sanctified.

The "unbelieving" and "all liars" are classed among those who "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death" (Rev. xxi. 8), "and there shall in no wise enter into it [i. e., the holy city] anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie" (ver. 27); those without the city include "whosoever loveth and maketh a lie" (ch. xxii. 15). The "unbelievers," whose doom is here portrayed, are such as are amenable to judgment; otherwise they would not be sentenced to "the second death;" they are not those who are ignorant of the revealed Word, but such as have known it and then rejected it; they are of that class who "did not profit" by "the word preached" because it was "not mixed with faith" (Heb. iv. 2). They believe the Word of God for a time, but fail to continue; the retrograde path on which they enter is paved with doubts and questionings concerning things not previously disputed by them; the first few steps give rise to a demand for proof, accompanied frequently by the statement that none can be given; which is sufficient to indicate a condition of mind unfitted for the reception of whatever evidence there may be; hence, when the evidence is presented, it is instantly condemned as of no weight. The heart which begins thus to be "hardened" is often transformed, though gradually and imperceptibly, into "an evil heart of unbelief" (Heb. iii. 12, 13). "The deceitfulness of sin," in some form or other, is the cause; and so complete is the deception that the victim can, with difficulty, realize his condition.

CORN SHEAVES.

SLEEP AND WASTE OF LIFE.—Sleep will do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, and uneasiness. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will do much to cure dyspepsia, particularly that variety known as nervous dyspepsia. It will relieve the languor and prostration felt by consumptives. It will cure hypochondria. It will cure the headache. It will cure neuralgia. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure sorrow. Now no man should do no more work of muscle, or of brain in a day, than he can perfectly recover from the fatigue of in a good night's rest. Up to that point, exercise is good; beyond, are waste of life, exhaustion, and decay. When hunger calls for food, and fatigue demands rest, we are in the natural order, and keep the balance of life. When we take stimulants to spur our jaded nerves, or excite an appetite, we are wasting life. There are wrong and mischief in all waste of life. A man should live so as to keep himself at his best, and with a true economy. To eat more food than is needful, is worse policy than tossing money into the sea. It is a waste of labor, and a waste of life.

A HAPPY HOME.—There is a story of a bridegroom who requested his bride to accompany him into the garden a day or two after their wedding. He then threw a line over the roof of the cottage. Giving his wife one end of it he retreated to the other side and exclaimed: "Pull the line." She pulled at his request, as hard as she could. He cried: "Pull it over!" "I can't," she replied. "Pull with all your might," shouted the whimsical husband. But in vain were all the efforts of the bride to pull the line over, so long as the husband held on the opposite end. But when he came round, he found they both pulled at one end, it came over with great ease. "There," said he as the line fell from the roof, "you see how hard and ineffectual was our labor when we pulled in opposition to each other but how easy and pleasant it is when we both pull together. It will be so, my dear, through life. If we oppose each other, it will be hard work; if we act together it will be pleasant to live. Let us, therefore, always pull together. Let us daily endeavor to help one another to bear and forbear with each other."—Morning Star.

HEAVEN NO PLACE FOR MOTHER.—A lady, visiting Colorado, suffered greatly from the elevation. One day after an attack of breathlessness she sighed out: "I am sure I shall die!"

"Will you go to heaven if you die?" inquired her little son, anxiously.

"I hope so, dear."

The small boy burst into tears. "Oh, mother dear," he sobbed, "don't, don't go to heaven. You could never stand the altitude."

"THE NEXT BUILDING."—I was deeply impressed with a paragraph under the above caption, recently. It said: Walking down a busy street of this city I was surprised to see a once large, handsome business house in ruins.

"What is the matter?" I asked a friend? "The walls have fallen, and I fancied that one of the strongest buildings in the city."

"It was strong," was the reply, "but the adjoining building fell and pulled this down in the general wreck."

I looked on in silence, for a strange feeling came over me. Solemn questions, which I would rather not have heard, were calling loudly, and demanding recognition and reply.

Why need this stately building have fallen? Such studied care had been taken in its erection. The watchful eye of the skilled architect had carefully noted every detail. Yet it had fallen, and 'mid the debris, a young life which but a moment before, had been glad with beauty, and rich with all the possibilities of the future, was fast ebbing away. What was the matter?

Only this,—in building the adjoining wall some other builder had not been careful, and, lo! a beautiful structure was lying in ruins, while a young life so full of promise was hurriedly extinguished just because some one had blundered, or, perhaps, had not been careful. With solemn awe I whispered: No man liveth unto himself. Take heed how ye build. We are all building. God forbid that the collapse of our structure should pull down another

ELOQUENT STUMP SPEAKER.—Andrew Carnegie, at a dinner in New York, was talking about the horrors of war and horrors that he has done so much to end forever.

"Once, at the height of the Civil War," he said, "two men at a railway station saw a carload of wooden legs depart for a military hospital.

"'Those wooden legs,' said the first man, 'are a rather eloquent protest against war, aren't they?'

"'Yes,' agreed the other; 'they are what you might call stump speeches.'"—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

GOLD DUST.

"If it is not right, do not do it; if it is not true, do not say it."

"In this world it is not what we take up, but what we give up, that makes us rich."

"Everybody finds out, sooner or later, that all success worth having is founded on Christian rules of conduct."

"Greater than genius, greater than power, greater than riches, is the ability to pour out one's life for the uplifting of others."

"Today is, for all that we know, the opportunity of our lives. On what we do or say today, may depend the success and completeness of our entire life struggle. It is for us therefore, to use every moment of today as if our very eternity was dependent on its words and deeds."

"Christianity is the good man's text, his life, the illustration."

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

A THOUGHT FOR MOTHERS.

Like a flash a thought came to me today while trying to solve some of the problems and trials of life; a thought which to me, a mother of little ones, was a comfort,—to make me go on my way with a lighter heart while wondering how it were possible for any one to do. And where the cares of life seemed to lay more on the frail shoulders than can be borne; more duties and tasks than can be accomplished from sun to sun. There seems to be so much help and good to be gathered from those who can read, study, and think; but how about many mothers, frail mothers; those who bear the extra burden of sickness along with so many other things, who find it hard to find a moment of the time undisturbed, or with rested mind and nerves to do or work for the Master; trying so hard to do and live patiently, yet so often growing so discouraged in their mind, because they cannot do more work for the cause. Oh, how blind thousands of mothers are. Overlooking one of the most beautiful, necessary and responsible pieces of work that is given to mankind to work on. One of the most tender and beautiful gardens to water, nourish, and tend. The mother who is blessed with the little tender lives, lives that are being moulded, guided and made by the exemplary life and actions of the one whom God has honored by putting into their care and keeping those little children. Of course all true mothers know that they must love and tend those little lives, but are there not times when a mother, while longing to work for God in some greater field, forgets to see the duties and privilege so near them. Lives that no one can guide in the path of truth and to a knowledge of God and His will as easily as those that are placed nearest them where they can, little by little, during the hours, days, and weeks of time, lead them to a knowledge of the truth. Mothers, let us work in the garden so near us and do God's will in our own world, over which we are queen.

MRS. CHAS. THOMAS.

Proctor, Mont.

THESE THINGS DO NOT.

Never brood over your troubles, but remember how much you have to be thankful for.

Never sleep with enmity in your heart against anybody.

Never have much to say about yourself to strangers.

Never live where you wouldn't be willing to die.

Never covet the possessions of others unless you wish to lose your own.

Never receive a favor without being thankful.—Selected.

MORNING WATCH THOUGHTS.

"You have never stood in the darkness." These words were used by Red Indian Chief as he pleaded that to him and to his people might be sent the white man's Book from heaven. Here is a poem based upon the words of the Indian's plea:

"You have never stood in the darkness,
And reached out a trembling hand,
If haply some one might find it
In the awe of a lonely land;
Where the shadows shift so strangely,
And the quick heart-beat is stirred,
If only a leaf he rustled
By the wing of a passing bird.

"You have never stood in the darkness;
You do not know its awe;
On your land a great light shineth,
Which long ago you saw.
For the light of the world we ask you;
We plead for the Book which shows
The way to win to His footstool,
Which only the white man knows.

"O voice from out of the darkness!
O cry of a soul in pain!
May it ring as the blast of a clarion,
Nor call God's host in vain!
By the pierced hand which saved us,
Let ours do their work today,
'Till from those who tremble in darkness
The shadows are swept away."

—Youths' Instructor.

This poem has strangely affected me. Accustomed to reading the Bible many from my youth up, have I rightly estimated its value? It is the only Book in all the world that shows us the way out of death. What if I "stood in the darkness"; what if I were groping in heathen blindness, looking to idols of wood and of stone to save me, and finding neither peace nor hope? How I thank God that I am not! How I thank Him for the Book He has so mercifully and graciously put into my hands. May I use it for His glory and for the saving of men. Not an idler in His vineyard would I be. My time, my money, my life—all are His, and my heart reaches out, not only for those who "stand in darkness" in our own land, but for the heathen afar. To hasten the coming of the Kingdom, the Gates must be lifted up that the King of Glory may come in. We have no time to daily, no money to waste. God bless the people who heed the Savior's command to "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

O brethren! O sisters! Get to work! Do not let the precious cause die out. Hold the fort; cling to the faith; throw out the life line. Remember the faithful ones who have fallen asleep, and walk in their steps, as they walked in the steps of Jesus.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Pierceton, Ind.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Restitution and all of like precious faith:

We were made to rejoice on the 12th day of June, when Mrs. W. W. Johnston, of Gonzales, Tex., and Miss Zella Gregg, a friend and near neighbor of ours, put on the only name under heaven whereby we must be saved. Praise the Lord! two more believers of the gospel of "the Kingdom," have sealed their faith by being buried with Christ in baptism and have put off the body of sin by the circumcision of Christ (Col. 2, 11, 12). Both had previously been baptized into the "Christian" Church, but as baptism only remits sins where the Gospel of the Kingdom is believed first; and the "Christian" Church does not teach nor belive the Gospel of the Kingdom that Jesus and His apostles preached (Matt. 4, 23:9, 35:24,14; Mark 1, 14; Luke 4, 43:8, 1:9, 1, 2, 6), they felt it their duty to "come out from among them and be separate" (2 Cor. 6, 17, 18). Bro. A. S. Bradley, of Mullens, Tex., came up and helped them to put on the all-saving name, and remained over night and delivered an excellent sermon for us on the "Coming Kingdom of God." From here he went to Flurana, and held a ten days' meeting, and on his return home, he stopped off at Brownwood, and spoke twice for us, continuing his subject on the Kingdom, for the benefit of some of our neighbors who "think" the church is the Kingdom. Now this was certainly fine, "A feast of fat things," and long to be remembered. Bro. Bradley made it so plain that all present, surely, must be convinced that a church cannot be a Kingdom, or a Kingdom a church. "The Church" is "A people called out for the Lord," and a Kingdom, is "An organized civil government presided over or governed by a King." Bro. Bradley is a good speaker and a thorough master of his trade, and we trust he will come this way again ere very long.

Bro. W. H. Wilson sowed the "good seed" when he was here in March, Sister Zella and her father were present, both fell in love with the truth, and began at once to investigate, and the result was they found the "pearl of great price." And as Sister Zella has led the way, we have every reason to believe that her father will soon follow in the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal (Matt. 7, 14). Mrs. Johnston, is a very dear sister (in the flesh) of the writer, which made the occasion all the more joyful. She has postponed her baptism for two years, which has been a great trial to her. She was one of the number that Bro. W. H. Wilson went to Gonzales to baptize two years ago. It truly is encouraging to know there are a few who will come out on the Lord's side and take a stand for the truth. That is right; when we see we are wrong let us have the moral courage to come out and acknowledge it. Jesus says, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free" (John 8, 32). Free from what? Ans., free from sin, when we know the truth and obey it from the heart (mind) by being buried with Christ in baptism it makes us free from sin. Jesus says, "Thy (God's) word is truth" (Jno. 17, 17); nothing else will do—man-made theories and heathen philosophy will not answer in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my Gospel" (Rom. 2, 16). Ignorance of God's law does not excuse us. Paul says, "Ignorance alienates from the life of God" (Eph. 4, 18). "The eyes of our understanding must be enlightened (by studying the scriptures) that we may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints" (Eph. 1, 18). These dear sisters, by believing the covenants of promise, or the things promised to Abraham and his seed, the Christ, and being baptized into Christ, have become Abraham's seed by adoption, "and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3, 27, 29). What promise? Why the promise God made to Abraham and his seed, the Christ, that they should be heirs of the world, inherit the land of Canaan, and dwell therein forever (Gen. 13, 14, 15, 7; Psa. 2, 8; Rom. 4, 13; Matt. 5, 5; Psa. 37, 9, 11, 22). They are no longer Gentiles in the flesh. They have made a covenant with the God of Israel and sealed it officially by baptism into Christ. They are no longer aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, Christless, hopeless, Godless, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone" (Eph. 2, 11, 12, 19, 20).

Now may the Lord especially bless those who have lately become members of His body. May they all give diligence and add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, Godliness, brotherly-kindness, charity (2 Pet. 1 ch). Read the whole chapter. May they continue in the faith grounded and settled and be not moved away from the hope of the Gospel which they have heard" (Col. 1, 2, 3). "Be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as we know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15, 58).

With much love to the household of faith everywhere, I am as ever in hope of eternal life when Jesus the life-giver comes to establish His Kingdom and reign as universal King on the throne of David (restored) over the house of Israel forever" (Luke 1, 32, 33).

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Brownwood, Texas.

A SIGN OF THE LAST DAYS.

As it was in the days of Noah so shall it also be in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage into the ark and the flood came and destroyed them all."

"Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

Let me emphasize the phrase: "Even thus shall it be when the Son of man is revealed." That is, an almost exact counterpart of Noah's day, will exist.

As to what that condition was, see Gen. vi. 5: "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thought of his heart was only evil continually."

It is not a fact that the popular religious preachers of our day, do "prophesy smooth things," they tell the people that the world is getting "better and better" all the time; and we are even told that it is getting so good, that we are on the eve of abolishing war, we are going to settle the disputes of nations by arbitration: in fact, we are going to bring about the millenium before the Lord comes. Now, this is the condition of things which exists today. The people demand that their preachers speak to them "smooth things," therefore, they heap to them elves teachers having "itching ears." I have in mind a preacher of one of our popular churches who would not do this, but rebuked his people for their sins. The result was that he was soon given his "walking papers."

I wish now to call your attention to a remarkable prophesy from Isa. xxx. 8-11:

"8 ¶ Now, go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and forever.

"9 That this is a rebellious h people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the LORD: .....

"10 Which say i to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth k things, prophesy deceits;

"11 Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us."

With regard to this prophesy it reads: "Note it in a book that it may be for the time to come." The marginal reading has it, "Heb. the latter day." "The time to come," has surely come; for never was prophecy more literally fulfilled than the above from Isaiah is today. The "path" of "the Holy One of Israel" has marked out for people to walk in is too "narrow;" they want a broader gauge; they want something more expansive. A minister said to me once: "I have great big feet, and I must have a big platform to stand on."

Personally I will say, I have sought out, and found the "old path," and have resolved to "walk therein," even if I do find the way at times rough and rugged and trials and tribulations are encountered by the way. I see just before me, "The beautiful city of rest will far more than compensate for trials and tribulations I may meet by the way.

In Noah's day, "the earth was filled with violence," and "all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. To-day, the prevalence of "corruption" is simply alarming, to people who know not God's Word. Our newspapers are burdened with the record of "violent crime." Corruption is found in financial, politicn, and social life, and has become simply appalling.

No relief is found in looking into the rising generation. As to juvenile criminality, Mr. Morrison, a gentlemen who has made an exhaustive study of crime and its cause, speaking of children, says: "Whether we look at home or abroad, whether we consult the criminal returns of the Old World or the New, we invariably find juvenile criminality exhibiting a distinct tendency to increase. It is a problem which is not confined to any single community: it is confronting the whole family of nations; it is arising out of conditions which are common to civilizations." If the children of "the whole family of nations" are tending to criminality," it will be a vain dream to look for a better condition of things in the near future.

I quote from another author as follows: "How heart-sickening is the fact, disclosed by the criminal records of the day, that even women, young girls, and little boys, as well as men, have become so lawless and vicious as to commit the darkest crimes, even to audacious highway robbery and the foulest murder! Anyone who reads knows that these records, chronicling, as they do, such a variety of crimes, may be found in our daily papers, three hundred and sixty-five days out of every year."

I quote from the Catholic Mirror, as follows: "Professor Andrew D. White, who is not given to sensational statements, draws attention to the extraordinary increase of crime throughout the country. That there is such an increase no statisfics are needed to show; for we have proof of it, such as can scarcely have escaped the attention of even careless readers, in the daily papers. Shocking occurrences are chronicled—murder in all its forms, robbery, felonious assaults, and every kind of vicious manifestation."

What are we coming to when crime is protected by police officers by hush money? In Chicago one police inspector was sent to the State prison for that crime. Only recently another inspector and captain was charged with the same thing. Collectors were appointed to collect the bribes and blackmail money.

In New York City a committee of investigation found the following prices charged for keeping the official eyes closed: "Pool-room, $50 to $300 per month; policy-shops, from $30 to $25 per month, liquor dealers, $2 a month; prostitutes, from 50 cents a day to $1 a week, each; houses of ill-fame, from $20 to $50 a month."

Men who by money taken from prostitutes, the saloon and gambling dens, build themselves fine mansions, marry and raise families amid respectable surroundings. I personally knew a man who kept several palace saloons in Chicago, in which fashionable and rich young men were ruined. This man was a refined appearing man, a total abstainer from both liquor and tobacco. From the proceeds of these saloons he was enabled to live in luxury, in a fine mansion, amid culture and refinement, and I understand he would not permit liquor in his home.

I quote a paragraph from the New York Committee of investigation in New York, as follows: "The evidence of many witnesses shows the existence of a wonderful conspiracy in the neighborhood of Essex Market Police Court, headed by politicians, including criminals, professional bon' men, professional thieves, police and those who lay plots against the unwary, and lead them into habits of law-breaking, or surround them with a net-work of false evidence, and then demand money as the price of salvation, and if they do not receive it, drag their victim into court and prison, and often to a convict's cell."

This kind of a record can be multiplied indefinitely. In the face of all these facts, the cry of the hireling priesthood is, "The world is getting better and better," putting the people to sleep under the dreamy vision of "peace,"—no more war. And yet at the same time we are upon the eve of the mighiest upheaval the world has ever seen. The turbulent masses of the people are crying for vengeance against their oppressors, which will cause the rich oppressors of the poor (who by means of combines and trusts) have ground them to desperation, to "howl for the miseries that shall come upon them."

Oh, how I wish I had the power to arouse the drowsy soldiers of Jesus Christ, to a realizing sense of the times we are now living in, lest they be caught with the world in a snare. I am interested in your eternal welfare. I am so anxious that you should gain the prize, and a home in God's blessed Kingdom. We need personal, individual preparation, and also to be set on fire with a zeal to send the grand old Gospel of the Kingdom to those who perish for want of knowledge which we have. Send the heralds of the coming Kingdom broadcast over the country to proclaim the glad news. If you cannot go yourself, take a share in the work by backing them financially. These heralds cannot go of themselves unless you sustain them.

Beloved in the Lord, I am far from being an alarmist, but from a close and careful study of the Propetiates Word, I know whereof I speak. The time of guessing is in the past: we positively know now; and a feeling comes over me that the Church of God at large does not fully realize it. This makes me so anxious that they should do so, and awake to actual service.

Let the foolish virgins do all the bickering and contending with each other, but let us engage in better business. We have a greater, grander, and a more glorious work to do. Let us be in earnest about our Father's business.

Nations are shaking from pole to pole, there is a mighty upheaval, the foundations of ages are breaking up.

"Hark! the waking up of nations,
Gog and Magog to the fray,
Hark! what soundeth is creation
Groaning for its latter day."

What do these mighty commotions mean? They fortell God's swift approaching judgment upon the nation, and the coming of the Kingdom of our God. They are a sure harbinger of redemption to the Waiting Bride, who hath made herself ready. The phrase, "Hath made herself ready," strikes me with great force. Let each one put the question to him or herself: Am I ready to meet the Bridegroom?

The "warning from the four winds," the on-rolling of the dark storm clouds gathering over our heads, in thunder-tone cry: Flee from the impending day of vengeance, which is about to roll upon the world like a mighty tidal wave.

I have been impressed by reading this paragraph: "The night is assurelly coming—while we sleep the night cometh! While we sing the night cometh! While we trifle the night cometh! While we put it far away it cometh! While we say it will never come, it cometh! On all the wings of time it flies: each moment brings it near! Are we ready to meet it? The night cometh—it is at hand. To the faithful it shall be the precursor of an eternal day. When Time's sun shall set in cloud and gloom their day shall break in glory, and their sun no more go down. Work then while the day lasts. Sinner, repent! Believer, labor! Spread these glorious truths, honor Christ by a godly life—be faithful to the end.

"May God have mercy on us, for Christ's sake." W. H. WILSON.

Chicago, Ill.

AN EXPOSITION OF MATT. 24:34.

This verse reads in our common version, "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." This reading is the cause of much confusion in the understanding of our Lord's memorable discourse to His disciples. The context should reveal the fact that there is something wrong with it. Two questions are asked by the disciples: verse 3, "When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the world?" In our Lord's answer, He gives the signs of the destruction of the city, and also the signs of His coming. Now to say, that the generation then living should see all of the things spoken of fulfilled, would not be a true prediction, because they did not see the signs of His return. Notice v. 29: "sun and moon darkened—the stars fall." V. 30, "and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." After all this is seen by the watchers; what force or aptness would there be to the words, "This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled," when at the same time they were all in the past? Had He referred to the generation that see the signs He would have said "that generation"—but as said, there would be no force nor aptness to the words.

Some years ago I was one of a Bible Class that had Matt. 24 for our lesson. Our teacher had Young's Analytical Concordance. It was stated in that exhaustive work that the Greek word here translated "fulfilled" is not the word that is in the other numerous instances used by the apostles that is so translated; and that Matt. 24:34 is the only instance in which this word is so translated. (This, however, I am giving from memory.) Any way the word here translated "fulfilled" is not the same word that is in so many places translated fulfilled, as can be seen by any one having a Diaglott, or a concordance.

Young gives the reading this way: "This generation shall not pass till all these things begin to be fulfilled." This relieves the passage of all difficulty, is in harmony with the context, and last, but not least, is in harmony with the facts of history. The construction of our Lord's discourse is very necessary to be understood before we can rightly divide the word of truth. Each writer gives the sense as it appears to him, and indeed it could not well be otherwise, because if each did not think his exegesis to be correct, he would hasten to change his mind;—therefore let us not be too positive, for wise men change their views.

It appears to me after much study that the Master from v. 1 to 14 inclusive, gives a general outline of important events from his time to the end of this dispensation, or to His return. In v. 7 he says, "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom." In v. 9, "Ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake." Then comes the promise, "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." What end?—the end of the world or age in connection with His coming—not the end of the Jewish age; that belonged to "these things" of the first question; His coming and the end of the Jewish age are separate and distinct events—the one past and the other future. In v. 15 he goes back to the signs of the destruction of Jerusalem—and warns them to hasten flight from the doomed city. V. 21, the great tribulation—such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. "But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." In Luke 21:24-24, speaking of this tribulation he says, "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things that are written may be fulfilled. . . . And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Jerusalem is still trodden down. Therefore the time of Jacob's trouble is not yet ended—and by a perusal of the prophets the treader will find that it is written, "They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger" (Lam. 4:9). This great tribulation is upon the Jews, and is not yet ended—therefore the time for the signs in the sun and moon and stars of v. 29, is not yet. And, as said by the editor of The Restitution, they are political and probably ecclesiastical signs. This prophetic discourse by our Lord was about A. D. 33, and the destruction of Jerusalem about A. D. 70. Therefore that generation was not past until the commencement of the things referred to by our Lord.

GEO. FRANCIS.

Albany, Wis.

OBITUARY.

Marion Leslie Donaldson was born in Mortons Entry, Leith (Edinburgh), Scotland, August 9th, 1828. Died at 127 Ryerson St., Brooklyn, New York, 2:15 P. M., Monday, July 3rd, 1911. These dates record the beginning and the ending of the earthly life of Sister Marion Leslie Donaldson, widow of our late brother John Donaldson, who "fell asleep in Jesus," April 1st, 1892. Eighty-three years of life for the Master; for although Sister Donaldson was not baptized till the fall of 1850, she had consistently served the Lord—according to the light she possessed—from early youth. To the day of her death she never failed to say a word in honor of the Lord, and to show forth the love of her God, as exemplified in the person of Jesus the Christ, at every opportunity. Yea, even more: she often made the opportunity at home or at business, when entertaining friends, or visiting, when in the city, or spending vacation in the mountains; no matter when or where. All who knew Sister Donaldson were made acquainted with what she believed and why she believed it. Neither did she stop here; for she lived the life she professed. She was not ashamed of her Lord: therefore we know her Lord will not be ashamed of her when He comes to make up His jewels.

Sister Donaldson was the mother of ten children: four died in childhood. All six who lived to maturity followed their mother's teaching and example, and became members of the family of God, showing their faith by going down into the waters of baptism. In time they married, and then their wives or husbands—as the case might be—obeyed the Master's call. When children came, they followed, and now, even the great grandchild can be seen in her place in the Church of God, drinking in the truth; and it is thought by some, not to be far distant when this young lady will avail herself of the blessed privilege of being enrolled as one of the family of God, and to watch for His Son from heaven.

Sister Donaldson was baptized by the brethren in Glassgow, Scotland, in which city she made her home when first married, and where three children were born to her. In crossing the ocean—which trip lasted over seven weeks, one child—daughter Marion—died and was buried at sea. Among the first things that happened to her in this country, even before her furniture was purchased, was the cutting of her pocket from her skirt and the taking of every cent she owned from her. Still she was not daunted nor dismayed, being of sturdy Scotch character, full of ambition and energy. She, trusting in God, overcame all obstacles and it was not long before she and her husband were helping others who were worse off than themselves. This ambitious energy was characteristic of her to the end, but her faith made her very humble, thankful, loving and charitable. Her friends were nearly all of the Household of Faith. She was a great student of the Bible, and dearly loved The Restitution, as numerous letters on file will show. While the immediate cause of death was arteria-sclerosis, it is thought she might have lived for years had it not been for the death of a daughter in November last, and other family cares that weighed on her mind.

The funeral services were conducted by Brother Geo. R. Horn, after which she was laid to rest beside her dear husband in the family plot in Greenwood. Truly it can be said of her that she "knew in whom she believed;" and knowing this she "did what she could." She was a consistent follower after Christ; a loving and beloved wife; a kind, indulgent and faithful mother; and a true friend. I am sure that all who knew her will indorse this tribute from her son, ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

127 Ryerson St.,
Brooklyn, New York.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska will be held in Moorefield, Nebraska, from August 26 to September 3, inclusive. Meals will be furnished at 10c, and lodging free.

Now brethren, let us all make a special effort to be there and help make the conference a success. Especially to the isolated ones and the young people do we say, Come. Do not miss the chance of getting into the spirit of the work and understanding what is needed. This is the time when we can get in touch with one another and learn to love each other if we come in the right spirit. Remember the conference should be in the interest of Christ and His work, not our desires.

Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio, Editor of The Restitution, has been secured as speaker. The most of us got acquainted with him last year, and will enjoy his second visit. The young people know him through the Berean lessons. We expect to have a "Berean Day" to be given over the young people. Let all be on hand to take part. If further information is wanted, write Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebraska.

ALTA KING,
Sec'y of Conference Board.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

OHIO CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The ninth annual conference of the Church of God will be held at Troy, Ohio, August 16-20. Those coming should write Brother Jno. Lehman, Troy, Ohio, R. 5. Come in the spirit of love that we may be built up and strengthened in our most holy faith.

ANNA LEHMAN.

SINGS AT HIS WORK.

Gives us the man who sings at his work! Be his occupation what it may, he is equal to any of those who follow the same pursuit in silent sullenness. He will do more in the same time—he will do it better—he will persevere longer.

One is scarcely sensible of fatigue while he marches to music. The very stars are said to make harmony as they revolve in their spheres. Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness, altogether past calculation its powers of endurance.

Efforts, to be permanently useful, must be uniformly joyous—a spirit all sunshine, graceful from very gladness, beautiful because bright.—Thomas Carlyle.

"Look only on the bright side of life; talk only of good qualities in others, and think of those things that are lofty and true."

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHAPE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date_____

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for_____Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-accessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25 % in 3 months, 25 % in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to
BUELL W. NUTT
803 Parkwood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed_____

Address_____
street and number

_____
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Are We Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 136-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Order from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later. SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord. G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

BOYS and GIRLS

Do You Want to Make Some Pocket Money?

It's easy; just drop a postal to the manager of THE RESTITUTION, and he will tell you all about it. Do it now before you forget it. : : : : :

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of high grade prescription work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

THE STRONG, KENNARD & NUTT CO. 338 SOHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

SAMPLE COPIES

OF

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp. Send for Some.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your usual taste, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cent. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Pamphlet and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution
Is the Official Organ of the Church of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace, and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31.)

Robt. G. Huggiss, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 2, 1911 No. 29

MY MOTHER.

Who fed me from her gentle breast,
And hushed me in her arms to rest;
And on my cheeks sweet kisses prest?
My Mother.

When sleep forsook my open eye,
Who was it sung sweet lullaby,
And soothed me that I should not cry?
My Mother.

Who sat and watched my infant head,
When sleeping on my cradle bed,
And tears of sweet affection shed?
My Mother.

When pain and sickness made me cry,
Who gazed upon my heavy eye
And wept for fear that I would die?
My Mother.

Who lov'd to see me pleased and gay,
And taught me sweetly how to play,
And minded all I had to say?
My mother.

Who ran to help me when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the place to make it well?
My Mother.

Who my infant heart to pray,
And love God's holy book and day;
And taught me wisdom's pleasant way?
My Mother

And can I ever cease to be,
Affectionate and kind to thee,
Who was so very kind to me?
My Mother.

Oh, no! the thought I cannot bear,
And if God please my life to spare,
I hope I shall reward thy care?
My Mother.

When thou art feeble, old and gray,
My healthy arm shall be thy stay,
And I will soothe thy pains away;
My Mother.

And when I see thee hang thy head,
'Twill be my turn to watch thy bed,
And tears of sweet affection shed,
My Mother.

For God who lives above the skies,
Would look with vengeance in his eyes,
If I should ever dare despise
My Mother.

—Selected by Sister J. B. Lent.

SUNDAY MORNING ADDRESS.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God." We may be very thankful that we have come to a recognition of this great fact, especially at a time when it is almost universally denied.

Our assembling this morning is a token of admission on our part that "without faith it is impossible to please God"; and that "he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." We accept the great fact upon the authority of Christ; for though written by Paul, it has the force of a statement by Christ Himself, on the principle laid down by Christ, that whosoever hears the apostles hears Him (Luke v. 16). The statement that "without faith it is impossible to please God," is also in complete accord with all that Christ Himself said.

As to what is meant by this God-pleasing faith, it is defined in the first verse as a something having reference to the future—the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen (as yet). Belief in God who promises, and belief of the things promised, embraces all that is affirmable of faith. This is the faith without which no man can be well-pleasing to the Creator. We are assembled this morning on that footing, believing and testifying to others—that if men will please God, they must have faith in what He has said; "they must believe that He is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him."

There is very great comfort in that double belief: it is the only sterling consolation of existence. When we realize the fact that God is—that all things are in the hands of an Almighty Being, whose unerring wisdom is slowly guiding things to a pre-determined issue of good, we are enabled to put up with much that is grievous in the experience of men and women in whose thoughts God is not. There is no difficulty, philosophically speaking, in accepting the proposition that God is. We see that it must be so: because things are, and because things have not always been.

Things could never have made themselves. If ever there was a time when there was nothing, there could never have come a time when there could be anything: for it is impossible that something could come out of nothing. Hence an eternal antecedent is a philosophical necessity; and that eternal antecedent must have had the quality of intelligence as well as force, for all the developments of the universe are characterized by wisdom. It is therefore an easy effort of the mind to grasp the fact that God exists, and that fact once realized is inexpressibly consolatory.

There is a sense in which we may say that WE are not. But a very few years ago, there were no such persons as ourselves in existence, and in a short time to come (apart from the coming of the Lord), there will again be no such persons to be found. We have no power of self-continuance; we depend entirely upon those relations of life that God has established. We are just like a flower—indeed the Bible compares us to a flower—which is the mere product of forces behind it, over which it has no control. We also are mere products of forces antecedent to ourselves, and have no power in ourselves: we can only glide along in the channel marked out for us.

In such an ephemeral condition, how comforting to feel that there is a Great Power for ever, the primary energy out of which all things come; and that to that Power, "with whom is no variableness or shadow of turning," we sustain the relation of children. How comforting to know the truth of what David says, that "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him;" and that "no good thing will he hold from them that please him;" that there is no error or caprice with Him; that He is long-suffering, patient and benevolent to a degree beyond our knowledge; that kindness is the first quality of His being—that God is love. When we feel all that, we are solaced in the midst of life's uncertain experiences. We come to realize by the meditation that comes with the daily reading of the word—that things will go right: that however wrong they appear to be, they will go right in the end, if we do those things that are well-pleasing in His sight. "All things work together for good to those who are the called according to the purpose of God." Though things may seem to shape adversely, Eternal Goodness guides the current to a beneficent end, even when the beneficence is not realized in the present state.

The sufferer may imagine that God is not in his lot, and he is liable to become disheartened. With as much reason might the prophets have come to that conclusion regarding themselves; for Paul testifies in this very chapter concerning them, that they wandered about in sheep skins and goats' skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented. The kind of affliction they were occasionally subject to, is exemplified in the case of Jeremiah, who was let down by cords into a dismal pit of mire, at the bottom of which he sank up to the armpits in mud. Might not Jeremiah have supposed at such a time that God had forsaken him? Especially considering that the cause of his horrid imprisonment was his faithfulness in adhering to the divine word. Had he thought so, he would have made the mistake which some short-sighted people fall into with regard to the incidents of ordinary life.

The fact is, God's dealings with the prophets had regard to the prophets themselves as well as those to whom He sent them. God accomplishes many ends with simple means. In sending the prophets, He not only reproved the generation addressed, but brought out His word for the enlightenment of subsequent generations, and at the same time developed circumstances for trying, purifying and disciplining the prophets themselves. Jesus testifies that the prophets are to be in the kingdom of God—"Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God." We also read in Revelations that the time is to come for God to give reward unto His servants the prophets. It was therefore needful that they should be tried by adversity.

A man is unfit for use even in the human sphere—till he is tried. A character is without the value til it has gone through the fire in some way or other. A person who is all the time in agreeable circumstances cannot have that hearty appreciation of the truth which adversity engenders: neither is it possible that his character can be brought out distinctly. Development depends upon activity. "Pleasure" does not tend to spiritual activity, but rather to spiritual lassitude and death. It blunts the perception of the need for the truth. It makes the mind contented with the present. It brings mental rust and moral sluggishness. It hides the spiritual man. When he is tried, you see him, and get to know what he is made of, and he knows himself as he never can with a pleasant breeze on all sides. The man who has come through trial and suffering is a more complete and more precious man in every sense than one who does not know what trouble is. He is qualified to judge justly of other men, and to sympathize with the erring; and we must remember that the object of God's operations toward us in the gospel, is to develop an order of men who will be qualified to be the associates of Jesus in the administration of the divine law in the earth, in the day of the Messiah's glory.

When you consider this, it throws considerable light upon many things that would otherwise be dark. It enables us to understand how it is that the sons coming to the Father, receive chastisement. It helps us to respond to the words of Paul—"If ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers—even the prophets themselves, and the apostles; and Jesus himself, the highest of all—then are ye bastards and not sons." No one will ever come to any perfection of divine development without chastisement. Chastisement fits a man for future exaltation.

You can see that in the case of Joseph. He was the best of twelve sons, and was loved the most by his father. At seventeen years of age, you know what happened. Sent on a hospitable errand to his brothers, whose envy had been excited by the preferential attention of his father, and fed by the naturally superior carriage of Joseph himself, he was put by them into a pit. And there, although there is nothing in the narrative about it, we may imagine he abandoned himself to the utmost extravagance of grief. As much is implied in the words of his brethren, when in the austere presence of Joseph (ignorant that he understood them), they said, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear."

Joseph, a lad of seventeen years of age, is let down into the pit, and by and bye, a gang of Ishmaelites come along and his brethren change their minds and sell him to them, doubtless glad to get rid of him without putting him to death. Imagine a fate more truly heartless than to be taken away from a fond and affectionate father, in comfortable circumstances, and given into the hands of traders as a slave. This was Joseph's desolate position, and what he must have suffered we cannot easily realize, for at this period there was no indication of the purpose to be served in his slavery. The surroundings were those of blackest night. We see the light that afterwards broke upon the scene, We look from the throne on which Joseph sat in Egypt, and are enabled to view his enslavement with composure: but if we try to put ourselves in the position of Joseph at the moment he was sold by his brethren, we can realize that it must have been a position of utter desolation; and it was a long time before his path began to brighten. Taken to Egypt he was sold as a slave-menial into the house of one of Pharaoh's officers, and you know that after giving for a time, through the power of chastity he was thrown into prison, and there he lay in the lowest depths of adversity, apparently abandoned of God and man.

Now, in such a position Joseph might well have reasoned, if he had been of the faithless sort, and had not endured as seeing Him who is invisible—if he had not as it were, had a hand grasping the invisible hand of God—that God was taking no cognizance of his position; whereas He was guiding Joseph to a splendid destiny, and preparing him for the high position he was to occupy. Adversity gave a robustness of character he could not otherwise have possessed. His afflictions were spread over thirteen years; and they were thirteen years of utter blackness, pure adversity, unmitigated evil, in which to the eye of sense there was no token of divine regard, and yet in which God was at the helm all the way through.

Now, here we are, so many Josephs; we have been called to be the sons of God; we have been called to be the seed of Abraham, the children of Israel and the brethren of Joseph; and like him, we are going through a training for the throne. We are being put through the fire, like ore, that the precious metal may come out at last, tried and refined, for the Royal use. Let us think of this, and endure evil with composure. Let us avoid the mistake of thinking that God has forsaken us, because it may be we are placed in circumstances in which there appears to be no evidence of right guidance. God knows what is needful for our development, if we do not. Let us commit our way to Him, and roll our burden on Him, knowing that He careth for us.

What a blessed thing then, to believe that God is. Few practically believe it. Outside the truth there is a perfect dearth in this respect. With the exception of a few misguided orthodox people who have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge, the great mass of people around us are without faith of any sort. God is not in all their thoughts. Such as attend upon "public worship" do so because it is a "respectable" custom, to neglect which, is to incur social odium, and because it affords scope for display under the pleasing and self deceptive guise of sanctity. A great body of the people pay no regard whatever to religion in any shape, but serve the flesh out and out, without pretense of anything better.

It is to be feared that faith is a scarce article even amongst those who have embraced the truth. The sort of method by which we have to get at the truth in these days, is unfavorable to some extent, to the development of this kind of thing. It is a process of intellectual sifting, by which venerable fables are put to the test and rejected, and the truth ascertained in its theoretical features. The process is conducted in the face of opposition, and followed up by argumentative contention. The consequence is that the mind is liable to become so absorbed in the mere process of finding out what the truth is, as to fall short in the apprehension of the purpose for which it exists, and to fail in those moral developments in which alone it has its lasting and valuable fruit.

In this respect, there is great danger connected with the modern phase of apostolic truth. In its primitive phase, there was no need for the amount of argument and investigation which in our times are indispensable. A certain authoritative testimony was presented and confirmed by signs, and believers had but to receive it and at once surrender to the moral power connected with it. All they had to do was to believe the truth infallibly presented, and make use of that truth in the purification of the inner man in preparation for the Lord Jesus. We have to get at the same result by a different process. The process is a matter of indifference so as the result is secured. The danger is we may come short of the result. This ought to be an anxious point. Let us not devote all our time to mere intellectual exertion. Having attained the truth, let us realize the use of it in the formation of the character that Christ will approve.

One often sees lamentable cases in which interest in the truth is kept up so long as the excitement of polemic encounter is maintained, but disappears when that calm region is reached, in which the truth has to work out the fruits of righteousness and true holiness. Argument and contention for the faith are not worth the trouble if they are to end in the mere establishment of a theory. The object of all work in the truth is to develop real, loving, warm-hearted, intelligent, and consecrated disciples of Christ, who personally feel that they are not their own, but the property of Him who died that He might purchase a people with His own blood. Therefore, as Paul says, leaving the first principles, let us go on unto perfection, rising with increasing strength to the great fact that God is, and that He has all things in His hands, that He doeth according to His will in the earth as well as in the armies of heaven.

Give us a man or woman of this sort, with living faith based upon an intelligent understanding of the testimony—who have the faith of God in their hearts as the result of the truth comprehended—and you give us a man or woman that will act of their own accord in the things pertaining to the divine service. Having the light "within" themselves, they are not dependent on external stimulus. They will be found in the way of duty, because it is their duty so to be found, and not because it is pleasant. It may be unpleasant. It is oftener unpleasant than not, but the children of light are not children of pleasure. Finding themselves in a probationary state of evil, they accept their lot with that resignation which is the only attitude of wisdom, and bend their energies to that high calling of God in Christ Jesus, working out their salvation with fear and trembling. They will always present a contrast to the class who can only be brought to the meetings by special attractions, and get soon out of the way and tired, if they are not the objects of personal attention.

The latter class are to be met with at the interesting meetings, when there is a lot of people, and warmth, and music, and everything that is agreeable and pleasant in the surroundings. You look in vain for them when there is work to be done in the cold, with few people present, and no attraction. They have the truth as a theory: they have not realized the idea of being its servants. "They are not all Israel that are of Israel." Those only will be approved of Christ who are given up to him entirely—in whom he is the power and motive of their lives, and the highest object of their desires. The other classes are useful as scaffolding, which is useful to a building. Their presence contributes somewhat to that warmth which is favorable to the implanting of the seed in the minds of the good and honest-hearted. They are not altogether useless: only their usefulness, like that of a scaffolding, is limited to the preliminary stage. When the building is finished, they will be dispensed with.

Now we seek a higher place in the work of God than this. We labor to get beyond the mere scaffolding of the flesh period; we aim to become living stones in the glorious living temple, that will be reared in the earth when the Master Builder arrives. This is a destiny all-glorious. The community of the saints in the resurrection is a city of Life and Light most precious. It will consist of the very cream of the human race—men of excellent spirit—of divine knowledge—of tried faith—who in their several generations served God in the face of disadvantages, endured the trial for a long and wearying period of time. Abraham himself for an example, was tried more than a hundred years; Isaac and Jacob, likewise; Joseph lived 110 years; and so with most of the holy men of old. Faithful lifetimes did they all lay on the altar: and still their number is not complete.

At the eleventh hour of our own dispensation, the master is hiring servants. The existence of the word in our midst, is evidence of this. What infatuation to disregard or treat coolly the call. We may be of the number of that glorious company that will spring into being at "the manifestation of the sons of God;" but we must be like them. We must be men of faith, men of service—men of benevolent hearts; for those that are not of loving hearts are not of God; and men and women of good consciences, who would not do wrong to save their lives. Persevering in this line of character during our brief struggle with evil, realize the joy of being made one of a multitude of that description, whom no man can number, and whose former ills and frailties are all swallowed up in the glorious and deathless nature of the spirit in which there is no more sorrow or sighing. Look at that multitude, filled with everlasting joy; think that the Lamb dwells in the midst of them and shall feed them—the central sun that lighteneth every man of them that entereth that bright world. Behold them come to Zion and plant themselves in the seat of honor and power. Consider that they constitute the ruling brotherhood of the world, in whose righteous hands all the property and the power and the law, and the honor and glory of the world will be vested, for the promotion of glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and good will to men!

Is a place in that illustrious body not worth any trial? What infatuated creatures those men and women must be, who, having put their hands to the plough, look back, and allow their hearts to be taken and their hands weakened by the ephemeral interests of this life, which, at its best, supposing we could do all that we wished are "vanity," ending ultimately in the grave. How perfectly suicidal for those who have such a glorious destiny before them, to slacken their hands and become lukewarm in relation to the duties they owe to their Lord and Master. Let us beware. The bright side is pleasant to contemplate, but we must accept its dark side in present duty and reproach. We must carry the cross if we mean to wear the crown.

R. R.

DOING THE HARDEST THING FIRST.

I know a very successful man who early in life resolved that, no matter how hard anything might be, or how seemingly impossible for him to do, he would do it if the doing would prove of value to him. He made this the test, and would never allow his moods or feelings to stand in the way of his judgment. He forced himself into a habit of promptly doing everything, no matter how disagreeable, if it would further his advancement.

If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one.

Things worth while are seldom easy.

Apology is only egotism wrong side out.

It may not be "the best," but if it is "my best" it will be heaven blest.

Leibnitz says: "Who loves God loves all men."

THE RESTITUTION

Issued weekly by
THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....EDITOR
BUELL W. NUTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 1023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the expression of particular views in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 2, 1911.

EDITORIAL

SMILE IT DOWN.

Every one who loves you,
Loves to see you smile,
Loves to see you cheerful
And happy all the while.
Smiling comes so easy!
Do not wear a frown.
If you feel one rising,
Always smile it down.

The Greater Actions Committee of Zionism has met in Cologne and arranged for the proceedings of the Tenth Congress.

A wealthy Jewess of Russia has bequeathed 10,000 marks to the Jewish National Fund.

The Restitution Publishing Co. has been duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio, and at the stockholders' meeting held last week the following officers were elected: Burton H. Lang, president; Chas. A. Goss, vice-president; Buell W. Nutt, secretary and business manager; Harry Pott, treasurer; and Robt. G. Huggins, editor. The board of directors elected were: Chas. A. Goss, D. C. Robison, Harry Pott, B. H. Long, Wm. G. Rothe, Buell W. Nutt, and W. S. Tomlinson.

Above worthy brethren will hold office until the regular annual election, which will take place the second Tuesday in January, as provided in the constitution and by-laws of the company.

During the summer our ministers will be discouraged frequently by seeing some in their audience go to sleep while they are doing their best to interest them. Eutychus fell into a "deep sleep" while the peerless apostle preached. Acts 20:9. Don't get discouraged; sleepy people would not stay awake to hear Paul.

New Songs of the Kingdom, a song book of 137 pages just off the press, is by far the best song book we know of. The publisher, Chas. F. Crow, of St. Paul, Nebr., offers them for sale at 25 cents each, with the understanding that he will replace any copy found to be imperfect in binding or otherwise. It is a book of neat appearance, and full of splendid songs. We are glad to commend it highly.

In this issue appears the program of the Ohio Conference. We always have good annual meetings, and this year we anticipate the "best ever." Bro. Adams, of Nebraska, the noted doctrinal expounder, will be with us, the Lord willing. Brethren and sisters, we need your presence and help. Come and the Lord will pour upon you his blessing.

July 24th more than five thousand buildings were destroyed by an incendiary fire in the Stamboul of Constantinople. Chefket Pasha was injured while trying to save the ministry of war building. The fire department is equipped with antiquated apparatus which was ludicrously inadequate to cope with the flames. Turkey is fast going to pieces.

The world may be divided into two classes—those who lift and those who lean. The church has on the roll of its membership both lifters and leaners. We are glad to think, however, that the lifters are much in the majority in the Church of God. Our Business Manager reports many new subscribers to The Restitution, and renewals by others. Brethren everywhere are standing loyally by the "dear old paper." The Lord bless them. Gal. 1:25. If this editorial is read by a leaner we ask you, Brother, to wake up and join the army of devoted disciples who are holding up the flag of truth in America. Become a lifter in the cause of truth.

Notice the good program of the Iowa Conference, which appears in this issue. Let all within reach begin right now to plan on attending.

Bro. J. J. Nagel, of Davenport, Iowa, sends an amusing clip from Leaves of Healing; and many brethren have sent us good copy this week. Thanks to one and all.

The Restitution now is good as any tract in the missionary field. We have a few extras every issue—to supply brethren who are active in spreading and advancing the truth among their friends. Send a stamp to the manager for a dozen of extras.

A JEWISH COLONY IS PLANNED

One thousand acres of land at Mount Canaan, Palestine, may be purchased by the American Zionists, and given free in the Jewish National Fund Committee, as a result of a movement started at a meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., under the auspices of the Jehudah Halevi Gate No. 8, order of Knights of Zion, at the Hebrew institute, says the Cleveland Leader of July 27th.

Henry Cidelmen, secretary of the Jehudah Halevi Gate was instructed to communicate with other Zionic organizations and to organize the federation of American Zionists to open a subscription list for that purpose.

As soon as the land is secured houses will be erected for the working men of Palestine and schools and libraries will be established.

DEFENDING THE MINISTER AND EDITOR.

All ministers of the gospel, sooner or later, are assailed by criticisms, insults and lies. Any minister who is faithful in the discharge of the duties of his holy calling is sure to make enemies. Woe unto him if all men speak well of him! Lk. 6:26. And an editor is hated worse than even the minister.

"Now the minister may not take up arms in his own defense," says an exchange. "After the fashion of the world. Of the criticisms he is usually ignorant in toto. Of the calumnies, quite as ignoram. To the insults he must not reply, but must turn the other cheek to the smiter. Of the opposition he may be keenly aware, but often it would be a weakness or a mistake even to recognize it. In all this the minister is under no rule of conduct different from the obligations of all other Christians, save that his holy office requires him to be an example to all men of his Saviour's precepts and practise.

But church-members are strangely forgetful of this. They see their minister insulted. If it were their own case, they would be quick with a hot word or even a fierce blow. In their hearts they charge their minister with a lack of manliness, when his lips are patiently sealed, and his hands held heroically at his side. They do not bethink themselves how quickly they would criticise him if he yielded to any of these natural impulses to retaliation.

If the honor of the President of the United States were assailed, no one would expect him to defend it in person, for his officials, his party, indeed every American patriot, would eagerly defend it for him.

Speak slightingly, in the presence of a commercial traveler, of the head of his firm, and see how prompt and indignant will be his retort! Disparage, before a college student, the president of his college, if you dare. Insult the colonel of a regiment when his soldiers are at hand, if you wish to learn how speedily a private can enter battle!

Now ought not equal loyalty to characterize the relation of Church and pastor? Is not a wrong done to our minister done also to us? Shall we not, with quick and gallant boldness, leap to his defence?

Considered from a lower standpoint, it is a simple matter of business. Here is a man whom we are paying to do a certain work for the church. The work will not succeed, and our money will be wasted, unless he has the confidence and support of the church. To allow his influence to be undermined is to permit our own investment to depreciate.

Perhaps he is unsuited to the place; perhaps it may be best for him to find another church; that has nothing to do with the matter. He is your minister; and while he is your minister, it is your 3—140R—Restitution—Thomas July 31 duty to defend him from all injustice, and stoutly make his cause your very own."

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere.

DEATH NOT GENERALLY PAINFUL.—When the blood ceases to be oxygenated, the physical sensibility is destroyed, and the oxygenation of the blood becomes accomplished by the lungs; if these organs are obstructed, a proportionate privation of sensibility will necessarily be the result. The lungs are the weakest of all the great vital organs; they accordingly begin to die sooner than the other parts, and their function is actually suspended before that of other organs. Thence it follows that the oxygenation of the blood being gradually suspended, death ensues, and there can be no suffering. These theoretical notions are, I believe, supported by facts. So far as my experience goes, if a dying man be asked whether he suffers pain, he will, in the greater number of instances, answer in the negative; yet there may be at the same time a frightful appearance of distress. My opinion, therefore, founded on a great number of observations of the character above mentioned is, that death is not generally painful, and that nature, "like a kind mother" while she surrounds its idea with imaginary terrors, has contrived the animal organization in such a way as to produce a natural anodyne in depriving the blood of oxygen. There will be found, no doubt, exceptions in chronic diseases already alluded to arising from physical causes, and there will be another class of exceptions of a different nature from moral causes, such as the recollections of a bad life.

WHAT THE FACE TELLS.—Sometimes in passing through a crowd we see a face which attracts us by its sweetness of expression. Perhaps it is an old face, crowned with a glory of hoary hairs; yet love, joy and peace shine out of every dot and wrinkle in it. Sometimes it is a young face, that beams with health and purity and beauty. But whether old or young, when we see that unmistakable soul-light in a face we know that the heart behind it is pure, the life good, and that the body thus illuminated is the temple of the Holy Spirit.

To keep the mind occupied with good, pure, useful, beautiful and divine thoughts precludes the possibility of thinking about, and thus being tempted by things sinful, low or gross. It is because Paul knew this that he says so earnestly, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things."

In the well-formed habit of thinking pure thoughts lies the secret of being pure in heart; and in the daily and nightly meditation in the law of the Lord, is a safeguard against many of the sins which defile the carnal heart, and delase and blacken the contenance.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Here is a new subscriber, John Baxter, of Holbrook, Neb.

Just closed a meeting at Freedom. We had one of the best meetings for years. Some came from Bartley, thirteen miles away. There were three additions. The brethren from Moorefield and some from North Star met us at Stockville, all having well filled baskets, and after spreading their cloths under the fine shade trees on the bank of the Medicine and partaking of a bounteous repart, we all repaired to the water's edge, where we sang and prayed and talked of the future. We planted Miss Lula Pickering in Christ, and her mother, Mrs. Johnson, and also Mrs. Louis. Last night we spoke in the Advent ten at Holbrook by invitation, to a very good sized audience.

Yours in the one hope,
ALMUS ADAMS.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I am pleased with your noble undertaking as expressed in the July 12th issue. May God bless you. I feel that I have done so little. In the language of another, partly revised,

Do you see the signal, brothers,
Of the royal gospel train (The Restitution?)
With a score of heavenly pillars (1 Tim. 3:13-15; 2 Tim. 2:12).
Making sure of Jesus' reign? (Isa. 32:1; Rev. 5:9, 10).
Should you let it pass your station? (Heb. 3:7, 15).
You will then be found too late (Lk. 13:26-29);
For the care should all be taken (Lk. 13:24).
Ere we reach the Heavenly gate (2 Tim. 4:1-8; Rev. 2:10).

P. S.—Since writing the foregoing The Restitution of July 19th has arrived with a golden sign of its windows being open towards Jerusalem. As Bro. Juergenser intimates, you have assumed an all important office in the Church of the living God. And now, brothers and sisters, don't wait one for another, but come to your brother's aid, and be assured that Rom. 8:28 will be the result.

For the Church of God upon the sod
A living witness stands,
Proclaiming truth to age and youth
Throughout this sin-cursed land.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Bear, Ark.

Dear Bro. Huggins: A short time ago I thought my work was about done. I have been suffering with diarrhoea for several months, but paid but little attention to it until the first thing I knew I was almost a walking skeleton. I knew I ought to be quiet and doctor myself, but I would just keep going as long as I could. On the third day of July I gave it up and remained in my room and on my bed, and called the best medical skill I could get, and he put me on a treatment and would not allow me to eat anything but raw eggs and sweet milk. I soon began to improve until now, thank God, I am able to be out again. I feared I had consumption of the bowels as the discharges were thin and very watery and without pain, but I am sure now that such is not the case and believe that I will finally get well.

I am well pleased with The Restitution. You have wonderfully improved it since you have taken charge. I sympathize with Bro. Underwood as I have had some experience along the same line. I have had people to claim that they did not get The Trumpet when I knew they had paid for it, and their names were on the subscription list and the paper was mailed to them regularly. I wish you could come to our conference which meets the third day of August near Brent, Okla. Here is my hand of fellowship, my brother, to push the cause and work together in harmony. God bless you and help you in every good word and work. Pray for me. Your Brother in Him.

T. J. DANIEL.

(We rejoice with you, dear brother Daniel, in the prospect of your recovery. Workers are so few in the Vineyard of the Lord that we can ill afford to spare a helper, and such an efficient helper as you. We gladly grasp the extended hand of fellowship which you offer, with thanks for your words of commendation of our humble efforts to edit The Restitution. There will be no disputes in its pages. God give us love, joy, peace, and all the fruits of the spirit in great abundance, to the glory of His great name. Brethren everywhere, pray for Bro. Daniel. —Editor.)

ARE MISSIONARIES NEEDED?

A young woman, well known to the writer, about 26 years of age, a member of one of the great orthodox churches, and a regular attendant at the Bible class, interested enough in Bible themes to attend a "Lecture on the Bible," in attempting to spread the knowledge gained to a group of friends—one of which was the writer—said, among other things, that the first book of the Bible was "Geneva, that the Bible which was written in the tenth century, was a history of the birth and early life of Jesus Christ, and that the birth of Jesus was the cause of the flood."

In the face of such utter and woeful ignorance, is it necessary for the Church of God to send out missionaries to instruct and enlighten the so-called Christians of today in the things pertaining to their external salvation, to be found only in God's eternal word, that endureth and abideth forever? Answer for yourselves, brethren.

ALEX. D. DONALDSON.
Brooklyn, New York.

THE DAY OF CRUCIFIXION.

We admit that the preparation did not fall on Wednesday nor on Thursday, but it did fall on Friday. Now for the proof.

The next day following the preparation day, the priests and pharisees came to ask Pilate for a guard. The day following the preparation day was the Sabbath, or Saturday. Now if the day following the preparation day was Saturday, then of course the preparation day was on Friday.

This is in harmony with what John says (19-14-31-42). Prof. Totten says that the month of Nisan began on Friday the year of the crucifixion. Now commence on Friday and count fifteen days, and you strike another Friday, the day the passover was to be eaten, and the very day on the evening of which Jesus was crucified.

"But," says one, "how do you get three days and three nights between late Friday evening and early Sunday morning. We give it up; we can't do it. But how will you get three days and three nights, between late Thursday evening and early Sunday morning? How. You may count backward or forward, up or down, and you can't do it. Here we rest by saying to the brethren: Hold fast to the form of sound words.

SAML. McGLATHLAN.
Savannah, Mo.

GOLD DUST.

"The trials and temptations of this life are all making us fit for the life to come—building up a character for eternity."

"We can all be servants of God wherever our lot is cast, but He gives us different sorts of work according as He fits us for it and calls us to it."

"There are two freedoms—the false, where a man is free to do what he likes; and the true, where a man is free to do what he ought."

"Practice to make God your last thought at night when you lie down to sleep and your first thought in the morning when you awake."

"The great thought which should control our actions and adjust our relations to every question of morals is presented in this verse—'Be ye therefore imitators of God as beloved children.'"

ANNA DREW.
Dixon, Ill.

WILL YOU BE ONE OF TWO?

I ask will you be one of two,
If I the other one will be,
To search out some good work to do,
Then do it well and cheerfully?

Will you be one of two to strive
To make this world of ours more sweet,
To help the buds and flowers to thrive,
And fill with beauty every street?

Will you be one of two to seek
To do some little good each day;
To some sad soul a kind word speak,
Or help some traveler on life's way?

Will you be one of two to lend
Whate'er in you is brave and strong
That there may be some day an end
To whate'er is base and wrong?

Will you be one of two to nerve
Yourself in every post and place
Earth's mighty brotherhood to serve
And thereby bless the human race?

If thus we shall resolve to do
Ere yet to-day shall set the sun,
No more will each be one of two,
For then shall we become as one.

—T. F. P.

RESPONSE.

Already, friend, I'm making guest
Altho' so prisoned, pained and lame
I cannot give a thirsty guest
One water-cup in Jesus' name.

I'm training friend, my only flower
To fit the world-wide garland sweet
Of other growth's whose gathered power
May sometime deck earth's every street.

This very day I'm one of two—
Though all unheld by bond or brief—
To bring the best that I can do
To dull the edge of some one's grief.

I, "poorest in Manasseh's" land,
I, "least of all my father's" kin,
Would gladly lift my strengthless hand
To help to right the wrongs of sin.

I'm one of two to recognize
In fifteen hundred million strong
"One blood," to which, as in us lies,
Our life and love and care belong.

But who may dare so mighty task?
Who break indeed his own poor heart?
Who give the peace the guilty ask?
Who speak the "come" and who "depart?"

O you and I without the vow,
Are one in motive just the same
As God and Jesus Christ are now,
The while we plead the mighty name.

But not 'till Israel welcomes back
To Zion's hill her absent king,
Will Heaven supply this old earth's lack
And everlasting victory bring.
Aye, by and by the desert drear
Will bud and blossom as the rose,
When on Satanic tenure here
Jehovah—shammah shall foreclose.

LUCY C. ALDEN.

NOTE.

T. F. P. is T. F. Porter, ex-mayor of Lynn, Mass. His poem, "Will You Be One of Two?" was sent to Sister Lucy C. Alden, by a friend to be answered, and her beautiful "Response" was the result. Shall be pleased to see the poems in The Restitution as I very much admire them with their ringing, earnest call to be about the Master's business. Truly we need no "bond" or "brief" or "vow" to set us at His work save the "bonds," the "briefs," the "vows," set forth in Holy Writ.

S. ROXANA WINCE.
Pierceton, Ind.

THE POWER OF EXAMPLE.

We are influenced largely in our daily life by the power of example. The child imitates its parent sometimes for good, often for evil, and man imitates man. "No man liveth to himself," and our conduct, our character, our daily actions are telling their tale and producing their effect upon some life, for good or for evil—to bless or to blast it, perhaps for ever. How this thought, this knowledge, should lead us to exercise the utmost care in our daily life, and cause us to "exercise ourselves into Godliness;" help to make us patient, truthful, sober, honest, unselfish and forbearing toward each other and towards all men.

The children watch us, our brethren and sisters watch us, our neighbors watch us. There are eyes upon us that we know not of. Above all, a record is being kept in heaven; for the All-seeing One reads us through and through, and there is not a moment in our lives but what he can say, "I know thy works"; and remembers—he will reward every man according as his work shall be.

I think Paul is a good example for us to follow. Though self-described in his humility as "the least of the apostles" and not "meet to be called an apostle," because he "persecuted the church of God,"—yet could truthfully declare that he, by the grace of God, laboured more abundantly than" all the others who had had the privilege of intimate association with their Lord.

Truly Paul was an earnest, persevering enthusiastic follower of Jesus: his words, his epistles, ever do us good. There is the right ring about all his writings. If every brother and sister obeyed his exhortations, what a change there would be for the better. What holiness of life would be manifested, what brotherly love, what mutual forbearance, what unity and peace, what zeal for the honour of God and the glory of Christ, what longing for the appearance of him who is our life!

Paul's life was full of trial, and yet how nobly borne! If some modern writer had more of the details of his life than we now possess, what a thrilling interesting book would be given to the world! We have enough, however, to know how busy, and earnest, how untiring, and unselfish was his life and his labours. We know about his labours more abundant, his stripes above measure, his more frequent imprisonments than other apostles, and of his frequent nearness—through violence—to death. Yet how cheerful was he under all the burden that pressed upon him. The "God of all comfort" comforted him in all his tribulations, and, he said—writing to the brethren at Corinth—"As the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ (II Cor. 1:3-5). Again writing to the brethren at Philippi, he said, "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: in everything and in all things have I learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want. I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me. Phil. 4:11-13.

What a lesson to learn when we remember his life! Would that we all "had learned the secret," too! How his contentment in the midst of trial, shames those of us who are never satisfied in the midst of plenty and comfort, and the absence of all trial such as he endursd! The lesson he learned—for remember he had to learn it—we can learn also.

It is a matter of practice or exercise, if we do not exerise ourselves unto Godliness we will not be Godly.

We must train ourself to do this, and not to do that, if we come up to the standard of Paul, or the more perfect life of Christ. It often means self-denial, but if we would "enter into life" we must be prepared to take up the cross and endure any hardship that lies in our way.

We are also told to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ" (Gal. 6:1, 2). Are we thus trying to fulfill Christ's law, the new law he gave to his disciples to love one another? God knoweth our motives, and our actions are all before him. In no matter is he to be deceived. "God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. He that soweth unto his own flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth unto the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap Eternal life."

Here then is our encouragement to do the right in all things and at all times. It is a most desirable thing to obtain, but we must sow to the Spirit to obtain it. It means freedom from all the ills to which we are now subject, and from all the sorrow which presses upon us.

Eternal Life! who does not desire it? There is not one here who would not give all he possesses for such life, but it can be had freely, without money and without price, only we must sow to the Spirit, if we would live in the Spirit nature forever.

Now for this let us each strive. Let us not cast away our confidence but persevere unto the end, for the reward is a large way ahead. "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

EMMA C. BRADSHAW.

Cleveland, Ohio.

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

Are the spirits in prison immortal? No. Were the spirits that Noah preached to when he was building the ark immortal? No.

If there are any immortal spirits they do not need to be preached to. Then why all this ado about preaching to spirits in prison? Does not every preacher that preaches the gospel to an unconverted man, preach to a spirit in prison? Certainly they do. Proofs: "Thus said God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles. To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." Isa. 42: 5-7. Who was this in prison and in darkness? The Gentiles. Who preached to the Gentiles? Peter and Paul. "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light." Isa. 9:2, Matt. 4:16, Eph. 5:8. "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." Isa. 61:1,60:2-3, Luke 4:18-19. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." 1st Pet. 2:9. "They were in darkness, until the gospel light was preached unto them." Acts 26:18, Luke 1:79, 2d Cor. 4:3 to 6, 1st Thess. 5:5. "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." Col. 1:13. In darkness, in prison, brought out into the light by preaching the gospel of the kingdom. "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Gal. 5:1. Don't go back into prison, or bondage again, when the preaching of the gospel has made you free. "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." John 8:32-36, Rom. 6:16 to 23.

Peter on the day of Pentecost preached to spirits in prison, and about 3,000 came out into the glorious light of the gospel. "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John 8:12, 12:35, 36. "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light." Rom. 13:12.

How can one put on the armour of light? "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent?" Rom. 10: 13, 14. Who were they sent to? Christ sent the twelve apostles to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Matt. 10:6. Paul was sent to the Gentiles. What did they preach? The kingdom of heaven is at hand. To preach deliverance to the captives: the acceptable year of the Lord (Luke 4:18); Jesus Christ. Paul says, Christ sent me to preach the gospel. Who to? The heathen, the gentiles:—those that are lost if they know not God's gift. The object is to convert sinners, those that are in darkness, in bondage to sin, and the sinful ways of the world. People do not have to be shut up in a dungeon, penitentiary, or any barred prison, to be away from God's Holy word, which is preached in very few places. But they are in a prison of gross darkness when they sit in a fashionable church and listen to a salaried preacher that is not teaching God's Holy truth. Christ says of such: "Their heart is far from me:" "in vain do they worship me." Matt. 15:9. They are still in prison; and if saved they must accept God's plan of salvation; repent, believe the gospel of Christ, and be baptized into Christ, and thus become an heir with Christ to the promises that God made to Abraham and his seed.

"For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him," which is his mind, and that is subject to many changes. We read of the spirit of jealousy, Num. 5:14, which got the Israelite into trouble, and they had a law to punish it. That spirit is very prominent today, even in the Church of God. Then there is the spirit of Antichrist, of Bondage, of Divination, of error, of wickedness in many forms; all must be got rid of, before one can possess the spirit of adoption, of meekness, of Christ. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

We think from the many divisions in the Church of God today, and the effort of some to suppress the truth, and publish error in its place, that there are many contentious spirits, that need to be preached to, before they can show forth the true spirit of meekness, love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith, and temperance; and when a right spirit is created in man, it will be the spirit of Christ, "of brotherly love." The Spirit of Prophecy said there should come a falling away from the faith. The question today is when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth? Luke 18:8. Let us pray with the psalmist, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

E. W. KNAPP.

Monkland, Calif.

THE VALUE OF GOOD ENGLISH TO A PUBLIC SPEAKER.

It is a fact that clothing plays a conspicuous part in a public speaker's address; and by clothing we do not necessarily mean a speaker's personal apparel, but rather the garments in which his thoughts are clad. Thoughts must be clothed with words, and grammar is a fashion-book with which public speakers should be familiar.

All who speak the English language have not mastered its grammar; but there are important reasons why good English is of inestimable value to him who would stand before an audience to proclaim a message.

1. It will help to give him confidence. Whoever may be present, a speaker who has mastered the language which he uses does not need to be in a constant state of alarm lest his lack of education be betrayed by his grammatical blunders. He will be better able to put all his strength into his message.

2. It will help him to state his position with clearness. The people will understand him, providing, of course, he uses words with the meaning of which his hearers are familiar. A man may have logical ideas and truth unmixed with error, and yet be unable to express himself to the best advantage, because of his poor English.

3. It will add to the likelihood of his message being accepted. It may be said that water will quench if brought to us in an old tin cup as well as it would if brought in something better, but people are not always thirsting for what a speaker has to give. They may be prejudiced. They may not want the truth. And what we say may be discounted if our thoughts are presented in ill-becoming garments. It was Paul who said, "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." Gipsy Smith, the great evangelist, did not have the advantages in early life that most of us have had, but he acquired a good practical knowledge of the English language.

AN EXERCISE IN ENGLISH.

The conviction of such as you and me are that Peter's reply to the question: "Whom say ye that I am?" was one of the best confessions of faith that has been recorded. Had the question been asked for you and I to answer we could not have did better than Peter done. Neither John the Baptist or Elias were divine, but one don't have to read far in the Gospels to be convinced that Jesus was "the Christ, the Son of the living God."

In the above paragraph there are ten mistakes in grammar, indicated by the words in italics. Let us correct these mistakes.

1. The personal pronouns "you and me" should be "you and I." They are the subject of a subordinate clause and must therefore be in the nominative case.

2. The verb "are" should be "is" to agree with the subject, "conviction."

3. The pronoun "Whom" should be "Who" (Matt. 16:15, R. V.). It must be in the same case as the pronoun "I" (nominative). We could reconstruct the sentence thus: "Say ye that I am who?"

4. The auxiliary verb "has" should be "have" to agree in number with the subject "confessions."

5. The pronouns "you and I" should be "you and me" as they are governed by the preposition "for" and must therefore be in the objective case.

6. The verb "did" should be "done" (Past participle).

7. The verb "done" should be "did" (Past tense).

8. The conjunction "or" should be "nor." "Neither" and "nor" are proper correlatives.

9. The verb "were" should be "was." It is a rule in syntax that "nouns in the singular joined by or or nor require a verb in the singular."

10. "Don't" should be "does not" or "doesn't." "Don't" is a conjunction of "do not;" but we would not say "one do not."

L. G. CARTER.

BEER VERSUS TEA.

"Bob Burdette" never says a dull thing, and his unique way of stating an old truth makes it shine with a new light. Even a subject as well worn as the temperance cause takes on a new sparkle when "Bob"—excuse us, the "Rev." Dr. Robert J. Burdette—tackles it. Here he pays his compliments to beer.

"My dear boy, men have fought, bled and died, but not for beer.

"Arnold Winkelried did not throw himself upon the Austrian spears because he was ordered to close his saloon at nine o'clock.

"William Tell did not hide his arrow under his vest to kill the tyrant because the edict had gone forth that the free-born Switzer should not drink a keg of beer every Sunday.

"Freedom did not shriek as Kosciusko fell over a whiskey barrel.

"Warren did not die that beer might flow as the brooks murmur seven days a week.

"Even the battle of Brandywine was not fought that whiskey might be free.

"No clause in the Declaration of Independence declares that a Sunday-concert garden, with five brass horns and one hundred kegs of beer, is the inalienable right of a free people and the cornerstone of good government.

"Tea—mild, harmless, innocent tea, the much-sneered at temperance beverage, the feeble drink of effeminate men and good old women—tea holds a higher place, it fills a brighter, more glorious page, and is a grander figure in the history of the United States, than beer.

"Men liked tea, my boy, but they hurled it into the sea in the name of liberty, and they died rather than drink it until they made it free. It seems to be worth fighting for, and the best men in the world fought for it.

"The history of the United States is incomplete with tea left out. As well might the historian omit Faneuil Hall and Bunker Hill as tea. But there is no story of heroism or patriotism with rum for its hero.

"The battles of this world, my son, have been fought for grander things than free whiskey. The heroes who fall in the struggle for rum fall shot in the neck, and their martyrdom is clouded by the haunting phantoms of the jimjams.

"Whiskey makes men fight, it is true, but they usually fight other drunken men. The champion of beer does not stand in the temple of fame; he stands in the police court. Honor never has the delirium tremens. Glory does not wear a red nose, and Fame blows a horn but never takes one."—Ex.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1899. She was the wife of our lamented brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a low-er rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

OHIO CONFEPENCE NOTICE.

The ninth annual conference of the Church of God will be held at Troy, Ohio, August 16-20. Those coming should write Brother Jno. Lehman, Troy, Ohio, R. 5. Come in the spirit of love that we may be built up and strengthened in our most holy faith.

ANNA LEHMAN.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska will be held in Merrefield, Nebraska, from August 26 to September 3, inclusive. Meals will be furnished at 10c, and lodging free.

Now brethren, let us all make a special effort to be there and help make the conference a success. Especially to the aged ones and the young people do we say, Come. Do not miss the chance of getting into the spirit of the work and understanding what is needed. This is the time when we can get in touch with one another and learn to love each other if we come in the right spirit. Remember the conference should be in the interest of Christ and His work, not our desires.

Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio, Editor of The Restitution, has been secured as speaker. The most of us got acquainted with him last year, and will enjoy his second visit. The young people know him through the Berean lessons. We expect to have a "Berean Day" to be given over the young people. Let all be on hand to take part. If further information is wanted, write Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebraska.

ALTA KING,
Sec'y of Conference Board.

"Failure is not the worst thing in the world; the worst thing is not to try."

Men give me credit for genius. All the genius I have lies just in this: When I have a subject in hand, I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explore it in all its bearings. My mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make, the people are pleased to call the fruit of genius. It is the fruit of labor and thought.—Alexander Hamilton.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than a great display of talents and accomplishments.—M. A. Kelly.

What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?—George Eliot.

No conflict—no character.
Without strife, a weak life.

LINCOLN'S GREAT WORDS.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive to finish the work we have begun.—Abraham Lincoln.

OHIO CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

August 16th.

7:30 p. m. Music and Prayer, Address of welcome, John Lehman. Response, C. A. Goss. President's address, "Touching Elbows."

Thursday, August 17th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible School, R. G. Huggins.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, Sister Neill.
1:30 to 1:45 p.m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:45 p. m. Bible School, W. S. Tomlinson.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, Sister Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, W. S. Westfall
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Friday, August 18th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school, D. C. Robison.
10:00 to 10:15 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 12:00 a. m. Sisters' meeting.
1:15 to 1:30 p. m. Song service.
1:30 to 2:30 p. m. Bible school, Almus Adams.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Question box.
7:00 to 7:30 Social meetings, Howard Pearson.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.

Saturday, August 19th.

NINE—110-R—Hemmeter July 31 ...
8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song service and prayer, Sr. Brewer.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school C. A. Goss.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, J. F. Wagoner.
11:00 to 12:00 Young people's meeting.
1:30 to 1:45 p. m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:30 Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
2:30 to 3:15 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:15 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, David Beck.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Sunday, August 20th.

9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Table service, J. F. Wagoner. Social meeting, Ashford Lehman.
10:00 to 10:45 a.m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Song service, Stanley Sanford.
2:30 to 3:15 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Sermon, W. C. Heacock.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, Hattie Sanford.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins. Farwells.

D. C. ROBISON,
W. C. HEACOCK,
H. A. LEHMAN,
Committee.

PROGRAM OF IOWA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus.
GREETING:

The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at the camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, commencing August 19th, and continuing over Sunday, August 27th, 1911. Come and invite your neighbors and friends to come and enjoy a ten days' vacation at our camp ground in the Cedar River Park.

On arriving at Waterloo, if the conference baggageman is there, give him your baggage checks. If he is not there, bring your checks to the camp ground. Our baggageman will have a badge on his hat reading "Conference Baggageman." Give checks to no other.

Take street car for Electric Park and get off at the camp ground.

Tents will be furnished free to all. Bring a few comforters with you if you care to do so.

Board at dining hall ten cents per meal.

Bedding can be rented for entire ten days as follows: Comforters 25 cents, blankets 25 cents.

Daily Program.

6:00 a. m. Rising bell,
6:45 a. m. Morning Devotion,
7:00 a. m. Breakfast,
8:00 a. m. Children's Hour,
9:00 a. m. Business,
10:30 a. m. Discourse, or Bible Reading and Discussion,
12:00 m. Dinner,
2:30 p. m. Discourse,
4:00 p. m. Questions and answers. —free for all,
6:00 p. m. Supper.
7:00 p. m. Song Service and Social Meeting, or Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Discourse.

SERVICE PROGRAM.

Saturday, August 19, 1911.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting of Conference Board. Appointment of Committees, etc.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, John Garton.
7:00 p. m. Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick of Minnesota.

Sunday, August 20, 1911.

9:00 a. m. Sunday School. Conducted by State S. S. Supt.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams of Indiana.

Monday, August 21st.

9:00 a. m. Children's Hour, Conducted by Mrs. Eva Stearns.
9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson, Conducted by A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh of Illinois.

Tuesday, August 22.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson, Joseph Williams.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Wednesday, August 23rd, "Berean" or Young People's Day.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting,
10:45 a. m. Sermon G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Program.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.

Thursday, August 24th.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Friday, August 25th.

9:00 a. m. Question Box and Our Needs.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson, Joseph Williams.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.

Saturday, August 26th.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Sunday, August 27th.

9:00 a. m. Sunday School, Conducted by S. S. Supt.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh.
3:30 p. m. Baptisms.
4:30 p. m. Communion.
7:00 p. m. Prayer and Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams.

The foregoing program will be adhered to as closely as possible. There may, of course, be some changes.

Postoffice box No. 362 has been rented for the use of all parties attending the conference. Have your mail addressed to you at Waterloo, Iowa, care of Lock Box No. 362.

Kindly preserve this program and attend the conference if possible.

O. J. ALLARD.

PAUL'S "ONE THING."

What are we to understand by the Apostle's declaration—"This one thing I do"? Out of the hundred things that had a bearing on that marvelous life, what was the "one thing" which was the paramount aim, the purpose that mounted to a holy and consuming passion? It is expressed in the words "I press toward the mark." There are other involved conditions and subsidiary activities, but rising above all these like giant peaks above the foot-hills, is the great truth and experience, "This one thing I do . . . I press toward the mark."

The setting of the passage shows Paul's lofty conception of Christian life, and his deep and growing love for his Master. He counts all earthly gain as loss that he may win Christ. He did not enter the early church as some enter the church of our time, as if they were conferring a high honor on the church by their coming, and upon Christ as well. Paul was a million miles from that experience. He had such an exalted vision of Christ's glory and of his attractiveness that he seems truly to have fallen in love with him. So real is the splendid vision that he gladly puts himself in self abasement that he may see in clearer and truer perspective the glory there is in Christ.—F. L. Piper.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHARE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date _____

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for ____ Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-assessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25 % in 3 months, 25 % in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to RUELL W. NUTT
803 Parkwood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed _____

Address _____
street and number

_____
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 29,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Resurrection Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Future Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 36 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Trents of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Ord r from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8-page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of our brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

Subscribe for the

Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

BOYS and GIRLS

Do You Want to Make Some Pocket Money?

It's easy; just drop a postal to the manager of THE RESTITUTION, and he will tell you all about it. Do it now before you forget it. : : : : :

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of high grade prescription work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

THE STRONG, KENNARD & NUTT CO. 898 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later. SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord. G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

SAMPLE COPIES

of

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp.

Send for Some.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Evening Designs to each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c. a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—never higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution
is the Official Organ of the Church of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace, and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31.)

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 9, 1911 No. 30

A MEMORIAL FOR "MY BETTER HALF."

PHIL. 2:3.

Nineteen years ago today, love (Song of Sol. 8, 4),
You became my happy bride (1 Cor. 7, 39; 1 Tim. 5:14),
Gave a good name for my honor (Prov. 22, 1; 2 Cor. 6, 11),
While standing by my side (M'a. 18 16),
And the gracious Lord has blessed you (Gen. 33, 5, 11).
Now with children to cherish (Psa. 127, 1-3; 1 Tim. 5, 14);
Eleven in all, a sacred number (Acts 2 11),
With no traitor to abide (Luke 6, 16),
And we thought that we'd be happy (1 Tim. 2, 8, 9),
But O! it was so short and sweet (Songs of Sol. 6):
Only a fortaste of that country (Heb. 11, 16; Rev. 21, 2),
Where our rest shall be complete (Heb. 13, 14; 1 John 3, 2),
Or before the race was ended (1 Cor. 9, 24-27; Heb. 12, 1-11, 22-28),
Two of noble mien and birth (David and Daniel)
Our stay in life were made to travel (Zach. 23, 14)
In the way of all the earth (1 Kings 2, 2).
O! to God be all the glory (Rom. 5, 3, 17; Rev. 14, 7)
And to us be all the grace (Rom. 5, 17; Heb. 12, 3-11);
For we must be pure and holy (Matt. 5, 8; 2 Cor. 7, 1)
If we ever see His face (Eph. 5, 5; Heb. 12, 14)

R. A. HEMMINGSEN.

Bear, Ark.

THE RICH AND THE POOR.

The rich man has his gold and land,
But then with Christ how does he stand?
He cannot take his wealth beyond
The present life of which he's fond.

Then how has he used his great store?
Has he turned the poor from his door?
And left the sick ones to their fate?
At the great day (will be too late.

To use those talents God has given
Then surely comes the wrath of heaven,
"Depart from Me I know you not";
Christ says that is to be their lot.

To those in Christ then he will say,
"Come, enter in the deathless way;
Your poverty will be no more,
For all the world you'll have in store.

"And countless ages will be thine,
In heavenly glory you will shine:
With prophets, kings, and saints of old,
Who all belong to Jesus' fold."

DR. A. WALLACE MASON.

St. Catherines, Ont., Can.

CRY ALOUD AND SPARE NOT.

Thoughts that stir the deepest recesses of my heart, press heavily upon me, as I study the Prophetic Word, and perceive therefrom things both dreadful and glorious, that are so soon to happen. I see a world slumbering on the verge of fiery judgments, just like they did in Noah's day, who will be caught as in a snare just as they were then.

I see the Virgins, professing to be waiting for the coming King, stupefied with drowsiness, taking their ease, while dark clouds of judgments are seen arising all along the horizon, freighted with pent-up surges of a tribulation such as this world has never dreamed of. Why, the judge even standeth before the door. Realizing these things soon to be, how can we keep still? "Cry aloud and spare not," that some at least may be aroused to a realizing sense as to what lies before us. Time is most precious: we have not a moment to waste on the foolish frivolities of this life. All that we are and have should be unreservedly consecrated to the Master's service; that is, if we prize the things eternal, more than those of this fleeting life. Now is the time for action, determination, and service. The time has passed for whispers of "peace and safety,"—"all things continue as they were." It will be too late to flee when the day of the wrath of the Lamb has come, as a writer has forcibly said: "Vainly they flee from its devastating influence—vainly they pour their piteous prayers for refuge to the towering mountains and to the craggy rock. Vainly their mighty wail resounds from sea to sea—ever-spreading continent—echoing from the islands and comprehending all the tribes of the earth. Vainly are ten thousand ten thousand broken-ten thousand times-ten thousand harps employed in supplication—ten thousand times ten thousand foreheads bowed in sorrow, and ten thousand knees bent before God that never bowed before. Alas it is too late. Sudden destruction has come, and from the faithful Word peals forth the dread announcement: 'they shall not escape.'

"But ye brethren (who have studied the Prophetic Word) are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief; ye are all the children of light and the children of the day: we are not of the night nor of darkness.' Those who have not this "light" are vainly dreaming of "peace and safety," those are profoundly careless, little dreaming of an unavoidable destruction soon to come with a resistless fury. We have specific information concerning the coming of the "great and terrible day of the Lord,' a day freighted with clouds, darkness, indignet and wrath.

Oh, what a responsibility rests upon the shoulders of those who know these things and who fail to warn the people and urge them to flee from iniquity. God's Word says: "But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned and the sword come and take any person from among them: he is taken away in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand." Responsibility does not begin and end with the individual watchman himself. The Scriptures clearly teach that light brings responsibility. If they cannot take the field and "Cry aloud and spare not," like the individual watchman, then they must share the work with him, as he may be unable to do this work at his own charges, and his cry may be hushed if he be not sustained.

I was impressed by reading the following paragraph:

"Concerning this 'great and terrible day of the Lord,' we are not left destitute of further information. Information too that is amply sufficient to stir the deep and swelling surges of emotion within every pious soul. Strangely hardened must be the heart that can behold unmoved the approach of the tremendous scene, and strangely perverted must be that Christianity that can view without the intensest awe and solemnity, the coming of that day of clouds and darkness, of judgment and of wrath—or that can anticipate without delight that day of deliverance, of triumph, of joy, of songs and of crowns, for all that 'love his appearing.' The events of that great day are most graphically sketched by the Apostle Peter, in the concluding chapter of his epistle. Carrying the lustful scoffers of the last day backward on the track of time, to the antidiluvian world, he, by that awful example, reproves their impious mockery. He teaches us that the same God who condemned that world, condemns this, and 'the same Word' that overwhelmed that with water, shall desolate this by judgment. 'The day of the Lord' must and will come as a thief in the night'; wickedness must find a shore to its foaming wave; impiety must be smitten on its brazen front; oppression must be punished; blasphemy must be hushed; and righteousness, so long abused, must triumph at last."

No doubt Noah's heart was sad, after faithfully, as God's watchman, warning the people of coming judgment, for the long space of a hundred and twenty years; his own family being the only occupants of the ark. Yet, for all this, he must not cease but "cry aloud and spare not.

This is also a lesson to God's watchmen today. Although sometimes discouraged because little heed may be given to the message, yet like Noah, they must continue to cry: "Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come," and if being warned and the sinner die in his sins, the watchman's skirts are clear of his blood; but if they be not warned the Lord will require his blood at the watchman's hands. Remember, all "the children of light" are watchmen; none are exempted from service because they cannot lift up the voice and cry aloud; they can sustain those who can "cry aloud."

Sodom is also given to illustrate the impending judgment, ready now to burst upon a church and world unprepared to meet it. I will quote a paragraph bearing upon Sodom's judgment, and would to God the Sodom of our day would listen:

"Ah, see that lurid cloud, as it gathers over that city! How it veils forever the pride and sin of the cities of the plain from the sunshine of heaven. Oh, hark, that far-sung thunder! and see! and see!—storms of fire—torrents of burning brimstone—flooks of hot, hissing, roaring flame fall from above—while earth beneath reels and quakes and kindles with the wrath of God. The last note of music—the last sound of mirth—the last terrific blasphemy—the last song of the drunkard—the last jeer of lust—the last scoff of brutalized and impious humanity, is lost and swallowed up amid the mighty roar of sulphurous flame.

Early in the morning the anxious eyes of Abraham were turned toward the cities of the plain; and lo! the fertile valley was one vast furnace, and from the seething lake of fire arose a cloud of smoke that covered all the adjacent country, and ascended slowly toward the skies.

Sodom is overthrown, and now let us go and sit upon that encrusted shore, and gaze upon the boiling waves of the Dead Sea that roll sluggishly there. Last we interrogate them and learn wisdom from their dark and solemn flow. We find here, as in the case of the deluge.

I. Lot and Abraham also) was previously warned of the danger in season to make his escape.

II. Those around were warned by him that they might also escape.

III. They did not and would not give heed to the admonition.

IV. Lot was 'not in darkness that that day should overtake him as a thief,' and he was saved.

V. The people knew not until the fiery tempest burst upon them—found them unprepared, and they perished, and are set forth as an example to them that should afterwards live ungodly."

There is another trouble coming. Daniel said: "And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." Can we estimate the value of having our name "written in the book," when this tribulation shall deluge the world?

"In the book of the Kingdom,
With its pages so fair,
Tell me, Jesus my Savior,
Is my name written there?"

If we desire to be delivered from this terrible tribulation, we must not only have our names "written there," but have a record of approval entered opposite to it. How many know that they have an account entered in the bank of heaven? If we have no deposits in the aforesaid bank, there can be nothing for the Lord to bring us when He comes. Earthly banks will fail us in the great day that is coming. The bank of heaven is the only absolutely safe bank there is. Make all the deposits you can. "Lay up treasure in heaven," is our Lord's wise counsel.

Now is the time to sacrifice earthly treasure for the heavenly; to come right down to real, practical, common sense, considering our own personal welfare. It is the only proper and wise thing to do. Personally I have long made sacrifices to my own financial loss for the gospel's sake. I do not regret it. I only long for a larger field to work for my Master. I cannot do it all alone. I need some partners in the glorious work. Will you be one?

W. H. WILSON.

Chicago, Ill.

OUR NEED OF A SAVIOUR, OR THE NATURE OF THE PENALTY FOR SIN.

"Thou shalt surely die." Gen. 2:17. God formed Adam of the dust of the ground, and put him in the garden of Eden, and told him to dress it and to keep it; and he told him he might eat of every tree of the garden, except of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. God placed Adam on trial, and told him what would be the result if he disobeyed: "For in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." (Heb.: dying thou shalt die.) In order to understand the nature of this death, it is necessary to understand the nature of this life, how man is constituted, or the relation of body, spirit, and soul. "God formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life: and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). Note the origin of the "living soul." God did not put a living soul in the man, but when He applied the breath of life, which animated or quickened the body, this union of body and spirit produced a conscious being, a living soul.

This conscious entity, or soul, can not exist as a separate being, but must have a frame to which is applied the life giving element, or spirit, to live. The very existence then of the soul depending upon a quickened frame, when this same loses the life giving power and dies, the soul ceases. David says, "For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Psa. 10, 3:14. In speaking of the wicked, he says, "For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth forever * * * But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me." Psa. 49:8, 15. Jesus said to his apostles, "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Matt. 10:28. Hell as used here means a condition of utter annihilation, the second death. We speak of the body as belonging to the person, and we speak of the spirit, and also of the soul, as belonging to the person; but in reality the soul is the person. My soul is my personality, my conscious self that may have eternal life, but in another life, but in another body of similar form. The spirit is that power which emanates from God, and creates and quickens the body. Elihu said, "The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life." Job. 33:4. When the spirit of man "returns to God who gave it," it is no more a part of man, nor man's possession, but is God's creative and quickening power. "And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land." Ezek. 37:13, 14.

God told Adam that dying he should die, and he sent him forth from the garden of Eden, lest he put forth his hand and take of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever. Adam, being mortal, was a dying man, and being deprived of the means of prolonging his life forever, he actually died in that day of one thousand years. 2 Peter 3:8. This death penalty is applied to all until the second coming of Christ, when the righteous, who are living at that time, will never die, but be changed. See John 11:26; 1 Cor. 15:51, and 1 Thess. 4:15-17. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5:12. As we find that all must suffer the death penalty, let us see what is the nature of this penalty, and why we need a Saviour.

Job says, "For now shall I sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be." How long does he say they will remain asleep in the dust? "So man lieth down and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep. Job. 7:21 and 14:12. The Psalmist David said, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. * * * His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. 115:17, and 146:3, 4.

"For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." Eccl. 9:5. Isaiah said of other lords who had had dominion over them, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." But he says, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. 26:14, 19. We find there is a time coming when God's people will awake from their sleep in the dust, and come forth in their resurrected bodies. Job said, "After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God." Job 19:26, margin. David said, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Psa. 17:15. When will this be? "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. 15:22, 23.

Our future life depends on an awakening from the dead, on a resurrection of the body. Paul says, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. 15:13, 18. That means that even the righteous dead are in a state of extinction, awaiting a resurrection from the dead. All who are in Christ at his second coming must get in his body (the church) now by faith and obedience. Gal. 3:27, 29. I have shown that God told Adam, in the plainest words possible, what would be the penalty for his disobedience, "Dying thou shalt die." I have shown that God's holy servants have told, in the plainest words possible, what is the nature of that penalty, destruction. "Thou turnest man to destruction: * * * they are as asleep." Psa. 90:3, 5. I have shown that Satan deceived Eve, and through her, all the Adamic race, causing them to believe that God did not mean what he said, and that man does not really die. Which shall we believe? Dear reader, stop, and think. If you do not understand God's plan for his people, Israel, why not believe Him, that he means what he says, and that he will fulfill all his promises to his people, and then his gospel will no longer be hidden from you.

F. M. HOWELL.

Northup, Ohio.

WEAK BUT STRONG.

Our subject is taken from the second Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, who were a people which can be more nearly compared to our present environment and conditions than any of the communities with whom he came in contact. Corinth was so situated geographically that it was a great commercial center; lying in a direct path of the overland route from Rome to the east; and also between upper and lower Greece.

It was noted for its great wealth and its pleasure-loving public. Paul's perseverance was finally rewarded by his being able to establish a church, despite the most trying persecutions, to which he was subjected. The church was composed largely of the lower class of people; some Jews, but mostly Gentiles. All being great admirers of Paul, and in some respects, were enthusiastic followers, their surroundings, however, caused them to continually transgress, and after his departure it became necessary for him to write to them, and call them to account severely; showing them wherein they were weak, and exhorting them to examine themselves, whether they were in the faith—to prove their ownselves, that they might know Jesus Christ was among them—without having him (Paul) continually with them. And to emphasize his exhortation, he sets himself up before them, as an example, in the words of our text: "Therefore I take pleasure, in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake—for when I am weak—then am I strong."

Inasmuch as we, brothers and sisters, can liken ourselves to the church at Corinth, in that we are living in a time of excessive pleasures and licentiousness, and among a people who have no thought for God and his wonderful plan of salvation, it well becomes us to take this same beloved Paul, and by his example, strive to be overcomers, and say with him from our hearts, the words of our text.

And now, just a few illustrations of the trials, which Paul was called upon to endure, which he did, not only with patience, but with pleasure. When Paul was preaching with Barnabus in Iconium, both the Jews and the Gentiles sought to stone them, but they became aware of the designs upon them and fled into Listra, where Paul was finally stoned and thrown out of the city, supposedly dead. See Acts 14:19.

Again with Silas in Philippi where their clothes were torn from their backs and they were beaten, after which they were thrust into prison. See Acts 16:22 and 23.

Again in Acts 21:13 when Paul's brethren begged him not to return to Jerusalem for fear of his life. Paul answered and said: "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart, for I am ready, not only to be bound, but also to die at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus," and he straightway journeyed to Jerusalem, where, in a short time, he was taken by the Jews, thrown out of the temple and beaten, finally being rescued by the Roman soldiers and bound with chains. And so on throughout his entire pilgrimage.

Paul himself embraces all his life trials in 2nd Corinthians, 11th chapter, 21st to 28th verses.

And in all these things Paul says he takes pleasure for "Christ's sake." And the climax of this life of Paul is told in 2nd Timothy, 4th chapter, 6th, 7th and 8th verses.

It is hard for us to realize the wonderful endurance displayed by Paul throughout his eventful life. His moments of bodily weakness must have been many, and had it not been for the spirit of God working within him, he would have been unable to stand the strain put upon him. But that spirit made him strong, just in proportion to his weakness; and so it is with all of God's children, if they will only open their hearts, God will pour out his spirit upon them abundantly, and give them strength to bear whatever they are called upon to endure.

May we all strive to emulate Paul; keeping ever in mind the prize of our high calling, and the glories which are in Christ Jesus, which shall surely be ours, if we remain steadfast to the end. May this be the happy lot of each one of our readers is my prayer.

CHARLES PATE.

Cleveland, O.

THE RESTITUTION

Issued weekly by
THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....EDITOR
BUELL W. NUTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 1023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in THE RESTITUTION, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 9, 1911.

EDITORIAL

THERE IS NO UNBELIEF.

There is no unbelief.
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
Trusts he in God.

There is no unbelief.
Whoever says when clouds are in the sky,
Be patient, heart! light breaketh by and by,
Trusts the Most High.

There is no unbelief.
Whoever sees 'neath winter's fields of snow,
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

There is no unbelief.
Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Consents to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

There is no unbelief.
Whoever says "to-morrow," the unknown,
The future, trusts that power alone,
He dare disown.

There is no unbelief.
The heart that looks on when dear eyelids close
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief.
And so by day and night, unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith that lips deny,
God knoweth why.

Thanks to numerous correspondents for encouraging words. They are an offset to the drawn swords sometimes flourished at us from a few "open sepulchres"; not that it matters much either way; but the approval of those who rejoice in the truth is some assistance in the effort to endure the mosquito bites and dog snaps that one has to encounter in the good warfare.

The embittered conditions of the spiritual guides, one against another totally unfit them to be "guides of the blind, lights of them that sit in darkness, instructors of the ignorant and teachers of babes."

Any system of teaching that runs away from the real thing, or that has a tendency to distract attention from, or lessen the importance of "first principles," is but vain jangling which brings no nourishment, cheer, or good, but blights the spiritual man.

What a nauseating disappointment it is to find utter tastelessness in the man who comes to you labelled as the finest of salt.

From Brother O. J. Allard, of Ft. Dodge, Iowa, comes the following suggestive thoughts: "Allow me to offer a suggestion on Matt. 24:34. I understand Jesus referred to the signs preceding His coming. The point in question is, What generation is referred to? In Matt. 19:28 Jesus replied to Peter, "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration," etc. There can be no regeneration without a generation; hence there must be a generation implied in this saying. The regeneration begins when Christ sits on the throne of His glory; therefore the generation referred to can only be the generation that has existed from Adam to Christ. The generation from Adam to Christ is the one Jesus called "this generation." It will not pass until all the signs are fulfilled."

The Restitution will be unusually good in the future. With such contributors as Sisters S. Roxanna Wince and Anna Drew, and Brethren Gelletley, Robison, Mason, Titchenal, Wagoner, Donaldson, Wilson, Rothe, Adams, Knapp, and a host of others, it cannot be other than good. The first principles of the gospel will be given prominence, and the brethren should scatter the word of the kingdom everywhere by the wide distribution of the paper among their friends and acquaintances.

Sister Angie Stevens, of Freedom, Neb., reports a good meeting there, conducted by Bro. Adams. Three were baptized, and she hopes others will soon follow in the way of obedience. Her letter is too late to be given in full, but the above good results are noted in her communication.

VERY IMPORTANT.

For several weeks we will be away from home. Our city and home address as given at head of editorial page will always find us, but when absent from home, mail is retarded by being forwarded. Let all concerned then please note our address on the dates following: Aug. 11 to 18, Troy, Ohio, General Delivery; Aug. 18 to 31, Moorefield, Neb., General Delivery.

CORN SHEAVES.

GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.

EDISON EXPECTS TO LIVE 150 YEARS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Thomas A. Edison, happy as a boy, sailed for Europe on the Mauretania today to enjoy his first vacation in 22 years. He was accompanied by his son. They will tour England and the continent for two months.

Edison said he had solved the problem of living and plans to be at least 150 years old. He has only started on his work of developing electrical appliances, he said.

"I work 18 hours a day and sleep six. The six that I put in in bed are filled with solid rest and are plenty for me," the inventor explained. "I eat regularly, but only a little at a time, and I find my best rest in my work. I think the man who keeps right on at his work keeps himself young."

[Mr. Edison will find after a few more years that he has not "solved the problem of living." Should consumption fasten its deadly fangs in him, the "problem" will have to be reconsidered by him. Working 18 hours a day, and keeping "right on at it," will never keep you young, Mr. Edison. Thousands have tried your receipt for longevity, and it has failed. The Bible, for which Mr. Edison has no use, "solves the problem" at which the distinguished inventor makes but a hoyish guess.—Editor.]

THE RIGHT ROAD—Who would not rather go over a rough, muddy road to a crown, than over a smooth, clean, agreeable road to the gallows? But the Christian has the best road to the best destiny. (1 Tim. 4:8.)

A little boy, on a black pony, was out riding with his grandfather, who was mounted on a bay mare. The lad rode on ahead, and stopping where two roads met, said: "Which road, grandpa?" "Whichever you like best," was the reply. "But, grandpa, which ones leads to Crescens?" "This one, my boy, is a level, easy road; it is shaded, and runs along by a river; the other is hilly and difficult, and—" "But, grandpa, what difference does that make? We must take the road to Crescens, no matter whether it is rough or smooth!" "Why, my boy! How you talk! We will take this road to the right." Later when the boy asked him what he meant, he replied; "I wished to teach you a lesson; you will come to many such cross-roads in life; you will be tempted to ask: 'Which is the easy way, the way of pleasure?' But always do as you did today; look ahead! see where you wish to come out, and take the road that leads to that destination, whether it seems easy at first or not." "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it." Prov. 16; 25; Matt. 7:14. Will you be one of the few? Now.

RULES FOR LIVING—Some good rules for living are given below and are worth remembering and observing:

Drink less—breathe more.
Eat less—chew more.
Ride less—walk more.
Clothe less—bathe more.
Worry less—sleep more.
Talk less—think more.
Waste less—give more.
Scold less—read more.
Preach less—practice more.

HEZEKIAH'S MAIL BAG.—Hezekiah believed in the use of the mail bag. When he would gather a very great congregation" for the Passover Feast at Jerusalem, he "wrote letters," and sent them by special delivery post, all over the country, even to the far north, bordering on Zidon. In imagination we see the swift courier, running into a town, delivering the king's letter to the proper authorities, and then speeding away to the next town. In many cases the letters were treated with contempt and the messengers with derision. But, "nevertheless, divers of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun, humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem." Hezekiah must have felt richly repaid, when he saw the penitent Israelites coming to the Passover.

His letters, in several particulars, are models of religious letter writing. They were to the point, concise, perfectly clear as to their meaning; they were sincere; he did not flatter the Israelites; he told them frankly that their "desolation" was the result of sin. But the letters were kind and gracious; they contained a tender invitation to return to the Lord and his service; they were cheering and comforting letters, in that they gave promise of the Lord's compassion toward their captive brethren and themselves, should they "return unto him."

RANDOM SHOTS—I shot an arrow into the air, it fell in the distance, I knew not where, till a neighbor said that it killed his calf, and I had to pay six and a half ($6.56,. I bought some poison to slay some rats, and a neighbor swore it killed his cats; and rather than argue across the fence, I paid him four dollars and fifty cents ($4.50). One night I set sailing a toy balloon, and hoped it would soar till it reached the moon; but the candle fell on a farmer's straw, and he said I must settle or go to law. And that is the way with the random shot; it never hits in the proper spot; and the joke you spring that you think so smart, may leave a wound in some fellow's heart.

GOLD DUST.

"Do all the good you can, and make as little fuss as possible about it."

"Act so in the valley that you need not fear those who stand on the hill."

"A righteous life, even if lived in an obscure place, has its influence for good; the fruits of which may never be revealed here, but will be found to one's credit when the books are opened."

"The golden beams of truth and the silken cords of love, twisted together, will draw men on whether they will or not."

"Why, it is asked, are there so many snares? That we may not fly low, but may seek the things which are above. For just as birds so long as they cleave the upper air are not easily caught, so thou also, so long as thou lookest at things above wilt not easily be captured, whether by a snare or by any other device of evil."

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

THE CERTAINTY OF CHRIST'S COMING.

"Again the word of the Lord came to me, saying, Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, the vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off. Therefore, say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God." Ezekiel 1-2; 26-28.

These words are as true of the people of this generation as they were of the house of Israel. We speak to them of the nearness of Jesus' coming and they say: The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off." He will not come in your day; he may not come for a thousand years; or he may never come: we go to him at death." But God says, "There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken, shall be done."

We are assuredly in the closing hour of Gentile times. Just before us lies the darkness of midnight, and the dazzling brightness of noonday. We ask the question: "Watchman, what of the night?" and his unfailing answer is, "The morning cometh, and also the night."

The whole world lieth in darkness, and indifference, but we, as children of the light and of the day, can see the glimmering of light in the eastern sky, and can lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that deliverance is near. Let others scoff and ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" but we believe "the words shall not be prolonged"; for God has spoken.

LILLE H. WILLIS.

Galva, Ill.

"IT IS GOOD TO BEAR THE YOKE IN YOUTH."

FOR THE CHILDREN.

We have read the passage often, but have we ever sought to find out on what custom Jeremiah based his simile? I can find nothing in our commentaries explaining the matter, but a little story in a paper which I have read gives us the clue. A gentleman traveling in the mountainous regions of Kentucky came all at once upon a queer team—a big, strong ox yoked with a yearling calf. Two boys and a man had loaded a sled with stones and they were drawing these. The yoking was so arranged that the ox pulled the load and the calf walked by his side and occasionally drew a little weight on his small bow. His yoke was an easy one; the burden very light.

But he was learning "to bear the yoke in his youth," with "the good, steady old ox,"—"the best ox in all those parts," and it was good for him, for when he was grown up he would know just how to go and what to do.

Jeremiah must have seen just such teams in his country and so must have Jesus. We cannot think otherwise. We break our little colts by fastening them with tiny halters to the mother's side, and later by putting them in harness with her. They learn to walk obediently first and then to pull.

It would do no good to yoke the little calf to a vicious ox, nor to halter the colt to a kicking, balky horse. Young animals must have good teachers and leaders.

And how much more the young. It is not good to bear the yoke of Satan in youth, it must be the yoke of Christ. Satan's yoke is heavy and galling. It covers one with shame and guilt, and drags its weaver down to endless death.

Put on the yoke of Jesus, children. Do it now. He tells you to. He wants every one of you to be yoked with Him, to believe in His words and to mind Him. "His ways are ways of pleasantness and all His paths are peace."

AUNTIE WINCE.

Pierceton, Ind.

"THAT BLESSED HOPE."

TITUS 2-13.

There is one consolation that we all have, and that is, a hope for better times, which Christ will bring when He comes to claim His people. Are we all rejoicing in "that Blessed Hope?" For we know it is the only hope that we have, and to us it means (provided we are obedient to the end), that we shall have the happy privilege of enjoying endless blessings of eternal life, and be forever with the Lord. I'm sure, dear followers of Christ, that our ways would look very dark and dreary, had we not this blessed hope to rejoice in; therefore we certainly ought to be thankful to God for such a hope, and that He ever called us from this sinful world; that He ever loved us and allowed the good news to reach our ears; and that through His love for us He gave His only begotten Son, Jesus our Lord, so that we might live again.

Yes, we are indeed indebted to Him for a good deal of thanks, and we therefore should consider it not only our duty to serve Him, but also a pleasure; and may we all continue to serve Him with all our heart, so that when our dear Lord comes we may be found worthy of a crown of life.

By the signs of the times, I think the end is drawing near, therefore it behooves us to be on the watch; for we are told to be ready, for at such an hour as we think not the Son of man cometh. We are looking for one who is to rule the world in peace and righteousness. What a glorious day that will be: no more death, sorrow, nor tears: all these will be things of the past. The more I think of it the more I feel like seeing Jesus. I often wonder if I shall be one of the chosen ones, and I do not doubt but what you have had similar thoughts. It would be a dreadful thing to be left out, but I shall endeavor to do my part the best I can and I know my efforts will be blest. I trust that we are all prizing this hope, this blessed hope. It is a pleasure to know that we have something in this sinful world to rejoice in, for without this hope we would not have anything to look forward to. We are constantly undergoing trials and tribulations, but you see with this hope, we can bear them more easily; we can look at them on the light side, and not on the dark only.

You know that we must not expect to have smooth sailing, all the time, for if we did something must be wrong somewhere. Do not get discouraged if in this life you should find a few rough spots now and then; for in Hebrews 12:13 we read: "For whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." According to this we are to expect rough sailing sometimes.

But the great God will never allow the trials to be so great but what you can withstand them. No indeed! He will certainly watch over you with due care, if you will only trust Him, and take Him at His word. Follow His guiding hand, and then our trials and tribulations will be looked upon as nothing.

A few more words concerning "that Blessed Hope." The reason why this hope is exceedingly precious to us is, that to it is attached eternal life,—a life full of happiness and joy; a life in which all will live in harmony with each other, with God and with His dear Son, Jesus.

STERLING GROVES.

Cleveland, Ohio.

AN EXHORTATION.

My Dear Brothers and Sisters: A week ago today Sister Neill gave us many forceful reminders of our duties to God and each other; and pointed out in particular the scrutiny with which our Father is cognizant of even all our thoughts and actions, as the called according to His purpose: Which, I doubt not, has helped us all to strive more earnestly to enter in at the straight gate. It is only as we exercise ourselves in these things that our lives conform more and more to the divine example, and our profiting appears to all. We may deceive ourselves, and we may deceive our brothers and sisters, but not Him with whom we have to do. Let us again go over that exhortation to righteousness of Paul's found in Heb. 4-12, 13: "God is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in His sight, but all things are naked and open unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." It is well this is so, and still better we know it to be so, and prove that it is our Father's love and purpose that we (1 Pet. 1-14-15) become obedient children, not fashioning ourselves according to our former lust in ignorance; but as He which has called us is holy, so should we strive to be as the elect of God (1 Pet. 1; 14-15). Ours is a faith that works by love, and purifies the heart, for with the heart man believes unto righteousness; and it is God's word revealed that builds us up and makes wise unto salvation. David said, "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might sin against thee"; and God says his word is his power unto salvation to every one that believes and accepts it. Abraham believed God when he outlined the world-wide territory over which he and his seed should rule and have dominion, and it was counted to him for righteousness. They that be of the faith are children of Abraham faithwise, and heirs with him of the same promises. Peter says they are "great and precious," and to us they are very precious, because, as Peter also says, the belief of them and a conformity to the gospel requirements, will, at the return of our dear Lord, entitles us to become divine by nature, and forever escape the temptations and consumption of this mortal state and evil world. On this first day of the week a few of us are especially privileged once again to meet and fulfill our dear Lord's last request to His disciples, and through them to us, to eat the bread and drink the wine in remembrance of Him. Our minds at this time revert to that little company in that upper room, and our Lord's last words as recorded in Luke 22, 15: "With desire have I desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer."

He was tempted and tried in all points like as we are. We are here to exhort and build each other up in one faith and in the knowledge of Him, whom to know is life eternal, John 17-3. We think of our Lord's prayer for us, John 17, 20: "Neither pray I for these alone (His disciples) but for them also which shall believe in Me through their word; that they all may be one as Thou Father, art in Me and I in Thee; that for without this hope we would not have anything to look forward to. We are, that they also may be one in us." What a privilege! To what can we compare it? We anticipate now and always the nearness of the literal personal return of our present Mediator and living Head, as indicated by innumerable signs in the world almost hourly; and we pray as Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "Thy Kingdom come, that Thy will may be done on earth as it is in heaven." Yes, this is why He is coming: to put down all present rule and authority, and establish on this sin cursed earth a kingdom of righteousness, peace, and love as predicted by the shepherds of old. May He soon come. May we all be preserved blameless, and be able to enter in at the straight gate; for many shall strive to enter in and not be able. It is to those who look for Him that He will shortly appear, not as an offering for sin; but to give eternal life to those who believe and are looking for His coming. Soon may He come is our prayer. Amen.

CHARLES MOORE.

Salem, Ohio.

COVETOUSNESS.

LUKE 12-15.

"And He said unto them, Take heed and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

Covetousness is a strong or inordinate desire to obtain and possess; eagerly and avariciously some supposed good:—(usually in a bad sense).

Covetousness is a sin of the heart. Ezek. 33-31: "And they come unto Thee as Thy people cometh, and they sit before Thee as my people, and they hear Thy words, but they will not do them, for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after covetousness." Mark 7-22-23: "Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: All these evil things come from within and defile the man."

Covetousness paves the way for other evils, dulls the sense of right and wrong, hardens the heart, robs others, and separates from God. Why is it such an awful sin? It is the essence of selfishness, and thus the root of nearly every other sin, leading to falsehood, false witness, theft, murder, and in fact it is the base of all infamy. Paul, in his epistle to Timothy, says (1 Tim. 6-10): "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Covetousness leads to other deadly sins; for James says: "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

To those that devise iniquity and work evil, who covet fields and houses and heritages, God says to these He will devise evil from which they shall not remove their necks. It is an open door to temptation. Paul says (1 Tim. 6-9): "But they that will be rich fall into temptation and snares, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." By it much woe is produced. We read in (Habakkuk 2-7-9): "Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his." And, "Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest, that he may be delivered from the power of evil."

Covetousness is abhorred by God. This we learn by reading (Psalm 10:3) "For the wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetousness, whom the Lord abhorreth. Paul tells us to be free from this lust when he says in Eph. 5-3: "But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints." We read in Heb. 13-5: "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as you have: for He hath said; I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

Covetousness may begin with trivial things, but it will constantly grow until the deeds committed are abominable. A miser becomes more so every day, and is less willing to provide for the comfort of another. Pro. 21-26; 27 says: "He coveteth greedily all the day long, but the righteous giveth and spareth not." "The sacrifice of the wicked is abomination: how much more when he bringeth it with a wicked mind?"

The question may be asked, how does covetousness differ from ambition to have more. Covetousness prompts one to secure for himself the coveted possession at the expense of others, or at the cost of principle. Ambition, rightly used, prompts one to worthy effort to secure the desired goal without loss to others or sacrifice of principle.

There is a cure for covetousness the same as there is a cure for almost everything else in the cycle of life. The very first thing to do for this cure and that which should be the highest aim of every living person is to love God. We read in I John 2-15: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Paul says, when writing to the Ephesians, "For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritage in the Kingdom of Christ and of God" (Eph. 5:5).

Cultivate contentment. In Phil. 4-11 Paul says to the Philippians, "Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." He again says in I Tim. 6-6: "But godliness with contentment is great gain."

Recognizing that covetousness is a sin; realizing how it closes doors of opportunity, and makes easy other sins, I look, brothers and sisters, this is enough for us not to want to practice it, but rather study more of God's word which, if our heart is right, will keep us from covetousness, I am sure.

My prayer is that we all may be found faithful at His appearing, and receive and abundance entrance into that great and glorious Kingdom, where sorrow shall be no more.

BERT MEERMANS.

Cleveland, Ohio.

OBITUARY.

Died at Blackwell, Oklahoma, June 28, 1911, Ira M. Vickery. He was born Sept. 30, 1838, at Oswego, N. Y., and came to Kansas in 1859, settling in Doniphan County. Mr. Vickery early enlisted in the services of his country and served four years as a member of the 7th Kansas Volunteers. After the war he returned to his adopted state and took up the occupation of farming, which he continued all his life. He was a man of fearless opinions, a friend to all, and passed away from life a successful man. Soon after the war he came to Sumner County, Kansas, where he resided until about two years ago, when he moved to Blackwell, Oklahoma, where he resided until his death. He leaves a wife, two sons, two daughters, two step-sons, two sisters, and a host of friends to mourn his loss. Brother Vickery early in life became a member of the Church of God, and was a firm believer in the soon coming of the Lord. Just before his death he said that his sleep would not exceed twenty years. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Bethel Church to a large, attentive, and sympathetic audience, after which we laid him to rest in the Mercer cemetery to await until the Lord calls him; for "Thou wilt call," says Job, "and I will answer Thee."

S. C. OLIVER.

Blackwell, Okla.

Hannah Spuir was born in Nundy, N. Y., May 13th, 1827, and fell asleep July 28th, 1911. Married to Jacob Lemon Oct. 13th, 1847. To this marriage was born twelve children, six still surviving her. The husband and father, Jacob Lemon, fell asleep about ten years ago. Sister Lemon was converted early in life to the orthodox faith, but later learned the Gospel of the Kingdom and accepted it with all her heart. She was a great sufferer for more than a year, but very patiently endured the pain and suffering, believing the Lord Jesus would give her life everlasting at his coming. Funeral services conducted from the home by Mrs. M. A. Woodward, using as the text Psa. 116:15. Sister Lemon was a universal favorite, so genial, so patient; a loving, loyal mother, true friend, and faithful child of God. May we all be so faithful, as to meet her when the righteous dead shall be raised.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Dutton, Mich.

Perry Pearson was born Oct. 18, 1833; died July 27, 1911, aged 77 years, 9 months and 9 days. He was the son of Moses and Margaret Pearson, and was born in Monroe Township, Miami County, Ohio. He was the second son of a family of nine children, five having preceded him to the grave. There remains four brothers. Two were present at the funeral; also his wife. Brother Pearson has been a staunch defender of the truth for nearly 40 years. It is said of him that he never lost an opportunity to present the gospel. The writer spoke words of comfort from I Thess. 4:13-18. He can testify of his perfect knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ.

We spent a day with him while conducting a meeting at Brush Creek, his church home. We were impressed with his full knowledge of the Scriptures, and the correctness of his quotations. In his younger days, it is said, that he could quote whole chapters by memory. The church loses a strong character, and the neighborhood a good citizen. We laid him away in the cemetery near the church, where he had often met with those of like precious faith. Brother Pearson is asleep in Jesus, and will come forth at the sound of the trumpet, at which time he will put on immortality.

D. C. ROBISON.

Salem, Ohio.

THE THREE S's.

"Swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath."—James 1:19.

1. "Swift to Hear." It requires a peculiar grace in a person to become a good listener, not to mention some culture, courtesy and refinement, especially on spiritual themes. A good preacher is worth listening to; and as you listen, look him in the eye. It must be very uninspiring to a speaker to look into the pews to some mummies with their eyes closed. "Wake up here! I'm worth hearing when I preach," is what the writer once heard Edwin Burnham say to some of this class, soon after he had begun his sermon. You would think it the mark of the greatest impoliteness if, while a caller at a friend's house, and you were engaged in earnest conversation with him, he should close his eyes and begin to nod. I have heard of a man who went to bed when a neighbor called, saying he could talk with him just as well. Hardly less discourteous are some of the preacher's hearers. If some people do not dwell together in unity they certainly sleep together in church.

Still there are mitigating circumstances; as, first, weariness of the hearer in possible night vigils in watching over the sick, not to mention vigilance by day in trying to make an honest dollar. Then, second, the preacher may contribute to the somnolence of the pew by a message that lacks life and importance, but does not lack that unction that gathers in the nose in a voice that sounds "like a humble bee in a hollyhock" and sings good people off to sleep, when, if he would talk to them in an interesting way, they would sit up and take notice. However, he may be doing the best he can, and what he lacks in interest you make up in attention. If he is a fast one put the spurs to your listening and ride faster.

2. "Slow to Speak." Here is where the average piece of humanity gets into gear and runs like an eight-day clock (except in meeting, and sometimes even there). Did you ever see a lumber teamster with a load of logs, when he came to the top of a hill before descending the steep decline of icy roadway, stop and bridle one of his sled runners with a chain? Therein his safety lay with that load. Well, sir, some folks with slippery tongues need to bridle them just as effectually. It will save a worse disaster. The Apostle James tells us that we should do this very thing on occasions. (James 1:26). There are times when one's wisdom would be shown if he sat as dumb as the Sphinx of Egypt. Almost everybody talks too much. Take a few lessons from a Quaker meeting to put into practice out of meeting. Put on the brakes! If our words could only be hand-picked, sorted and selected before putting them out there would be fewer wounds caused by them.

3. "Slow to Wrath." Here is where the hair-trigger of our little gun needs attention, so that it won't go off half-cocked, and hurt, if not kill somebody, and we have to make the humiliating apology afterward: "Didn't know it was loaded." At dangerous curves, railroads that are well managed have signs placed reading: "Slow," or "Stop." Well, the manager of the celestial railroad has placed signs all along the line telling us when we can be swift and when we must be slow. And you who are trying to engineer yourself into the favor and grace of God, and into his kingdom at last, must watch out and know when to use the throttle and put on steam, and when to shut off. The last is just as important as the first; also when to apply the brake. There's some wrath in a young one two years old, and there's sometimes a lot of it in an old one sixty-two years old. Throttle it. Smother it to death. Let not the sun go down upon it. "Be ye angry and sin not"—if you can.

E. COFF.

GOD'S PROMISES

To His People Israel.

"He hath remembered his covenant forever." Psa. 105:8. David, like John the Revelator, was at times in the spirit on the Lord's day, that is, he spiritually or mentally saw the future day or period when the Lord will personally reign on the earth, and all the promises that God has made to his people will be fulfilled; and on one of these occasions while spiritually beholding this future day of the Lord, he exclaims, "He is the Lord our God; his judgments are in all the earth. He hath remembered his covenant forever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations. Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant: saying, "Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance: when they were but a few men in number; yea, very few, and strangers in it." Psa. 105:7-12.

What is the covenant that God made with Abraham, Isaac and Israel, that will be fulfilled in the Lord's day, that David saw by faith?

After Adam and Eve had disobeyed God, the penalty for which was the curse and death, God declared to the serpent that the seed of the woman should bruise his head. That meant that Christ and his saints would destroy satan and his children, and redeem the earth from the effects of the curse. In order to carry out his plan for the redemption of man from the effects of sin and death, God, in due time, called Abraham to be the father or first of a chosen people to whom to gave his oracles, which were essential for the necessary probation or trial of his chosen people. Inasmuch as the disobedience that caused the awful curse on the earth and the death of man, was due to unbelief in God's sincerity, when he said, "Thou shalt surely die," faith in the immutability of His word was made the essential for the redemption of man from the penalty for the Adamic sin. So Abraham was required to undergo this trial of faith. "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness." "For the promise that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Rom. 4:3, 13.

God first told Abraham to get out of his country, and from his kindred, and from his father's house, unto a land that he would show him. He told him that he would make of him a great nation, and bless him. Gen. 12:1, 2.

Abraham believed and obeyed God, and after he had come into the land, God told him that he would give all the land he saw to him and his seed forever. "And he said unto him, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it." Gen. 15:7. Abraham asked God how he should know that he should inherit the land, and the Lord told him to prepare a certain sacrifice, and caused a deep sleep to come upon him, and a harrow of great darkness to fall upon him; and he told Abraham that he should go to his fathers in peace, and be buried in a good old age, thus showing and convincing him that he must pass through the dark valley of the shadow of death, before he could inherit this land. Gen. 15.

God made a covenant with Abraham, and he "confirmed it by an oath," Heb. 6:17, and again to Isaac, saying, "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee, for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. 26, 3, 4. Again God made the same promise to Jacob, Gen. 28:4, 13, and 35:12.

Paul writes to the Hebrews, "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed * * * By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise." Heb. 11:8-9.

Notice that these heirs of the promise only sojourned in the land of promise, which they were after (not then) to receive for an inheritance. Notice that Stephen said to the council, that God removed Abraham into this land wherein ye now dwell. "And he gave him none inheritance in it, no not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him." Acts 7:4, 5.

Paul said to the Thessalonians, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

In speaking of this coming of Christ, the prophet Zechariah says, "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee. * * * And the Lord shall be King over all the earth." This prophecy exactly harmonizes with the words of Jesus when he said, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25-31. Now he goes on to tell of his judgment of the world, which commences when he occupies his throne.

The earth will finally be a heavenly country, the curse being removed, the King from heaven, and "Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever." Isa. 60:21.

F. M. HOWELL.

Northup, Ohio.

OHIO CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The ninth annual conference of the Church of God will be held at Troy, Ohio, August 16-20. Those coming should write Brother Jno. Lehman, Troy, Ohio, R. 5. Come in the spirit of love that we may be built up and strengthened in our most holy faith.

Come on the Big Four or C. H. & D. Upon arrival in Troy, go west to the street car line, then north to the station, just over the canal. There take the Dayton and Piqua car going north, and get off at the fair ground.

ANNA LEHMAN.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska will be held in Moorefield, Nebraska, from August 26 to September 3, inclusive. Meals will be furnished at 10c, and lodging free.

Now brethren, let us all make a special effort to be there and help make the conference a success. Especially to the isolated ones and the young people do we say, Come. Do not miss the chance of getting into the spirit of the work and understanding what is needed. This is the time when we can get in touch with one another and learn to love each other if we come in the right spirit. Remember the conference should be in the interest of Christ and His work, not our desires.

Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio, Editor of The Restitution, has been secured as speaker. The most of us got acquainted with him last year, and will enjoy his second visit. The young people know him through the Berean lessons. We expect to have a "Berean Day" to be given over the young people. Let all be on hand to take part. If further information is wanted, write Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebraska.

ALTA KING,
Sec'y of Conference Board.

"Our citizenship is in heaven." Any Christian who can realize the meaning of that text will be a Christian wholly separated from the world. He will pay taxes where his treasure is. Nine-tenths of the Christians are paying taxes down here in this world.—A. J. Gordon.

OHIO CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

August 16th.

7:30 p. m. Music and Prayer. Address of welcome, John Lehman. Response, C. A. Goss. President's address, "Touching Elbows."

Thursday, August 17th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible School, R. G. Huggins.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, Sister Neill.
1:30 to 1:45 p.m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:45 p. m. Bible School, W. S. Tomlinson.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, Sister Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, W. S. Westfall.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Friday, August 18th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school, D. C. Robison.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 12:00 a. m. Sisters' meeting.
1:15 to 1:30 p. m. Song service.
1:30 to 2:30 p. m. Bible school, Alma Adams.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Question box.
7:00 to 7:30 Social meetings, Howard Pearson.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.

Saturday, August 19th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song service and prayer, Sr. Brewer.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school, C. A. Goss.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, J. F. Wagoner.
11:00 to 12:00 Young people's meeting.
1:30 to 1:45 p. m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:30 Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
2:30 to 3:15 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:15 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, David Beck.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Sunday, August 20th.

9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Table service, J. F. Wagoner. Social meeting, Ashford Lehman.
10:00 to 10:45 a.m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Song service, Stanley Sanford.
2:30 to 3:15 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Sermon, W. C. Heacock.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, Hattie Sanford.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins. Farwells.

D. C. ROBISON,
W. C. HEACOCK,
H. A. LEHMAN,
Committee.

PROGRAM OF IOWA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus.

GREETING:

The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at the camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, commencing August 19th, and continuing over Sunday, August 27th, 1911. Come and invite your neighbors and friends to come and enjoy a ten days' vacation at our camp ground in the Cedar River Park.

On arriving at Waterloo, if the conference baggageman is there, give him your baggage checks. If he is not there, bring your checks to the camp ground. Our baggageman will have a badge on his hat reading "Conference Baggageman." Give checks to no other.

Take street car for Electric Park and get off at the camp ground.

Tents will be furnished free to all. Bring a few comforters with you if you care to do so.

Board at dining hall ten cents per meal.

Bedding can be rented for entire ten days as follows: Comforters 25 cents, blankets 25 cents.

Daily Program.

6:00 a. m. Rising bell,
6:45 a. m. Morning Devotion,
7:00 a. m. Breakfast,
8:00 a. m. Children's Hour,
9:00 a. m. Business,
10:30 a. m. Discourse, or Bible Reading and Discussion,
12:00 m. Dinner,
2:30 p. m. Discourse,
4:00 p. m. Questions and answers.—free for all,
6:00 p. m. Supper,
7:00 p. m. Song Service and Social Meeting, or Praise Service,
8:00 p. m. Discourse.

SERVICE PROGRAM.

Saturday, August 19, 1911.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting of Conference Board, Apointment of Committees, etc.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, John Garton.
7:00 p. m. Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick of Minnesota.

Sunday, August 20, 1911.

9:00 a. m. Sunday School, Conducted by State S. S. Supt.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
8:30 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams of Indiana.

Monday, August 21st.

8:00 a. m. Children's Hour, Conducted by Mrs. Eva Stearns.
9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson, Conducted by A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh of Illinois.

Tuesday, August 22.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson, Joseph Williams.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Wednesday, August 23rd, "Berean" or Young People's Day.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:45 a. m. Sermon G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Program.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.

Thursday, August 24th.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Friday, August 25th.

9:00 a. m. Question Box and Our Needs.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson, Joseph Williams.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.

Saturday, August 26th.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.
3:30 p. m. Baptisms.
4:30 p. m. Communion.
7:00 p. m. Prayer and Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams.

The foregoing program will be adhered to as closely as possible. There may, of course, be some changes.

Postoffice box No. 362 has been rented for the use of all parties attending the conference. Have your mail addressed to you at Waterloo, Iowa, care of Lock Box No. 362.

Kindly preserve this program and attend the conference if possible.

O. J. ALLARD.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Simply the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brethren and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHARE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date .....

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for ..... Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-assessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25% in 3 months, 25% in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to
BUELL W. NUTT
803 Parkwood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed .....

Address .....
Street and number

.....
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Future Probation.—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" Vain Worship;" No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Order from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8-page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

Subscribe for the

Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later. SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord. G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

BOYS and GIRLS

Do You Want to Make Some Pocket Money?

It's easy; just drop a postal to the manager of THE RESTITUTION, and he will tell you all about it. Do it now before you forget it. : : : : :

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of high grade prescription work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

THE STRONG, KENNARD & NUTT CO. 338 SOHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

SAMPLE COPIES

OF

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp.

Send for Some.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution

is the Official Organ of the Church of God in America.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace, and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31.)

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription

One Year, $1.50; Six Months, 75 Cents in Advance.

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 16, 1911 No. 31

THE CREATOR.

'Twas He who formed the mighty worlds,
And set them up on high;
He placed them in their circling sphere,
And formed the wonderous sky.

He made this beauteous earth of ours,
With all its teeming life;
From mighty monsters of the deep,
To microisms so rife.

The mountains and the mighty plains,
The rivers and the seas,
The springs, the lakes, the water falls;
God's hand is seen in these.

The elements He set to work,
To fit the earth for man;
The rain, the winds, the night frosts;
They all worked out God's plan.

While in the earth He made the rocks,
With many metals filled;
The coal He also did provide,
In waiting for the skilled.

With endless plants he filled the earth,
For beauty and for food;
He then prepared this grand abode
For God is ever good.

For every thing He did provide,
With ample stores to eat,
And place them all where they should be,
The bitter and the sweet.

Then from the dust he made the man
And placed him here to live;
He gave him full control below,
Praise to his God to give.

But man has wandered far from God,
Ignored Him and His laws;
Amid the grandest scenes on earth
Set up another cause.

This Mighty One, Who reigns on high,
Eternal life He'll give,
To every one who loves His word.
And follows Christ will live.

A. WALLACE MASON.

St. Catherines, Ont.

FAITH.

A Sermon in an Exchange, Revised by the Editor.

Beloved brethren: The chapter read this morning (Heb. xi) is a faith-stirring, heart-cheering chapter, just what is needed in these spiritually barren times—indeed needed at all times by those who are striving through much tribulation to enter the kingdom of God. In this chapter the apostle is scientific in his definition, intensely earnest in his exhortation and wonderfully eloquent in fanning the flame of courage, faith and hope. It is difficult in all the Bible to find a more eloquent marshalling of facts than that contained in the closing part of this chapter, brought to a focus, as it were, and directly applied to to those addressed. How inspiring the thought that in our age, as well as in the apostolic age, God's people are held with such consideration that ancient worthies who endured the sufferings enumerated must wait for us before receiving the realization of the promises—"God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (verse 10).

With the thought that God has arranged His plan with so much consideration for us—the "us" of all ages subsequent to the cruel experiences and terrible suffering of the ancient worthies—who of "us" could be so ungrateful as to withhold his share of service and true devotion as a token of real, genuine, deep, heartfelt and reciprocal love?

But, as to the scientific definition, while the apostle fires our feelings of love and devotion, he is careful first to lay a solid foundation, and to give the most philosophic reason for it all. He does not appeal to passion and blind impulse. He defines in the most masterly manner, and yet with a simplicity adapted to common, but honest-hearted people, what the foundation of all this faith, zeal, suffering and endurance is. The faith of these ancient worthies had faith for its foundation. Their faith was confidence in the faith, and it is the faith that the apostle is so careful to define at the start as the basis. The reason of it all, ah, the reason, yes, in the deepest sense, in the fullest sense the reason, for if there is anything in the world that has reason at its root, as the foundation thereof, the cause thereof, the alpha and omega thereof, it is the glorious cause that inspired those ancient worthies, and the cause which by the goodness of God, praise His name, you and I have had the honor to espouse.

But what is the definition? Here it is—"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen;" or better, "Faith is the basis (hupostasis) of things hoped for, a conviction of things unseen" (Diaglott). That is to say, the faith the apostle is defining is the foundation for our hoping for things we cannot yet see with the natural eye, and it is that which produces the conviction that the things constituting the one faith will assuredly be realized because they have been promised, and promised by the immutable God of the heavens above and the earth beneath—promised by Him, who, we know, never never failed to keep a single promise He ever made—show me anything within the experience of men, anything you ever heard of or ever saw that deserves, yea demands, faith, confidence, assurance based upon a reason equal to this if you can. That, brethren, is our foundation. Think of it, think about it, think it over, and then tell the world, tell everybody what you think about it; it will bear talking about, in season and out of season, in the street and on the housetops; whisper it softly in the ears of the suffering, sobbing, distressed one; shout it at the top of your voice to a rushing, reckless, perishing world, that our faith is the One Faith, and that the One Faith is founded upon the unalterable, unimpeachable, unfailing word of the Ever-Living God.

By this one faith the ancients, beginning with Abel, were attested. Their believing and obeying was what determined whether or not they were worth anything to God in carrying out to a finish the plan of the ages which the one faith is. Every creature has a reason for its existence, and the reason for the existence of thousands of creatures, animal and human, is the curse; but the one faith is the reason for an existence transcendently above and beyond this. What meaneth these masses of evil things, the one counteracting, to some extent, the other, but all—the acting and counteracting—evil, evil all the time? "I will multiply thy sorrow and thy conception" is the answer and the reason of all the chaos and confusion, in which the greatest part is fit only for a life an inch or two in length, and not fit for that, except as an object lesson in helping to learn the one faith. This one faith with the wings of the dove flies over a polluted, sin-corrupted world and by the law of divine attraction draws to itself those fit for its use in its divinely grand work of the ages, while Death, with the wings of the vulture, flies over and gluts itself upon the carrion of sin and corruption, and for the present, to the mere natural eye, the vulture would seem to have the best of it; but the one faith is a ship whose Captain knows the headlands, the rocks and the quicksands, and she is built to ride the raging waves of the sea of death, and destined, with the flag of the Lion of the tribe of Judah topmast, floating to the heavenly breeze, to proudly, gloriously and triumphantly sail safely into the haven of eternal rest, there to be welcomed by the sweet strains of angelic hosts. Brethren, are you on board? Is our little ship tossed by storm and tempest? Then cling to the ropes. Are pirates approaching? Then see that you have on the whole armor of God, and as good soldiers fight the good fight of faith, knowing no surrender, and never let you dunnner boy learn a retreating beat. A staunch ship is yours. She has weathered the storms and tempests of nearly six thousand years. She has been built and rigged to go to the rescue of the sin-exiled inhabitants of a lost, wrecked and ruined paradise. She rode the angry waves of a flood that carried the world of ungodly down to oblivion. She safely sailed clear of the vortex that swallowed up the proud empire of Babylon, and as she tossed about upon the troubled waters she saw many a ship of state go down; and still she is afloat with sails spread to the breeze, her faithful watchmen on the lookout, her Captain at the helm and plenty of little lifeboats, manned by brave and willing men, to put safely on board all who will lovingly respond to the sweet words which have echoed and re-echoed through the ages, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters * * * without money and without price. Wherefore will ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not, hearken diligently unto me."

Who would ever think it possible for mutiny ever to be raised on board such a ship as ours, brethren? When I first got on board I, in my simplicity, thought it impossible, didn't you? Alas! how we have been disappointed. But we forgot that we had not yet reached port, that we were still amid the breakers, and that on board we were there for training purposes, and would have to deal with human nature in its ugliest forms for the purpose of hammering it into shape in others and in ourselves now, in order to be fitted for the great work awaiting us in the age to come. So, as Kipling says in his "Recessional," "lest we forget," let us keep this training aspect of the one faith before our eyes and God forbid that we should throw a fellow sailor overboard for a trifle. If we do, then look out when our ship reaches port, when the question is asked, "Where is thy brother?" The answer, "Am I my brother's keeper?" will meet a dreadful fate.

"Branded like Cain to bear their load,
Abhorred of men and cursed of God."

Oh, what a fate! Of course there is danger of erring on both sides, and who is there of experience in the Truth who has not realized how hard it often is to know what to do? But He who is a God of mercy I believe will be more likely to have compassion on the merciful than on those who seem to forget that our mission in the future, not to mention the frail, weak present, is to mingle mercy with justice, a thing tyranny knows not how to do, but a thing true love delights to do—even with enemies.

The Authorized Version does not give us the proper meaning of the original in the second verse—"Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." It switches off the minds of many to the creation of physical worlds. The apostle sticks to his subject—the one faith; and shows what it relates to. The "Diaglott" is better—"In faith we perceive that the ages have been thoroughly adjusted by God's command." The one faith has to do with the ages, and these have been framed and formed with a view of reaching the age, the "age to come" which will be the one faith in full fruition. The same thing is referred to in Chap. 1:2: "In these last days spoke to us by a Son, whom he appointed heir of all things, on account of whom also he constituted the ages." The age to come is the age of the ages, all preceding ages leading up to it as a means to an end, with Christ, and the glory of the Father and the well-being of faithful men rising above all.

By looking down into the words with a mental effort we can see that this grand end was the mainspring of the faith of the ancient worthies. "For by it the elders obtained a good report." "By faith," or "by it" "Abel offered," etc. Abel hoped for things promised in the one faith and thus he had faith in the faith, and his faith was intelligent enough to teach him how to make an offering that would suit the requirements of the faith, an intelligence that must have been begotten by revelation. The "Lamb of God" that would "take away the sin of the world" was the alpha and omega of this faith; hence the offering of a proper typical sacrifice, to show that the fulfillment and realization of the one faith depended upon the sacrifice of Christ; and this because man had now fallen into a sin-cursed state and men would be sinners. This made manifest that God was just in his law of sin and death and that He would be merciful and just in His law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus.

It is evident that the law given to the Adamic family at the start—as soon as sin made it necessary—provided two kinds of offerings, one that required the shedding of blood, which was a sin-offering, and the other of the fruit of the field, which was a thank-offering. The latter was a token of gratitude for temporal blessings, and the other was an acknowledgment of sin, of the provision made for its removal, and an expression of assent to its justice and of thankfulness for its mercy. In this God was vindicated as a God of justice and thanked as a God of love and mercy, and man's reward for doing this was that he should ultimately realize the things "hoped for" and, therefore the things promised in the one faith.

The fact that there were two offerings does not clearly appear in our translation. It is only hinted by the fact that Cain offered of the fruit of the field, a thing we can hardly give him credit for inventing, and that he was not blamed for what he did do, only for what he did not do, which Abel did do. Instead of, "Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice" the original reads literally, "In faith, more sacrifice Abel than Cain offered," which allows for his offering the sin-offering and the meat or thank-offering, while the sin of Cain was in only keeping that part of the law which expressed gratitude for the temporal, and neglected to offer for the eternal.

This difference illustrates, too, the two classes of mankind—the natural and the spiritual. So the sons of Adam are still Cains and Abels. Instead of "he also brought" (Gen. iv:4) it should read, "Abel brought it also." That is, he brought the meat offering as well as the sin offering, while to Cain it was said even after his failure to do all that he should have done, "If thou doest not well (in being wroth with his brother) a sin-offering coucheth at thy door, or the door of thy fold. Now brethren, we must offer the meat-offering, give thanks to God for all temporal blessings; but more than this, and exceedingly more important than this is the sin-offering—the Lamb of God, "slain from the foundation of the world." And these offerings must be made in the intelligence of the one faith, so that we, like the ancient worthies, may thereby "be attested."

Now what does the sin-offering teach us? What was the occasion of its institution in Adam's family when that family was a little small circle, perhaps only two, evidently not more than four? The memorial we are about to partake of points to the very thing that institution did in Adam's family then. What does it teach us? It teaches us that away back there sin had been committed and that the wages of sin was death, and that God in His mercy provided a sacrifice to typically receive the penalty, a penalty which must afterwards be borne, and borne righteously, by the antitypical sacrifice—"the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," which means the removal by the second Adam's righteousness of all the evils that came by the first Adam's unrighteousness.

A "HORN" OF CONTENTION.

"And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land."—Dan 8:9.

We are too near the coming of the Lord to quarrel over a prophetic exegesis, yet the sure word of prophecy sustains so vital a relation to God's people that we should not allow an erroneous interpretation to be imposed upon us. When my interest was first aroused in this prophecy I was inclined to favor the Moslem view; but after a more careful study of the subject, rejected that theory, and applied the symbol to Rome. Observe:—

1. It is solely a Political Power.—The ism of Romanism appears in the eyes and mouth of the little horn (Dan. 7:8); destitute of those features that horn would be only a civil power. Query: If the eyes and mouth of the little horn (Dan. 7:8) symbolize the ism of Romanism, what feature of the little horn (Dan 8:9) introduces the ism of Islamism? None. Therefore Islamism is not found in this symbol.

2. It Exceeds Grecia.—While the he goat waxed very great, the little horn waxed exceeding great. Rome surpassed Grecia as a world power.

3. It Succeeds Grecia.—The prophetic program calls for but four world-wide kingdoms in successive order covering Gentile times, viz.: Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia and Rome. And this world power following Grecia must be Rome.

There are no interregnums of world kingdoms in this chapter; neither does the eleventh chapter contain any. There are intervals in the succession of individual reigns in Dan. 11, but no break in the successional order of universal empires. The reasonableness of this view appears at once, while the Moslem theory of jumping from Grecia 600 years right over the supremacy of Rome into Islamism, becomes even absurd. But we should let others speak:

"Of course it would be very consistent if such a divine rule of succession applied to Dan. 8; but it is utterly a begging of the question to assume that, because it would be consistent, therefore the rule does apply there. There is no such cast-iron divine rule in Bible prophecy."—(Safeguard and Armory, April, 1911, p. 59.)

What! Is there no such cast-iron divine rule of consistency in the prophetic Word? What, then, cannot be hatched up from the sure word of prophecy to suit men's notions? Surely the divine rule is consistent with the divine order.

4. It is Northwest of Ancient Civilization.—This power could not arise in the south, for it waxed great toward the south. It could not originate in the east, for it waxed great toward the east. It could not, and never can, arise in Jerusalem, for it waxed great toward the pleasant land. No such a thing arose in the north, so we are shut out of every place except one, viz. Rome.

Taking, then, the Islam view, insurmountable difficulties meet us at once; but to obviate them the following solutions are urged:—

(a) "He (Mohammed) first extended his empire south, conquering Mecca and adjacent territory; then extending his dominion east he subjected all of Middle Arabia; then he went toward the pleasant land, subjecting Northern Arabia, Syria and Palestine" (A. M. Goodwin, in "World's Crisis," April 19, 1911.)

But the terms "south" and "east" are too comprehensive in the Bible to confine them to such a small area. Besides, how could this power, pent up in so circumscribed a district, exceed the supremacy of the goat? No, my brother, you will have to give the fellow more room than that to expand, according to the specified dimensions.

(b) Another writer says: "Take your stand where Islam, as a religio-political power, first appeared to the world . . . on territory admitted to be a part of the old Alexandrian empire, and that particular part of it which was always included in the Egypt division. From this point which way did Islam grow? Toward the south—Egypt first, and later all of Northern and Central Africa, all known as the south. . . . Toward the east, first Persia, and then all Central Asia—today the stronghold of Islam. Toward the pleasant land—Palestine, unquestionably, which means north" (Safeguard and Armory, April, 1911, p. 99.)

I would ask: How could Islamism, or any other power situated in Northwest Arabia, conquer toward Central Asia without going straight through Palestine? Then why specify? Surely the great Babylonian statesman and native of Judah knew the lay of the land better than that. And every Bible student ought to know that the home of ancient Israel, lying right in the wake of ancient nations, always came into contact with southern kings, conquering toward the east and northeast. No, we shall have to make another change.

Another brother writes me that we should make the starting point of this threefold development at some place north of Palestine, where Islam was established as a great power.

Well, keep on, brother, shifting it about, you'll get it right after awhile.

5. It Casts Down and Trompies Upon Ancient Israel.—"And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them," etc.

The host of heaven refers to the Jewish nation, in whose custody were placed the heavenly treasures. (Rom. 3:2). These were retained until the host was destroyed by Rome at the first advent. Here Rome appears on time and fills the bill so perfectly that it is needless to analyze further. But Islamism is tardy 600 years.

M. C. BURT.

HEEDING THE SHEPHERD.

"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish."—John 10:27, 28.

No better analysis can be given of these verses than that of the eminent Puritan, John Trapp, which is as follows: "My sheep"—there is election; "hear my voice,"—there is vocation; "and I know them,"—there is justification; "and they follow me,"—there is sanctification; "and I give unto them eternal life,"—there is glorificaton.

WATER LIKE STEEL.

Water can be put through a nozzle so fast that it becomes as hard as steel, and if struck with a sword the weapon is broken or dented. Similarly the track of water behind a big speeding ocean liner is like rocks and may buck ferryboats or buckle and break the rudders off tender craft that thoughtlessly push and paddle into this dangerous, rigid undertow. A government engineer says he has been looking for something serious from this cause in New York harbor.

In sectarian phraseology "religious prosperity" means the secular advancement of a sect in proportion to its worldly conformity; so that true religion is a desperate struggle with the insidious corruption of professed allies.

THE RESTITUTION

Issued weekly by
THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

Application for entry as second class mail matter at Cleveland pending.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months, 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....EDITOR
HOLLIS W. NUTT.....MANAGER

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 813 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

All communications intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 1023 Lee Ave., Cleveland, O.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the Editor exercises a general supervision over the various departments of THE RESTITUTION, he does not extend to the individual writers of same the endorsement of the sentiments of each in the expression of their views.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 16, 1911

EDITORIAL

CONFESSION.

A parent asked a priest his boy to bless,
Who forthwith cleared him, he must confess.
"Well," said the boy, "suppose, sir, I am a thief,"
What is your charge?" "Oh you 'tis but a shilling."
"Must all men pay and all men make confession?"
"Yes, every man of Catholic profession."
"And who do you confess?" "Why the dean."
"And do the deans confess?" "Yes, boy, they do.
Confess to bishops and pay smartly too."
"Do bishops, sir, confess? if so to whom?"
"Why, they confess and pay the Pope of Rome."
"Well," quoth the boy, "all this is very odd;
And does the pope confess?" "Oh yes, to God."
"And does God charge the pope?" "No, quoth the priest.
"Eh," quoth the boy, "what, nothing? Oh, then, God is best:
God is able to forgive, and always willing;
To Him will I confess, and save my shilling."

"The truth in Montana," an article in this issue by Bro. Thomas, will be read with great interest by hundreds of readers. It will be food for their hungry souls. From week to week they will watch his narrative, more fascinating than a love story, to see how things "come out." To relieve any painful anxiety we give you this hint-let: It "comes out" victoriously, triumphantly, and gloriously. The Lord be praised!

From Sisters Anna Drew and Lula Whitehead we have received a copy of "Berean Bible Lessons," which copy they explain is to be revised and printed as re-arranged. They desire all the states to use these booklets next year. The plan is fine, and we hope it will materialize. Full information can be obtained by addressing Sister Drew, of Dixon, Ill., or Sister Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

Sister Kathryn Townsend writes: "'Sunday Morning Address' in last issue was perfectly grand. If you only could imagine how we enjoy the sermons, you certainly would have one in each issue." Well, sister, we plan to have a sermon in each issue just as soon as we return home, and get things running smoothly.

"THEY PROFESS THAT THEY KNOW GOD."

(Titus 1, 16).

Professors are not always possessors. You may profess to be a Christian, without possessing Christ. You may have religion apart from regeneration. You may have a "name to live" (Rev. iii. 1), and yet "have no life in you" (John vi. 53). It is counted respectable to "go to church," to make "a religious profession," to be a nominal Christian, and at the same time indulge in all the pleasures, pastimes, and frivolities of the world. To "the sacrament" one day, and to the race course the next; to take "holy communion" in the morning, and play golf or cards later; to attend "Divine Worship" one part of the Lord's day and go to the theater the other. Such is the popular Christianity of the hour, and it finds ready acceptance with the crowd. But is it of God? Does it please Him? Is it real? God hates shams. He disowns religious formality; it is "abomination in His sight" (Prov. xv. 8, Isa. i. 13). Hypocrisy and empty profession meet His withering curse (Matt. xxiii. 23-25), and must yet know His wrath (Rom. i. 18). Reader, make sure your religion is real.

DOING ONE'S BEST.

"When a person is urged to accept Christ," writes Milford W. Foshay, "the excuse is often made, 'Oh, I am afraid I cannot hold out.' Or, 'No, I'm not ready yet. When I join the church I'm no going to be as lax as Christians I know do. When I go into it, I'm going into it for all it's worth!'"

Quite right. But when we say, "Come on, then," he does not, and we begin to fear that his position is taken as an excuse only, even if it is a true principle. That each one should do his best when he accepts Christ, goes without saying; but that a person should wait until he is sure he can live a faultless life is assuming something that God does not require. The Lord is ready to accept the real intent of the heart to live aright, and toward that perfection for which we should strive he has promised his help.

Moreover, he has promised his assistance to enable us to hold out while we are striving. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." The best anyone can do is acceptable with God. Paul gives this as a principle of Christian service: "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." And Jesus said, "She hath done what she could." He who strives to serve God with a pure heart may be sure that the character of the outward service will be acceptable."

"IN THE DAY."

Gen. 2 17.

[illegible] used in this text, is translated in thirteen different ways, but only three of the thirteen could be used in this text, which are, in, after and against. The choice of the right preposition depends entirely upon the translator's understanding of the passage. Against the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die, does not express a clear idea. Then the choice is between the two prepositions in and after. After the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die, makes just as good sense as in the day. In Num. xxviii. 26 the Hebrew preposition be is correctly and necessarily rendered both in and after, as follows: "Also in the day of the first fruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the Lord, after your weeks be out ye shall have a holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work." It would not make sense to say 'in your weeks be out." The sense requires that both in and after should be used in this verse. In Gen. ii. 17 and Num. xviii. 26, the words "in the day" are a correct translation of the Hebrew words be yom; and it would be just as proper to render each after the day, provided the word after expresses the correct idea. Gesenius, the noted Hebrew lexicographer says: "Where the mind rests more on the end of a period, and spoken therefore of time already past, the preposition be should be rendered after." This is just the case in Gen. ii. 17. The Creator was calling the attention of Adam to the fact that death must follow if he ate of the forbidden tree, not that he should die in the day he ate; for, when explaining the penalty he says: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 19.

"VERBAL VERITY."

The following is taken from an exchange. It strikes that phase of "Higher Criticism" which denies the "verbal" inspiration of the Bible. We should be posted regarding this modern phase of unbelief, which, discarding the old-fashioned, brutal reasoning of Thomas Paine concerning the Bible as a "fraud," and the work of unscrupulous "priests," has gained a Bible authority by the subtle suggestion that we must not rely too implicitly on what the Bible says, since on the occasions where the quoted words of Moses, Paul, Peter, Christ, etc., were spoken, "there was no reporter present!"

Moses says (Deut. 28:17. 19): "The Lord said unto me, * * * I will raise them up a prophet among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words into his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

The record of John, 1481 years later, is: "We have found him of whom Moses * * * did write, Jesus of Nazareth" (1:45). Peter (Acts 3:22, 23, 26) and Stephen (Ibid 7:37) make it plain, distinctly and undeniably, that Jesus is the "Prophet" whom Moses foretold. Alone this there can be no question.

Jesus came a Prophet—not a "seer," predictor of events, but, as the derivation of the word implies, a speaker for another. His own account of his function, both as to his prophetic message and method of conveying it, must be considered final.

As to his message, Jesus expressly disclaims any and all initiative and origination. He says: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me" (John 7:16). "I do nothing of myself, but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things" (8:28). "The Father which sent me, gave me a commandment, which I should say and what I should speak. * * * Whatsoever I speak, therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (12: 49, 50).

As to the media of the message, he is equally explicit. Something beyond "concepts," or "substance of doctrine," is definitely declared. Doctrines must be conveyed by words. Accordingly, in his last discourse to his disciples, Jesus says: "The words that I speak unto you, I speak not of myself" (John 14:10), "and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me" (vs. 24); and addressing the Father, "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me" (John 17:8). Thus the divinity of both the message and the expression of it is vouched for.

And, indeed, how can the truthfulness of a message be vouched for, unless the accuracy of its expression be guaranteed? Verbal verity, becomes an absolute necessity. He, therefore, who impugns the Divine Message by invalidating the expression of it, or who impugns the "expression" of it—and so invalidates the Message incurs a very serious responsibility. The "Scholars" who are exploiting the notion that Jesus fell in with the current mistaken notions of his time, and so taught doctrines which he did not know to be true, or which he knew were not true—i. e., to put it plainly, was thus an ignoramus, or he lied! are engaged in a proceeding that is little, if any, short of blasphemy.

Said God to Moses: "Whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he (the Prophet) shall speak in my name, I will require it of him. Peter gives an exposition of the word "require", destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:23).

Now, it may be "smart," and "liberal," and "up-to-date," and above all, "scholarly," to evacuate the doctrines of God of their contents, by vaporizing or explaining away their terminology, or to misinterpret their words by giving them false equivalents—a very prevalent practice, but certainly those who do this are putting themselves in a perilous position.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Brother Huggins:

The Church here had the pleasure of a short visit from Brother Adams last Sunday, after a long siege of work in the western part of the state which, though both pleasant and profitable, the extreme hot weather a part of the time, made hard. We are glad to see him and listen to the kind words of counsel and exhortation, which he so ably gives. To the brethren in Nebraska he is pastor, as well as evangelist. Like Paul, he must preach in other cities also, and is now on his way to several points east before reaching Ohio in time for the conference there.

CARRIE FREE, Sec.
Blair, Neb.

I know a brother who is writing an article on chronology, and who wishes to know the year that the Pope of Rome lost his power over the nations. He asked me when it was; I told him I thought it was the year 1870. He thinks it was 1871. I told him I would ask you, for you are a good authority on time, especially on ecclesiastic time. Has the Pope's power been destroyed over the nations? I see by the Little Rock Gazette that church and state are warring in Spain. Will the Pope's power be destroyed before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ? Please answer if you have the time. I want to see the kingdom of Jesus in power. Yours fraternally,

J. L. MCNCRIEF, Sr.
Bear, Ark.

[Of the Little Horn it is said in Daniel that its dominion is "taken away, to consume and destroy it unto the end." The power of the Papacy was to be broken by slow degrees. He is to die with consumption, gradually, slowly, and painfully (2 Thess. 2:8). But he is to exist in some form, however weak, until destroyed (finally) "with the brightness of His (Christ's) coming." The loss of the Pope's temporal power in 1870 may be viewed as the completion of what began in 1793 in the French Convention, and was further advanced in 1798, when, in the Campo Vaccino, the ancient Roman Forum, the Pontifical government was pronounced, in the midst of the populace, to be at an end; while on the following day fourteen cardinals, in the Pope's absence, met in the Vatican, and signed the renunciation of the temporal power. The dominion of the Little Horn was officially taken away when the Franco-German war was declared, which led to the immediate withdrawal of the French troops from Rome, and the consequent fall of the Pope's temporal power, which for several years they had served alone to support. The loss of the Papal power was completed on the 20th of September, 1870, when Rome was declared the capital of Italy, and made the seat of government by Victor Emmanuel as its selected king. As a spiritual power, however, the Papacy is still strong, millions are subject to its sway. When the "Kingdom of God comes with power," as our correspondent intimates, the baneful influence of Rome upon the souls of men will be broken.—Editor.]

THE TRUTH IN MONTANA.

To the isolated brother and sister who long to do some work for the Master, these lines are especially addressed. There are hundreds of such, full of zeal, but who seem to have no place to work in the Lord's vineyard. The writer is one such. Lacking the gift of oratory, and isolated among aliens, it seemed a difficult task to command attention and compel belief from among such an army of scoffers. Nevertheless, we have accomplished it with God's help and blessing, several times during our short span of life; and it occurs to us that a short history of our last effort may be of interest and serve as a pointer which may guide others to a like success.

It is a well known fact that publishers of country newspapers greedily reach in all directions for news or sensational "copy." The public demands it, and the newspaper must furnish it or go out of business. Now if by the use of a little tact we can present a truth in a way that will arrest attention, much good may result. A country newspaper is the best medium we know by which to reach the masses of the people, if we can but get access to it. At first thought we are inclined to conclude that there is nothing new or sensational about the "Glad tidings of the Kingdom, and the name of Jesus Christ," but this is a mistake. Many truths which we hold most dear can be so stated as to act in the nature of a shock to the average so-called Christian, and his attention once arrested and interest excited, the rest is often easy. For example: suppose a brother sends the following to his country paper: Editor, News: A prize of $100 has been offered for any passage of Scripture which states that any man will go to heaven at death, or at any other time. I have searched for such a passage, but so far without success. Surely a doctrine so generally believed by everybody, is found in the Bible. Will some reader of the News, who is better posted than I, inform one where such a promise is found?" Such a notice seldom fails to bring a reply, and public interest becomes aroused and an opportunity created, which, if followed up, often brings rich results. Following is an account of our last effort along this line.

PINEHURST BIBLE CLASS.

May 26. The "Pinehurst Bible class" meets every Sunday night at the home of Mr. R. L. Walker for the purpose of Bible study and song service. This is everybody's Bible class; all are welcome. Their sole object is to learn more of the teachings of the Bible, and ideas, new or old, are welcome. Miss Bessie Thomas acts as organist and performs the service in a pleasing manner. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Editor "Dayton Leader": A member of the "Pinehurst Bible Class" offers a prize of $100 for a passage of Scripture which plainly states that mankind has by nature an immortal or never dying soul. This price is offered with the hope of stimulating Bible study, and a search for truth. The party who offers the prize is responsible, and the money will be paid if fairly won.

June 23. The Pinehurst Bible Class have concluded that the generally accepted idea that mankind has an immortal or never-dying soul, which lives on and is conscious after the death of the body, is not a Bible doctrine and is not found there. The prize of $100, offered for any such passage of Scripture, is still unclaimed.

S. H. THOMAS.
Proctor, Montana.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

(Jas. 1:22.)

Somebody did a golden deed,
Proving himself a friend in need;
Somebody sang a cheerful song,
Brightening the skies the whole day long—
Was that somebody you?

Brothers and sisters, have we done something this day that has cheered another's heart? Have we let slip an opportunity of building up another's life rather than tear it down? There are many outside of God's flock who have stumbled and lie bruised on the rugged rocks of life. We must act the part of the Samaritan if we would gain a blessing. We are commanded to be "kindly affectioned one to another." Rom. 12-10. Have we, with a patient hand removed all the briars and scattered sunshine and kindness along another's path? In short, have we proven ourselves a friend indeed? In Solomon's maxims we find, "Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel." But he also says that "a man that hath friends must show himself friendly." So Solomon considers the act of making friends as something coming from within, a virtue if you wish. And he who has such a nature as these maxims state further, is a friend "that sticketh closer than a brother." As we have gone about our work has it been with a frown and words of petulance? Let us hope not. Rather have a song in our hearts if not on our lips, and a pleasant look is sure to come on our faces; and sometimes its influence is scattered so that our happiness is reflected in our neighbor. We read that "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine." Let us try it, for I am sure that you will feel all the better for it.

"Somebody tho't 'tis sweet to live,
Willingly said, 'I'm glad to give;'
Somebody fought a valiant fight,
Bravely he lived to shield the right,—
Was that somebody you?"

It is sweet to live. In the grave no one can sing praises unto the Lord, or bless His Holy Name, or give thanks to Him. Just count your many blessings, and the gifts of our loving Heavenly Father, the greatest of which is His Son, and before you know it a prayer is involuntarily breathed by you. When the word "gift" is mentioned, we think of something given with a willing heart, because the giver has a kindly feeling for some one; likewise a gracious acceptance of it, not because of the intrinsic value of the gift, but because it was given with a true friendly regard in the proper spirit. If we are asked for help the asker will rejoice more over a very small portion, if a blessing goes with it, than a great deal given grudgingly. God loves a cheerful giver, and God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that ye always having sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work.

"Shrink not the smallest mite to give,
If 'tis your best, God will receive."

It is said that if you give to the poor you lend to the Lord. Oh how glad we ought to be to help a little and thus by some small act of kindness, make a little atonement for our Savior's dear sacrifice. We must fight valiantly, bravely, day by day, to put down the meanness and vices of our earthly nature, and change them to virtues for Christ's sake. Brother and sister, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that you are able." It isn't what one has to bear, but what one chooses to remember, that makes the difference. If you decide to review the unpleasant things, how easy it is to lose sight of all the pleasant ones. And if you review the things you have to be thankful for, all that is left doesn't seem worth counting. If we do some good for some one and they soon forget the hand that bestowed the gift or wrought the deliverance, it is hard not to become angry and stop all good works begun. "They render me evil for good," is an experience of more than one of God's people. But just remember that God knows. He will judge righteously. Rather let us constantly seek His approval by doing those things which are acceptable in His sight. One proverb says, "Nothing succeeds like success." Let us think we can and the right kind of results will follow.

"Somebody filled all the hours,
Carelessly crushed life's rarest flowers;
Somebody made life loss, not gain,
Thoughtlessly seemed to live in vain,—
Was that somebody you?"

Are we living in vain, using all the lovely things of God's beautiful world for our own selfish ends, crushing life's rarest flowers? How can one help but become large hearted when he looks about him and sees the great heart of the Maker throbbing in every thing. As Paul says, "Ye are not your own." We are here working for a master. No right is given us to misuse our talents. Let us consecrate our lives still more to God, and we shall lose nothing by it; for we are told that if we lose our lives for Christ we shall find them. Some people whine when it rains (it's so cloudy), and are cross when the sun shines (because of the glare). They seem to fling God's gifts right back in his face. But he looks above these things and pitys them and finds comfort in the praise of a few of his little flock. If we do not look up we are sure to look down, and if the inner man does not reach out for the blessings from above, we will soon grovel in the dust. Let us always keep the right end of the telescope to our eyes so that we can truly see His great gifts.

"Somebody filled the day with light,
Constantly chased away the night,
Somebody's work, love, joy, and peace,
Surely his life shall never cease,—
Was that somebody you?"

One writer says: "If you do not now the good which you can, the time will come when you cannot do the good you would." Are we discouraged because one or two struggling sinners have cast away the life line we have thrown to them? What is defeat if we keep on trying, and can look back with no regret to some one helped along in this life? To fail, one, two or three times, is not to be defeated. We are defeated only when we make ourselves believe that it is no use to try again.

He was a poor old horse, but he was so happy; he was drawing a heavy load too, but even that was forgotten, for right in front of him, as he pulled his weary load, there was a hay wagon. From this he was getting a bit of unexpected refreshment along the way; and we ought to confess to a great desire to be a human hay wagon, and unknown to ourselves, feed those whose lives touch ours. Then in that last great day we shall not have to stand empty-handed at the meeting of our Lord.

FRANCIS RUSSELL.
Cleveland, Ohio.

VERY IMPORTANT.

For several weeks we will be away from home. Our city and home address as given at head of editorial page will always find us, but when absent from home, mail is retarded by being forwarded. Let all concerned then please note our address on the dates following: Aug. 11 to 18, Troy, Ohio, General Delivery; Aug. 18 to 31, Moorefield, Neb., General Delivery.

There is no burden of spirit that is not lightened by kneeling under it.—Monsefa

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP. No. 13.

To ascribe error to the product of inspiration is beyond mere belief; it is a palpable "lie" of no small magnitude. Hence the prospect for those who love and make it is exclusion from "the holy city." That city is of Spirit constitution, and its inhabitants will consist only of those who have sown to the Spirit (Gal. vi. 8). If the inspired word be partly fallible, those who work by it must necessarily sow to both flesh a d Spirit; in which case it would be exceedingly difficult for any to "reap of the Spirit, life everlasting." The flesh is, in itself, a sufficient impediment to an upright walk, without any particle of its corrupt element being combined with the Spirit. We may be certain that He who said, "The thinking of the flesh is death, but the thinking of the Spirit is life and peace." (Rom. viii. 6), permitted no amalgamation of such antagonistic elements.

The declaration of unabated confidence in the divine authorship, and consequent infallibility of the Bible, accompanied by the refusal to fellowship those who believe in the fallible authorship of some parts, has been compared to the act of Uzza, in puting forth his hand to save the ark. If the analogy be correct, the doom awaiting those of us who have taken this step is judicial death. Just before such a conclusion can be accepted, the circumstances of the incident must be examined. The, charge implies that between the ark and the Bible there is a perfect parallel. This is a useful and important admission; if adhered to it will simplify the task of replying.

It is recorded that "David gathered all Israel together . . . to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim" (1 Chron. xiii. 5); "they carried the ark of God in a new cart," Uzza being one of the drivers (ver. 7); "when they came unto the threshing-floor of Chidon . . . the oxen stumbled," and "Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark" (ver. 9); for this the Lord "smote him," and "he died before God" (verse 10). David not understanding the meaning of this "breach," "was displeased"; and, being afraid of God, he "brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite" (ver 13). Within "three months" David had ascertained the cause of Uzza's death; he had learned that "none ought to carry the ark of God but the Levites" (ch. xv. 2). He therefore assembled "the fathers of the Levites", and said to them, 'sanctify yourselves, both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the Lord God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it. For because ye did it not at the first, the Lord our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not after the due order" (ch. xv. 12-13). The "due order" prescribed by the law of Moses was that the Kohathites, "sons of Levi," should, when the ark required removing, carry it by means of "staves" passed through the "rings" of its "four corners" (Num. iv. 2-6); Exod. xxv. 12-15). To carry it in a cart," although "new," was a violation of this "order," and hence the divine wrath was caused by disregard of God's command. It was a right thing to carry the Ark; about this there can be no question. But it was wrong for it to be carried by beasts of burden; human beings, and those only who were sanctified were to perform the task. Even they were not to "touch" it "lest they die" (Num. iv 15). Uzza violated this prohibition, and, although his intentions were good, he suffered the threatened penalty. He profaned the Ark by bringing into contact with it an unholy, erring, human element, contrary to divine appointment. The counterpart to this in relation to the Bible, is the attempt to uphold the inspired word by attributing to some parts a human authorship; the defence of its complete divine authorship is paralleled by the sanctified Levites carrying the Ark according to God's command.

The Ark, like everything else connected with the Tabernacle, was designed by God; no part of it—either shape, size, or material—was left to human selection (Exod. xxv. 10-16). And the mechanical act of constructing it was effected under the direct influence of inspiration; Bezaleel was "filled with the Spirit of God" (Exod. xxxi. 3) for this very purpose. The Ark was a material embodiment of divine ideas, and the Bible is an expression of the Diety's mind in a written form; the sacred character of the Ark is an indication of the sanctity of the inspired Scriptures. The places unto which the Ark came were made "holy" (2 Chron. viii. 11); and the human minds in which the inspired word find a lodgment are sanctified by it (Jno. xvii. 7). It is as profane to attribute a partial human design to the latter as it would be to the former. It was the loss of the Ark of God that caused the death of Eli (1 Sam. iv. 18); and its profanation by the Philistines brought upon them "a very great destruction" and "a great slaughter" (1 Sam. v. ix. 6-19); incidents which are full of admonition in regard to the treatment of the inspired word.

The Ark contained "the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant" (Hebrew ix. 4). The manna typifies eternal life, the budded rod prefigures Christ after resurrection, and the tables of stone represent the commands to be obeyed to fulfil the will of God; these tables were engraved with the two aspects of love—love to God and love to man—on which "hang all the law and the prophets" (Matt. xxii. 37-40), and likewise it may be added the apostles. Collectively the contents of the Ark symbolize "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ;" the almond rod, apart from the bud, typifies all that is predicted and recorded concerning Christ in his humiliation, and the rod with the bud, all that is written respecting him since resurrection. And what about the Ark itself? It finds its parallel in the historical, genealogical, and chronological parts of holy writ, which uphold and contain the doctrinal and practical teaching. To separate the one from the other is analogous to making a distinction between the Ark and its contents; the structure of shittim wood covered with gold, was not less of divine conception and providing than were the manna, the budded rod, and the tables of stone. All were equally holy and the Levites were under the obligation to protect and carry the whole. The faithful performance of this duty was one of the items essential to their fellowship with the God of Israel; their neglect in the reign of David produced the "breach" of which Uzza's death was a sign (1 Chron. xv. 13). So far, therefore, from this incident being a warning to the upholders of a wholly-inspired and infallible Bible, it is full of encouragement for them to continue; and on the other hand, it is a lesson of reproof to those who say that the Bible is partly inspired, that its inspiration has not always secured infallibility, or that fellowship is limited only on such portions as may be described to "revelation."

In reply to the foregoing argument, it will be said that the Ark typifies Christ, not the word of inspiration. But, inasmuch as some of the Mosaic "patterns" typify more than one of the "things in the heavens" (Heb. ix. 23), this answer cannot, in itself, be considered satisfactory. Is it not possible that the Ark is a type of both Christ and the inspired Word? It is more than possible, or even probable, it is a certainty; and the proof is to be found in the Apocalyptic statement, "His name is called The Word of God" (Rev. i. 9-13). There is a written Word of God, and a personal Word of God, and the identity between the two is as close as their respective characteristics permit. Christ was once "the Word made flesh" (John i. 14); he is now the Word made Spirit. The Son of Mary was an embodiment of the divine mind, and the Holy Scriptures are an expression of the same. The mental and moral principles of the Written Word were transferred to the mind of Jesus Christ:—"I delight to do Thy will, O my God; yea thy law is within my heart" (Ps. xl. 8); "thy Word have I hid in my heart" (Ps. cix. 11). As the tables of stone and the Manna were "hidden" (Rev. ii. 17) in the ark, so love to God and man, and the Spirit's food were within the heart of Christ—with this result, that he "preached righteousness in the great congregation" (Ps. xl. 9). The principles of the written Word comprise love, mercy, faith, patience, justice and righteousness; all of which were exemplified in the life of Christ. He has since become an embodiment of them in a higher sense, inasmuch as spirit is superior to flesh; and to these must be added two others, viz., incorruptibility and infallibility.

THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

DEUT. 12, 23.

"But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat" (Gen. 9, 7). "For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your soul for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul" (Lev. 17, 11). "Without shedding of blood is no remission," (of sins) (Heb. 9, 22). "Jesus Christ who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood" (Rev. 1, 5).

It is evident from these quotations, 1st, that the life is in the blood; 2nd, that according to God's plan of salvation there can be no remission of sins without the shedding of blood; 3rd, that Jesus the Christ shed His blood for us upon the cross; 4th, neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved (Act 4, 12).

When we examine the circulation of the blood in a living being, we find that to the ordinary observer there are apparently two classes of blood in circulation: one is veins or dark blood, the other is arterial and bright as scarlet. If a cut is made into the living body, the blood from a vein flows slowly, but that from an artery spurts; the arterial blood is being thrown from the heart, so to speak, to every part of the body, carrying in its stream life and health to all the tissues; while the veins are carrying back to the heart, and from there to the lungs, much of the waste material of the body. This waste material is being carried out in combination with the oxygen that has been brought in with the arterial blood, and which has bathed every tissue of the body; and when this oxygen combines with the waste material of the body, then the blood assumes the dark color. This dark blood, as I have said, goes to the lungs, where the waste material is thrown out through the breath, and the pure oxygen of the atmosphere comes in and combines with the blood corpuscles and makes them of a bright scarlet color again. This process has to go on constantly. If the air is cut off for a few minutes from any breathing creature, it will die. The atmosphere is composed, roughly speaking (there is a fraction which we need not mind at present), of 21 parts of oxygen and 79 parts of nitrogen. There are traces of other substances, even in the purest of air on the hilltop, much more so in cities; but the purer the air the better for living beings. As far as is known at present, the nitrogen is not used in the living being but is thrown out again in the breath; but, the oxygen is absolutely essential to life.

We are told in the Scriptures that God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul (or living being) Gen. 2,7. And then we have this statement when mankind had greviously transgressed against God's laws: "And behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life from under heaven, and every thing that is in the earth shall die." Gen. 6, 17. And we are told later, "All flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl and of cattle, and of beasts, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land died." Gen. 7, 21-25. Notice that the writer is careful to state "all that was in (or on) the dry land died." God stopped the breath of all those, both men and animals alike, who lived by inhaling the oxygen in the atmosphere. The word in the sixth and seventh chapters translated "breath" is the Hebrew word ruach. The translators of the so-called King James version have translated this word breath, spirit, wind, mind, blast, courage, anger, quarters, vain, air, tempest, and whirlwind. There are some very important passages in this connection: Ezek. 37, 8: "Behold I will cause breath (ruach) to enter into you, and ye shall live"; Ver. 6, "and put breath (ruach) in you, and ye shall live"; Ver. 8, "but there was no breath (ruach) in them"; Ver. 9, "then said He to me, 'prophesy unto the wind (ruach), prophesy son of man, and say to the wind (ruach), these saith the Lord God, 'Come from the four winds (ruach), breath (ruach), and breathe upon these slain that they may live'"; Ver. 10, "so I prophesied as He commanded me, and the breath (ruach) came into them, and they lived and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army." The Psalmist says, Psa. 104, 29: "Thou takest away their breath (ruach), they die, and return to their dust"; Ver. 30, "Thou sendest forth thy spirit (ruach), they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth."

We have seen how God breathed into Adam the breath of life and he became a living being; also how he took away the breath of all mankind, except those who were in the ark, by covering them with water at the flood. All men and animals died alike, because the air was cut off from their nostrils. Both men and animals, then, can only continue to live as long as they are able to inhale the air, or the blood is allowed to remain in their bodies: if either is withdrawn from them they both alike die. Consequently the Scriptures and observation are against the immortality of the soul.

From the beginning, in God's dealings with men, after Adam's transgression, sacrifice of animals were commanded to be made; and all those sacrifices of animals were typical of Christ, or pointed forward to a spotless one who was to die, pour out His life's blood for the sins of the world, consequently he could not be an immortal being. If he was the eternal God, as the second person in the trinity, as most so-called Christians claim he is, then he could not possibly die or be tempted either. "But Christ being come a high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, that is to say, not of the building, neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in and into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. Heb. 9, 11, 12. Before Christ's death and resurrection Christ lived as we do by inhaling the air, to vivify his blood and lived by eating food, as we do, in order to make fresh blood to repair the waste. Of his body after his resurrection, all the condition of life was changed. "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruit of them that slept." 1 Cor. 15, 20.

A. WALLACE MASON.
St. Catherines, Ont., Can.

CORN SHEAVES.

GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.

"SIR MOSES."—Once on a Sunday, the ceremony of "setting the tombstone" of Sir Moses Montefiore was performed. The Jewish rabbi officiating (Dr. Loewe) said the stone upon which the deceased baronet rested had been brought from Mount Moriah; and they were setting his tombstone on the 3,158th anniversary of the death of Moses, who brought them out of Egypt. That is "the dead past." What will the living future show? On this the rabbi could say nothing; but another rabbi cleared this all up 1800 years ago—even he, the prophet like unto Moses, whose tombstone was not "set," but unset, and that too by angelic hands. Israel will have none of him yet; but, by-and-bye, there will be a change.

"A wise servant shall have rule over a son that causeth shame, and shall have part of the inheritance among the brethren." Prov. 17:2.

OHIO CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The ninth annual conference of the Church of God will be held at Troy, Ohio, August 16-20. Those coming should write Brother Jno. Lehman, Troy, Ohio. R. 5. Come in the spirit of love that we may be built up and strengthened in our most holy faith.

Come on the Big Four or C. H. & D. Upon arrival in Troy, go west to the street car line, then north to the station, just over the canal. There take the Dayton and Piqua car going north, and get off at the fair ground.

ANNA LEHMAN.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska will be held in Moorefield, Nebraska, from August 26 to September 3, inclusive. Meals will be furnished at 10c, and lodging free.

Now brethren, let us all make a special effort to be there and help make the conference a success. Especially to the isolated ones and the young people do we say, Come. Do not miss the chance of getting into the spirit of the work and understanding what is needed. This is the time when we can get in touch with one another and learn to love each other if we come in the right spirit. Remember the conference should be in the interest of Christ and His work, not our desires.

Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio, Editor of The Restitution, has been secured as speaker. The most of us got acquainted with him last year, and will enjoy his second visit. The young people know him through the Berean lessons. We expect to have a "Berean Day" to be given over the young people. Let all be on hand to take part. If further information is wanted, write Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebraska.

ALTA KING,
Sec'y of Conference Board.

OHIO CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

August 16th.

7:30 p. m. Music and Prayer. Address of welcome, John Lehman. Response, C. A. Goss. President's address, "Touching Elbows."

Thursday, August 17th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible School, R. G. Huggins.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, Sister Neill.
1:30 to 1:45 p.m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:45 p. m. Bible School, W. S. Tomlinson.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, Sister Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, W. S. Westfall.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Friday, August 18th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song and prayer service.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school, D. C. Robison.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
11:00 to 12:00 a. m. Sisters' meeting.
1:15 to 1:30 p. m. Song service.
1:30 to 2:30 p. m. Bible school, Almus Adams.
2:45 to 3:30 p. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Question box.
7:00 to 7:30 Social meetings, Howard Pearson.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.

Saturday, August 19th.

8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Song service and prayer, Sr. Brewer.
9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Bible school, C. A. Goss.
10:00 to 10:45 a. m. Sermon, J. F. Wagoner.
11:00 to 12:00 Young people's meeting.
1:30 to 1:45 p. m. Song service.
1:45 to 2:30 Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
2:30 to 3:15 a. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:15 to 4:15 p. m. Business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, David Beck.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.

Sunday, August 20th.

9:00 to 10:00 a. m. Table service, J. F. Wagoner. Social meeting, Ashford Lehman.
10:00 to 10:45 a.m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
11:00 to 11:45 a. m. Sermon, D. C. Robison.
2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Song service, Stanley Sanford.
2:30 to 3:15 p. m. Sermon, Almus Adams.
3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Sermon, W. C. Heacock.
7:00 to 7:30 p. m. Social meeting, Hattie Sanford.
7:30 p. m. Sermon, R. G. Huggins. Farwells.

D. C. ROBISON,
W. C. HEACOCK,
H. A. LEHMAN.
Committee.

PROGRAM OF IOWA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus.

GREETING:

The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at the camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, commencing August 19th, and continuing over Sunday. August 27th, 1911. Come and invite your neighbors and friends to come and enjoy a ten days' vacation at our camp ground in the Cedar River Park.

On arriving at Waterloo, if the conference baggageman is there, give him your baggage checks. If he is not there, bring your checks to the camp ground. Our baggageman will have a badge on his hat reading "Conference Baggageman." Give checks to no other.

Take street car for Electric Park and get off at the camp ground.

Tents will be furnished free to all. Bring a few comforters with you if you care to do so.

Board at dining hall ten cents per meal.

Bedding can be rented for entire ten days as follows: Comforters 25 cents, blankets 25 cents.

Daily Program.

6:00 a. m. Rising bell,
6:45 a. m. Morning Devotion,
7:00 a. m. Breakfast,
8:00 a. m. Children's Hour,
9:00 a. m. Business,
10:30 a. m. Discourse, or Bible Reading and Discussion,
12:00 m. Dinner,
2:30 p. m. Discourse,
4:00 p. m. Questions and answers. —free for all,
6:00 p. m. Supper,
7:00 p. m. Song Service and Social Meeting, or Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Discourse.

SERVICE PROGRAM.

Saturday, August 19, 1911.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting of Conference Board, Apopintment of Committees, etc.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, John Garton.
7:00 p. m. Praise Service.
8:00 p. m Sermon, J. A. Patrick of Minnesota.

Sunday, August 20, 1911.

9:30 a. m. Sunday School, Conducted by State S. S. Supt.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
8:30 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams of Indiana.

Monday, August 21st.

8:00 a. m. Children's Hour, Conducted by Mrs. Eva Stearns.
9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson, Conducted by A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh of Illinois.

Tuesday, August 22.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson. Joseph Williams.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Wednesday, August 23rd, "Berean" or Young People's Day.

9:30 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:45 a. m Sermon G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Program.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.

Thursday, August 24th.

9:30 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Bible Lesson, A. J. Eychaner.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.

Friday, August 25th.

9:00 a. m. Question Box and Our Needs.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, John Garton.
2:30 p. m. Bible Lesson Joseph Williams.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, A. J. Eychaner.

Saturday, August 26th.

9:00 a. m. Business Meeting.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, Joseph Williams.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
9:00 a. m. Sunday School, Conducted by S. S. Supt.
10:30 a. m. Sermon, J. A. Patrick.
2:30 p. m. Sermon, G. E. Marsh.
3:30 p. m. Baptisms.
4:30 p. m. Communion.
7:30 p. m. Prayer and Praise Service.
8:00 p. m. Sermon, Jos. Williams.

The foregoing program will be adhered to as closely as possible. There may, of course, be some changes.

Postoffice box No. 362 has been rented for the use of all parties attending the conference. Have your mail addressed to you at Waterloo, Iowa, care of Lock Box No. 362.

Kindly preserve this program and attend the conference if possible.

O. J. ALLARD.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

On the Covenants of Promise, and connection with the "One Hope, One Faith, One Baptism." This is what it claims to be—a letter written to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff, who died in 1859. She was the wife of our lamented Brother John O. Woodruff, who died a short time since. This letter was not at first written for publication, but after the death of the author, it was printed, and has since gone through a number of editions. Since the death of Brother Woodruff this tract has been out of print, but there were repeated requests for it, hence we have issued a new edition which is now ready for use. It makes a 32-page tract, is plain and so easy in style and convincing in argument, that it lives as a monument to the memory of its writer through all these years, and is yet full of good for all. Singly the price is 10 cents, 12 for a dollar, postpaid. Where larger quantities are taken that can be sent by express, a lower rate will gladly be made. Brothers and Sisters, if you cannot preach a series of sermons to your friend, have a copy of this letter sent to him, and you will have done the next best thing, as one can hardly read this little missive and not receive benefit. Send to us and have a supply always ready to hand out when there is opportunity. You will do good and be blessed in the work.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

READ ALL OF THIS CAREFULLY

IN THE RESTITUTION OF JULY 5TH, BROTHER A. R. UNDERWOOD ANNOUNCED THE CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OF THE "RESTITUTION." A NUMBER OF BRETHREN INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE PAPER HAVE FORMED A COMPANY AND PURCHASED IT OUTRIGHT FROM BRO. UNDERWOOD. AN APPLICATION HAS BEEN MADE TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STATE OF OHIO FOR THE INCORPORATING OF "THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.," WHICH COMPANY IN THE FUTURE SHALL CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING "THE RESTITUTION."

THE COMPANY IS TO BE INCORPORATED FOR $5,000, DIVIDED INTO 500 SHARES OF TEN DOLLARS EACH, AND WILL BE NON-ASSESSABLE. WHILE A LARGE PART OF THIS STOCK HAS ALREADY BEEN SUBSCRIBED FOR THE REMAINDER IS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONGST THE BRETHREN IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY. THE TERMS ARE, 25 PER CENT TO BE SENT WITH THE APPLICATION FOR STOCK, THE BALANCE TO BE PAID IN THREE EQUAL PAYMENTS, 3 MONTHS, 6 MONTHS AND 9 MONTHS FROM DATE OF APPLICATION.

WHILE IT IS NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE COMPANY TO PUBLISH THE RESTITUTION FOR PROFIT, UNDER THE NEW BUSINESS POLICY DECIDED UPON, WE ARE CONFIDENT THAT AT LEAST A SMALL RETURN WILL BE MADE ON THE INVESTMENT. THE FACILITIES FOR DOING THE MECHANICAL WORK OF ISSUING THE PAPER WILL BE MUCH BETTER IN CLEVELAND, AND THE EXPENSE LESS. THERE WILL BE NO OFFICE RENT, AND ALL OFFICERS, INCLUDING EDITOR, BUSINESS MANAGER, ETC., WILL WORK WITHOUT COMPENSATION FOR A YEAR AT LEAST. IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THE PUBLISHERS TO IMPROVE THE PAPER IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY, AND EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO INCREASE THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FAITH AND THE PUBLIC AT LARGE.

IN DISPOSING OF THE BALANCE OF STOCK IT IS VERY DESIRABLE TO PLACE IT IN AS MANY HANDS AS POSSIBLE, THEREFORE WE URGE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE TO SUBSCRIBE FREELY, AND REMEMBER, AN APPLICATION FOR ONE SHARE WILL BE JUST AS WELCOME AS ONE FOR FIVE OR TEN SHARES.

IF YOU HAVE THE INTEREST OF TRUTH AT HEART, IF YOU WANT "THE RESTITUTION," THAT STAUNCH DEFENDER OF THE FAITH THAT HAS STOOD FOR HALF A CENTURY PUT ON A FIRM BASIS, THAT WILL ENABLE IT TO GROW AND BECOME MORE AND MORE A FACTOR IN OUR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND THE SPREADING OF THE GOSPEL, DO WHAT YOU CAN NOW, GIVE IT YOUR HEARTY SUPPORT. FILL OUT THE ACCOMPANYING SUBSCRIPTION BLANK AND MAIL TODAY. YOU WILL RECEIVE AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT BY RETURN MAIL.

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Date _____

The Restitution Publishing Co.
Cleveland, O.

I hereby make application for_____ Shares of Capital Stock of "The Restitution Publishing Co." at $10 a Share, non-assessable, which I agree to pay for as follows, (cash) or, 25% accompanying this application 25% in 3 months, 25% in 6 months and balance in 9 months from date.

Make all checks and money orders payable to
BUELL W. NUTT
803 Parkwood Drive
Cleveland, O.

Signed_____

Address_____
street and number

_____
Town

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Bible Pearls—2 page tracts suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1869. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man, and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four-Page Tracts.

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

Ten for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents—100 for 40 cents.

Future Probation—Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that the price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at 10 cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching, and Salvation—what is it?

Each Lecture of 16 pages, $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

Scripture Searcher's Assistant.

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects, with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Order from W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., Cleveland, O.

WORKS OF BRO. WILEY JONES.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptibility, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8-page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge 50 cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50. We have said before, and now repeat, that if any brother living in Canada thinks we should not add this extra postage, and declines to pay it, send your $1.50 and we will provide THE RESTITUTION to you. We will have no quarrel with a brother about so small a matter.

Brother H. A. Lehman was chosen as Secretary and Treasurer of the Ohio State Conference. A number of the brethren will have business with him, and all such should mark down his address so they will know where to write—address 135 East 11th avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

ILLINOIS BEREANS—NOTICE.

The various Berean societies of Illinois, and all isolated members connected with the organization in this state who have not as yet done so, are requested to remit their dues to the undersigned before August 1st, in order that our reports may be in readiness for the annual meeting.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY, Treas.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy five cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The 23rd Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will meet at Waterloo, August 19 to 27 inclusive. Programme will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Missouri will meet at Morse Mill, Missouri, August 9 to 13 inclusive. Programme will be given later. SADIE MORSE, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus of Illinois will meet in Oregon, August 16 to 20 inclusive. A committee has been appointed to prepare a programme which will soon be published. Plan now to meet with the brethren of Illinois at the time appointed, and enjoy with them a spiritual feast about the table of the Lord. G. ELDRED MARSH, Secy.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As I expect to attend the Ohio Conference, the middle of August, I think I can arrange to start a little early and hold one or two meetings enroute. If any congregation in Illinois or Indiana, desire a meeting, write me soon as you can arrange. Address me at 4019 Webster Avenue, Ames Station, Omaha, Neb.

ALMUS ADAMS.

BOYS and GIRLS

Do You Want to Make Some Pocket Money?

It's easy; just drop a postal to the manager of THE RESTITUTION, and he will tell you all about it. Do it now before you forget it. : : : : :

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of high grade prescription work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

THE STRONG, KENNARD & NUTT CO. 838 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

TO ADVERTISERS

A limited number of advertisements will be accepted for publication in this paper. Brethren who are in business lines that can be advertised in a publication of this kind are urged to send for our advertising rate. No better field could be found than amongst your own brethren.

Less than a Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year that's less than a half a cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe

Help to Get Them on the List

REMOVAL EXPENSES

have been considerable. If you are in arrears please remit at once as we need all the help you can give.

SAMPLE COPIES

of

THE RESTITUTION

May be obtained for a Stamp. Send for Some.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Sub scribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 5:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. O. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 23, 1911. No. 32

THE CHILDREN.

A time will come when war will cease.
And violence flee away:
Almighty hand will then control
And mould men like the clay.

No longer greed and lust will rule.
Cry-ers curse the earth;
For children then will get their rights.
They should get from their birth.

Of healthy parents they'll be born
And welcomed when they come;
They'll get the tenderest loving care.
And health reign in the home.

Their food and clothing will be right,
Just what a child should have;
With firm hands they will be trained.
Amid endless seas of love.

No "sweat shops" then will yawn for them.
To crush their little lives;
For husbands then will loving be
And careful of their wives.

Children then will be rightly trained,
And all the best brought out;
Then happiness will be their lot.
They'll raise a mighty shout.

For every child will then be placed
Just where his talents fit;
He'll work with pleasure to himself,
There will be no misfit

And every one will do his share
Of what there is to do;
For tempters then will die the death;
All that ungodly crew,

That drags the children into vice,
Gross wickedness and sin;
They will be swept from off the earth.
When righteousness comes in.

Then liquor's reign will all leave.
That takes men down to death;
Goodness, mercy, truth will be here.
When Christ reigns on this earth.

Dr. A. Wallace Mason.
St. Catherines, Ont.

BORN AGAIN.

This expression occurs only four times in the Scriptures, i. John and Peter. The puzzle it was to Nicodemus, when it fell from the lips of Jesus, shows that it cannot be taken in a natural sense, and that the ruler did not understand its spiritual meaning. The terms in which all its significance is couched are these: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." But those terms must be understood before their significance can be grasped. Popular instruction allots but a scanty meed to this strange saying, and dismisses it by reference to a plunge in the waters of baptism, or even the use of several drops, and a sensation of the Holy Ghost in the heart. It deserves, however, a more deliberate inquiry and a more extensive use of our reasoning powers.

It is plain that, whether birth be natural or spiritual there must first be begettal, conception and gestation; and that unless these processes are correctly carried out abortion or idiocy will ensue. We would not, however, strain the analogy, still we cannot discard all resemblance except at the risk of ruining the divine teaching.

Our utter dependence on God for deliverance from death is seen in nothing with greater clearness than in this subject of spiritual begettal. This figure declares to man his absolute helplessness in the work of his own salvation; that is to say he cannot take the first step in the matter; though when His step is taken he can work with advantage. What we mean now is shown in the fact that no one can beget himself; no one can be the author of his own conception and birth. So it is spiritually; and, inasmuch as without these things there can be no offspring, so it is impossible that any man can cause himself to become a child of God.

"Faith cometh by hearing the word of God." What the womb is to natural seed, so is the ear to the word of God. That word is seed, spiritually speaking, and the Almighty is the sower of it: "of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." "When any one heareth the word of the Kingdom, and understandeth not, then cometh the wicked, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." "The word of the kingdom proceeds from God; it is not the word of man, and where this has not been sown it can bring forth no fruit; but where it is sown and nourished in the affections, "it brings forth fruit unto eternal life." Hence the logical conclusion is, that eternal life is the result of the "word of the kingdom."

From this consideration it will be seen at once that success or failure depends, in the first place solely upon the equality of the seed sown. Bad seed cannot produce good fruit. The first enquiry therefore into the saying of Jesus—"born again"—is an enquiry into the nature of the seed, or "the word of the kingdom." This phase—"the word of the kingdom," is a partial definition of the nature of the seed; explaining that the word is concerning a kingdom; or, still using the figure of speech, the seed sown will become a world-wide theocracy in its harvest time.

This doctrine is as old as the Bible itself. Jesus borrowed it from the old prophets. "The Lord shall be king over all the earth." Zec. xiv. 9. "I shall give thee (Christ) the nations of the earth for thine inheritance." Psa. ii 8. "The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom." Daniel ii. 44. "And there was given him (Christ) dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve Him" (Christ). Daniel vii. 14. And the same prophetic spirit, speaking to John in the Isle of Patmos, saith, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. ii. 15.

In view of testimony so plain it is passing strange to see "ministers of the gospel" sowing seed destined to bear fruit "beyond the starry sky;" and stranger still to hear some teaching both the one thing and the other. These are certainly two different seeds; one is "the good seed," or the "word of the kingdom to be set up over all the earth;" the other "tares," or the word of the old pagan philosophers, not once mentioned by the Prophets, Jesus or the Apostles. Among the four hundred or more occurrances of the word heaven in the Scriptures, no allusion whatever is made to it as a place of abode in store for man. But instead of being invited there by God, he is told he cannot go. The harvest, therefore, which is certain to follow the sowing of such seed, will be a harvest of disappointment. God has nowhere sowed it, and will not follow it with His blessing.

After the seed has fallen into a "good and honest heart," it begins, imperceptibly for a while, to develop; till at length the bearer finds himself impelled by these new ideas to corresponding action. This is traceable to the occasion on which he "received seed." Having followed the counsel of Christ, "Seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness"—in order that, by the ordinance of baptism, he may give evidence that he has "put on the righteousness of God." Being taught by the prophets and apostles that Christ is our righteousness, he weighs the facts and merits in connection with Christ. First, he is God's own and only begotten son; second, He is sent into the world to do His Father's will—to show to man the possibility of overcoming sin. Third, He is to be a sufficient sacrifice for the whole world. Fourth, His death must be a voluntary one, dying in order to be acceptable to God. Fifth, This offering must itself be without spot. Sixth, Having paid the ransom He rises to immortality as the just reward of His obedience. Seventh, He is exalted to priesthood in the presence of God, to mediate on behalf of those who accept His ransom.

These ideas duly elaborated in his own mind, our candidate for immortal honors, perceives himself to have developed so far in the knowledge of the gospel as to see his own nakedness and need of covering, so as to be accounted holy in the sight of God.—"Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." The eternal spirit has made known but one mode of investiture. The mystical waters are before him, and his ardent cry is—"See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" The answering voice saith, "If you believe that Jesus Christ is the son of God."

Reflection may suggest the peculiar fitness of the simple rite. Several things are implied. First, Crucifixion. Second, Death. Third Burial. Fourth, Resurrection. Fifth, New Life. All these again afford separately matter for thought. Besides as the ordinance is a figurative, not a real, death, it is seen to be figurative of a washing and clothing also. The intelligent subject of it is washed. He was as scarlet, he is like snow; he was as crimson, he is like wool. He was accounted as filthy; he is esteemed as clean. To the household of God he was a stranger, he is now a son. He was a member of the body of Adam; he is now a member of the body of Christ. He had no part in the covenant inheritance; he is now a king and priest elect, awaiting promotion to power and glory. Having entered morally and doctrinally upon a new life, he now lives by faith on the son of God who gave himself for him."

He is nourished from day to day on "that bread which came down from heaven, whereof if a man eat he shall not die in the age." Every first day he visibly expresses his relation to his new master by eating and drinking the symbols of His sacrifice, and binding himself to Him by every cord of memory, and is especially careful not to neglect this feast at which this Son and Redeemer is ever present by his own appointed emblems. In his new life he shines as a light in the world. Men behold the correctness of his walk, the wisdom and prudence of his ways; all within the circle of his being are stimulated by his excellent example. He is part of the "salt of the earth," and thru him men are induced to inquire after Christ. He is intellectually and morally "born again," yea, "born of the Spirit." "The words that I speak unto you are spirit and are life." "Of God's own will ye are begotten by the word of truth."

"The words I speak are Spirit. Evidently this saying needs explanation. Words themselves are only sounds produced by the passing of breath or air over the larynx or organs of the throat, called the vocal cords. We would paraphrase thus: "The words I speake are" able to transform men into "spirit." None of the many allusions to spirit in the scripture reveal to us what spirit is. God is spirit, but not knowing what spirit is, we do not know what God is. We cannot find out God by searching. Flesh is known; it has been examined and is composition declared; but spirit is a mystery still. We know, however, that when applied to flesh it is capable of making it immortal. Jesus became immortal flesh and bone. Though spirit, He is not a phantom; "for a phantom," said He, "hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." What He now is, or may be, or they cannot enter the kingdom of God—a sufficient proof, surely, that none are in that kingdom now. Jesus did not tell Nicodemus that he must be disembodied in order to enter the kingdom; but that he must "be born of the spirit;" afterwards showing that by such birth Nicodemus would become spirit: namely, "that which is born of flesh is flesh: and that which is born of spirit is spirit.

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the spirit." Thus our version renders the original of John iii. 8. But this translation of the Greek word pneuma by the English word wind in this passage does not appear at all satisfactory. The word is the same at the end of the verse as at the beginning; why not have said, therefore, "So is every one that is born of the wind?" if wind be correct in the first instance. But it is not a fact that "the wind bloweth where it listeth," or willeth, for it can have no will in the matter; besides, to hear the sound of wind can be of no spiritual benefit. Let us read it thus

"The spirit breathes where he wills, and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

"The following are Wiclif's translation. A. D., 1380, and the Rheims translation of 1582:

Wiclif.

"The spirit brethith where he wole, thou herist his vois, but thou woost not fro whennes he commeth ne whider he goith, so is eche man that is borun of the spirit."

Rhelms.

"The spirit breatheth where he will, and thou hearest his voice, but thou knowest not whence he commeth and whither he goeth, so is every one that is borne of the spirit."

The Eternal Spirit had breathed on Jesus, and Nicodemus heard the sound of his voice. This was the fullest measure of the spirit, or rather Spirit unmeasured, while the same thing in a measured form was heard in the prophets and apostles. None living can explain this mysterious motive power, but even a child may be struck with its results. Here is a mental birth of the Spirit experienced by men in the flesh; but the physical birth will change the flesh itself. Why should incorruptible flesh be thought impossible with God? It is a greater marvel than the framework of the universe. Is it more wonderful than the globe itself, flying noiseless as a soap bubble through the air? We have seen the one and not the other; there is the difficulty. Nevertheless we possess the testimony of credible men who did see it; the rest remains for faith. Jesus seems to be the only dead man who has been raised to immortality. The world's future is suspended on this one fact. Were it a moment doubtful we should be like some rushing comet in the trackless sky.

But though unseen, except for forty days, Jesus did more terrible work after He was born "again" than he did before. Indeed, while in the flesh He was harmless to the world, but no sooner "in the spirit" than the work of vengeance began. It should seem that this was a foreshadowing of things to occur when those of whom was "the first fruits" shall rise and shake themselves from the dust. There is no thought so startling as that of the rising of the dead! It was the agitation of the disciples, after Jesus had gone up into heaven, that maddened the Jews and Romans. Through this his absence was more dangerous than his presence. The first birth was a shock to His enemies, but the second infinitely greater. By murdering Him they had, as it were, hastened the day of His power and brought upon them his vengeance.

"Born again!" was now the new cry of His disciples. Everywhere they shouted, "He is risen from the dead! He is alive! We have seen Him!" This was the deathknell of the Jewish commonwealth, and the doom of Pagan Rome. This voice went out to the ends of the world. The earth moved, the mountains were shaken, the foundations of the temples were loosened, the doors dropped from their hinges, and the idol images staggered, fell, and were dashed to pieces. He who was risen sat in the heavens guiding the tide of war, and His friends went forth "conquering and to conquer." The idol deities had prophesied many things, but they had not foretold their own ruin by a man who should be born again. This birth of spirit they knew not of, or denied; now their votaries "heard the sound of his voice like the subterranean thunder that goes before the earthquake, but they could not tell whence it was and whither it went. We have endeavored to sketch the process, and indicate some of the results which follow from being "born again."

"LOVE YE ONE ANOTHER"

That there is a great need of revival today is evident to all. The church has allowed politics, business and speculative thought to get beyond her influence as a spiritual impulse and ethical standard. Modern reforms which have as their end the betterment of men's lot have sprung very largely from the diffused Christianity, and too often the hearing of the church toward them is cold and unfeeling, if not actually antagonistic.

The churches are all blessed with a proportion of really Christian men and women, whose giving and prayers and unselfish service keep the world from falling into ruin. These are the church. But these are not satisfied. They feel a deep need of revival. It is only the dead and frivolous and indifferent that are satisfied. Modern scribes and pharisees, hypocrites, cleansing the outside of the platter, whited sepulchers, self-deceived, measuring themselves by themselves, in daily deadly danger of crucifying their Lord afresh and putting Him to an open shame—these are the satisfied ones.

We need a revival of religion because of our lack of love. This is the center and core of Christianity. You love them that love you, your families, your friends, but what thank have ye? Do not the heathen the same? When you make a feast you invite persons agreeable to yourself, for your enjoyment and theirs. This is not a sin, but it is no better than the heathen, for they do the same. The Christian feast is for the poor and the homeless and friendless. The Christian love is for one's enemies. The Christian service is for the disagreeable and weak and vicious and unclean. The Christian duty is to all the world. But Christian men live under rules and standards that are the incarnation of selfishness. There is no love in business, no love in war, no love in modern pleasure.

Frivolous and selfish wives, deadening the religious life of husbands; worldly and godless husbands, making it difficult for their wives to live as Christians; parents a stumbling block to growing children and a byword to them that are without; professing Christians mad with lust of gold and place and power, silent and unfeeling in the face of social wrong, without compassion for the multitude, ambitious for social preferment, given over to vanity, envious, skilled in the hypocrisies and expedients of selfishness, denying daily in word and deed the power of godliness. Surely these need revival.

How few Christians there are who can lead an inspiring soul to a knowledge of Jesus! They are without excuse. To say that they cannot do this is to hide behind a lie. There is not a housewife but can teach her maid to cook and clean and sew; not a mother but can teach her children the elements of etiquet; not an artisan but can talk intelligently about the trade he has mastered; not a scholar but can give some account of what he knows; not a political partisan who is not eager to explain his views; not a lawyer but stands ready to argue any case, pro or con; not a doctor who cannot give some reason for the cure he prescribes; not a business man but can train others for his business. But many of these say they cannot talk to another upon the subject of religion.

For many a Christian employer to speak to his workmen of the love of Jesus would be to cause bitter mirth and deepen the conviction among them that he is a hypocrite. Those who do not confess Him with their lips because they consider their example sufficient, too often furnish an example of everything but Christianity. But it is the insistent, searching word of Jesus that every man is responsible for his neighbor, no matter how he may feel about the responsibility or how cleverly he may shirk it.

The spiritual energies of the modern church are paralyzed and neutralized by a great and plain contradiction between what church members say and do!

Christian gentlemen organizing great financial undertakings and incidentally corrupting governments, bribing the public, overriding the laws of the land; such believers would find it hard indeed to lead another to the Saviour. Their proper method is to hire an evangelist, for it is very evident in this case that religion is religion and business is business.

It would seem that the next great revival will be a revival within the church itself. It will consist in an improvement in quality, rather than increase in quantity of church members. It will turn away from machinery and artificiality and organization, and will depend upon personality and character. It will deal directly as between man and man. It will be a thing of life; of everyday life to be lived as the hours go simply and honestly.

A witness is useful only in so far as he knows. He is not permitted to testify upon what he has heard, or upon what he imagines, or guesses, or hopes. What he has seen and knows, this is his only testimony of any power. To what great realities does the average modern Christian testify? A man eager, almost frantic, in his striving for wealth; the frivolous, shallow member of some Christian church, intriguing and degrading herself for the sake of social preferment among worldlings; to what do these testify? Church 'service' misnamed, wherein indolent believers luxuriate in enjoyment of observing with critical eye the intellectual gymnastics of their minister; to what do these testify? Cold and formal prayer meetings, sepulchral and oppressive, to what do these testify?—Selected by Bro. W. S. Tomlinson.

The Dead Sea is dead because it has an inlet but no outlet. Some people are just like that, they take in but never give out; they are sponges; and the church will never prosper until it gets rid of them or they change their tactics.

Our best friends are those we least appreciate—our enemies; our worst enemies are those we least suspect—ourselves.—Panin.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. B. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, O., AUGUST 23, 1911

EDITORIAL

THE WHITE STONE.

Rev. 2:17. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it

The hidden manna sweet,
The stone of purest white,
And the new name,
The gift of Him who dwells in light.

Galva, Ill. Lillie H. Willis.

THE MORNING STAR.

The Morning Star is promised to him that overcomes. "I will give to him the morning star," saith the Spirit (Rev. ii. 28). To appreciate the importance and value of this great promise we must know what is signified by the phrase.

The Morning Star is the star belonging to the morning. This morning is alluded to in Gen. xlix. 27, where it is written concerning the tribe of Benjamin, styled "a wolf," he shall tear in pieces; in the morning he shall devour the prey; at at the evening he shall divide the spoils." In these words of Jacob's prophecy of "what shall happen with Israel in the last of the days," we are instructed to look for a period in which Benjamin will devour his enemies instead of being himself devoured, as for the last eighteen hundred years. This is styled "the morning"—an era of triumph and conquest for Israel, as indicated by their devouring "the prey" and dividing "the spoil."

Now the morning is the beginning of the day, or the time of the sun's rising. his is true whether the sun be the "Day Star" or the material or political heavens. The morning referred to by Jacob in his prophecy is manifestly the time of the rising of a sun in the political heavens; because he is treating of a great political revolution in the affairs of Benjamin and the rest of the tribes. Israel cannot now "devour the prey" and "divide the spoil" among the people; because, as Moses says in Deut. xxxii. 36, "Yahweh sees that power hath departed, and none retained or left." It is this perfect powerlessness of the tribes before their enemies, that excites the indignation and compassion of Yahweh. The scattering of their power having attained its climax (Dan xii.), the morning of their deliverance arrives; "for Yahweh will plead for his people, and show pity upon his servants, when he shall see that power is departed, and none retained or left."

But the tribes of Jacob are not the sun, or Day Star, of this morning of their glory. In the antitype as in the type, "in the morning they shall see the glory of Yahweh appearing in a cloud" (Exod. xvi. 7, 10); and they who behold are different from the thing beheld; this is the sun, who, in his rising, makes it morning time. He will then give them bread to the full; and the dew will lay round about the host. The life and power of Israel is not in their own prowess; but in the Eternal Spirit, Yahweh, manifested in Messiah and his brethren—the one Yahweh Elohim of Israel. It is he that makes "their latter end" glorious; and turns the weeping of their long and dreary night into the joy that cometh in the morning.

This Eternal Spirit in His multitudinous manifestation is the sun, belonging to the morning of the great day in which the world shall be ruled in righteousness; and Yahweh's glory shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. The Spirit, in David, contemplating the one in many, the future ruling body upon earth, says, "There shall be a Ruler over mankind, a Just One, ruling in the righteous precepts of Elohim. And as brightness of morning, He shall rise the Sun of an unclouded dawn shinging forth after rain upon tender grass out of the earth," 2 Sam. xxiii. 4).

This One Ruling Body, the mystical Christ, is the Shiloh, to whom shall be the gatherings of the peoples, as the Sceptre of Judah. This is the King that shall be higher than Agog, and whose kingdom shall be exalted—the star out of Jacob, and the sceptre or rod of iron, that shall smite the princess of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth. Jesus of Nazareth is the head of this "One Body," and the head of Jesus is the Eternal Power, whence is effused the anointing of all." (1 Cor. xi. 3).

Now the Eternal Wisdom is the revealer of the Apocalypse. He gave it to Jesus, "whom he anointed both Lord and Christ." Hence, when the anointed Jesus speaks in the Apocalypse, it is the eternal who speaks. For this reason it is, that at the end of each epistle the hearer is reminded that it is the Spirit speaking to the ecclesias. Thus we see the same rule maintained in the Apocalypse as in the testimony of John. There, in ch. vii. 16, Jesus saith, "My doctrine," or teaching, "is not Mine, but His that sent me. If any man shall do his will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of the Deity, or I speak of myself." And in ch. xii. 49, "I have not spoken of myself, but the Father who sent me; He gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak." The rule of the Apocalypse is the same—the Eternal wisdom speaking through Jesus, himself become spirit in being begotten and born of the Spirit from among the dead.

It is the Eternal Spirit, then, who, through Jesus, says in Apoc. xxii. 16, "I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright and Morning Star." The Spirit, apart from Jesus, could not say this. The Spirit is the root of David, because David and all mankind sprung from the Spirit who created them; but apart from flesh and blood. He was not "the offspring of David." It was necessary for the Spirit to become flesh of Judah and David's line as John teaches in ch. i. 14, to become "the offspring of David." When he raised up the dead body named Jesus, he transformed it into Spirit-body. This became the Bright Star—the bright particular star—of that galaxy of stars pertaining to the morning when "Israel shall do valiantly;" and the wolf, Benjamin, shall devour the prey; and the Beloved of Yahweh shall dwell in safety by him, shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders (Deuty xxxiii. 12).

The Bright and the Morning Star, then the Eternal Spirit glorified in Jesus, promise to give the Morning Star to him that overcomes. In other words, that he shall become a glorified constituent of the "One Body," when it is adopted at the manifestation of the Sons of Deity (Rom. viii. 19-24). He will, then, be a star pertaining to the Millennial Dawn—a morning star; for "they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars le-olahm wahed, in the Olahm and Beyond; or, as Jesus said, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father;" which belongs to "the Olahm and beyond" (Dan. xii. 4; Matt. xiii. 43). The redeemed will then be, in the aggregate, a cloud of morning stars "equal to the Angels," themselves "the Morning Stars that sang together, and the Sons of Deity that shouted for joy," when the cornerstone of earth's foundation was laid by the Eternal (Job xxxviii. 7). We look for the Bright and Morning Star from heaven, that he may "change our vile body, and fashion it like unto his glorious body" (Phil. iii. 21); and we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him." (1 John iii. 2). This is equivalent to saying we shall be Morning Stars—stars that come forth as dew from the womb of morning, shining in all the glory of the resurrection state (1 Cor. xv. 41; Ps. cx. 3).

Of all the Stars of the new Heavens, Jesus will be the brightest; for, in all things, it is the Father's will and pleasure, not only that all the fullness shall dwell in him, but that he also shall have the preeminence. "There is one glory for the Sun," and that is his and there is another glory of the Stars," and that is the glory of his brethren individually; and "there is another glory of the Moon," and that is the glory of his companions collectively. As his Bride, they "look forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."—Cant. vi. 10. He that overcomes, to him it shall be given to be one of these—a splendid one sparkling in the glory of the great and fearful Name of Yahweh Elohim.

Eureka, Vol. 1.

8. ILL. CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Tenth Annual Conference of the Church of God at Moreale, Illinois, will be held September 30th to October 8th inclusive.

We look forward to a profitable meeting, and most heartily extend an invitation to all who can attend.

We have secured as ministers, Bro. G. Eldred Marsh, of Oregon, Illinois; L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, Ohio; and H. V. Reed, of Chicago, Ill.

All who anticipate coming will write at an early date to Bro. Lewis Weaver, Casey, Ill., R. R. No. 3, Box 31, and you will be furnished conveyance to the vicinity of the church. eB sure to get the address correctly. Come to Casey over the C. H. & D. or Vandalia lines.

Mrs. C. W. Weaver, Sec.

GLORIFIED

He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. Rev. 21:7.

And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Behold I make all things new. Rev. 21:4-5.

"Sometime, somewhere on yonder shore,
When these frail barks have crossed the tide,
This broken thread of life, once more
Shall be complete and glorified.
For God shall wipe away all ters,
And there will be eternal peace.
'Tis there we'll find our recompense,
The recompense for lives like these."

Galva, Ill. Lillie H. Willis.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP.

No. 14.

In the Mosaic pattern God spake "from above the mercy seat," which was "upon the ark of the testimony," through the high priest "unto the children of Israel" (Exod. xxv. 2.). In like manner the personal word of God speaks to his brethren from the anti-typical mercy seat and ark through the written word. The word of God is thus in one form "within the veil" (Heb. vi. 19), and in another form without the veil. To this there is a counterpart in the Mosaic shadow. When Israel encamped, the ark was in the most holy place; when on the march it was carried by the Levites. When, in the reign of David, it was borne "upon the shoulders with the staves thereon, as Moses commanded according to the word of the Lord" (1 Chron. xv. 15) "God helped" them (ver. 26), and the result was a great manifestation of joy on the part of "all Israel." So great was the exhuberance of David, that "Michal the daughter of Saul . . . despised him in her heart" (ver. 28-29); an exhibition of contempt for divine things for which she suffered "unto the day of her death" (2 Sam. vi., 23). The present controversy has seen its followers of Uzza; it is to be hoped that it may not yet witness any imitators of Michal.

It is worthy of note that while the "ark of God remained with the family of Obededom . . . The Lord blessed the house of Obed-edom and all that he had" (1 Chron. xiii. 14). Obed-edom was a Levite, and he was subsequently appointed to be one of the "porters" of the tabernacle (1 Chron. xvi. 38). Obed means a servant, and Edom is the name of the nation which sprang from Esau, a name used in prophecy to represent the Gentiles (Obed-edom is, therefore, a very fitting representative of Gentiles who become servants of God, members of the anti-typical order of Levites, porters of the anti-typical tabernacle and "citizens" of the "commonwealth of Israel" (Eph. ii. 12-19). To receive a blessing similar to his, they must treat the ark of God, or the written word with the same reverence. It is not too much to say that any community associated with the truth, which subjects it to sacrilegious treatment, will not be divinely blessed.

When the "Ark of God" was in the possession of the Philistines "they brought it into the house of Dagon, and set it by Dagon." In the morning they found that "Dagon was fallen upon his face to the earth before the Ark of the Lord." They "set him in his place again," but the next day he had again "fallen," and, in addition, his "head" and "the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold, only the stump of Dagon was left to him" (1 Sam. v. 2-4). Even to the idol-worshipping Philistines this result was not wholly inexplicable; they recognized that the "hand" of the "God of Israel" was "sore" upon them and upon Dagon (ver. 7); hence, at the end of "seven months' they sent it away, accompanied by presents, in "a new cart" (chap. vi.). They had been guilty of placing the Ark of God in an idolatrous temple, and of giving to it a place second to the idol; and for this God showed his displeasure in an unmistakable way.

The Gentile Apostacy has committed an analogous offense. It has invented an idol, styled by the spirit "a strange God" (Dan. xi. 39), the "Man of Sin" and "the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called a god, or an object of reverence; so that he as a god sitteth in the temple of the god, showing himself that he is god" (2 Thes. 3-4, translation in Eureka iii. p. 74). In other words, it has invented a so-called infallible church, and given it a higher place than the word of God. For this it will be consumed with the spirit of the Lord's mouth.

It has been argued by Protestants that those nations which have severed their connection with the Romish Church have had greater prosperity than those which retain their allegiance. The facts adduced present at least a probable basis for the contention. England supplies an illustration; Ireland suffers more troubles than does Great Britain; and there can be no doubt that her allegiance to the "infallible Pope" is one of the causes. Even anti-typical Philistines who treat the word of God with sacrilege suffer the judgments of God; how then can anti-typical Israelites escape when they do likewise, though to a less extent?

When Jesus Christ was in the flesh, he was the anti-type of the Mosaic tabernacle. "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up" (Jno. ii. 19). He is no less so now that he has passed "through the veil" (Heb. x. 20) from the holy to the most holy place; and as he is "The Word of God" (Rev. xiv. 13) the tabernacle, as well as the Ark, was a type of the personal Word, and of the written Word. What has been already pointed out in reference to the spirit-designed and spirit-produced ark, equally applies to the tabernacle; with this difference, that the tabernacle exhibits greater complication and detail. Nothing was left to man; all was of the Spirit, including the number of "loops" and "taches" for the "curtains" and the number of the "sockets" and "tenons" for the "boards" (Exod. xxvi. 5, 6, 19). The sides and the covering were no less holy than the lamp, the altar of incense, and the table of shew-bread, which they protected; they were essential as a depository for the vessels of the sanctuary. The historical parts of the written Word of God are no less so in relation to the doctrinal and practical teaching which they enclose.

The tabernacle and "all the vessels thereof" were anointed with "oil of holy ointment" (Exod. xl. the composition of which was wholly of divine prescription (Exodus xxx. 23-33). It was to be confined solely to the purposes enumerated; "whosoever putteth any of it upon a stranger shall even be cut off from his people." Like the pure olive oil for the lamp, "the holy anointing oil" typified the Spirit; thus the ceremony for which it was designed showed that the tabernacle and its contents, were Spirit consecrated, as well as Spirit designed and produced.

As the antitype of the tabernacle, Jesus was anointed with the Spirit at his baptism and again at his resurrection (Heb. i. 9). His brethren are part of the same antitype: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God" (1 Cor. iii. 16). When "baptized unto Christ" they "put on Christ" (Gal. iii. 27), and are thus christed or anointed. It is to this the Apostle John refers when he says, "Ye have an unction (or anointing) from the holy one and know all things" (1 Jno. ii. 20); "the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him" (ver. 27). In what way does the anointing of believers by Christ "teach" them so that they "know all things?" By the inspired word "Holy one" and "anointing" used by John interchangeably, each being described as the source of knowledge; one as the personal word of God and the other the written word of God. Hence believers of the first principles of the truth in being anointed by Christ are thereby anointed by the inspired word of God; and consequently their permanent consecration is dependent on a continued subjection to its influence. To attribute to some parts a fallible authorship is to defile "the holy anointing oil" which testifies to their having been constituted the antitypical tabernacle in its present stage of development. John says that their "anointing . . . is truth, and is no lie," which is equivalent to affirming that the inspired word contains no error, or in other words is infallible.

"Thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name" (Ps. cxxxviii. 2). Objection has been raised to the application of this passage to the whole Bible on the ground that "the term" rendered "word" means neither writing, book, record, nor Bible, but "utterance, saying, speech, or promise." The objection is based on a misconception; an utterance, speech or promise, does not lose any of its characteristics when reduced to writing, or recorded in a book; it possesses the same importance in a written as in a spoken form. The psalmist is referring to the "word" revealed by God to man; which has sometimes been communicated by an audible voice, and at other times by the pen. He is giving expression to a principle applicable to all divine utterances irrespective of the time or mode of their delivery. Any that were spoken or written after the nation of Israel and Jesus Christ came into existence, were but a development of those which preceded them; each class is necessarily on a par with the other. As already shown, the whole Bible is an elaboration of the divine utterance in Eden concerning the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent. Jehovah's word preceded all that God has since brought into existence for the redemption of man; it is the cause or origin of the name of salvation hence the reason for Jehovah having magnified it above his name. His words since given are no less the subject of the same exaltation.

HOME INTERESTS.

Which?

This interrogative confronts us every day of our lives, and often every hour in the day. Which particularly industry shall I devote myself to, which pressing duty shall I discharge first, which of two paths shal I choose? "Art is long and time is fleeting," and we must choose quickly or the opportunity presented may be gone forever.

That we all can choose and do choose every day and hour of our lives is here taken for granted, and we have neither time, space nor inclination to enter into metaphysical discussions as to the freedom of the will and the determining power of the choice (about which a great deal of talking is done and very little known). But if anything is here said that may determine the choice of any reader in right directions, there will be reason for thanksgiving.

The housekeeper finds that in order to do certain things she must neglect certain other things. While she is polishing window panes, she can't be cleaning silver, or brushing down cobwebs, or wiping fingermarks from the doors, or turning carpets, or making bedding. She must constantly select from a great many things that which most needs to be done, and while doing these neglect partially or wholly the rest. If she attends to the weightier matters some of the "mint, anise and cummin" is likely to be neglected. If she is too careful of the smaller matters she may overlook and leave undone the larger.

If the housekeeper is also the house mother and housewife, a new set of choices is added, and she finds that there are duties even more imperious than those of housekeeping. If she cares for her children's minds and bodies as she should, some things in some circles counted important must go undone. She can't embroider their clothes, and garnish their rooms, and feed them on dainties prepared by her own hands, and cultivate their minds herself, and devote herself to her husband and society and care properly for everything all at the same time. There isn't enough of her, even when spread out very thin, to go around. If she has assistants and can thus multiply herself, of course her ability to do is enlarged; even then she will find the interrogative at the head of this essay confronting her at every turn.

The student may start out ambitious to circumnavigate the world of knowledge, but he soon finds that he must choose. He cannot excel in al branches; he may excel in some one department of one branch, but to do this he must neglect all the rest, except in those points in which they bear directly on the specialty he has chosen. We do not go to Louis Agassiz for dissertations on art and literature, or to Humboldt for definitions in theology and metaphysics, or to Longfellow for solutions of mathematical and astronomical problems, or to Sir William Thompson for poetry and rhetoric. Said an eminent author and divine still living when asked his opinion of a certain book just published: "I know nothing of current literature; I have read nothing for the last ten years." Agassiz is quoted as saying on one occasion: "I haven't looked into a newspaper for seventeen years, and I'm alive yet."

The ordinary reader finds that he must choose, and choose severely, or he will accomplish nothing worth accounting. He can read but one page of one book at a time, and if that page is foolish, worthless, unwholesome, vicious, he is trebly cheated and wronged; his time is gone, his mental force wasted, and he has taken into his intellectual system an evil element which will work its natural course. Those are wise who allow their reading to be selected for them by competent persons until their taste and judgment are formed after the best models and they are able to choose intelligently for themselves. The mother who is careful to know that the literature lying around in her children's way is of the right sort, that amusements they engage in and the companions they associate with are negatively harmless and positively beneficial, is gaining the determining force of their wills in the direction of virtue and honor, and this guidance will continue when she rests beneath the sod.

When one habitually cultivates that which is noblest in himself according to the one standard—the Word of God—and keeps in sympathy with those of the same mind, his moral choices will not be likely to be much aside of what they should be. He who loves the best authors will know how to choose the best books. The mother who is able to take a wide and comprehensive view of her varied duties to her family will see that the most important are first discharged and then that those less important are not left undone. And may we not trust that when in blindness and darkness and uncertainty, but in humble reliance on the Divine Goodness, we are compelled to choose we know not what or how, he who disposes the lot when it is cast into the lap will guide our choices and lead our feet in paths of righteousness and peace?

The influence of religion should be an atmosphere pervading all things connected with our being. It ought to be the element in which the Christian lives, rather than the sanctuary to which he retires.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

God treats none worse than they deserve; and if he chooses to treat any better, he certainly has a right to do so.—Payson.

CHRIST THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

"I am the light of the world,"—John viii.-12.

The prophets of the Old Testament could see clearly that the earth was filled with darkness and the people with gross darkness, but they rejoiced that "the Lord should arise upon them, and his glory be seen in the midst of them." Isaiah said Christ was "the light of the Gentiles," and when in a vision he witnessed his coming, he told Zion to "arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. The Lord shall rise upon thee and his glory shall be seen upon thee, and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and Kings to the brightness of thy rising. The sun shall no more be thy light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God, thy glory."

The last prophet wrote, "unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings." When the angel gave the announcement to the shepherds of Christ's birth, "the glory of the Lord shone round about them." The wise men were also led by a bright and shining star. When Christ was being taken to the temple, Simeon took him in his arms and blessed him; as "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of his people Israel." "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." "This was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

When Christ Himself stood in the temple one morning just as the sun was rising, he exclaimed, "I am the light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

The manner of Christ's appearing was as the dawning of the sun upon the world. The earth was full of darkness and sin. But Christ came into the world as a great light, and his light shone through the darkness and the gloom just as the sun breaks forth upon the horizon after a night of darkness and terror. As He came the shadows of darkness fled away, and the stars melted in the brightness of their source and Christ "the light of the world" had come. God commanded the light to shine out of darkness and into our hearts, to give us the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

Light and knowledge are often synonymous terms, and when Christ called Himself "the light of the world," he signified that He was the source of the knowledge which man possesses. Christ is the source of all knowledge, light and holiness.

Among the heathen where the doctrine of sacrifices prevailed, forgiveness of sins was not granted. And with all the superstition and idolatry of Paganism nothing could be gained because they had no light, they did not know Christ. But from out of all darkness and sinfulness there came a voice saying, "Behold the lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." Through His blood salvation is obtained: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Christ said, "Look unto me and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth" "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life." David said (Ps. 119-130), "the entrance of thy words giveth light." Some who grope about in darkness and laugh at spiritual light "understand neither what they say nor whereof they affirm."

After receiving the light you can say with joy, "one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see." Ye are the lights of the world. A city that is set on a high cannot be hid. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good work, and glorify your father which is in heaven."

Since "we are the light of the world," let us keep our light burning brightly without flickering or growing dim. The upright will walk in the light; the wicked will grope in the darkness lest their sins will be exposed. For we read in (John 3-19-20-21), "and this is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, and his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God."

Wherever we read of Christ, we read of Him as light. John says in (John 5-35), "He was a burning and a shining light." Paul says in Ephesians 5-14, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shal give thee light." John, while on the Isle of Patmos had a vision of the new Jerusalem, and in Rev. 21-23, he said, "and the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the lamb is the light thereof." And in Rev. 1-17, he says, "and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength." In Matt. 24-27 we have Christ's coming pictured, "for as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the son of man be."

If we continue to walk in the light we will be able to pray as David did, "Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him who is the health of my countenance and my God." Also, "Lord lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us."

Viola Cazeley.

Cleveland, Ohio.

NEBRASKA'S REPORT FOR JUNE

Sermons.

Blair	3
Benson	1
St. Paul, 16th to 21st	4
Bible Readings	4
Moorefield, 22nd to 24th	2
Total	14

Expense.

Omaha to Blair and return	$ .90
Benson	.10
Omaha to St. Paul	3.00
Dinner	.20
St. Paul to Moorefield	3.26
Supper	.25
Breakfast	.20
Total	$7.91

Money Received.

Wm. Gould	$10.00
D. G. Prim	10.00
Henry Robinson	5.00
Jennie Page	2.00
Total	$27.00
Expense	7.91
Amount received less exp.	$19.09
Salary	$75.00
	19.09
Amount due	$55.91

During June we met with the brethren at Blair, and had three good meetings. We then went to St. Paul, preached four times, and held four Bible readings, all of which were attended by all that could get out. Good interest was shown.

As it was nearing the time when conference should be advertised, and St. Paul and Moorefield were the two points to decide between, it was deemed best to close and go to the latter place and talk it over. We arrived there the 22nd, and found harvest just at hand, and as it took all the time to talk conference, and arrange committees, we decided not to try to hold meetings only over Sunday. Further details will be given in our next report.

REPORT FOR JULY.

Sermons.

Moorefield, 1st to 2nd	3
North Star, 6th to 11th	6
Freedom, 12th to 18th	7
Edison, 23rd	2
Holbrook, 25th	1
Blair, 30th	1
Total	20

Expenses.

Cambridge to Holbrook	$ .78
Holbrook to Edison	.30
Arapahoe to Omaha	4.93
Omaha to Blair and return.	.90
Total	$5.31

Money Received.

At Freedom	$19.50
At Holbrook	10.00
At Edison	8.40
Total	$37.90
Total expense	5.30
Am't received less expense.	$32.60
Salary	75.00
	$32.60
Amount due	$42.40

After arrangements had been completed for conference we closed at Moorefield with three sermons on the first and second. Then we went to North Star, where the interest was splendid and a goodly number expect to go to conference. Our next point was at Freedom. Here our church people have had a church building for years, and some splendid meetings held, but none better than the present one. The house was filled to its capacity nearly every evening, and Sunday evening spring seats and blocks of wood were brought into play, until all space, including the platform, was occupied. One load came from Bartley 13 miles away. At the close four took a stand for the truth, and many others are interested.

The brethren at Moorefield and some from North Star met us at Stockville, and after the sisters had spread their cloths on the grass under the shade trees on the banks of Medicine Creek and we had satisfied our hunger and slaked our thirst from the well filled buckets of lemonade, we proceeded to induct into the family of God, Mrs. Louis, Mrs. Johnson and Miss Lulu Bickering. Circumstances prevented one lady being there. We spent some happy hours visiting at the home of Wm. Stevens, who was the only one in the faith when we visited there years ago. We also spent a pleasant time at the home of Bro. and Sister Hammond. We spent one afternoon with much profit with Sister Moore and her young lady companion. Sister Moore is sound in the faith, but very lonely since Bro. Moore fell asleep. He was one of the nearer perfect men of this age. This thought is of great comfort to his companion. Be of good cheer Sister Moore; our meeting is not far away.

The time having arrived to carry the message to others, Bro Jas. Steadman and family, and Sister Selleck, of Bartley accompanied us to Bro. James Gambles, where we took dinner and were entertained in true Irish form. Sister Gamble is in poor health, but we trust it is God's will to spare her.

We then took the train for Holbrook, where we spent the night with our Sister's family and father, but had to take an early train for Edison where we spoke on the "New Heavens and Earth" at 11 o'clock, in the Christian church and lectured in the evening to a full house. Tuesday evening we spoke in the Seventh Day Adventist's tent in Holbrook on "What is Man." by request.

In all, the month has been well spent, and we believe much good has been done in the name of the Lord.

In hope,
ALMUS ADAMS,
Evangelist.
Per, Alta King, Sec.

"STUDY TO SHOW THYSELF APPROVED OF GOD."

The great majority of men, who study at all, study that they may be wise, may stand well with their fellows, may wield the pen with force and power, may win name and fame by the grandeur of their speech or success and wealth in their business ventures. But Paul set before Timothy a higher object than any of these. He was not to study for his own pleasure or that he might please men, but that he might "show himself approved of God."

But how could Timothy do this? God does not speak audibly to the crowds of people around us to tell them that the conduct of such and such persons is approved of Him. No, but he does speak just the same. He lays down the course of life in His Holy Book that all the followers of Jesus must take. To show ourselves "approved of God" we must show them that we are walking by the Book, that we dare not go contrary to anything said in its pages, nor take from it so small an iota as a letter. That we look upon it as "the critic of men," so both conduct and doctrine, and so reverence it, that we would fain teach others to lay no sacreligious hands upon it, but to "eat it" as "the manna of life," and live. "It is by every word of God that man is to be fed,"—"every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord." and to show ourselves "approved of God," we must "rightly divide" these words, giving "milk," or easy lessons to the babes, and "meat" or the hard things to men, teaching both to grow, both "in grace and in the knowledge of the truth," that they in turn may be of service to others.

The word of God is a "living" word, not only because it is inexhaustable, inextinguishable, indestructible and divine in life, but also because it has the power of imparting the same indestructible divine life to men.

He who "has the power of death, that is the devil," (Heb. 2: 14), can cause the fingers of corruption to lay hold on every other "living" thing, but he cannot with all his intricate machinery of Papedom, contrive to destroy this Book and its followers, the "approved of God."

Jesus said "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." (Luke 21: 33), "the words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." If ye love me keep my words; "He that heareth my word, and believeth in him that hath sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

"Study to show thyself approved of God." "Yes what she writes is good, but she does not live it," and "your Mr. C——is an eloquent and pleasing speaker, but he sometimes teaches doctrines that are false, and as to conduct, he does not 'practice what he preaches.'" Just such comments as these are made by the watchful world. They know whether the walk of a professed Christian accords with the word of God or not. Do not "bring reproach upon the Holy Name whereby you have been called."

And be careful not to "pervert the Gospel of Christ." He who does so dares a great deal for whether he be man or angel he becomes "accursed." Seek not to please men, but God. If we seek to please men we are not the servants of Christ. "Enoch walked with God," and "pleased God." May we all so walk, studying every day how we may be approved of Him.

S. Roxana Wince.

Pierceton, Ind.

We trust our friends in Canada will remember that the present agreement with the United States forces us to pay extra postage on papers sent to Canada. This compels all publishers to charge fifty cents a year more to the subscribers in that country. This makes our rate to you $2.00 instead of $1.50.

THE TENTH ZIONIST CONGRESS.

On Wednesday, August 9, will be held at Basle, Switzerland, for the tenth time the biennial sessions of a national Jewish parliament—an occasion of vast significance to the modern Hebrew, and of sufficient cultural and political importance to the outside world to receive due consideration.

This parliament, the Zionist congress, will consider the progress of the national movement, hardly two decades old, among the Jews for the past two years, and devise ways and means for the future period to bring to a nearer realization the resettlement of Palestine by the Jewish people as such, and the reassertion of the existence of the Jewish nation. For this is Zionism as propagated by the best and ablest sons and daughters of Israel throughout the world, an attempt on the part of the Jews themselves to add their mite, not alone in the religious sense, to universal culture under normal and favorable national influences. It affects all Jews, and, consequently it is not strange that Zionism is the greatest movement among the Hebrews and has become the ideal of hundreds of thousands.

All sorts and conditions of Jews will receive representation at the congress; extreme religionists and intense atheists; downtrodden wage slaves of Warsaw and well-fed bankers of Germany; materialistic socialists and ardent defenders of the present day order of things. Siberia's Jewry as well as Argentina's will be represented. Delegates, democratically elected will hail from China as well as from France: Russian Jewesses will join in the discussion with American and English Hebrews. All these elements will come together for one set purpose a national one—to rejuvenate the Jewish national spirit.

The congress will have before it important matters to transact, such as the further development of agriculture in Palestine, so successful until now; the establishment of a scientifically conducted co-operative colony there, and the introduction of industrial centers, a subject until now not broached. It must also reorganize the central body of the movement and make it financially self sufficient. Then, too, the attitude of the Zionists toward the entity of the Ottoman empire, a matter discussed several times in the Turkish parliament, will undoubtedly be clearly stated by the presiding officer, Dr. Max Nordau, the eminent sociologist. Reports handed in by committees will indicate the immense influence exerted by Zionists and the increase in the funds of the movement especially in America.

The United States will even naturally become the center of Zionist activity for the American Jews are more and more appreciating that the future of their nationality as such hinges on the realization of the Zionist ideal. For this reason the Jews' fellow citizens should know something of the movement that has changed the course of events for an old people, hoping yet to take its place among the nations.

I cut the above from the Chicago Daily News, of August 9th. The contents of this clipping are of importance to all prophetic students, and in fact to all people interested in the signs of coming redemption. The trend of the cutting is looking toward a re-nationalization of Israel in Palestine, prior to the coming of the Lord, while Israel remains still in unbelief, as the following paragraphs show: "The resettlement of the Jewish people, as such, and the reassertion of the existence of the Jewish nation." "They will come together for one set purpose, a national one—to rejuvenate the Jewish national spirit." Hoping yet to take its place among the nations." just as soon as that purpose is accomplished, the Jewish clock will commence to tick again, and Daniel, and all God's true people will stand in their lot.

Oh, church of the loving God, awake from slumber! I am determined by God's help to do all I can to arouse the people. Looking to this end I have a plan to propose at as little expense as possible. I desire all in the United States and Canada, who would like to have me preach these great truths in your neighborhood, providing I come within a reasonable distance of your home, to write and say so. If all will do this, then I can arrange consecutive trips in different directions, and reach places at a distance, with but little traveling expense. Let me hear from you as soon as it is possible. I have done this once before, and it worked well. I have traveled from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and evangelized in twenty-four different states. I can do so again if you will respond. There is urgent need to be more active and live more Godly lives.

W. H. WILSON,
625 N. Willow Ave., Austin Sta.
Chicago, Ill.

AN INFIDEL'S FAITH IN THE BIBLE.

A Virginia banker who was chairman of a noted infidel club, who was once traveling through Kentucky, having bank bills to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars about him. When he came to a lonely forest where robberies and murders were said to be of frequent occurrence, he got lost and took the wrong road. The darkness of night closed around him, and how to escape the threatened danger he knew not. In his alarm he suddenly espied in the distance a dim light, and urging his horse forward, he at length came to a wretched cabin. He knocked, and the door was opened by a woman, who said her husband was out hunting, but would soon return. The gentleman put up his horse and entered the cabin with feelings that can better be imagined than described. Here he was with a large sum of money and perhaps in the house of one of the robbers whose name was a terror to the country.

In a short time the man of the house came in. He had a deer-skin shirt, a bear-skin cap; he seemed fatigued and in no talkative mood. All this faded the infidel no good. He felt for his pistols in his pockets, and placed them so as to be ready for instant use. The man asked the stranger to retire to bed, but he declined, saying that he would sit up by the fire all night. The man urged, but the more he urged the more the infidel was alarmed. He felt assured that this was his last night upon earth, but he was determined to sell his life as dearly as he could. His infidel principles gave him no comfort. His fears grew into perfect agony. What was to be done?

At length the backwoodsman arose; reaching to the wooden shelf, he took down an old book and said:

'Well, stranger, if you don't go to bed I will; but it is my habit to read a chapter of the Holy Scriptures before I go to bed.'

What a change did those words produce! Alarm was at once removed from the skeptic's mind. Though avowing himself an infidel, he now had confidence in the Bible. He felt safe. He felt that a man who kept an old Bible in his house, and read it, and bent his knee in prayer, was no robber or murderer. He listened to the simple prayer of the good man, which at once dismissed all his fears, and he laid down in that rude cabin and slept as calmly as he did under his father's roof.

From that time he ceased to revile the good old Bible. He became a sincere Christian, and often related the story of his eventful journey to prove the folly of infidelity.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND.

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

E. S. Bond	$ .50
A. Lister	1.00

GOLD DUST

A straight creed will not atone for a bad life or a crooked character.

Kindness is something we receive and have to pass along in order to keep it.

The weakest among us has a gift, however seemingly trivial which is peculiar to him, and which, worthily used, will be a gift also to his race.

Keep out evil thoughts; perhaps you cannot keep a bird from flying over your head, but you can prevent its building a nest in your hair.

The best exercise for the conscience is holding fast its integrity in small things. Here lies the chief temptation to wrong. To tell a small untruth, to utter a little word of unkindness, to cheat in some very unimportant matter—these are the real temptations of life which beset us.

Every time we conquer ourselves we are helping others to conquer themselves.

If anyone speaks evil of you, let your life be so that none will believe him.

Remember that to change thy opinion and to follow him who corrects thy errors, is as consistent with freedom as it is to persist in the error.

'Tis not the dying for a faith that's so hard—some man of every nation has done that; 'tis the living up to it that's so difficult.

Whatever is right to do should be done with our best care, strength and faithfulness of purpose; we have no scales by which we can weigh our faithfulness to duties or determine their relative importance in God's eyes. That which seems a trifle to us may be the secret spring which shall move the issues of life and death.

Dixon, Ill. Anna Drew.

Some one has said that if we put the saloon out of town that grass will grow in its streets. That is a lie, but if it wasn't, it is better to walk on God's green grass than on the blood of your neighbor's wife and children.—Robert Yost.

To live in the presence of great truths, to be dealing with eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals—that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him.—Francis G. Peabody.

WHERE THE SPIRIT OF MAN GOES TO.

Dr. Bullinger, of London, England, editor of Things to Come, says:

The universal desire to know what lies beyond the grave is the best proof we can have that no one has any real satisfying evidence to substantiate the devil's lie—"Ye shall not surely die." That is why lie is constantly, and at every turn, forcing that lie on public attention by the Pulpit, the Press, and the playhouse.

Spiritists may urge that the spirit of man goes to some other "plane." Baptists may assert that it goes to purgatory. Protestants may maintain that it goes to paradise, but the Bible declares that it returns to God who gave it.

We believe God.

And we do not believe man, whether on the one hand, he says these spiritist phenomena are all jugglery, or whether, on the other hand, he says they are the spirits of the people who were once alive. Both are wrong. And both, in different ways, make for the support of satan's lies; for both are in direct contradiction of the Word of God.

Manager's Column

Now a days almost every enterprise worth while has to be advertised in some form or another. One of the best means of doing this has been found to be to employ a "press agent", whose duty it is to keep the public informed in regard to the enterprise he represents, and to bring to their favorable attention its good points. While the writer does not wish to pose as a "press agent", in the general sense of the word, he has decided to write a little news for this column each week, with the object of keeping the readers of this paper in close touch with it and the publishers, and keep them informed of what is being accomplished. In this connection he would be pleased to receive from the readers any suggestions they may have for the betterment of the paper and where possible these ideas will be used. We want this paper to be just the kind of a paper you want, one that you may be proud of, so if you have any suggestions send them along.

In looking over our books we find that there are a lot of subscribers who are in arrears on their subscriptions. In order to conduct our paper on business lines and pay for it as it goes along, it is absolutely necessary to have each subscription paid for as soon as possible after it is due. Just as soon as we can get things into shape, we are going to send a notice to each one who is back in their subscription reminding them that they are past due. We hope no one will be offended at this means of reminding them, and should a notice reach you, and you are not in position to remit at once, just drop a postal telling us so, and we will be glad to keep the paper coming to you till you can pay.

This week's Restitution comes to you in a little different form than you have been receiving it in the past. We hope you will like the changes we have made, as our aim in making them has been to improve some of the things that have not been entirely satisfactory in previous issues. First, we have substituted book paper for the cheaper newspaper stock, this will have two good results, the papers will stand more handling without wearing out, and the printing is very much easier to read when printed on this smooth clear surface. Second, this paper instead of being set with hand type as formerly, is now all set on a linotype machine, that means that all the type used is new each issue, which insures clear, distinct printing. The third change is the changing of the size of the paper itself, and cutting it down to a much neater and more convenient size, and at the same time keeping approximately the same amount of reading matter as before. Previous to this the columns of the paper were what the printers call "leaded," that is a blank space or "lead" was placed between each line, now the paper is set "solid", that is the "leads" are left out, and so of course we can set more lines in a column, and although the paper itself is smaller, you get about the same amount of reading matter as before. Of course these changes have and will in the future make the expense of issuing the paper considerably more, but we think that the improvements thus inaugerated will warrant the added expense. Its sure to if every subscriber will show his appreciation by hustling around and securing a new subscriber. Remember the subscription price will remain the same as before, $1.50 a year, 75c for six months.

The largest planet has its sun; the smallest hair casts its shadow.—Ivan Panin.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents. or assorted packages of 10: for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Are to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 50 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN
THE RESTITUTION
RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the
Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
B. H. LANG, W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON, HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON, BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit (aided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints (coheirs with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 5-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HIGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 30, 1911 No. 33

DESIRING TO DEPART AND BE WITH CHRIST.

"Having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." Phil. i. 23.

There is perhaps no passage in the Scripture more commonly resorted to in support of the idea that death is not the cessation of life, but only the transition from one mode of existence to another, than the words of the apostle at the head of this paper. Often, after directing attention to the many direct and explicit statements of holy writ, to the effect that the dead are unconscious, the force of which could not be gainsaid, we have been asked, 'But what do you make of the words of Paul, when he said, "I have a desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better?"'

Doubtless the language, considered by itself, favors the idea referred to, when that idea already exists in the mind as foregone conclusion; but we hope to be able to show that the language of the apostle is in perfect harmony with the declaration that 'the dead know not anything,' and that all future life for the dead depends on their resurrection. And, first we call attention to the fact, that while the apostle does speak of departing and being with Christ as being far better than something else, he does not say it was departing by dying; and it is surely unwarrantable to assume tht the apostle alluded to a being with Christ, before the Lord's return. If, indeed, it were the case that Paul in any other part of his writings expressed such a hope, the conclusion would be legitimate; but if, on the other hand, we find that he looked, and taught others to look, to the return of the Lord as the time for being with him, then surely it would only be doing fairly with his language, here, to understand him to refer to being with Christ at his coming. And this indeed is the true state of the case.

The Lord Jesus himself taught his disciples, shortly before his death, that their being with him depended on his coming again. 'I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also.'—(John xiv:3). Is it possible for language better to express the idea that it is necessary for Christ to come again in order that his disciples may be with him? No; but if Paul could be with Christ simply by dying, then how is the coming of the Lord necessary, that where he is his disciples may also be?

The common theology, which teaches that the souls of believers at death, do immediately pass into glory, directly, perverts the promise of Christ just quoted, by substituting the coming of death for the coming of the Lord; and applies to death the exhortation he left to his disciples, to watch because they knew not the day or the hour of his coming. With such ideas in their minds, it is no wonderful that men should understand the language, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am you may be also," to apply to the believer's death, or what is commonly called so. But Paul did not contradict the Lord's words in that way, as is manifest from every instance in which he mentions or alludes to the coming of the Lord. Why, then, should we think that, in speaking of departing and being with Christ, he meant dying, thus ignoring the force of the Lord's promise, "I will come again, that where I am ye may be also?"

Moreover, we find the apostle carefully instructing believers on this very point, and using language equally explicit; affirming that it was by means of the coming of Christ that his faithful ones were to be with him. Comforting the brethren at Thessalonica concerning those of their number who had fallen asleep, he tells them, "by the word of the Lord," that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord"—(1 Thes. iv. 13-17). It is the words, "and so shall we ever be with the Lord," to which we specially call attention. They are exactly to the same effect as the Lord's words, "that where I am there ye may be also." The being with the Lord is, in both instances, made to depend on his coming again for his disciples, which would not be the case if he went by death to be with the Lord.

There are some writers, however, who maintain that, while the believer does not enter into fullness of joy, or receive his reward till the return of the Lord and the receiving the promise of Christ yet in some sense the believer is present with the Lord in hades; and, in proof of their opinion, refer to the Lord's promise to be present wherever two or three are gathered together in his name, while he is bodily present in heaven. 'Even so,' say they, 'may he be present in hades, only that his presence may (and no doubt will) be more sensibly felt.'

But this plea is inadmissible; for while we have no difficulty in receiving the promise of Christ being with his people, whenever met in his name, we have extreme difficulty in receiving the affirmation that it was being 'present with the Lord,' in that sense, that the apostle so earnestly desired; because he already so enjoyed the Lord's presence. He could say with truth and gratitude, 'At my first answer no man stood by me, but all forsook me; notwithstanding the Lord stood by me and strengthened me'—(2 Tim. iv. 17). The apostle was not desiring the Lord to be with him in that sense, but desiring to depart and to be with Christ. The only allowable sense in which the apostle's words can be used here, is that he desired to be present with the Lord in a bodily, or personal sense, which as we have already seen, he expected to be, not by dying, but by the return of the Lord from heaven.

Having thus considered the apostle's words, so far as they refer to being with Christ, let us now consider what he meant by departing. 'Having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better.' What was that? Some have thought that the apostle was thinking of Enoch, and Elijah, and of how desirable it would be to ascend, as they did, to heaven, and be with Christ there. And such a desire would quite agree with his words here and elsewhere; and would certainly be a consummation far better than a life of tribulation, or lying in the grave. But it seems to us far more likely that he was thinking of departing, and being with Christ, along with those who are alive at his coming; for that was an event familiar to his thoughts, and the theme of his consolation to others. 'The dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught away together with them, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord'—(1 Thes. iv. 17, 18).

Surely the apostle would have that source of comfort often before his mind; and any candid person will admit that it is doing no violence to anything the apostle has written, to understand him to be referring to departing without dying, and meeting the Lord in the air, and so be with him for ever more. And surely none will deny that that would be 'very far better.'

This we know, we have heard the same desire expressed by those who, believing the apostles' doctrine, had no expectation of being with Christ before he returns for his own. It is a great mistake to suppose that none but those who believe that the dead are alive, can have and express a desire to depart and to be with Christ. And from the foregoing considerations, we cannot help thinking that many who read them will be satisfied that the application here made of the apostle's words is correct, being in harmony with the teaching of the apostle in all his writings, and with the Lord's promise to come again, that where he is his disciples may be also.

On this faithful promise rests the hope of the church. Blessed hope! It binds us closely to his heart. The hope of being with him, and seeing his gracious face without shame, sharing his glory and his throne for evermore, may well make the believer patient under the trials of the present life, while earnestly crying daily, 'Even upon the words, to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain,' as evidence that it was to death (to die) the apostle referred when he spoke of departing and being with Christ. If it is assumed he was thinking of gain to himself when he used the words, 'to die is gain,' but that view is very questionable. Considering all the privations, persecutions and toil the apostle was enduring, he might well think of the gain it would be to him to rest from his labor, asleep in Christ; yet from the drift of his language, it seems to us far more likely that he was not thinking of gain to himself, by his death, but of gain thereby to his master. Let the reader try this view with the sense of the context. He is relating his 'earnest expectation, and hope,' that 'Christ would be magnified in his body, whether it be by life or death, for to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.' The magnifying of Christ was the subject of his thoughts. He evidently thought that Christ could be magnified by him, whether he lived or died. Is it not, then, most natural to understand the apostle as alluring to gain that would accrue to his master, when he said, 'to die is gain?' Either way, the Christ shall be magnified. For me to live is (to magnify) Christ, and to die is gain (to him). Seeing, then, that he was determined his Lord should be magnified by him, whether he lived or died, he was in a strait which to choose—life or death.

But there was a matter regarding which he was in no strait—namely, 'to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better.' What was that? Some have thought that the apostle was thinking of Enoch, and Elijah, and of how desirable it would be to ascend, as they did, to heaven, and be with Christ there. And such a desire would quite agree with his words here and elsewhere; and would certainly be a consummation far better than a life of tribulation, or lying in the grave. But it seems to us far more likely that he was thinking of departing, and being with Christ, along with those who are alive at his coming; for that was an event familiar to his thoughts, and the theme of his consolation to others. 'The dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught away together with them, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord'—(1 Thes. iv. 17, 18).

Surely the apostle would have that source of comfort often before his mind; and any candid person will admit that it is doing no violence to anything the apostle has written, to understand him to be referring to departing without dying, and meeting the Lord in the air, and so be with him for ever more. And surely none will deny that that would be 'very far better.'

This we know, we have heard the same desire expressed by those who, believing the apostles' doctrine, had no expectation of being with Christ before he returns for his own. It is a great mistake to suppose that none but those who believe that the dead are alive, can have and express a desire to depart and to be with Christ. And from the foregoing considerations, we cannot help thinking that many who read them will be satisfied that the application here made of the apostle's words is correct, being in harmony with the teaching of the apostle in all his writings, and with the Lord's promise to come again, that where he is his disciples may be also.

On this faithful promise rests the hope of the church. Blessed hope! It binds us closely to his heart. The hope of being with him, and seeing his gracious face without shame, sharing his glory and his throne for evermore, may well make the believer patient under the trials of the present life, while earnestly crying daily, 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus.' Come quickly!'

W. LAING.

ENCE.

Read at opening of Ohio Conference, Aug. 16, 1911.—(Editor)

In the year one thousand nine hundred and three
A band of co-workers assembled with glee;
The glorious truth they wished to sow.
And thus the conference began to grow.

To Salem with their hearts intent
For two successive years they went;
At Cleveland then the coming year.
They met with hearty words of cheer.

Brush Creek is next to fall in line,
And there they met at the given time;
Three heeded to the message old,
And then were added to the fold.

Then Springfield fair grounds is the place,
We see again each smiling face;
And meet our friends both old and new
The glorious band, yet precious few.

Then back to Salem is the call,
We're welcomed there by one and all;
One more puts on the name as pure,
For sin, it is the only cure.

Again to Springfield with pleasure we fare,
For they do heed your wants with care;
With lamp all trimmed and burning bright,
We journey onward by the light.

Now Cleveland with her church as new,
Does us a gentle welcome show;
Our hearts again are made to rejoice.
When worthy youth does make his choice.

In grace and numbers the flock have grown.
As from year to year the seeds were sown;
While some dear ones have left this world of strife,
Still we toil on toward eternal life.

And now it is our pleasure dear,
To greet you here this conference year;
Our warmest welcome we extend
To all of those who may attend.

May each a joyful word impart,
And bring strength to some weaker heart;
And may each one through the coming year,
Speak words of comfort and of cheer.

These things that count are oft so small,
We scarce take note of them at all;
Some deed of some forgotten hour,
May bloom into a fragrant flower.

Strive on, ye elders, be not dismayed;
Toil on, brave youths, be not afraid;
'Tis not alone the din and strife,
That marks the value of this life.

These are but bubbles on the shore,
Our aim in life means vastly more;
Oh may we each ever faithful be,
Till we our Lord and Saviour see.

Troy, Ohio. Florence Westfall

Nebuchadnezzar's Image.

Dan. ii:28-45.

Is a chart of time. Five distinct periods are traced upon it. These periods span the history of four universal kingdoms, viz.: Babylon. Medo-Persia. Grecia, Rome, and of Rome divided, and of Rome utterly annihilated by the kingdom which the God of heaven shall set up.

1. The head of gold represents Babylon.

2. The breasts and arms of silver represent Medo-Persia.

3. The belly and sides of brass represent Grecia.

4. The legs of iron represent Rome.

5. The feet and toes represent Rome divided, see v. 41.

This same history in advance is outlined in the 7th chapter of Daniel, by four beasts; each beast representing one of the four kingdoms represented by sections of the image; and the divided state of the fourth is represented by ten horns, corresponding to the ten toes of the image. And the spirit's word for it, "the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise." Dan. vii:24. This is infallible proof that the ten toes in Dan. ii. 41, 42, represent kings, and in the nature of things imply kingdoms. In the divided state of Rome, then, there was but one of fierce countenance. Dan viii:23. This weakened it, because the toe kingdoms were partly iron and partly clay, and these substances cannot be welded together. Dan. ii:42, 43. We now proceed with the chart.

6. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, (as were those kingdoms preceding it) but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

"It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms." All what kingdoms? Does it refer to Babylon, that was broken to pieces and consumed by the Medes and Persians? Does it refer to Medo-Persia, that was broken to pieces and consumed by Grecia? Does it refer to Grecia, that was broken to pieces and consumed by Rome? Or does it refer to the fourth kingdom with all the toe, or horn kingdoms developed upon its territory? It seems to me that this question might be safely left to the common sense of the Scripture in hand, so plain is it. But the Spirit has left no room for guesswork, or mistake. John saw this fourth beast kingdom, and its ten horns, and the angel explained to him that the ten horns "are ten kings;" and adds: "These have one mind (at the time of the end) and shall give their power and strength unto the beast: these make war with the lamb, and the lamb shall overcome them," as Daniel had predicted.

History is outlined by the image no further. The grand purpose of the image has been served it was to reveal the establishment of God's kingdom "in the latter days;" see Dan. ii:28; and this event is to put an everlasting end to the kingdoms of men.

Believers of God's truth in every age since Daniel could tell their whereabouts in the world's history by means of this image; but to none could it be more intensely interesting as to the believers of the present day. We are certainly living "in the days of these kings," when the next great event will be the setting up of God's kingdom, for which they have so long prayed "they kingdom come.

Reader, should you ever be told that the kingdom of God was set up at the first Pentecost after the crucifixion of the Lord Jesus, your answer should be impossible;

1st.—Because the stone is to smite the image upon the feet of iron and clay, see v. 34. The image had no feet at the Pentecost referred to, therefore they could not have been smitten.

2nd.—Because if the image had been smitten at Pentecost, it never could have had any feet.

3rd.—Because it now has feet that have not been smitten by the stone; and no kingdom of God is, and fail to do, what He promised it should do.

4th.—Because the one anointed to be king of God's kingdom is gone to a far country to receive a kingdom and to return, see Luke xix:12. He returns when he has received the kingdom.

5th.—Because the saints—the members of Christs body 1 Cor. xii:27—are joint-heirs with Christ (Rom. viii:17) and will reign with him. 2 Tim. ii:12) on the earth (Rev. v:10) and take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever. (Dan. vii:18) and are installed in this great authority and power by Jesus when he comes with the clouds of heaven (Dan. vii:13) and all the holy angels with him, and sits upon the throne of his glory. Matt. xxv:31; He will confer upon his resurrected, glorified and crowned saints the honor of smiting the image upon its feet, for the spirit in David has said: "To execute vengeance upon the heathen (punishment upon the people, to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgment written (in Dan. ii:34-35), this honor have all his saints, praise ye the Lord." Psa. cxlix and none of these events have yet transpired.

6th.—Because such an idea compels the wilful disregard of one division of the image, the feet and toes, or a willful transposition of the order of events as arranged by the spirit in Daniel; in fact it makes verses 41, 42 and 43 entirely superfluous, which alone stamps the doctrine of the Pentecostal kingdom as manmade.

M. JOBLIN.

The Truth in Montana. No. 2

EUREKA!

June 30, Editor Dayton Leader. The hundred dollars is ours!

Dear Mr. Pinchurst: Please read John, 3rd chapter, 16th verse which reads: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Please leave the hundred dollars with the editor of the Dayton Leader. He gets half. Yours.

A Subscriber.

Anent the question as to whether the Scriptures mention the fact that man is endowed with an immortal or never dying soul, and with a view of securing the $100 offered for the discovery of such a passage, the "Rev." Wm. McKay writes the Leader from Niarada as follows:

"Niarada, Mont., June 26, 1911. Turn to Isaiah, Chapter 55, 3rd verse, which reads: "Incline your ear and come unto me; hear and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

Also James, chapter 5, 20th verse: "Let him know that he who converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins."

Also Revelation, chapter 20, verse 4. "And I saw thrones and they sat upon them; and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

Let the challenger refer the meaning of these words to any three or four clergymen. I will abide by their verdict. Yours,

Wm. McKay.

While you live right, nothing goes wrong. A soul at peace with God cannot be greatly disturbed by the world, for it has its pleasures in God and its blessing from God. Jackson.

"Cry aloud! spare not. Lift up thy voice like a trumpet."

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Perkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, O. AUG. 30, 1911

EDITORIAL

A PILLAR

Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God. Rev. 3:12.

In the temple of his God
A pillar he shall be;
With Jesus bless the nations,
Through all eternity.
Galva, Ill. Lillie H. Willis.

GIVING THANKS ALWAYS.

This is one of those deep-meaning admonitions of the apostle, which at first sight seems rather impracticable; but as it is only the spiritual man that can discern the spiritual, so only those who are in touch with Paul can follow his depths. Is not this what the gospel of God's favor should generate in our breasts: we, worthless; cared for, and sought for, by the great creator, and all out of His love: Ought not the knowledge and the true realization of what salvation to eternal life means, and the thought of Gods mercy and goodness to lead us into that state of mind beyond empty formula, not platter-cleaning, long verbal prayers, giving alms to be seen of men, but the offer of the highest part of our nature—the intellect—to God, by offering him our heart. Joyful in the truth as David; confident in God as Paul; real in worship as Christ; always abounding in joyful heart praises to God. In every act, and look, and word, and thought, "giving thanks," like nature, in her silentness and beauty.

S. W. Throssell.

THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

Terms of relationship are not named ,and were never so intended. I have a wife, but my name is not husband. I have children, but my name is not father. I have known friendships, but my name is not friend. Such terms as brethren, friends, saints, believers, disciples or even Christians, are terms of relationship, and were never intended for church names. Even the term Christ, is not a name, but a title meaning the Anointed, the Messiah. "His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins.'

It is said that Jesus is the bridegroom and his church is the bride, therefore, the bride should take the bridegrooms name. All very well,, but, hold on Mr. Jones. You did not call her Mrs. Jones till after the wedding, did you? But the marriage supper of the Lamb is not yet. Till then, let the church be content to be the King's daughter, and bear the Father's name.

After all, how natural is all this, that the church should bear the Father's name. Eight times in the New Testament do we read of "The Church of God." It is enough. Here is the only safe basis of church unity. "And for this cause I bow the knee unto the Father of our Lord, Jesus Christ, of whom, (the Father) the whole family in heaven and earth are named."

A. E. HATCH.

THE FATHER'S HOUSE.

"I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2.

Perhaps there is no other assertion that Jesus made while here on earth that is used often by ministers of the gospel to comfort a dying world, or that is more grossly perverted from its true meaning, than the passage I have quoted.

The popular though seriously mistaken belief among Christian people is, that Jesus is preparing a home for the righteous in a world beyond the skies, and as soon as each one dies, he comes and takes his soul to the mansions above.

The Bible does not teach that God ever promised to take man to a world beyond the skies, but he did promise his saints an everlasting home on the earth. The Bible does not teach that Jesus ever promised to prepare a home for his people on some celestial sphere, and would come and take them to it, but he did say that it was necessary for him to go to the Father in order to prepare a place for his apostles as he had promised them.

According to the Bible Jesus never said that he would come and take his people from their death-beds to their heavenly home, but he did say that he would call them from their graves (John 5:28, 29), at the last day (John 6:40, 54) Paul says when the saints meet the Lord they will be together, the resurrected dead and the changed living (I Cor. 15:52, I Thess. 4:17). So they do not meet him "one by one" as they die.

If we teach that heaven is the home of the righteous we ignore God's promises to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob; we ignore our Saviour's words to the eleven apostles and others at Jerusalem after he had risen from the dead, saying, "These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning me (Luke 24:44), for these prophecies invariably claim that Christ and his saints will reign on the earth until all the enemies of the Lord are destroyed and the earth is made a paradise.

If we claim that the righteous are rewarded in heaven when they die, we dispute the words of Solomon who said, "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth" (Prov. 11:31), and also "The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth" (Prov. 10:30); and we do not believe Jesus who said, "ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just" (Luke 14:14), and also "behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22:12.

If the text does not mean that Jesus is preparing a home in heaven for all his people, what does it mean? I have not space in this article to give a complete answer, but I shall try to give a brief but true meaning as Jesus taught it, that is in perfect harmony with the scriptures. Lay aside all prejudice, look up the references, believe God, and you will see the truth.

The promise which I have quoted for my text, not made by our Lord to the world, but directly to his apostles after Judas Iscariot had left the room. Jesus had told them that they should sit on the thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel: that it was the Father's good pleasure to give them the kingdom; that he would not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine until that day when he would drink it new with them in his Father's kingdom; then he said to them, "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father had appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Luke 22:28-30.

These apostles had forsaken all, and followed Jesus, believing that his kingdom would immediately appear (Luke 19:11), and that he would give them places or thrones in that kingdom then while he was here with them. But now Jesus tells them that he must leave them and return unto the Father, and that where he is they can not come. John 13:33.

Their Lord was about to leave them in a cruel world, where they would be mocked, scourged and martyred, without any prospect of any present reward, as they had expected. No wonder they were offended and were sorrowful of heart. No wonder Jesus knew the necessity of comforting them by telling them why he must go to the Father before they could receive their reward, by saying, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you," etc. I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.'

The Father's house to which Jesus refers is the kingdom of heaven and all the renewed earth. God calls his people his house whether in this world or in the world to come. See Numbers 12:7, II. Sam. 7:11-14, I. Chron. 17:14, Josh 3, 6, 7, I. Tim. 3:14, 15, and Heb. 3:1-6.

The Father's house will become the Son's house, kingdom by inheritance when he comes again, so Paul said to the Hebrews, "And Moses verily was faithful in all his (God's) house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after; But Christ as a son over his own house, whose house are we, if he hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Heb. 3:5-6.

The mansions of the Father's house are places or positions of trust and honor, of power, authority and glory. These places of glory, which God ordained or decreed before these ages of time for his people Jesus called mansions. He said, "I go to prepare a place for you." He told them that it was expedient for them that he go to the Father. He meant it would expedite, hurry on the consummation of this kingdom. He said if he did not go the Comforter would not come; that it was necessary for the Holy Spirit to come and teach them all things. He said he was as a man going into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. Mark 13:34, Luke 19:12. The idea that Jesus conveyed to his apostles was that in his Father's house, which is the kingdom of heaven, that he had been promising them, are many places of honor, power and glory, which are mansions compared to places in the governments of this world, but these places of glory which God ordained or decreed before the world for his people, were not ready. The people constituting the twelve tribes of Israel, over whom the apostles are to be the chief officers under Christ, who are the bride, the Lamb's wife, —had to be called, tried, prepared and chosen from among the world, and it was necessary that Christ go to his Father, and there sit as an advocate with the Father to make intercession for his people, and to send the Comforter, which is the Spirit of truth, to teach them all things, in order to expedite or hasten the preparation of the required number of people. This Jesus is now sitting on his Father's throne

IN MEMORY.

Of Elizabeth A. Updike, Who Died Aug. 13, 1906.

Rest, dear mother, rest,
God' ways are always best;
'Tis true we miss thee here,
But thou art at rest.

Sleep on, dear mother, sleep.
We are left to mourn and weep:
We would not call thee back again.
For thou art free from toil and pain.

Good bye, 'twill not be long.
Till we join the heavenly throng:
Our sorrows then will be over,
And we shall meet to part no more.

A daughter.

Bentonville, Va. M. F. COOK

Report of Ninth Annual Conference of Church of God in Ohio.

Having thru God's mercy been permitted to attend the ninth annual conference of the Church of God in Ohio, and having been considered worthy by them to act as their secretary-treasurer, I shall attempt to report the doings of this conference.

The ninth annual conference was held on the fair grounds one mile north of Troy, O., the county seat of Miami county. This is a beautiful and ideal place for a conference. Everything necessary for our comfort was at our disposal. One building was used in which to hold our meetings. Our sleeping apartments were located in the art building and our meals were served in the dining hall.

Everything indicated that the good brethren in the vicinity had neither spared their brain, time or money in providing those things necessary for the comfort of man. We certainly owe them at least a debt of gratitude for their efforts.

The meeting place was a very comfortable building provided with a gasoline lighting system, rostrum for speakers and chairs for audience. The floor covering was sawdust.

Our sleeping apartments were provided with cots. The brothers occupied the first floor and the sisters the second floor.

The dining hall seemed to contain all equipment necessary to prepare those good things that the brethren so freely provided. A cook was hired to do the cooking and the sisters and younger brethren waited table. My, how we enjoy the good things that can only be had in their freshness in the country. One and all, old and young (if not in words in actions) expressed themselves delighted with the menu.

You may think from the above that our minds were entirely taken up with temporal enjoyment, but by no means was this the case. Like the wine made by our Saviour was held till last. I have held the truly good things of this conference till last that they may be uppermost in your minds after reading this.

The meetings were a feast of good things from the very first to the very last. Regrets that the time was drawing to a close were heard on every hand. Everyone said "This is the very best conference yet."

The keynote was sounded Wednesday evening when Brother Adams told us a Christian's duty was work. We all enjoyed his discourse very much. Wednesday evening we were also entertained by a few verses composed and delivered by our young sister Florence Westfall. We trust that these will appear in the Restitution that all may enjoy them.

Thursday after opening service, we were well instructed in Bible school by Brother R. G. Huggins, subject, "Two Federal Heads," after which we enjoyed discourses by Brother Adams and Sister Neill. In the afternoon a Bible school conducted by Brother W. S. Robison gave us new food for thought.

Brother Adams certainly has been a student of the Prophets and Apostles. While his subjects were not new, yet many new things bearing on the subject were brought out. Brother Adams has been proclaiming the good news (I believe he said) more than twenty five years. We did not grow tired of hearing him. The greatest interest was manifested from first to last. He not only knows his subjects but knows how to present them.

A business meeting was held on Thursday afternoon at which time evangelistic report was read and accepted. A committee was appointed at this meeting to solicit subscriptions from members present to carry on evangelistic work the coming year. About $30000 was raised among those present.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday were a continuation of the good things of which Thursday was a sample.

Brother D. C. Robison conducted a Bible school Friday, subject, "Growth." His subject was entertaining and very instructive. Brother Robison's experience as a teacher for many years enables him to present his subject in a clear and forcible manner. His subject Sunday morning, "The Priesthood," was well worth the entire cost of the trip. Those not there certainly missed a treat as this was strong meat indeed.

Brother C. A. Goss' Bible school on Saturday was well handled. It commanded the best of attention and was especially instructive to the younger brethren.

Every meeting was well attended and the best of interest manifested. The members present showed an unusual appetite for strong spiritual food.

Sunday morning many experienced the joy of seeing Pear Boice of Argos, Indiana, buried with Christ by baptism. May the Creator be her support in time of trouble that comes to all.

Saturday afternoon at business meeting secretary-treasurer's report was read and accepted. At this meeting the conference committee advised the adoption of a resolution to assess each member of the Church of God in Ohio for the purpose of meeting the Conference expenses. Each brother to be assessed $1.00, each sister 50c yearly. This resolution was adopted. While this resolution is only binding on those adopting it, we earnestly appeal to all the brethren to respond.

The following officers were elected: President, W. S. Tomlinson; vice president, D. Beck; secretary-treasurer, W. C. Heacock; conference committee, C. A. Goss, H. Juergensen, P. L. Norton.

Question of evangelist and place of next meeting was left with the conference committee for decision.

Sunday evening we were again favored with a discourse by Brother Huggins, and after the customary song at this time we were led in prayer by Brother Adams. This ended the most enjoyable program of the ninth annual conference of the Church of God in Ohio.

W. C. HEACOCK, Sec.

Verbal Inspiration.

Apart from textual criticism let us see to what extent God inspired the utterances of Bible writers. Moses wrote the law; and God says: "I have written unto him (Israel) the great things of my law." Hos. 8:12. Moses was not a man of merely natural functions. God's spirit was put within him (Num. 11:17, 29). Moses wrote God's commands; his writings therefore were necessarily a spirit regulated or "God-inspired" performance. The plan of the Temple was given by the spirit "the Lord made me understand in writing by his hand upon me * * * the works of this pattern." 1 Chron. 28: 11, 12, 19. How could God cause a man to "understand in writing" if he had no interest or supervision over the words of the writing? If words are the signs of ideas, how can the Bible be inspired in thought, idea, and conception. If wrong words are used would not wrong thoughts be expressed, false ideas signified, and erroneous conceptions received? Any degree of inspiration short of the verbal leaves us without any words of authority from God. Our Lord's language when speaking of David's writings is, "David himself said in the Holy Spirit." Mark 12:36. He does not say David "thought", but he "said." Says David: "The spirit of the Lord spake by me and his word was in my tongue." 2 Sam 23:2. He does not say, "The Spirit gave me a thought, idea, or conception," but the spirit "spake." Words were uttered. To Jeremiah God says: "I have put my words in thy mouth." 1:9. In a prophecy of Christ God's promise is, I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all I shall command him. Deut 18:18. Moses pleaded his lack of eloquence when God commissioned him to deliver Israel from bondage; to him God promised, "I will be with thy mouth and teach thee what thou shalt speak." Ex. 4:10-12. On another occasion he fulfilled this promise in this verbal way: "Write thou these words." Ex. 34:27. The Lord's promise to this man, the reader will please notice, is not, "I will be with thy head, and give you thoughts, ideas, and conceptions;" but with his mouth—with his words. In the same way the spirit inspired the words of the apostles. Matt. 10:19, 20; Mark 13:11; Luke 12:11-12. Without any meditation on their part, without a thought, idea, or conception on their part, the spirit inspired them in the very hour of their need, and gave them appropriate words to use. Luke 21: 14, 15; Acts 2: 1, 4, 7, 11. The inspiration of the Holy Spirit was independent of the thoughts, ideas, conceptions and wills of the writers. 2 Pet. 1:21. As they wrote the scriptures by God given wisdom (2 Pet. 3:15,16), they did not understand their own writings, except as the searched diligently into their meaning. 1 Pet. 1:11, 12. Balaam's dumb ass had no thoughts, ideas, or conceptions to inspire, but "the Lord opened the mouth of the ass." Num. 22: 28, 30. Caiphas uttered words not of himself. Jno. 11:49-52. Here is a case of inspiration independent of thought—"Now this he said not of himself." "Prophecy came not in old time by the." Peter says. Baalam was compelled to speak against his will. He said, "Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? The word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak. He did his utmost to curse the Israelites, but as often as he tried it he blessed them. Num. 22:38; 23:26. Here is inspiration of words independent of, and in conflict with, the prophet's will. We may go farther and say that independent of any living agency God sometimes has revealed his word to us. With his own hand he wrote the words of his law upon the tables of stone, in the top of smoke-wreathed and fire-crowned Sinai. Ex. 24: 12; 31: 18. The writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables (Ex. 32: 16) plainly, that is, legibly and deeply cut (baar). Deut. 27:8, and inspired in every jot and tittle. Matt. 5:18.* He caused a hand to write upon the festal hall the words, "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin," to the consternation of Belshazzar and a thousand of his lords. At the baptism of Jesus he said to the multitude, "This is my beloved son" Matt. 3:17. Do not let the idea of God speaking words shock you, my reader. Men themselves speak words. When did they learn to talk, and from whom? Some people assume that language is natural to man, because he has organs of pronunciation: but one might as reasonably argue that Greek is natural to man because he has the power of pronouncing that language. Who ever spoke a language he did not first learn from another? We have our vernacular—the language our mother taught us. Adam had no mother, so he could have had no mother tongue. God must have taught him to speak viva voce: for language is only the imitation of distinct and intelligible sounds. The first human speaker must have heard God himself speak. The Bible is composed of words. Words express thoughts. It is not possible to express thoughts apart from words, or even to entertain them. If the Bible is not verbally inspired, it is not inspired at all: it is only a human composition. But 2 Tim. 3:16 says "all scriptures" are God-breathed. Whether they were written or spoken by Balaam, the false prophet, contrary to his will, or by his ass, which was dumb, or by Paul the educated and cultured apostle, or by Christ "the holy one," God's word has come to us by inspiration of God, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth" (1 Cor. 2:13; Jno. 3:34; 5:47; 6:63; 12:48; 15: 7); and we must accept it in every jot and tittle as being "not the word of man, but as it is in truth, the word of God." 1 Thes. p. 2: 13.

The Bible:—Its principles and texts, by the Editor.

The Inspiration of the Bible.

2 Tim. 3:16.

The higher critics have advocated various theories of inspiration. Some of them say, The thoughts only of the penmen were inspired; others say, Inspiration was only partial; There were different degrees of aspiration; The writers were inspired in the supervision of the work they did; and in directing their work, etc. etc. Sometimes they talk about dynamic inspiration, but this expression is very vague and misty. Others say that the concept is inspired. None of the gentlemen attempt to tell us what the concept is: indeed we doubt if any of the critics know. They have to admit inspiration of some kind, and to some extent, or believe God's word in every chapter: therefore they reservedly assent to the fact of inspiration in words, and then proceed to render unto gatory that admission of limiting the action of inspiration to the thoughts, conceptions, and supervision of the writers. However divergent their views on the degree of inspiration, they all to a man disbelieve in verbal inspiration. The one thing and the only thing they are emphatic about and are agreed and united upon is that the Bible is not verbally inspired.

When the revised version rendered 2 Tim. 3:16, Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable, the higher critics rejoiced greatly, because they thought they had gotten rid of one text which taught verbal inspiration. The verb "is" does not occur in the Greek text, so these men pleaded on the basis of scholarship that our rendering of the text is faulty because it reads, "All scripture (is) given by inspiration of God," etc. But the absence of the verb is only an idiomatic omission, which required to be supplied in translating into English. All translations supply it somewhere in the text. Hoping to make a point in favor of partial inspiration the higher critic inserts the verb "is" after God, making the text read, "All scripture given by inspiration of God (is) profitable, etc. But hold on, ye self-styled great scholars of the world: Kai, "and," is in the Greek text, and your translation of the passage throws it out, to make room for the omitted verb, in a false position! Truly great men are not always wise. Job. 32:9.

As to the translation of the verse by the revised version, "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable," we condemn it for the following reasons:

1. It is tautological.

2. It violates the laws of Greek syntax. We challenge the production of a single instance in the whole compass of the Greek language where such a violent divulsion of two adjectives connected and standing as they are in 2 Tim. 3:16 can be found and justified.

3. Surely the Greek fathers knew their own language better than our modern higher critics. Clement says, "The apostle calls the scripture inspired of God." Origen says, "Every scripture is theopneustic, and is profitable." Gregory (of Nyssa) says, "Every scripture is, by the apostle, said to be inspired of God." We could quote similar words from Theodoret, Basil, Cyril, etc.

4. In 1 Tim. 4:4, the apostle says, "Every creature of God is good and nothing to be refused;" while in Heb. 4:13 he says, "All things are naked and opened (exposed) to the eyes of him with whom we have to do." Here are two passages that are positively identical in form and construction as 2 Tim. 3:16. But the revisers left them unchanged; why? Because if they had changed them as they did 2 Tim. 3:16 they would have made absolute nonsense of them and fools of themselves.

5. The revised versions rendering of 2 Tim. 3:16 has been condemned by many of the best scholars on earth. Bishops Wordsworth and Moberly, Archbishop Trench and others of the revision committee disclaimed all responsibility for the translation. Dean Burgon and Dr. Shrivener both pronounce it a blunder; the first, "the most astonishing as well as calamitous literary blunder of the age;" the second, "A blunder such as makes itself hopelessly condemned." It was condemned by Dr. Tregelles, the only man ever pensioned by the English government for scholarship.

In 2 Tim. 3:15 Paul is speaking of scriptures which Timothy had known from a child, and these he calls "holy" or "sacred" writings. The word graphe, scripture, means writing. He says these scriptures or writings are holy because they were given by inspiration of God. Writing is composed of words. How can any writing be inspired unless the words of which the writing is composed is inspired. Translate 2 Tim. 3:16 as you please, and what else can you make of it but a positive claim of verbal inspiration?

The Bible:—Its principles and texts by the Editor.

The Art of Reading.—A few years ago a man wrote a book to prove that reading is a lost art. And for great numbers of people it is. How about yourself? Are you getting anything worth while out of books these days? If not, you're a big loser. You are deliberately sacrificing not only one of the best educational opportunities, but one of the finest joys of life.

The true art of reading is, briefly, to read regularly and to read intelligently.

Dont waste much time on books not approved by the years. Emerson thought it a good general rule to read nothing that was not at least ten years old. You will be surprised to find that most of the books you care for are much older than that.

Read fiction if you want to, but let it be standard fiction, the work of the great authors. Historical fiction is especially worth while because you not only get the art of the author, but the facts and the atmosphere of great events or epochs. And if you are reading historical fiction get the habit of turning to the encyclopedia for further facts about the characters, also look up the author. It is pleasant to know something of his life and work.

Don't forget biographies, books of popular science and poetry. If you find them hard reading, don't overdo it, but take an occasional dip into them. If reading is hard work it is n't doing you much good.

"What shall I read?" Oh, it's an endless question. Ask some old book lover, some teacher or public librarian. They'll tell you lots you can't afford to miss.

But read, friend, read! The poorer your life, the richer should be your mind. Step into another world each evning. Walk with new companions. Breathe the air of fresh scenes and experiences.

Read regularly and intelligently and you will wake up some morning to find yourself possessed of a liberal education, a broad mind and a thousand enchanting memories.

There is a pretty little sermon in the Persian saying: "In all quarrels leave open the door of reconciliation." We must never forget it.

PROPHESIES RETURN OF CHRIST IN 1912

Disciple of Dowie Files Document With County Recorder Making Declaration

TO REUNITE LOST TRIBES

Burnette Says Savior Will Remain 434 Years—to Build Cities After Model of Zion

The reuniting of the lost tribes of Israel and the second advent of Christ will occur some time in November of 1912, according to a declaration filed in the office of the county recorder of Cook county, Illinois, recently.

This remarkable document, which fixes the month of the second coming of the Savior was drawn up and filed by Harry L. Burnette and John Taylor, disciples of the late John Alexander Dowie, and asks that all the followers of Zion rally to the support of the "King" when he shall come.

"Before the year of 1912 shall close, Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God, will come forth from the eternal throne once again to teach and preach the gospel of salvation and to heal the sick," reads the document.

"The Christ will be revealed in Zion City, built by God's Elijah as a preparation of the way, unto all who await his coming."

According to Mr. Burnette, who is the author of the prophecy, the Christ will remain on earth 434 years. This time will be consumed in reuniting the tribes of Israel and in building cities throughout the earth after the model of Dowie's Zion City. The rebuilding of Jerusalem will be the last work of the Christ upon earth.

The above is copied from the Daily Record Herald of Chicago. As the time draws near for the Lord to come also.

Prophets and false Christs will arise. A strange document the above to enter on the public records. It is certain the true Christ will not appear at the time fixed by the Dowieites, but a false Christ may come at that time. A false Christ may also come in 1914 from among the Russelite people.

These are signs showing the near coming of the true Christ. Have you laid up deposits in the Bank of Heaven for Him to bring you when he comes? Arouse the Church; preach the glad tidings to sinners.

Chicago, Ill.

W. H. WILSON

SPIRITUALISM

Its Illegitimate Birth, Its Deceptive Life and Its Well Deserved Death

1. Commercially speaking, spiritualism is a business of trafficing in spirits, at the expense of sorrowing people who, under a delusion, pay out their hard earnings in the hope of being put in communication with their deceased loved ones.

2. The spirits are supposed to be the ghosts of dead men, women and children.

3. If the "communications" were real, sensible and intellectually and morally beneficial, spiritualism would be a blessing; but on the contrary, it is an art, the practice of which is a cruelty and a crime.

4. If there are ghosts or disembodied spirits of the dead existing in a conscious, intelligent state, there is no good reason to be urged against the possibility, yea, the probability, of their communication with anxious, sorrowing friends; but if there are no ghosts, spiritualism is a sham and a deception practiced in all cases upon the deluded, and in some cases by the deluded.

5. True science condemns spiritualism because it finds facts opposed to the existence of disembodied ghosts or spirit entities; while it has been able to explain the phenomenon in accordance with mental science.

6. The scientific aspect of the question has been dealt with by men whose knowledge in the realms of science we do not pretend to approach.

7. The only infallible authority in the case is the Bible, and it is to this source we must apply tonight for the proofs that spiritualism is of illegitimate birth, deceptive life, and will soon suffer a death fro mwhich it will never arise. (Isa. 8:19, 20.)

8. Spiritualism was conceived in the subtlety of the serpent's mind and born in the first falsehood that was ever uttered; which is found in Gen. 3: 1-4.

Higher Criticism must not try to relegate this to the realms of fiction because of its age; for Paul refers to it as a fact in 2 Cor. 11: 3; and Jesus in John 8:43, 44.

10. This falsehood of the subtle serpent was a direct contradiction of a truth which God had spoken, recorded in Gen. 2: 1,6 17. If the death of this law came upon man and ended his life there are no ghosts or disembodied spirits for spiritualism to traffic in, and spiritualism is living a deceptive life, and is worthy of a speedy death.

11. That death is a cessation of life, or as Webster says, "The total cessation of all the vital functions," then there are no surviving entities for spiritualism to call back from other worlds for a consideration in cash, and that death is a total cessation of life till the resurrection is shown by the following scriptures: Gen. 3 17-19; Gen. 3: 22-24; Job. 14:21, 2, 14. 15; Job 19: 25, 27; Psa. 146; 3, 4; Eccl. 9: 4, 6; Eccl. 3: 18-21; Eccl. 12:7; John 11:11-13, 24, 25; John 11:34-44; 1 Cor. 15:12-23.

12. Man became a conscious creature by the impartation of life; that he becomes unconscious be death science proves; and the fact that normal dose of chloroform will render one unconscious is proof that an overdose will do more—render him unconscious and deprive him of life.

Let the spiritualist open up communication with the unconscious man that lies upon the surgeon's table, and repeat to his wife what he says, then when he awakes from his comatose condition let her ask him if he said it, and the farce will be exposed. Surely if they can communicate with a ghost that has forsaken a dead body, they can do so with one not quite dead.

13. The death of spiritualism and all other deceptive isms will be when the Lord comes to remove the veil from the faces of all people. Then "they shall all know the Lord, from the least of them to the greatest." Then shall the words of the prophet Jeremiah be fulfilled.—Cap. 16:19.

THE TRUE VINE

How many times when we are asked to select a chapter to be read, turn to this abiding chapter and find something new each time in the dear old story. There is something so comforting in the thought of the oneness of the vine and the branch. If we are truly faithful we will always be inseparable from the Vine and that strong, life-giving current that flows from the root of the vine will gush through the branches and the fruit will be luscious. It is the same with the life hid in Christ Jesus. We forget ourselves in trying to do as Jesus would do in the same circumstances. We are simply abiding in him.

Manager's Column

The average newspaper or magazine of today derives most of its revenue from advertising placed in its columns, the money received from subscriptions being but a small part of its receipts. Good advertising space is valuable and is always in demand. This leads to the question, What is GOOD advertising space? The value of advertising space is determined largely by the number of prospective buyers it may reach. If it is in a newspaper which has a large number of prospective buyers, its value is largely increased over that of the paper with small circulation, just as a store in a large town has more chances to do business than the store in a small town, because it reaches more people. The first question an advertiser always asks is, What is your circulation?

The Restitution, unlike most papers derives all of its revenue from the payments of subscriptions. Should these fall off for any reason, principally because subscribers do not always pay renewals promptly or forget to renew at all, our revenue suffers a loss which must be made up some way. There is not a reason in the world why The Restitution should not be self supporting in every sense of the word, without having to ask help of any one, and with a surplus to draw from when we want to make improvements. Other church publications do not have to run along so close to the edge of their income that there is always a chance that they may fall off into the chasm of need, least of all should a Church of God publication. Let us apply a little reasoning. We have some space which we may use for advertising space of the right sort without cutting down our amount of reading matter. But to make this valuable we have got to have the circulation. This is where you come in. There is scarcely a subscriber to The Restitution who could not go out and secure two or three new subscribers if he made up his mind to do so. Now if you will make up your mind and get out and hustle we can all pull together and increase our circulation to the point where we can dispose of our advertising space and secure an income that will be permanent. You have the time and you see dozens of people each day whom you can interest if you are interested yourself, because The Restitution is for all classes of people and not for ourselves alone. On this page is a special offer which you can take advantage of. A certain advertiser has agreed to take a goodly amount of space if we can secure 500 new subscribers. Let's get the 500. Its easy if we all help and well, we have just got to get them.

The Manager.

A TRACT IN GERMAN

The article on "Salvation, What is it?" which appeared in our issue September 15, has been translated into German and printed in tract form, the size to send in an ordinary envelope. The cost is 2 cents each, 5 copies for 65 cents, or 90 copies for one dollar. It is printed in full in English so that those who do not read German can see exactly what they are handling to a German friend. Send all orders to B. Juergensen, Barberton, Ohio.

Fate and Fortune

It often amuses me to hear men impute all their misfortunes to fate, luck or destiny, whilst their successes or good fortune they ascribe to their own sagacity, cleverness or penetration. It never occurs to such minds that light and darkness are one and the same, emanating from and being part of the same nature.—Coleridge.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help your dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—never higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN THE RESTITUTION

RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation, is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG, W. G. ROTHE, W. S. TOMLINSON, HARRY POTT, D. C. ROBINSON, BUELL W. NUTT, C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 18:42-43), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints co-laborers with Him in the government of the Lutons (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Mal. 4:1-3; Rev. 20:9); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3) and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as pre-requisite to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3, 18); and all other truths of "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 6, 1911 No. 34

True Principle of Interpretation Impartially Applied.

It is a principle very generally adopted by a certain class of interpreters, that if a word or phrase be not used in Scripture, is also written, "He taketh the wise in their own craftiness;" and again, "The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain." And again, "Great men are not always wise," and good as they may be, they are nevertheless fallible; for even an apostle saith, "In many things we all offend." It behooves us, therefore, not to glory in man," for to those who are in Christ, and who talk not after the flesh, but after the spirit, it is written, "all are yours; whether Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours; and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's" (1 Cor. iii. 21).

From these premises, we confess we can discover no reason why we should receive more readily the interpretations of the great and good of this generation, than those of the same class in the apostolic age. They are equally frail, equally liable to err, and the multitude which confers upon its leaders the attributes of wisdom, greatness, and goodness is as little competent to judge of true wisdom, greatness, and virtue, as were the blind of former ages, who were led by the wise and prudent just as they happened to be led. The popular voice proclaims them great, wise and good, who minister most successfully to their prejudices and passions, which are in harmony with that strong delusion which God has sent upon them that they [illegible] a lie; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved (2 Thess. ii. 11).

The Voice of the People.

Some great men think that the voice of the people is the voice of God; then of course it is the voice of God which declares them wise, good and great. This is doubtless very flattering to their vanity, but we cannot admit such an assumption. The voice of the people declared Herod's voice to be the voice of God; but the angel of the Lord smote him. Herod accepted the flattery, but he soon became convinced that God spoke not through the inconstant multitude. No, the voice of the people is the enunciation of that fell delusion which beclouds their minds and which as a covering is cast over them, and will continue to obscure and pervert their vision until the Lord of Hosts shall come and take it away, as it is written: "He will destroy in this mountain (Zion) the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations."

Were we sceptical, we would by no means object to the principle of interpretation in question, because it was at variance with the decisions of the great, wise and good of the popular party, nor would we condemn the few interpreters who maintain it on that account. We remember that great men are not always wise, and that though few, they may be right. Now all that we ask is, that they will treat us with equal candour. We admit their principle and contend for its application in all cases.

DAMNATION.

No word in the Scripture has been more misapplied than this. It occurs eleven times in King James's version of the New Testament, and in every instance the word should be rendered judgment as follows:

Matt. 23:14.—More abundant, (i. e., heavier) judgment and the same in Mark 12:40 and Luke 20:47.

Matt. 23:33.—How can ye escape the judgment of Gehenna?

Mark 3:29.—Aionion judgment.

Rom. 3:8.—Whose judgment is just.

Rev. 14:7.—Will [illegible] judgment (sentence of destruction and annihilation, for it is written, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." It went.

1 Cor. 11:29.—Eats and drink judgment to himself.

1 Tim. 5:12.—Having judgment.

2 Pet. 2:3.—Whose judgment [illegible] not.

It is evident that Jesus and his apostles always used the word judgment in these passages in the sense of condemnation, because the word damned is used three times in the same version instead of condemned. Thus Mark 16:16. He not having believed shall be condemned. Rom. 14:23, but he discerning a difference, if he should eat, hath been condemned. 2 Thes. 2:12. So that all those may be judged (condemned) who believed not the truth. If, therefore, you will read condemnation when the word damnation occurs, and condemned when damned occurs, you will get at the right meaning.

The reason why the word condemnation gives the correct meaning of the word judgment in these passages is that they refer to the judgment which condemns the subject of it to the second death. Rev. 2:11. It is called the judgment of Gehenna, Matt. 23:33. Gehenna is a compound Greek word meaning land of Hinnom. This is a valley situated south and east of the city of Jerusalem (Joshua 15:8); a place set apart by the idolatrous Israelites for passing their living children through the fire to Moloch, 2 Chron. 28:3 and 33:6, and therefore fittingly set apart by Jehovah for the cremation of the dead carcases of his disobedient children, both of the house of Moses and the house of Christ, Heb. 3:2-6, 14; when burial will be refused; they have no part in the second resurrection, and therefore there is no need for their carcases to repose in holy ground.

Their utter destruction will no doubt act as a strong deterrent to wrong doing during the millenial reign of Jesus and his saints, for Isaiah writes of the valley and its use, being one of the sights shown to all flesh who come to bow themselves before me, saith Jehovah at Jerusalem. And they shall go forth and look upon the carcases of the men who have transgressed against me; for their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched, and they are an abhorrence to all flesh. Isaiah 66:23-24. This is what Jesus refers to in Mark 9:43-48. Thus the fate of Herod (Acts 12:23) to be eaten of worms, and afterwards their dishonored and accursed dead carcases burnt by fire, will be a righteous condemnation for all those who, like Herod, give not God the glory by yielding obedience to his will, but glorify themselves by doing their own, and thus thwarting His will concerning them.

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING.
1 Thess. 5:17.

Some people insist that the above sentence from Paul's writings can have but one meaning, and that is, that we should be praying at all times, i. e. every moment of time while awake, without intermission. This view is extremely absurd, as it would be simply impossible for any individual to continually pray without intermission. If any of our readers doubt this, let them try it and they will be convinced of the truthfulness of our assertion before a month has elapsed. But some people may ask, "Did Paul request his brethren to do a thing which was impossible for any human being to do? No, we think not. Then, did Paul not mean what he wrote in this particular? Yes, we think he did. But is there no other sense in which words under consideration can be understood? Yes, they can be understood literally and in a natural sense without going to any extreme. For example:—Paul says in Acts 20:31, "That by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears." Now in his sense, will claim that this passage proves that Paul did without sleep for the space of three years, simply because it states that for the space of three years he ceased not to warn every one night and day. But if we were compelled to abide by the strictest literal sense of the language we would have to understand that Paul was without sleep for three years, for he never ceased night or day to warn the people for that space of time. This passage is even more emphatic on the point of ceasing than the words, pray without ceasing, for it is more definite in that it particularizes both night and day. It is not likely that Paul abstained from sleep for the space of three years, for if he had it would have been nothing short of a miracle, and such a great miracle as this would have no doubt been recorded in the Scriptures. So I think we may safely take it for granted that Paul had a certain amount of sleep during these three years, although, he no doubt was many a time without it for 24 hours or more. (Acts 20:7, 11).

Then, under the circumstances, we must conclude that Paul's language in Acts 20:31, should be understood in a secondary sense, viz: that he, for the space of three years, as the occasion presented itself, either night or day, never ceased to warn those with whom he came in contact. And so we understand Paul's injunction to his brethren to "pray without ceasing." We believe Paul simply meant that they should never cease to ask God as often as circumstances made it necessary, for any favor that was necessary to their own well-being of others in this life or in the life to come.

A medical practitioner will call on a sick person for the first time, and will prescribe a certain medicine with instructions to take it at stated times, then leaves his patient, and perhaps after calling a few times he finds the patient considerably improved in health and will tell him so, he nevertheless he will likely say, as has often been said, "do not stop or cease taking the medicine I left you." The physician means by this that he wishes the medicine to be taken by the patient continually at the usual hours until he is told by the doctor to discontinue it. The doctor does not mean by his language that his patient is to continue pouring the medicine down his throat day and night without intermission. And so we think that Paul should be understood when he says "Pray without ceasing." See also Eph. 1:16; Acts 5:42; 6:13; 12:5; Rom. 1:9; 1 Thes. 2:13. Our Lord said, "Thou gavest me no kiss, but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet." (Luke 7:45). Now we learn by the preceding and succeeding verses that this woman, after Jesus entered Simon's house, besides kissing the feet of Jesus, washed them with tears, and wiped them with the hair of her head, and also anointed his feet with ointment; therefore, we conclude that when Jesus says, this woman * * * hath not ceased to kiss my feet, etc., he must be understood as meaning that she had frequently, during the whole time after he entered Simon's house up to the time he drew their attention to the fact kissed his feet—that is, she kept on doing this at intervals without ceasing up to the time Jesus spoke of it. That she did not do this incessantly is shown from the fact that she must have taken time to wash and wipe Jesus' feet, as well as to anoint them with ointment. Therefore to pray without ceasing does not necessarily mean to pray incessantly—without intermission. But it simply means that we are not to give up the privilege of asking God for those favors that are necessary to our welfare in this life and in the life to come—eternal life. We are to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. In doing this we must not cease to pray, "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." And, if like the first disciples you know not how you shall procure your food from day to day or from meal to meal, it is necessary for you to pray God to give us this day our daily bread. And we should not cease to pray God to forgive our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into trial but deliver us from evil. And let us keep in mind that if we forgive not men their trespasses neither will your father forgive your trespasses. Let us not overlook these words of Christ. And let us bear in mind "That except our righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees we shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:20. If we are not perfect in ourselves, we must be so in Christ Jesus. "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (him)." Rom. 10:5. Our faith in Christ is counted for righteousness. Rom. 3:22, 28; 4:5; 9:30; Phil. 3:9. Christ is our passover, 1 Cor. 5:7. He is our righteousness. Jer. 23:6; 1 Cor. 1:26-31.

IF YOU'VE ANYTHING GOOD TO SAY.

If you've anything good to say of a man,
Don't wait till he's laid to rest,
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken,
Is an empty thing at best.
Ah! the blighted flower now drooping lonely,
Would perfume the mountain side.
If the sun's glad ray had but shone today,
And the pretty bud espied.

If you've any alms to give to the poor,
Don't wait till you hear the cry,
Of wan distress in this wilderness
Lest the one forsaken die.
Oh, hearken to poverty's sad lament!
Be swift her wants to allay;
Don't spurn God's poor, from the favored door,
As you hope for mercy one day.

Don't wait for another to bear the burden
Of sorrow's irksome load;
Let your hand extend to a stricken friend
As he totters adown life's road.
And if you've anything good to say of a man
Don't wait till he's laid at rest;
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken,
Is an empty thing at best.

Monkland, Ore. E. W. Knapp.

ALCOHOL.

A simpel word, yet freighted deep with woe;
Learn but the meaning, seek no more to know;
Cast not upon your life the cruel blight
Of a dread evil, fearful in its might;
Heed well the warning words of sage and seer;
O friend be hold you fast when once he grips;
Let not this liquid demon pass your lips.

—William Lynch

THE TRUTH IN MONTANA
No. 3.

We Give It Up

Dear Mr. Pinehurst: Yours of the 7th inst noted. I supposed when you made your offer of $100 to anyone who could find a passage in the Bible promising everlasting life, immortality, etc., that you had a Bible, but had not read it; that you had some easy money and would gladly give it in so good cause and for the information required, but it seems you only wanted a chance to expound your religious and anti-Bible beliefs.

I am not going to say how the Bible should be read, who wrote it, or what meaning should be taken from the statements therein. I know it is good and just, and the promises and teaching make us a better and more lovable people, so you will have to excuse me if I quit you on the spot. So far as looking for the $100, I am sorry, for I needed the money, and had made my plans just how to spend it. I was going to give $50 to our dear editor—he is a good fellow and boosts the whole country; his paper could be justly called the "Community Leader," for he has a good word for every little town and hamlet in the community. With the balance I was going to buy, oh—lots of things.

Good-bye! Yours, a wiser but sadder subscriber..

We're After It

Dear Mr. Pinehurst: Please take your Bible and read the following verses: Matthew 10-28; 1 Kings 17-21 and 22; 116 Psalms 8.

H. T. Spoolstraw, Proctor.

Pinehurst Pickings

Mr. H. T. Spoolstraw, of Proctor, quotes Matt. 10-28, as evidence of immortality of the soul. The passage reads as follows: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

This passage warns us to fear him who is able to destroy the soul. Therefore, the soul can be destroyed and if [illegible] immortal soul would be indestructible. God himself could not destroy an immortal soul, for that which can be destroyed is surely mortal.

Mr. Spoolstraw also quotes 1 Kings 17-21: "And he, (Elijah) stretched himself three times upon the child, and the soul of the child came unto him again and he revived."

We have never denied that the Bible teaches the existence of a soul. It does so in many places, and this passage is one of them. But the prize was offered for a passage which told us that the soul is immortal. This passage says not a word about an immortal soul. It simply states in verse 17 that "the child's sickness was so severe, that there was no breath left in him." And in verse 22 it states that the soul of the child came unto him again and he revived." The original word translated "breath," in verse 17, is nephesh; and this same word is translated "soul" in verse 22. Verse 17 says "there was no nephesh (breath) left in him," and verse 22 says: "The nephesh (breath) of the child came into him again, and he rivived." There is absolutely nothing in these passages to prove the existence of an immortal soul.

CORRECTION.

Ohio Conference Report

I presume some have been wondering who Brother W. S. Robison, mentioned in conference report, is. This is a mistake. The sentence should read: In the afternoon a bible school conducted by Brother W. S. Tomlinson and a discourse by Sister Robison gave us new food for thought.

I also note the mispelling of name of the sister baptized Sunday morning. It should be Pearl Boice of Argos, Indiana.

W. C. HEACOCK, Sec.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness and small obligations given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.

Dixon, Ill. Anna Drew.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

CLEVELAND, O. SEPT. 6, 1911

EDITORIAL

SCRIPTURE CAKE.

For the benefit of the sisters the following receipt is given:

Four and a half cups of I Kings iv. 22.

One half pound of Judges v. 25.

Two cups of Jeremiah vi., 20.

Two cups of Nahum iii., 12.

Two teaspoonfuls of I. Samuel xiv., 25.

To taste, II. Chronicles ix., 9.

Six teaspoonfuls Jeremiah xvii., 11.

One and a half cups Judges iv., 19.

Two teaspoonfuls Amos iv., 5.

One pinch Leviticus ii., 13.

Directions, Proverbs xxiii, 14.

Bake one and a half to two hours. Baking powder may be used instead, if heaven.

To the brethren in Nebraska: We arrived home safely Sept. 6th and found wife and "Baby Huggins" both well.

While absent from home attending the Ohio and Nebraska conferences Bro. Lang has had charge of The Restitution as editor. The work was new to him, but he has performed it with willing hands and efficiently. Readers, equally with us, are indebted to him for his work of love.

JERUSALEM THE MODEL CHURCH

A Sermon by the Editor, delivered in Cleveland, Ohio, July 23, 1911, and Stenographically Reported by Sister Gertrude Nutt

Brethren and Sisters:—In the beginning God created one perfect man and one perfect woman; he created them perfect physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, for after he had formed them he said that they were "very good." In the course of time through temptation they fell; and it has been the ambition of every right minded man and woman since to struggle back to the innocence and purity of Eden. After sin had brought its woes into the world, God looked upon the world lost and ruined, and out of pure benevolence He conceived a plan of redemption; and in process of time His munificence will lead Him to create a new heaven and a new earth In beginning the new creation he created another perfect man and another perfect woman. The perfect man to whom I refer is the Lord Jesus Christ, whom Paul in 1 Cor. 15th chapter, calls a "quickening spirit," "a spiritual body." The perfect woman to whom I refer is the Church of God, to whom Paul says in 2 Cor. 11th chapter, second verse, "For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ."

After God had created the Lord Jesus a perfect man, out of his side He created Eve the second, a perfect woman; and when she was brought face to face with temptation, like Eve, the first, she fell, and it has been the ambition of every right minded brother and sister since to struggle back toward the purity and innocence of the primitive church.

Let us this morning think of Jerusalem as the model church. After God had formed from the side of Christ the perfect Eve she fell as before observed. It should be the highest aspiration of our soul to get back to the Jerusalem church. That the Jerusalem church was a model, pattern church for the imitation of all the subsequent churches is evident for several reasons. Some of them I will mention.

The Jerusalem church was under the direction of inspired men. She was under the direction of men to whom these promises are made in the gospel of John: "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever." (14-16); "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me." (15-26; "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew the apostles to whom Christ made known things to come." (16:13) Now this promise of giving them the holy spirit as a comforter and guide, were the head of the Jerusalem church. They were present at least, one, and sometimes all, in all of its ministrations, and therefore the Jerusalem church is the model church, having divinely inspired leaders. In the second place we will glance briefly at some of the Material which they used in building this church

In Acts 1:15 we find that there were already in Jerusalem one hundred fifteen disciples whom Jesus had selected from the sheep that he had called in his previous ministry. In Acts 2:41, three thousand souls were added to the church in one day. Peter's sermon pricked them in their hearts, and they said "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" They at once obeyed the Lord; they were strong, courageous men who only required to know their duty to do it. They were the pick and the flower of that whole generation of Jews: the ripest fruit of the tree planted by Moses and nurtured by the prophets of Israel. Acts 4-32. "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common." They were strong, courageous men that obeyed the word of the Lord as soon as they knew it; and they had unity of spirit among them. With divinely inspired leaders and with such splendid material with which to construct a church, we look back to the Jerusalem church and see those apostles fashioning and modeling this splendid material into a perfect church. I call it a perfect church because of its inspired leaders, and because of the splendid material they used in building it. And we notice that this church

Grew With Marvelous Rapidity

In Acts 2:42, already quoted, it says there were three thousand souls converted in one day, "and they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers." A church that adheres to these good things is on the right track. In the fourth chapter of Acts, 4th verse, we read, "Many of them which heard the word believed, and the number of the men was about five thousand." According to the ratio in the modern church, women exceed in numbers the men. If on this occasion they only equaled the men, Jerusalem would have a membership of 10,000! In the 17th of John you remember Christ's prayer for his disciples, "that they all might be one," and here in the 4th of Acts we have a fulfillment of that promise. "They were," the writer says, "of one heart and of one soul, neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common." Thus in the Jerusalem church was fulfilled the prayer of our Lord Jesus, that his disciples might be one. Now a resume: We have the Jerusalem church supervised by inspired apostles; they use the very best material in its construction; it grows with marvelous rapidity; but perfect as their union was, it was but the perfect union of imperfect beings. Later we find that one marked virtue in the Jerusalem church, that of generosity, became a source of offense in two weak members. In Acts 5 we read that Peter was presiding at a meeting one day, and there walked into the assembly a church member called Ananias, who sold a possession and brought a certain part of it and laid it at the feet of Peter, and said he had given it all to the church. Instead of a smile on Peter's countenance there is a frown, and Peter said, to the consternation of all, "Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? Whilst it remained, was it not thine own? And after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men but unto God." And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the spirit. Peter called for some young men in the audience who carried him out, and he was buried before he was cold. Mrs. Ananias not being acquainted with what had happened, three hours subsequently came into the meeting, and Peter said to her, "Tell me, did you sell your land for so much?" and she said, "Yes, for so much." Then Peter said, "Why have you agreed together to tempt the spirit of the Lord?" And she fell dead and the young men who carried out her husband a few hours before carried her forth and buried her by her husband. Here were the awful solemn rites of the judgment day. They were buried before they were cold, buried without eulogy, or prayer or a tear shed. We look on the solemn occasion—it looks like the judgment day. Here is a divine intimation on discipline Objectors might have said, "My, but you must quit this; you will scare everybody away from the church." I suppose it was intended to scare somebody away, and presumably it did. Hypocrites and liars no doubt said "Well that church is not a very healthy church for men of our stripe." Yes, it was meant to keep somebody out of the church. That the hypocrisy of Ananias and his wife would have worked ill to the church, if she had kept them in her bosom, there can be no doubt. In that case the people could have stood off and said, "Now, there is Ananias and his wife; they have lied, and how many others of your members have given part when they pretended to give all?" Did discipline keep anybody away from the church? I want to turn and read from the best of Acts, 5th chapter, 11th and 12th verses: "And great fear came upon all the church and upon as many as heard these things. And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch, and believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women." So instead of discipline hurting the church it was the occasion of its growth. Jerusalem church is a model in leadership, growth, silver and gold as material of construction, generosity and discipline. It was a perfect church as far as imperfection of human nature would allow it to be. It could not be more perfect than this. Acts 6 ch. says that they had

A Church Quarrel, and I Want You to Notice How That Was Settled.

The Hebrews were the home born Jews, and the Greeks were the foreign born; there was considerable animosity and jealousy between them. The Grecian widows were neglected in the daily ministration, and a complaint was started. Now then what a splendid opportunity for a big row; how easy for the Hebrews to say, "it was," and the Grecians to say it was not' You remember what was done. It says that one of the apostles said, "Men and brethren, look you out among you seven men whom we could appoint over this matter. We will give ourselves continually to the preaching of the word of God and to prayer." Everybody was glad to accept any proposition that would heal the breach. They appointed seven. Notice the names of these as I read them: "Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch." There is not a Hebrew among them; not an Abraham, or a Jacob, or a Judah; they were all Greeks pure and simple, every one selected was a pure blooded Greek. What does that teach us, brethren? It teaches us that the Hebrews who were in the majority, selected all of the deacons from those who were in the minority; they just simply deluged the minority in a flood of generosity. What an example of fixing up church quarrels, and what an example they set us of the majority dealing, kindly with the minorities!

What a church was that! God grant that when Christ returns he may find the Jerusalem Church reproduced in us, and in every other congregation of his people.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

After Christianity has been in the world for so long a time, it is exceedingly strange that such a question should be raised. That strangeness is by no means reduced when we consider that it is a question often asked by those who go to make up the most Christian (?) nation in the world. True Christianity consists in being like Christ.

I. We must believe the truths Christ preached.

II. We must manifest the presence of moral rectitude and virtue, which so pre-eminently figure in the character of Christ.

III. And we must accomplish those moral feats of doing good under adverse circumstances that Christ himself performed.

It is not our purpose to give any exposition of doctrines or truths that Christ taught; and concerning his life work it suffices to say that we can never arrive at anything like that state of perfection which Christ attained unto. It is ours to ever remember that we have to "go on" unto perfection.

"A man's life," says Christ, "consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesses." This is true also of his spiritual life, for that does not consist of the amount of knowledge he has.

Christianity is not all knowledge, for there is an element of practice incorporated with it, which is absolutely inseparable.

We often hear the bitter enemies of Christ speaking of His high-toned and moral ethics in the coolest and most commonplace manner possible, classing them with the teachings of those oriental philosophers, whose ideas make up the faith of the majority of the human race. Though, on the other hand, it is contended, in the most able and scholarly manner, that the teachings of Christ are just as far removed from them as light is from darkness; for while on the one hand Confucius taught, "Do not unto others that which you would not have them do to you," Christ taught "Do unto others that which ye would have them do to you," which is equal to saying, on the one hand, "Do not evil to others," and, on the other, "Be continually doing good unto others, not only unto those whom we love and respect, but unto those also for whom we have personal dislikes." One is negative, the other positive, and we should never be satisfied till we practice positive Christianity. The works of Christianity can be divided into two classes. Those which we are forced to perform, and those which it is our duty to perform. There are certain positions we can be placed in in the time of trial, which renders it absolutely necessary for us to take but one course of action if we would remain faithful to the teachings of Christ. This would be one of those positions forced upon us in order to demonstrate the sincerity of our convictions and at all such times we should endeavor to "do right and fear not,' and submit ourselves entirely to the will of our heavenly Father. From Him, if we seek it, we may derive strength of mind and fortitude of character which will bring us unharmed through all the dangers and difficulties which beset our faith so continually, although we know full well that if we do that which we know to be right we shall bring ourselves into contempt, ridicule, and disgrace in the eyes of the world. This is our testing time, and it should be our highest aim to show that we are in deed what we profess to be.

There are other works for it is our duty as Christians to perform, and if we do not manifest them it shows that we are only half-hearted and half way Christian.

These consist in the work of the proclamation of the truth, and the development of those moral accomplishments, which are so beautifully exemplified in the character of the Master himself. Each of these calls for particular notice, but we shall only be able to glance at one. The only way for each one to determine whether he is a true Christian is for him to see whether he possesses or does not possess these various moral qualities which Paul so frequently calls attention to viz:—Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, meekness, gentleness, temperance, faith, humility, brotherly kindness, or whatever he is full of envy, malice, and all those other bad qualities of which he makes mention. Each one can see whether he is a Christian after the apostolic pattern, by applying this rule to himself. For each one is a Christian only so far as he manifests these attributes which constitutes true Christlike-mindedness, e. g., if we take anger, which is one of the most subtle of the bad qualities with which a Christian has to deal We see at once how Christianity acts upon him and tempers his anger. A true follower of Christ ought never to lose his temper, for it leads to saying and doing all sorts of unkind things which we afterward wish we had never done or said, and saves a great deal of after inward bitterness and self-reproach which comes on reflection, and what is more, if we do lose our temper, then the moral teaching of Christ has not had its full effect upon our daily life, and we do not and cannot show to those of our surroundings that we have been with the meek and lowly Jesus, and have learned of Him.

T. G. ATKINSON.

THE SEEMINGLY RIGHT WAY

"There is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Prov. 14:12.

Deception is a Satanic art. Boldfaced wickedness is not attractive. No man becomes a drunkard by seeing an outcast sot lying in the gutter. That would be too plain an advertisement to catch victims. The bait must be presented in the garb of good. The thing offered must make some appeal unto men's profit, pleasure or some other advantage. The pill must be sugar coated. It must appeal unto the palate, even tho it in the end prove bitter in the belly. The false must be made to resemble the true, yet in substance be unlike it. The wolf comes in sheep's clothing.

The hook is baited with an enticing morsel. The lupine teeth and claws in time do their tearing and the concealed hook becomes fastened with a death lock in the jaw.

The broad way appears advantageous, and the narrow way the opposite. The former, in the beginning, regales the senses, affords freedom and ease of pursuit, but it soon leads [illegible] ers and grassy lawns to dreary wastes, cheerless prospects and steep declivities, from which it is hard to turn back. A way may seem right.

1. Because it appears beautiful. The aesthetic in the nature is strongly appealed unto. But all is not gold that glitters, and a thing of beauty is not always a joy forever. That gilded liquor saloon on the street corner will turn out just as big sots as the low dive in some slum section. A purblind youth is dazzled by the glitter, so that he fails to see the other end of the way. The attractions of the theater and opera are gay, but they tend to vitiate ad destroy fine moral sense. Solomon's picture of the strange woman and her seductive arts are strikingly illustrative of this point. (Prov. 7:6, 23.)

2. Because it is easy. It affords respite from burdensome toil, relaxation from nervous strain, and freedom from distracting anxieties. But all such ways don't yield these returns. The burdens ofttimes become unbearable, the nervousness brain-wrecking and the anxieties overwhelming. Toil, sanctified by a divine purpose becomes a blessing; burdens borne, increase our powers of endurance. Beware of any cause which promises too flattering a release in this respect. Bunyan's pilgrims at By-Path Meadow saw another path across the fence, a much easier one than they were on. It ran in the same direction. They jumped over the fence and took it, only to find themselves in time on the Enchanted Grounds, and imprisoned by Giant Despair in Doubting Castle.

3. Because it is secret. No one will find out what you are about to do. But "the best laid plans of mice and men oft gang aglee." The secret will come out. Some unguarded avenue will prove a highway to conviction. Some suspicious circumstance will betray, or the laslings and boundings of a guilty conscience will give one away. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Here is a way that may appear right because of its secrecy, but in the end will prove the way to death and disgrace.

4. A way may seem right because it is patronized by a multitude. But the multitude may be wrong. It has often proved so. The multitude cried out "Crucify him, crucify him!" in the Saviour's time. At the beginning of the anti-slavery agitation the multitude was against the advocates of reform. The multitude was against Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego; but God was on their side and displayed his power through them because they stood for right and didn't fall in with the crowd. How easy the argument slips off the tongues of the young people that certain things must be right because everybody does them.

5. It may appear so because patronized by the rich and influential. This is another dangerous position. The rich as a class, have usually been on the wrong side. There are many noble exceptions. But how the eyes of the common people are looking at the higher classes to see what direction they are going. "Have any of the rulers believed on him?" was the watchword with many in the Master's time. We are to judge of our duty upon its own merits, and not as to who patronizes the [illegible] way or dissents from it.

6. Because it affords immediate and great gain. Let seized by a worldly ambition and money making craze, pitched his tent toward Sodom. It appeared right because of the great profits in sight. But Sodom's morality was frightful, and Lot was not sin proof. From pitching toward Sodom it was but a short distance into Sodom. But one day he made a sudden exodus from Sodom with the utter loss of his accumulated gains and a besmirched character. Better go slower and make less. "He that hasteth to be rich shall not be found innocent." Wealth acquired at the expense of principle and too close a risk of moral ruin is very dearly gotten.

7. Because the transgression may apear trifling in magnitude. But a small thing is asked. But small things lead to greater. Great principles are illustrated in small transactions. The guilt of dishonesty is not to be estimated by the gain of it. Dishonesty in small matters argues dishonesty in greater, did opportunity but serve. The trickling stream, unchecked, soon washes away the dyke and destroys vast possessions. Avoid the entrance of the wedge, and we spare ourselves the risk of elopage from honesty and uprightness.

THE GOSPEL—WHAT IS IT?

The word "Gospel" means a 'good message,' it comes from God to man and is therefore styled "the Gospel of God." Rom. 1 1.

The term gospel is often heard and what are called "gospel meetings" are common in this and other cities. It is, however, a subject that is but little understood, and very few are able to define its meaning.

What is the Gospel? That we may truthfully consider the matter we must hear the instruction of the great teacher and "search the Scriptures."

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things."

Jesus can teach us. He is the prophet ordained to teach all that will come unto him. In Deut. 28:18 it is written, "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee and will put my words in his mouth: and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." Hence Jesus could say "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." (John 7:16.

Peter in his address in the house of Cornelius, (Acts 10) said "The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ (he is Lord of all) that word I say ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached." Thus plainly directed, we turn to Mark 1:14 and read: "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God; and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye and believe the gospel." "He went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and the twelve were with him. Luke 8:1. He called his twelve disciples together and he sent them to preach the kingdom of God. Luke 9:1,2. And the sixth verse informs us they went through the

Continued on Page Three

JESUS THE CHRIST.

"And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the son of the living God." John 6:69.

Jesus had just been explaining to the Jews and his apostles that h. was the bread of life that came down from heaven, and he said, "He that eateth of this bread shall live forever, and I will raise him up the last day."

This statement of Jesus that he was the bread of life from heaven, which giveth eternal life, was hard for many to understand, and from that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him. "Then said Jesus, unto the twelve, will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the son of the living God.

When Adam sinned, and was condemned to die, the curse was passed upon the earth. God said that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. He meant that the Christ would destroy the devil and his seed, which are his children by works, (Matt. 13:38, and John 8:44, and redeem the righteous from the effects of sin.

All men having been doomed to death, which is utter destruction except there be a resurrection, it was necessary under the divine plan, for some one to pay the price for the redemption of man from the curse of sin and eternal death, before he could rise from the dead with eternal life, and inherit the land which God had promised to Abraham and his seed. Almost every act or ceremony that God required of his chosen people, was a figure or type of some event that would afterward occur of a spiritual and eternal nature. When the death angel was to pass over Egypt and destroy the first born of every family, the Israelites were required to institute the passover, which was to sacrifice a lamb without blemish, and to use its blood as a token to the death angel to pass over the house in which it was so observed. Ex. 12:3 14. This was a type of the true sacrifice that must be made in due time to save all of God's people from eternal death. Heb. 8:5 and 9:24.

This passover institution requiring the sacrifice of lambs without spot or blemish was only for the purifying of the flesh. Heb. 8:13, and could not take away sin, that is, give eternal life, Heb. 10:10, and it was necessary for the seed of the woman, "without spot or blemish," to pay the price of personal sacrifice for the redemption of the fallen race; and as no man could be found who was without spot or blemish, that is without sin, Psa. 14:2, 3, it was necessary for one to be born of woman, who would inherit divine attributes so that he could resist the temptations incident to the flesh, and be without spot or blemish, so God must be his father by begettal.

The prophet Isaiah foretold of this birth saying, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." Isa. 7:14. After that he prophesies of the birth again, and speaks of it in the present tense, although it was over 700 years future, and he tells of the office and work of Christ, saying, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the prince of peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. 9:6, 7.

The kingdom of Israel, consisting of God's chosen people, which was organized under the leadership of Moses, and over which David and Solomon were kings, and was overturned under king Zedekiah "until he come whose right it is," was a type of the true kingdom of Israel which Christ and his bride the church, will set up and rule over when he comes again. Ezek. 21:26.

The prophecy of the birth of Jesus was verified by the angel Gabriel when he said to Mary, "And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the son of the highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:31-33.

Paul in writing to the Galatians about Christ's birth, said, "but when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. * * *Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Gal. 4:4, 5, 7. Of what are the sons of God heirs? They are heirs of all that Christ. Abraham's seed, are heirs. Paul said to the Romans, "For the promise, that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Rom. 4:13. Also David in his prophecy of Christ and his kingdom, said, "I will declare the decree; the Lord hath said unto me, "Thou art my son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possessions." Psa. 2:7-8.

We find that Christ and his saints are heirs of the world, the whole earth And this Jesus born of the Virgin Mary, is the Christ that God promised to give to the world to redeem his people from death, and to be king over all the earth. When Paul was at Thessalonica, he reasoned with them out of the Scriptures, opening and alleging that his Jesus whom he preached, is Christ. Acts 17:2, 3.

The son of God who was to be the Christ, Acts 2:36, whom God gave to die for the world, had a definite and foreordained office to fill and work to do in order to accomplish that object for which he came, I Peter 1:20, which was to give his life for the world, to rise from the dead, to be retained in heaven as an advocate with the Father until a required number of people have been tried and chosen from among the Gentiles to take on them the name of Christ, Acts 15:14-16, that is, to be his bride, and then to come again and raise these chosen people from the dead, or change them if living, and then establish his kingdom, and rule the world until the curse is removed.

We cannot believe that Jesus is the Christ unless we believe that he is one who is working in harmony with this divine plan. If we believe that Jesus is now on his throne in heaven, and that the righteous, whether living or dead, are now in this kingdom, and that when the body died, the living soul is immediately taken to heaven, or to paradise which some suppose to be in Hades, we do not believe that Jesus is the Christ because we have no record in the Bible that any such plan was ever made, and it is plain contradiction to all that is recorded, and we are therefore unbelievers. This theory is in harmony with the prophetic statement that Paul wrote to the church at Corinth, in which he said, "For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus," referring very clearly to "the man of sin," that aggregation of apostasy that perverted the true gospel of the kingdom of God, changing God's plan of salvation, and thereby practically preaching another Jesus.

When Jesus, the Christ comes, he will not bring his saints from Paradise as spiritual beings, and put them into other resurrected bodies, but he will call them into existence from the dust of the earth, John 5:28, and Dan. 12:2, by the same Spirit that raised him from the dead, Rom. 8:11. The chain of consciousness does not have to be unbroken between our present and future existence. Denying the proof of identity without this connection, is denying the power of godliness, and profaning the name of Christ; and to assert the conscious existence of the dead, is to assert that God's inspired servants are false witnesses. Gen. 2:17; Psa. 6:5, and 115:17; Eccl. 9:5; Isa. 26:14, and 38:18; I Cor. 15:18.

Northup, O. F. M. Howell.

CORN SHEAVES GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.

Facing the sun. At home on an Ohio farm until I was eighteen, I now have a fine garden in Colton, Southern California. Doctors here say people from the north and east have pale faces, while our cheeks are blood-flushed or dusky in the sunny clime. And as we irrigate, nothing suffers for lack of rain because everything grows luxuriously. Never before have I seen such rank, stocky sunflowers as I have on the eastern and western borders of my garden, and the heads bent their thick necks facing the morning sun, and bent back in the afternoon facing the setting sun.

Let us as sons, ever face Christ, the sun of righteousness, exhibiting his lowly, self-sacrificing spirit of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." When we "contend for the faith," or rebuke sin, let us be careful lest we do more harm than good.

A Source of Strength.—"Rejoice in the Lord alway." Students of human nature are most emphatically teaching nowadays that heaviness of heart and soul, too serious thoughts, fear and anxiety, even too much monotony in service, tend to depress and weaken the life. Wise optimism, cheerful views are necessary factors for strength. One in trouble or in the toils of strenuous service often finds real strength in thinking of something bright, and turning to that for refreshment. Belief, faith, trust in God, make for soul-strength, so do love and understanding of his character and service with him; but more is needed for fullness of strength. One needs to supplement the sterner virtues and sobrer doing with rejoicing. Every one needs to learn to rejoice—really rejoice—in God's goodness and care and wisdom and constant presence with his own. Rejoice in his unfailing and infallible friendship, his defense of righteousness. See the glad radiant side of life with God.

CORESPONDENCE

I wish to report a series of meetings held at this place, July 24 to August 2, by Bro. Joseph Williams, of Frankfort, Ind. The subjects were:

Hell—Rich man and Lazarus; Judgment, Rev. 20-13; The Devil, Third Heaven, Heaven, Son of Man, Covenants of Promise, The Operation of the Holy Spirit, and The Signs of the Times.

There was a very good attendance considering the busy time of the year. Much interest was manifested, although none submitted to baptism; but I believe the seed sown may germinate, and ere long bear fruit to life eternal. Brother Williams does not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, closely adhering to the essentials of the Gospel. We feel that the meeting was not in vain. This is the second time Brother Williams has been kind enough to come and preach to a little band of us. There is no church of the Abrahamic faith here. We will welcome at any time any minister of the Gospel.

Your brother in the one faith,
J. L. Maggard.

Scottsburg, Ind.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I beg your pardon for taking your time to read this suggestion. I would like to see the pictures of some of the old brethren and their wives, with a little history of their Christian work. If practical could you spare a little corner in the paper for that work. Also the picture of the different churches and the history of their building. There are many that at the present time would like to see Bro. Underwood and wife, Bro. Chaplin and wife, Wince, Stephenson, etc. It seems to me it would be an added interest to the paper.

With much love, I remain,
Yours in hope,
E. W. Knapp.
Monkland, Oregon.

We think so too, Bro. Knapp. If the brethren concerned will take hold of the suggestion, we will gladly give one column per week to the work. Let us hear soon as possible from all interested. Bro Adams has already signified his willingness to co-operate; his photo and history of his life's work will soon appear. Let others, particularly those named by Bro. Knapp respond—Editor.

Dear ones of like Precious Faith, Greeting:

We feel that God has spared our lives on the long tedious journey from southern California to Oregon; and we feel so thankful to our Lord that we are still a united family and have our health and strength. We left Corona, California, June 2nd, and reached Gold Hill, Ore., July 27, coming in a wagon, a family of five. Camping by the road side is pleasant for a few days, but on a journey of great length, it gets monotonous. We passed through some beautiful scenery in the mountains, camped one night at Sisson at the foot of grand old Mt. Shasta, passed over the Siskiyous elevation, 6,000 feet, a long hard pull to get up, but pleasant going down, the mountain roads are full of pleasant surprises, an abrupt turn will bring us to a pretty mountain stream where the water is so clear and cool. We spent a pleasant evening at the United States fisheries, where we had all the good salmon fish we could eat. At Castella we camped. Here we saw Castle Rock and watched as the sun shone on it in the early morning—a beautiful sight indeed, one of the most beautiful of northern California.

We tarried a few hours in Sacramento on the 4th of July, and had the pleasure of meeting and forming the acquaintance of Bro. and Sis. B. F. Cook and his dear mother, who is steadfast in the precious truths we hold so dear. There were others of the faith along the line, but we did not meet them, circumstances preventing. We had hoped to settle where there was an organization of believers, but conditions rule otherwise, so we will wait and murmur not, and later on we may be permitted, God willing, to meet with those dear to us in the faith at some of the meetings that will be held in the years to come. We are located eight miles from Central Point, Ore., R No. 2, where we would be pleased to get acquainted with those of like precious faith, if there are any near. We are on the Conner ranch.

Your sister waiting and watching.

Azorah M. Scroggs.

GOLD DUST.

Never esteem anything as of advantage to thee that shall make thee break thy word or lose thy self respect.

"IMMORTALITY"

Immortal! How inconceivable to the human intellect! Infinite, imperishable, indestructible, existing forever and ever. It is something that no man ever possessed until Jesus was raised from the dead, and then he was made a partaker of this divine attribute. He "brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." It was through the gospel, because the gospel is good news of the redemption of man from death, and this was the first fruits of the fulfilment of the gospel by the resurrection and immortalization of our promised King and Redeemer. Acts 13:32,33.

No other man ever possessed immortality, for Paul writes to Timothy that, "The King of kings and Lord of lords only hath immortality," I Tim. 6:15, 16; and to the Romans he says that God will render eternal life to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality. Rom. 2: 6,7. If they already possessed it, they would not seek for it.

Dear reader, let us always bear in mind that God can not lie. I realize that there are some passages in the Bible that apparently teach that the soul is immortal, but no plain assertion that such is true, while on the contrary we find many plain statements by God's inspired servants that man must die and that death is a positive cessation of all the elements of life. Therefore let us believe what God has told in plain language, and not ignore this nor add to it to change its meaning, and then try to interpret the vague expressions so they will contradict his word.

God spoke plainly to Adam and said he must die and return to the dust. Paul said that death passed upon al men. Rom. 5-12. The Psalmist says that the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. Psa. 115:17. Solomon sad the dead know not anything. Eccl. 9:10. The prophet Isiah says all their memory is perished. Isa. 26:14.

Paul says if there be no resurrection, then they which are fallen asleep in Jesus are perished. I Cor. 15:18. Now, dear reader, if the souls, the conscious entities of these dead people are in heaven more alive than ever, then these prophets have misinformed us. More than that, Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, "Whither I go ye can not come, so now I say to you." John 13-33.

We are told that when good people die, they go to heaven to their reward, but Jesus said, "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22:12. Also he said, "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward everyman according to his works" Matt. 16:27. He also said to the Pharisee, "For ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Luke 14:14. Solomon says: "The righteous shall be recompensed on the earth." Prov. 11:31, also "The righteous shall never be removed but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth." Prov. 10:30.

Some are deluded by using the words "soul" and "spirit" synonomously, when they should not be so used. The Bible teaches clearly that the two words are quite different in their significance Paul makes a distinction between the words when he says, "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit etc." Heb. 4:12, and also to the Thessalonians he says, "And I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Thess. 5:23. The spirit is the power that emanates from God, creates and animates the body, and when the body dies, this spirit power reverts back to God. This spirit power was first given to Adam by his Creator, and was transmitted by him as a life germ down through his posterity, subject to development under proper conditions of nourishment. The soul is the living creature, the conscious entity, the personality, the responsible ego. When we speak to a person, we always address the conscious entity, the soul, and never the body alone. The personal pronoun in the second person always refers to the conscious individual, the soul. The soul can not exist without a living body, either natural or spiritual. Thoughts, perceptions, memory, and will, can not exist without living organs to produce them, or in which to originate. Adam became "a living soul" when the created body was quickened by the application of the "breath of life," the spirit. The spirit. The spirit power is somewhat like electricity, and God is the center and source of this power; and when the condition of the body is so that it can no longer retain the spirit, it returns to the earth, and the spirit reverts or returns to God. As the soul is the result or product of a quickened body, it ceases or disappears with the body in the state of death, which is called "sheol" (Hebrew,) "hades" (Greek,) "hell," or "the grave." David said in regard to Jesus, "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell" (the grave,) Psa. 16:10, and he said to the Lord, "For great is thy mercy toward me; and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell." Psa. 86:13. When God said to Adam, "Of dust thou art, and unto dust shall thou return," the language meant the man, the woman, and no one has any authority to make a distinction between the man and the soul.

In the 90th Psalm, called Moses' prayer, he says, "Thou turnest man to destruction and sayest, 'Return, ye children of men;' then in speaking of the shortness of life he says, "For it is soon cut off, and we fly away." Did he mean that they fly away to another world? No, he had already said that God turned man to destruction, and refers to where God said man should return to the dust. The word "fly" as it is used here and in some other places means to quickly pass away out of existence. In Job. 20:7,8 Zophar uses "fly" in the same sense in speaking of the wicked, saying, "Yet he shall perish forever like his own dung they which have seen him shall say, 'Where is he?' He shall fly away as a dream and shall not be found: yea he shall be chased away as a vision of the night." Solomon uses "fly" in the same sense in regard to riches. He says, "Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not, for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven." Prov. 23:5.

Where Solomon says, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth," he does not make an assertion that there is a difference between the spirits of the two, but he asks the question, the same as saying, "Who can prove that there is a difference?" Just before this he had said, "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all or of dust, and all turn to dust again." Where he says the spirit returns to God who gave it, he states what I have already explained. He does not say the spirit is the soul.

F. M. Howell,
Northrup, Ohio.

Continued from Page Two towns preaching the gospel and healing everywhere.

Paul in Heb. 2: 3, says: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." The same writer in Rom. 1. declares the gospel of Christ to be the power of God unto salvation to every one believing it—to the Jew first and also the Gentile.

The kingdom which the God of heaven will set up (Dan. 2:44) and which Jesus illustrated in his parables and which was the theme of all his teaching during his ministry on earth. He has commanded to be preached unto the end of the present dispensation (Matt. 24:14) and as recorded by Mark 16:15, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. The Gospel of the Kingdom, then is the means which God has ordained "To take out from among the nations a people for his name." (Acts 15:14,) and we have proof that those who went out were faithful to the word of the Lord. Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ unto them (Acts 8), and we learn from verse 12 what was the subject of his discourse: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Paul, at Ephesus, (Acts19-8 Disputed in their synagogue for the space of three months on the same subject—see also chapters 20:25; 28:23, 30. And to the Galatians he writes chap. 1:8) "But though an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." It is plain, then, that the Kingdom of God is the hope of all true believers—Looking for that blessed hope. (Titus 2:13) as they pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Paul, writing to the Thessalonians (2:12) exhorts them to walk worthy of God who hath called them unto his kingdom and glory."

"When any one heareth the word of the kingdom and understandeth it not, then cometh the adversary and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart; this is he which receiveth seed by the way side." Matt 13:19.

The gospel of God is the good news of the blessedness promised in the scriptures of the Prophets and commonly expressed in the saying, "In thee, Abraham, shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:3. The making of this promise to Abraham is termed by Paul the preaching of the gospel to Abraham, for, says he, the scriptures foreshowing that God would justify the heathen (Gentiles) through faith, preached before the gospel to Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed (Gal. 3:8); this he styles the blessing of Abraham which is come upon the nations through Jesus Christ.

In our natural state we are ignorant of the things God has ordained for his own glory, and our supreme happiness and joy. We are alienated from the life of God as were the Ephesians before their conversion (Eph. 2:12): but when the mind is enlightened the state becomes changed as theirs also was—see verse 19. Finally, to know God is to love him and serve him, and His spirit, which is imparted through His word, will conform us to the image of His Son, and thus we become heirs to the glory and blessedness God has in store for them that love him. See Jas. 1:12.

LIFE

Your life is a race, eternal glory is the prize, grace and corruption are the antagonists, and accordingly as either finally prevails, eternal life is won or lost.

Faith, hope, charity, three three.

"Never explain," says a writer most truly. "Your friends do not need it and your enemies will not believe you anyway."

People who have little to do are great talkers. The less we think the more we talk.

THE OVERCOMERS

He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. Rev. 2:26.

Blessed are the overcomers:
When Christ comes to claim his own
They shall rule o'er all the nations,
They shall share with him his throne.

Galva, Ill. LILLIE H. WILLIS.

Manager's Column

Some of us who are not very well blessed with this world's goods, learn to highly appreciate what we have, and it often seems as if this class of people are the most ready to give, and when they do, it means a real sacrifice too. A sacrifice is made only when we give up what we actually want or need ourselves; what can be said then of those who have plenty and more, still do not see the needs of others. We don't look at the matter rightly. Sacrificing isn't the giving up of something without a return as we give we receive, but in the same sense. Do in blessing a hundred fold. A sister recently sent in a five dollar subscription to The Restitution remarking she stated that was made to pay for two subscriptions, and as she had a friend whom wanted to have the paper sent to her she asked to have it sent to each for six months, and she would do without it for the last six months of the year. Think she will lose anything? Not a thing. Chances are she will get more good out of her six months reading than lots of us will get out of a year's, besides she is going to get the paper for the other six months too.

Let's see: How many new subscribers did you send in this week?

In addition to taking care of the business end of The Restitution, the writer is a traveling salesman, which necessitates his being away from home a large part of the time. This will explain why there may be a delay of a few days in answering correspondence. If your communications require immediate answers, mark the word "urgent" on one corner of the envelope, and the latter will be forwarded and receive prompt attention.

The Manager.

This is A. D. 1911?—A leading spiritualist was brought into court on a charge of fortune telling. The complainant testified that she had been informed that the "Indian Silver Fox was to be her guardian spirit; that he would make her young again and supremely happy." The defendant also had told the witness that her husband had "much trouble with their daughter, when in fact her husband had been dead for seventeen years. The spiritualist testified as follows: "I only tell what comes to me from the other side. A great deal depends upon the attitude of the sitter. If (the complainant) received false predictions it was largely due to her attitude. Every thing depends upon harmony. The spirits cannot enter into the atmosphere of the sitters when obstacles of deceit are thrown in." That is what is called "crawling testimony," invented soon after the rise of spiritualism in this country. It is a humbug of the first order, yet we prophesy that there will be a great resurrection of spiritualism. Its power went down as that of Eddyism went up, but Eddyism has received a hard blow.

Two great superstitions rarely flourish contemporaneously. Those who reject true religion either plunge into superstition, or into practical or intellectual atheism, or sing the song and dance to the tune of Omar Khayyam.

Not what we think or say, but what we do will have effect upon the world.

In keeping track of others and their faults, it's very, very important that you shouldn't lose sight of your own.

Nothing so effectually purifies the heart as love; for nothing so effectually woos us from selfishness.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats, 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters; only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Procurable in more than 15 cities. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1000. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thought for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Are We Come Near? A History, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 50 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 50 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God; the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 401 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 67 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN THE RESTITUTION

RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, reasonable prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG, W. G. ROTHE, W. S. TOMLINSON, HARRY POTT, D. C. ROBINSON, BUELL W. NUTT, C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-54); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Dan. 9:24-27), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus (Acts 2:38, as preparatory to the remission of sins (Acts 2:2-4), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to the Crown (2 Pet. 1, 5-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12, 28:23, etc.).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 13, 1911 No. 35

THE SAVIOR.

Our Savior died upon the cross,
He died for you and me;
He died in greatest agony,
He died to set us free.

From sin and death with all their ills
He offers life to all;
He died to wash the sins away,
From sinners great and small.

But they must love God's promises
Made to his saint so old;
And they must turn away from sin,
Then come within the fold.

And all must live the higher life,
Keep in the narrow way;
And they must climb the rugged steps,
Up to eternal day.

And when the Savior comes again
Oh haste that glorious day;
He'll waken all the sleeping ones
Who walked the narrow way.

They'll be with Christ upon his throne,
And here on earth they'll reign;
The nations then will do his will,
Oh Lord come soon again.

A. Wallace Mason.

St. Catherines, Ont.

STEPHEN'S DYING PRAYER

Acts 7:59.

The noble spirit of Stephen, in boldly charging his fellow countrymen with having murdered their Messiah, has been admired, for the last eighteen centuries, by all readers of the Acts of the Apostles. He was the first disciple of Jesus Christ who suffered martyrdom subsequent to the crucifixion. Many other endured a similar fate amidst the persecutions which followed the spread of the gospel throughout the Roman empire, and in some cases, no doubt, the martyrdom was so much unsought as in the case of Stephen. But when the early churches began to degenerate, as predicted by the apostles, martyrdom, so far from being unsought, was eagerly coveted by many, under the erroneous impression that such a mode of death atoned for past sins. At the same time many of the professed disciples of Christ began to imbibe the Pagan theories of the immortality of the soul, and the translation of good souls, at death, to realms of bliss. Those who thus combined apostolic doctrines with the teaching of Pagan philosophers gradually gained the ascendancy, and in the end succeeded in establishing what is now known as the Church of Rome. Things gradually grew from bad to worse, until at length the gross abuses of which this church became full led to that great historical event known as the reformation. The leaders and supporters of this movement brought upon themselves severe persecution, which in many instances ended in a violent death. Their martyrdom is evidence of their fidelity to conscience, but is no proof of their being saved; for salvation does not depend upon the mode of a man's death, but on his faith and the mode of his life.

"Martyr" is a word transferred from the Greek language, and simply means a witness. It does not define the nature of that to which a person bears witness. It may be applied to one who witnesses either for truth or error. Hence persons hold faiths diametrically opposite, who have suffered death on account of what they believed, are all denominated martyr. The question to be decided, therefore, is, did these martyrs to Protestantism hold the true faith? It is true that they "protested" against some of the errors of the Church of Rome—which fact is the origin of the word "Protestant"—but this is no proof that they contended for the truth in its purity. So far from Abraham that he should possess the land of Canaan, he does not even own a foot of it. Both Moses and Stephen declare, in the passages already quoted, that the inheritance was promised not to Abraham only, but also to his "seed." There is no room for doubt as to what is meant by the term "seed," for we have the authoritative definition of an inspired apostle on the point: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one and to thy seed, which is Christ" (Gal. iii. 16). The "seed", then, promised to Abraham as a joint inheritor, is no other than Christ. Every Bible reader knows that the Savior of mankind has never yet possessed this inheritance. Therefore he must return from heaven to inherit it, and Abraham must be raised from the dead to share it with him. But Abraham and his seed, the Christ, are not destined to be the exclusive inheritors of the promised land. The inheritance is to be shared by the "children of God," who are described by Paul as "joint-heirs with Christ" (Rom. viii. 17). Whatever, therefore, Christ is to possess, his disciples will also enjoy. Being in Christ, they are reckoned as a part of the seed of Abraham, and as such are entitled to inherit the land promised to Abraham and his seed. Hence Paul says: "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. iii. 29). Stephen being a child of God, is included in Abraham's seed, and is therefore an heir of the promise made to Abraham. His reference to that promise shows that he possessed "the faith of Abraham," which was equal to a belief in resurrection to eternal life to be enjoyed upon this earth. This is strong presumptive evidence that he did not belive in going to heaven; a thing which was never promised to any one but Jesus Christ. Stephen was probably one of those who, on the day of Pentecost, heard Peter declare that David was "both dead and buried," and that he had not ascended into heaven. (Acts ii. 29, 34); and as he, like the apostles, was endowed with the Holy Spirit (Acts vi. 5, 10), he would believe and speak the same truths as did Peter. How improbable, then to say the least, that Stephen should have expected to realize at death a blessing which he knew had not been granted to the dead King of Israel! Holding, as he did, the apostle's doctrine, he believed that the same Jesus who was taken up into heaven would return (Acts i. 11), in order to sit upon the throne of David (Acts 2: 30). Stephen will then be one of those described by John: "I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God . . . and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years" (Rev. 20 4.) That this reigning will be on the earth (not in heaven) is proved by John representing the whole of the redeemed as singing: "Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10.)

Second.—Stephen's Spirit. Professors of religion have become so accustomed to regard the word "spirit," when applied to man, as necessarily meaning an immortal and immaterial entity, that they can scarcely be persuaded to think otherwise. Its primary meaning is simply that of wind, or breath, and is so used by James when he says, "The body without the spirit is dead." (Jas. 2:26.) In the margin of all reference Bibles the word "breath" is substituted for "spirit." If it had been so rendered in the text it would read, "The body without the breath is dead." This is the same breath which was given to man in the first instance, when God, having used the tenth expressed by Paul in writing to the Colossians: "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then ye shall also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:3-4.)

Third. Stephen's sleep. In describing the martyrdom of those who have suffered death at the hands of Romanist or Protestant persecutors, it is customary to accompany the record of their decease with a few high-flown sentences stating that their immortal spirits or souls have winged their flight to realms of glory above. Thus in Fox's Book of Martyrs it is said of John Huss: "The flames soon put an end to his mortal life and wafted his undying spirit, which no fire on earth could subdue, or touch, to the regions of everlasting glory." No such language as this is employed in the narrative of Stephen's martyrdom; he is not said to have had an "undying spirit," and no mention is made of anything being "wafted to the regions of everlasting glory." It is simply and concisely recorded that "He fell asleep." The signification of this sleep is clearly defined by Jesus when at the tomb of Lazarus. He first said: "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth" (John 11:11;) but seeing that his disciples did not understand his meaning, he explained himself by saying "unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead" (verse 13-14.) On the basis of this authoritative definition we are fully justified in defining Stephen's sleep to be death. Had that happened to Stephen which Foxe states of John Huss, he never could have inferred upon the sleep of death; he would simply have been translated from earth to heaven. In answer to this it will be said that it was only the body of Stephen that died or went to sleep. But the writer of the Acts of the Apostles does not say so; he speaks of the man Stephen as a whole: "He fell asleep (or he died) and appropriately add that "devout men carried Stephen (not his body) to his burial." Daniel writes in the same style when describing the resurrection: "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." (Dan. 12:2.) Daniel does not say that the bodies of those who are to be saved sleep in the dust, but speaks of them as a whole: "Many of them that sleep in the dust." Indeed to say otherwise is to beg the very question at issue. The dust is the only abode of those who are in the sleep of death. Hence the Holy Spirit in Isaiah, in predicting their resurrection, thus addresses them: "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs and the earth shall cast out the dead." (Isaiah 26:19.) If popular theology be true, it would have been more appropriate to say, "Awake and sing, ye whose immortal souls dwell in heaven, but whose bodies are slumbering in the dust." On the contrary, the dead as a whole are said to 'dwell' in the dust—not a part of them in one place, and another part in some other place; and in the dust will they remain until the present intense spiritual darkness is dissipated by the rising of the sun of Righteousness, on the resurrection morn; for the present time is the night of the world's history, during which the dead saints are asleep. They will be awoke by the "Lord of both the dead and living; and among the number will be Stephen, who will then receive 'a crown of life' for having been 'faithful unto death.'" (Rev. 2:10.) Then, and not till then, will he find that life which Jesus promised to those who were willing to lose their present lives for his sake (Matt. 10:39.)

J. J. ANDREW.

If you have faith preach it; if you have doubts bury them; if you have joy share it; if you have sorrow bear it. Find the bright side of things and help others to get sight of it also. This is the only and surest way to be cheerful and happy.

IMPORTANCE OF CHRIST'S COMING.

Christ's coming is invested with deepest interest, to the humble, trustful child of God, on account of the events associated with it, as they are world-wide in scope, and eternal in duration. If Christ never returns in person to the earth again, his word will be falsified, for he has said "I will come to you, I will come again." John 14:3, 18, 28.

If the Lord himself should never descend from heaven whither he has gone, his disciples can never be with him personally, for he has said previous to his ascension into heaven. Whither I go ye cannot come John 13:33; 1 Thess. 4; 16. Angelic testimony would be nullified, for angels testified:—Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner (personally) as ye have seen him go into heaven.—Acts 1:9-11.

Professed religionists who are given to the pernicious habit of substituting the death for Christ's glorious appearing, are depriving themselves of that blessed hope to which Paul alludes in Titus 2:11-15.

It is the hope, joy and crown of rejoicing of God's people, to be in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming. 1Thess. 2: 19. No wonder converts in the model church of Thessalonica turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come. 1 Thess. 1:9-10. For without his coming there will be no resurrection of the dead. 1 Cor. 15:12-23. Jesus and the resurrection are indissolubly linked together in apostolic teaching. Acts 17:16-18.

As resurrection is dependent upon and associated with Christ's appearing, the second time, we might summarize as follows: no appearing, no resurrection or judgment. (Heb. 9:27-28; 2 Tim. 4:1; 1 Cor. 15:21-26); No rest for the troubled. (2 Thess. 1:7); No punishment for the wicked. (2 Thess. 1:9, 10); No reward for the righteous, as they are not promised a recompense until Jesus comes and raises the dead and inaugurates his righteous reign over all the earth. Matt. 25:31-34; John 6:39-40, 44, 54; Luke 14:12-14; Col. 3:4; Zech 14:9. It is the impending event of the near future. It is the church's pole-star of hope. It is the silver lining to the world's dark cloud of misrule and oppression. Some author, imbued the grandeur and transcendent importance of Christ's appearing and his kingdom, says: It is used to strengthen faith, encourage hope, promote humility, fortify patience, mitigate sorrow, incite watchfulness, inspire prayer, increase holiness and awaken joy.

The last promise and the last prayer recorded in the Bible, allude to Christ's coming. Rev. 22: 12.

Do you love his appearing? 2 Tim. 4:8. May the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ. 2 Thess. 3:5. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. James 5:7-9. The Lord's injunction is to watch. Mark 13: 32-37. Luke 12:40. Your brother awaiting the return of the absent nobleman. Luke 19:12.

Fountain City, Ind.

Rufus A. Curtis.

THE TRUTH IN MONTANA

No. 3.

The Pinehurst Bible Class spent several joyful hours last Sunday at Black Lake, the occasion being the baptism of three of its members into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

Proctor, Montana.

S. H. Thomas.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents. In advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pote,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Sept. 13, 1911

EDITORIAL

"Let your light shine." Don't be stingy about it; others might be benefited by a few beams.

If The Restitution Publishing Co. could get the waste, just the money wasted by some who are professors of the truth, wonders could be done in the service of the truth.

A correspondent in Illinois who signs herself "A Sister," desires someone to write an article on divorce and remarriage. Is it a sin for a divorced person to marry; and is what Christ says about the subject a command? Who will respond to our sister's request?

Upon our return home from the West we found an ample supply of copy awaiting us. Writers are more numerous, and there is more copy than room to publish it. Writers must have patience, as their articles will be tardy in appearing. Most of the copy to hand is very good. We wish to again ask contributors to be brief as possible in writing, as long articles have to be abbreviated considerably sometimes before they are small enough for our space.

Brother R. A. Humphreys, of Bear, Ark., writes: "On my return from conference a week ago, I had a feast of good things in The Restitution; I am greatly pleased with it.

I had the pleasure Sunday morning, August 5th, of joining the company of a brother and sister who were on their way from Illinois to attend conference, and satisfy their conscience in regard to the "one baptism," which they did with others August 6th, 1911, in the presence of many witnesses.

I had the pleasure of holding meetings at three places as I came home, with good interest at each place, as you may judge by the request for us to return soon.

Readers have no doubt noticed some very bad mistakes in recent issues of The Restitution. While away from home we had a new editor and a new printer, which in part account for the typographical errors and the poor "make-up" of the paper. This issue is up to the old standard, and the Lord willing, we will try and keep up future issues to the same standard.

WHAT OUR NEIGHBORS THINK OF US.

In 1871 we started the weekly paper called The Restitution, in the city of Chicago. We had previously been publishing a semi-monthly magazine entitled "The Herald of the Coming Kingdom and Christian Instructor," and believing that the times demanded a weekly paper, we made the change at the beginning of the year.

In those days there were living a number of strong men, very able writers, whose contributions gave strength to the publication, and helped materially to build up the body it represented, among which we may mention J. M. Stephenson, H. V. Reed, Richard Corbaley, J. M. Wilcox, Benjamin Wilson, Newell Bond and others.

We also issued a fine lot of tracts, and were within a few weeks of publishing a new hymn book with music, when the Chicago fire destroyed everything, so that we were obliged to go East to Philadelphia, and procure new type and printing material with which to begin anew.

We suffered heavy losses by the fire, and a few years afterwards a financial cyclone swept over the country which left desolation in its wake. This also served to complete the wreck and loss of everything that the fire had left.

The Restitution meanwhile was disposed of to a publishing company in Indiana, and was removed to Ft. Wayne, Indiana, where it has been up to July of this year, when the proprietor disposed of it to a new company known as "The Restitution Publishing Co.," with its headquarters in Cleveland, O. Robt. G. Huggins, pastor of the Church of God of that city has volunteered to edit for one year, free of cost, which is a very liberal offer on his part. Buell W. Nutt is acting as manager.

We are in receipt of several issues under the new management and heartily wish that the best efforts of the present editor and his staff of contributors may be exerted towards building up and strengthening the believers as well as instructing them in those things which co. cern their eternal salvation.—Last Days.

The Restitution is a nice clean paper under the new management. It looks better, reads better and is a better paper for the masses than ever before. The strife and difference of opinion existing among the brethren is covered up and pushed aside and no doubt in time will be forgotten and thus harmony to a degree restored in the body.—Present Truth.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere.

Illustration of Isaiah 40:11.—Though no romantic tents appeared (on the banks of the Murakchai, or Eastern Euphrates) we passed several shepherds, probably from the neighboring villages, carrying in their bosoms the lambs of the flocks they tended. The same scene had already frequently interested us, by presenting the source of the beautiful imagery of the prophet: "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd, he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom." It is exhibited only at this season of the year, when lambs are frequently brought forth during the day at a distance from the fold. The newcomers, being too weak to follow the flock in its rovings after grass, are carried in the bosom of the shepherd; and not unfrequently they multiply so as to fill his arms before night. They are then taken to the fold, and guarded there until sufficiently strong to ramble with their dams. One of these enclosures, when the sheep return anxiously bleating in the evening from their day's pasture, and scores of hungry young ones are conducted by shepherd's boys each to its own mother, presents an amusing scene.

No Resurrection— No Reward.—"What advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." 1 Cor. 15:32. What advantageth me? What benefit shall I have? Why should I risk my life in this manner?

"Let us eat and drink." These words are taken from Isaiah 22:13. In their original application they refer to the Jews when besieged by Sennacherib and the army of the Assyrians. The prophet says, that instead of weeping and fasting, and humiliation, as became them in such circumstances, they had given themselves up to feasting and revelry, and that their language was, "Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we shall die." That is, there is no use in offering resistance or in calling upon God; we must die, and we may as well enjoy life as long as it lasts, and give ourselves up to unrestrained indulgences. Paul does not quote these words as having any original reference to the subject of the resurrection, but as language appropriately expressing the idea, that if there is no future state, if no resurrection of the dead, if no happy result of toils and suffering in the future world, it is vain and foolish to subject ourselves to trials and privations here. We should rather make the most of this life, enjoy all the comfort we can, and make pleasure our chief good, rather than look for happiness in a future state. . . . Tomorrow. Very soon. We have no security of life; and death is so near that it may be said, We must die tomorrow. We die. We must die. The idea here is, We must die without the prospect of living again, unless the doctrine of the resurrection be true.

The King's Table.—In the King's house stands the king's table—He has provided for his royal priesthood, and for them only, a royal feast. The Lord so loved the world that He gave himself for it, and His church love Him on that account. Love and gratitude subjugate them to him, and hence, while they by faith view His agony in the Garden and upon the cross, they cannot willfully sin. If, when pressed by temptation, they contemplate Gethsemane and Calvary, faith, as a shield, covers them, and they conquer. Temptation continually resisted by the cross, loses its power, and the believer is purified. What an impression must have been made upon those disciples who wept around the cross! And could that scene be frequently reproduced, how might the thoughtless be made to weep, to love, to watch and live! As this could not be, the Redeemer took bread and gave it to his disciples, saying, "This is my body broken for you, this do in remembrance of me." He gave them also the cup, saying, "This is my blood of the new Testament, shed for many for the remission of sins." The intelligent believer receives the bread and the fruit of the vine as such, but constituted to him the body and blood of his risen Lord—so associated, that to look upon them is to re-behold his Savior's death, and re-impress his mind with those facts which are a Godly power against sin. Before the apostacy the churches attended to this life sustaining ordinance every first day of the week. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine, in the fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in the prayers," (Acts ii. 42.) —as steadfastly in the one as in the other. Not only did the first congregations attend to his ordinances every Lord's day, but they assembled for that purpose. It was the primary object for which they met. "And on the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread,' (Acts xx. 7.) From this intimation, two positions are apparent. First—That the principal object of assembling was the breaking of the loaf. Second—That for this purpose they met every first day. It was not a first day but the first day. We say the 5th of November commemorates the Gunpowder Plot, and certain churches assert the 25th of December commemorative of the Redeemer's birth. Meaning every 5th of November, and every 25th of December.

It is admitted that the instruction given to the church at Corinth, requiring the members to put their contributions into the treasury on the first day of the week, proves the weekly assembling of the congregation. Bearing this in mind, we have only to notice the intimation, "When ye come together, therefore, in one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper." They were eating unworthily—one one hungry, another filled, and the mode of reproof implies, that the object for which they assembled was not in that state of division gained. As though Paul had said, you should and do come together with the intention of eating the Lord's supper; but your intention is not realized, you cannot eat it thus, and speaking from the result, ye do not come together for the very purpose for which ye ought, namely to eat the Lord's supper. As at Troas, so at Corinth, they assembled every first of the week to break the loaf, and as the apostles taught the same things in every congregation, what was done in these instances was done in all, and as with all commemorative ordinances, so with this—a time is fixed for the observance. It is certain from the design of this ordinance, and from the example of primitive churches, that every Lord's-day the loaf and cup should appear on the Lord's table, in order that the royal priesthood may partake of the commemorative feast of love.

The Lord is dishonored when his disciples allow a Lord's-day to pass and his table to remain unspread, and that those who break not the loaf every first day, deprive themselves of a gracious and efficient mean of spiritual advancement.

"Zoe" Life and "Psuche Life.—A correspondent inquires, "Is it true that the Greek term zoe always signifies eternal life, and that psuche always means temporal life, as some claim?" We reply that the claim is not tenable. Both words are sometimes applied to temporal life, and both are sometimes used to designate eternal life, as the following facts will show:

1. Zoe is used in the following texts in reference to temporal life: For what is your zoe? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little while and then vanisheth away. (James iv. 14.) Seeing he giveth to all zoen, and breath, and all things. (Acts xvii 25.) If in this zoe only we have hope in Christ. (1 Cor. xv. 19.)

2. Psuche is used in the following texts to bring to view eternal life. He that loveth his psuchen shall lose it; and he that hateth his psuchen in this world shall keep it unto eternal zoen. (John xii. 25.) He that loseth his psuchen for my sake shall find it. Matt. xii. 39.) But whosoever will lose his psuchen for my sake the same shall save it. (Luke ix. 24 and other texts.)

3. Death took away the zoe of Christ, and also his psuche—not two lives, but two names for one life. In his humiliation his judgment was taken away; and who shall declare his generation? for his zoe is taken from the earth. (Acts viii. 33.) For the son of man came to give his psuchen a ransom for many. (Mark x. 45.)

The foregoing texts, and others that might be quoted, invalidate the laim that zoe always signifies endless life, proving that all men have zoe—life, and that death terminates it. Instead of having two kinds of life, we have the duration of life gauged by its basis; a mortal nature producing only temporal life, but the immortal nature, obtained at the resurrection, will produce eternal life: This mortal shall put on immortality.

THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST.

It is painful to me to read anything that shows lack of harmony in matters of faith, especially on so important a subject as the above; since to my mind, an understanding of this point is the cornerstone, but to many a rock of offense. Did you ever stop to think of the ridiculous absurdity with which you charge God, when you say that Christ pre-existed? You cause a full grown heavenly being or an immortal being to dwindle into a germ of protoplasm, and follow all the laws of human generation, and at the same time break a divine law: since even Moses could not look directly upon the glory of the Lord, and live. How preposterous to think that Mary could have mothered all that glory and lived! The fact is, He was not immortal until after his resurrection. If he were immortal before his birth on earth he could not have died, hence could not have become our Savior. God has the plan of salvation all so perfected in his own mind and purpose that he often speaks of things that are not as though they are. Rom. 4:17. And this subject as others, is so deep that we have to dig as for diamonds. This is to test us, and make us prove whether we are born of God or not. 1 John 5:1 says: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is Christ, is born of God," and consequently those who do not believe that Jesus, Mary's son, not a full grown heavenly being, is the Christ, are not born of God.

Dear reader, do you not see the quicksand? This subject is the crucial one, as the 10th verse of 1 John 5 says: "He that believeth on the son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his son."

Now what do you find in that record? Matt. 1 and Luke 1 does not even hint that this child of the holy spirit ever existed before as a conscious entity, or that he went through a metamorphosis in order to be born of Mary, but she is told she would be overshadowed by the Holy Spirit. Strange that the record is so silent on so vital a point: and right here is the place of all places that such a statement should and would have been made, if it were a fact. Why do you pin your faith to a few passages that seem to teach personal pre-existence when they are all in harmony with this position. John 1:1—"In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God," or God's, as the original gives it. This proves too much as it plainly says the word (of promise), and what was this word of promise? The seed of the woman (Mary) shall bruise the serpents head. As you know this was in the beginning in Eden, and this promise was not fulfilled until the word became flesh, when Christ was born in Bethlehem.

If some one gives you a note properly endorsed, do you not regard it the same as cash? Just so with God's word of promise. When he promised us a Savior in the beginning by giving us his word, it was just as sure as if Christ actually existed.

1 John 1, 1 gives the same meaning except that "word of life" is used instead of "word," John 9. 56-58—Before Abraham was I am, is another, and just as harmonious with the truth as the others. Christ's future life, or immortal life was before Abraham's, as Abraham was spiritually dead until he obtained it through the promised Christ. He looked forward to the promised Savior, as we look back. Abraham has not received eternal life even yet, and will not until the resurrection, as we are told in Heb. 11:39. Now all this list of ancient worthies are asleep with him, and all who have died since, "that they without us should not be made perfect." Verse 40.

Rev. 22:12 says:—"And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Orthodoxy cannot be correct if this is so, as they teach that the reward is obtained at death. They make a resurrection useless. Also Verse 16:—"I am the root and the offspring of David." He was the root when he became the author of David's salvation; that is, David believed God's promise of a Savior who would at the appointed time be manifested on earth, and at his birth of David's daughter, became his offspring.

In Col. 1:16-17 the word "by" is translated incorrectly: it should be "on account of," which makes it harmonize with all other texts. Verse 26 shows that God did not intend this mystery to be manifested to any but his saints, who are to go with Christ in the regeneration. Matt. 19:28.

Now do you mean to say it is good reasoning to put, at most, half a dozen texts that seem to teach it, over against such a mass of testimony telling even the nation, tribe and family from which he should descend? Queer testimony if he were in heaven knowing all that Scripture records of him before birth. The type pointed to a future Christ, not one already in existence, as an immortal being.

If you have a concordance or Bible with a subject index, look up all the prophecies relating to Christ, and if you find any that say he was in heaven before his crucifixion, I will give up

I have called you attention to Col 1:16-17. The word by is an incorrect translation; it should be on account of. Since Christ is the pivot; in the beginning as a promise, this language is none too strong. If God had not planned a Christ to appear at the proper time, all the rest would not have been done, as far as this world is concerned. 1 Cor. 15:21. "For since by man came death, by man Christ came also the resurrection of the dead." Does this sound like he had been a heavenly being? Even while Christ was on earth this was a disputed question. He asks in Matt. 16:15, "But whom say ye that I am?" When Peter said, "Thou are the Christ, the son of God," Jesus answered, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar Jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven."

Another passage says: No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. 1 Cor. 12:3.

St. Louis, Mo. Gertrude Logan.

HENRY GEORGE ON MOSES.

I was very much interested in the pamphlet you sent me entitled "Moses", by Henry George. The author rises well to the situation in many respects, more especially in regard to the appreciation of the Moses code as the foundation of a commonwealth whose ideal is was that every man would sit under his vine and fig tree, none daring to make him afraid, as limiting the power of oppression of wealth, preventing "land-grabbing" and instituting one day of rest in seven—The dominant idea being to live and let live. Some passages in the book are particularly excellent, and the peroration towers up splendidly into the poetical, although concluding somewhat in the mythical, as most poetry usually does. Mr. George is a man and a brother in this regard, for one common humanity at the bounds of reason, steps easily and gently into the realm of myth. This is nicely illustrated on page 23, where he says: "To me it (life) seems intelligible only as the avenue and vestibule of another life, and its facts seem explainable only upon a theory which cannot be expressed but in myth and symbol." Now, why should the facts of life require myth and symbols to express them any more than the principles of taxation for instance. Why should the facts in connection with human life require discrimination so much more than the lives of all the other living things that people the universe? As a matter of fact, there is no necessity for any such magnificent difference. The facts of life and death are few, simple and real. The source of life is mysterious, we all realize, but it is not any more so in the human family than in all the other nations of the field and wood, whose lives we dispose of so readily for our support, or terminate so sweepingly for our comfort. Mutton is cheap enough, and ten cents a quart was given in Baltimore for flies this season, and many a dollars worth was bought in. When this general fact in regard to life is once understood and gets its proper value, then we can begin to understand some other things, but the mere valuation of a human person, because of his life, is an insanity of thought that simply cannot be argued with, and leads directly and inevitably to the Buddism and Iamism of the Orient, where cows and monkeys are divine and vermin are held sacred. But cut all such rubbish out and begin over again where Moses began, and one has a fair chance to learn something.

That Moses did not stumble into this Oriental quagmire is one of the wonderful things that Mr. George doesn't take into account, although he observes other wonderful things—but nothing is stronger proof of the inspiration of such a man (p. 16) as Moses, than the fact that he carefully ignored the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, a slough of stupidity with which all other nations have wallowed from antiquity until now, into which old Mother Rome dragged what was left of Christianity, when she found it, and into which Mr. George toppled when he concludes his "Progress and Poverty" with a quotation from Plutarch, (as superstitious a heathen as ever put himself on record), and on the same page mixes up Moses and the prophets with Zanda, Vestas, Vedas, Dhammapadas, Koran and Christ—which all sounds largely learned and largely liberal, but really shows a lack of discrimination that is roundly reprehensible after what he has said of the superior position of Moses on the land question and the question of human rights. When one investigates the questions treated in the Hebrew Scriptures still more marked is the difference and a "great gulf fixed" separates them from the esoteric doctrines of the old philosophers, as well as the grotesque religious and dogmatic constitutions of ecumenical councils of which Mr. George complains.

The one divine revelation through the Hebrew race, from Moses to the last of the apostles, is that God alone is the source of life, and that on his volition all things depend. He is the linked sequence of the uiverse. All other faiths link themselves somehow round some sort of system that is dependent either on the indestructability of life, as life, in common with all other animals, as in Buddism, or by virtue of being human, life is thereby inherent and imperishable, as held by Remanists, Protestants and others.

The Hebrew ideal is thus entirely different, and is founded on individual selection from among the human family, by the only one who is capable of judging rightly, having all data at command. In the Hebrew Scripture laws are given, politics and history are discussed incidentally, but the real gist and crown of all is that "the just shall live by faith."

Baltimore, Md. I. F. Gelletly.

"SHALL NEVER DIE"

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." John 11:26.

That Jesus meant just what he said in this expression no one can deny, because there is no figure or symbol in this language; but that he did not mean that whosoever believeth at that time should never die is also just as certain, because he taught very clearly that those who believed on him then he would "raise up at the last day," (John 6:40) showing that they would be in the death state, in the grave, at his second coming, and he also told his apostles that he would come again and receive them unto himself (John 14:3) showing that they would not go to be with him until he comes again to raise them up from their sleep in death and gives them everlasting life. Paul also said to the Corinthians, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 22, 23. Paul shows here that all who are of the Adamic race (that includes everybody) must die, but all who are in Christ (that includes all who are Christ's by faith and obedience) will be made alive again at his coming.

If Jesus meant that those who believed on him then should never die, it makes the Bible contradictory, and it would be false, so we know that he did not refer to that time nor now. Reason also shows that he did not mean then, because when he said "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live," he spoke of a future time, "were dead" being in the past from the time of which he speaks, and if they believed on him then or since, they must have believed before they died, and would not be dead if it so be that whosoever believeth (then or before the coming of Christ) and liveth shall never die.

Some people believe that the death that God meant when he said to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die," was of the body only, and that Paul meant the body only when he said "As in Adam all die," and that Jesus meant that the real man, the conscious entity, which they think is the spirit, shall never die, but is released from the body, or undergoes a transition from a fleshly being to a spiritual being.

This theory can not be true for many reasons. First. To claim that a person can exist in a conscious and recognizable condition without a form or body is too absurd for intelligent people to consider, because nothing can be seen to be recognized, even by objects of like nature, unless it consists of visible substance, whether material or spiritual body which can be seen by another spiritual body. What I mean here is, the spirits of people can not exist as rational beings unless they are substance or bodies.

Second. If the conscious entity is the responsible ego, the person himself (and it is) then he can not be dead and be living at the same time; and to claim that the death of the fleshly body only, and not of the person himself is the death that God meant when he said, "thou shalt surely die," is adding to his word and perverting his meaning. "Add thou not unto his word lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar." Prov. 30:6.

Third. To claim that there are no dead saints who died after the resurrection of Christ is to contradict St. John and the Spirit. John, the Revelator said, "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their words do follow them." Rev. 14:13. This shows clearly that believers would continue to die after St. John heard this voice.

Fourth. To claim that the dead saints are conscious, think, and know, is to contradict David, who said their thoughts perish. (Psa. 146:4.) and Solomon, who said the dead know not anything. Eccl. 9:5.

Fifth. To claim that when the body of the saint dies he does not really die, but that this is the second coming of Christ to him, and that he then undergoes his change or is resurrected into a spiritual body, is to contradict Paul, who said, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4:16, 17. So you see, dear reader, that when Christ comes, the dead in Christ are raised first, then the living believers are changed and are caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. This event has not occurred yet.

Jesus did not mean that those who believed and lived then or now should never die, but those who believe and live when he comes at the resurrection. He was talking to Martha about the resurrection at the last day when he said "He that believeth on me, though he were dead (at the time when he comes) yet shall he live, and whosoever believeth and liveth (when he comes) shall never die." Paul explains this saying, "We shall not all sleep (die) but we shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; or the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (saints who are alive at that time) shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51, 52.

F. M. Howell,
Northrup, Ohio.

OHIO CONFFRENCE WORK.

One year ago at the Conference held in Cleveland a rule was adopted by which churches of the state were thereafter to pay for any special services of an evangelist coming to hold meetings with them, instead of such services being paid from the evangelist fund as formerly.

Thus, the money collected for this fund was made available for evangelistic work in the open field only, that is where there was no church organization. Besides this change, the evangelist was not hired on a yearly basis, but only paid for time spent in the work.

The work for the past year has been blessed and has been highly satisfactory to the brethren. There is a bright outlook for some good work in several places where Bro. Robison has broken the ground.

And while the last year's arrangement has been very satisfactory, there was still found room for improvement, a step in advance of the one taken at the previous conference in Cleveland.

It has been the rule in previous years (and also was this year) to supply money needed to defray conference expenses from the evangelistic fund. In other words, there was always necessity to draw upon the evangelistic fund to make up the difference of expenses over receipts.

To avoid this necessity and to reserve the evangelist fund for strictly evangelistic work, it was resolved at the Ohio conference at Troy recently to assess each male member one dollar per year and each female member fifty cents per year, as conference dues; this fund to be kept separate for the purpose of paying conference expenses.

From the enthusiasm which signalized every part of the work at Troy we can forecast a prosperous year ahead of the Ohio brethren.

This explanation is made so that there will be no misunderstanding or confusion as to the purpose of two separate funds; and we feel confident that none will feel that it is in any sense an imposition, but rather another opportunity to assist in a good work.

I might say a great deal about the rich program provided by Bro. Alonzo Adams, Bro. Huggins, Bro. Robison and others, but that will doubtless fall to the lot of others who were at all the meetings; but one thing I will say, namely: A number of those who always attend the conferences said that it was the best conference yet—and none seemed inclined to disagree with that sentiment. Brethren, now is the time to resolve not to miss the next one.

CHAS. A. GOSS,
Chairman Con. Com.
Cleveland, Ohio.

MICHIGAN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

Important Business Demands Large Delegation

To the brethren scattered thruout the state of Michigan, greetings:

The Michigan Quarterly Conference of the Church of God will convene at Millbrook, Sept. 22 to 24, inclusive. Millbrook can be reached from Grand Rapids on the Pere Marquette R. R., changing at Edmore.

An extra large delegation is desired as there is very important business to be transacted. The subject of where the next yearly conference and Bible school is to be held will come up at this meeting.

Therefore it is necessary that as many of the brethren as possible be present from all parts of the state that the most central and convenient place for all may be decided on. Come and give your aid in this the Master's work. Encourage the Millbrook brethren by your presence.

"Work while it is day, for soon the night cometh when no man can work." At that night will our work be done? Stop, consider. Let us, while living in these last trying days, be diligent in doing our Savior's bidding that when He comes He will find us watching and waiting.

Your sister in Christ, looking for our coming King.

ROSE MILLER, Secy.
Adrian, Mich.

AIR SHIPS

I had the privilege of attending the aviation meet held in Chicago. A strange sight it was, indeed, to see a great flock of winged monsters navigating the air like so many birds, flying upward, downward, on the level, or swinging a circle at will.

As I witnessed their contest with each other, I thought of what a dreadful thing they may become if they should carry and drop explosives on an enemy in case of war.

On Thursday, Aug. 17, a trial was made. The Chicago Examiner said:

"A battleship, outlined in whitewash in Grant Park was completely annihilated yesterday during the bomb throwing contest of the sixth day of the aviation meet.

Sixty-eight of the death dealing missiles not only destroyed the ship, but had a score of the modern fighters been anchored about, they also would have been destroyed fifty times over.

In a day the rules of modern warefare have been made obsolete and a new factor must henceforth be reckoned with. Even the most experienced flyers found no be fatal damage."

difficulty in causing what would

Many ships which dropped the imaginary explosives missed the mark. Accuracy of aim will have to come by practice. It is a factor, however, which will have to be reckoned with in future warfare.

The mighty men of war are awake. How is it with the slumbering virgins? Awake! There is a great day coming.

Chicago, Ill. W. H. WILSON.

Are You
helping to get the 500 New Subscribers?
See Last Page

OBITUARY

Sister Stevenson died at her home near Glen Alice, Roane Co., Tenn., leaving a husband and seven children, the oldest a 14-year-old invalid daughter and the youngest but two weeks old.

Bro. Stevenson has the sympathy of all the church that know him. Sister Stevenson was taken to Clyde, Haywood county, N. C., for burial, that being her childhood home. The writer spoke words of comfort and hope from 1 Cor. 15 and Titus 2-13, and we laid her to rest and await the call.

J. W. GOOD.
Rockwood, Tenn.

Lydia Emeline Jackson was born near Lebanon, Boon county, Ind., July 10th, 1831, and died on August 6th, 1911, age 80 years and 26 days. She was married to Amias Davis, Aug. 20th, 1846. Four children were born to this union, namely; Mrs. Sarah Margaret Smith, Willard Davis, Joseph Davis and Mrs. Rosa Grant, of which only two survive. She was preceded by her husband, her daughter Sarah Margaret and son Joseph. She united with the Church of God about 20 years ago and has lived a faithful member the rest of her life. She spent the early part of her life in Indiana, moving to Cowley county, Kan., in 1879, near Oxford, where she lived until seven years ago. She moved to near Udall, Kansas. Her grand daughter, Emma Smith has lived with her and has been her faithful, loving and only companion for six years.

She leaves 10 grandchildren, namely: Emma Smith, Mrs. Viola Beamer, of Cambridge, Kansas; Mrs. Lillie Lucas, near Woodward Okla.; Oda Smith, near Elk, Kansas, Lula Davis, Arlene Davis, Adelaide Davis, James A. Davis, Gladys Grant and Sylvia Grant. She leaves one brother, Uncle Thomas Jackson, of Lipton, Okla., and three sisters, Amanda Dale, of Jamestown, Ind., Mrs. Sarah Linsey, Indianapolis, Ind., Mrs. Mary Lewis, of Paul's Valley, Okla. Her children and grandchildren were all present at her bed side except two grandchildren. Funeral was preached by H. M. Williams, of Ashton, Kansas, from Job 14-14.

H. M. WILLIAMS.

Who will chide us while we're weeping.
For our brother's gone to sleep.
He is resting, sweetly resting,
And the Lord his dust will keep.
All the trials and the sorrows
Of his two score years and more
He has laid aside his burdens,
All his troubles now are o'er.
Who will chide us while we're weeping?
For we miss him everywhere.
At our home and at our meeting,
We see his empty chair;
But he's sleeping, sweetly sleeping,
Free from every toil and pain.
With the seal of God upon him.
By and by he'll live again.
Who will chide us while we're weeping?
For the Brother that is gone?
He is sleeping, sweetly sleeping.
Waiting for the Lord to come.
In the resurrection morning
He will hear the angel call.
Then is when we hope to meet him
In the kingdom one and all.

Reuben Elton, oldest son of the late Jacob and Elizabeth Elton, died July 12, 1911, aged forty-nine years, three months and twenty-nine days, after an illness with apoplexy lasting but three and one-half hours. He leaves a wife, three sisters five brothers (his parents having both preceded him to the grave) and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

Brother Reuben was born in Collinwood Ohio, March 13, 1862. He came to Omaha, Neb., with his parents in March, 1870, where he grew to manhood and made his home since with the exception of about nine years, which he spent in the drug business in the north and west, Lead, S. Dakota, Collinstown, Utah, and Malad, Idaho. He was raised a believer in the Abrahamic faith and on Dec. 7, 1889, he with three brothers and three sisters, was baptized into the all saving Name (in which he lived till his death) by his uncle, the late George Elton, of Collinwood, Ohio.

We found it hard to give him up, yet we mourn not as those without hope, for we firmly believe that he will rise again on that blessed resurrection morning, clothed with immortality to inherit the kingdom promised by our Savior.

The esteem and respect in which our brother was held was shown by the beautiful flowers—the emblems of love (which covered the casket and nearly filled one side of the room in which the casket stood), and also the kind friends who were too numerous to be able to get into the home in which the funeral was held.

We laid our dear brother away in the beautiful Forest Lawn cemetery to peacefully sleep until Jesus shall come, and awaken the faithful from their dreamless slumber and clothe them with immortality. May that time quickly come is the prayer of Reuben's sister and your sister in Christ.

Mrs. Emeline Elton Davis,
3304 Taylor Street, Omaha, Neb.

THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF ORTHODOX CHRISTIANITY.

No. 1.

All orthodox Christians will claim that their religion is founded on the teachings of Jesus the Christ and his apostles; that they teach none other things than the apostles taugh; but such is very far from being the case, as the scriptures, history and many facts clearly prove. One of the most important and fundamental of all the orthodox doctrines is the inherent immortality of the soul, or spirit, for these two words are almost always used by orthodox Christians as synonimous terms; but the scriptures do not use them as such. The following quotations from Bible vs. Tradition, by Aaron Ellis will make this plain, and no Hebrew or Greek scholar can deny the truth of these statements: The Hebrew word nephesh of the Old Testament occurs about seven hundred times, and is rendered soul four hundred times; life and living about one hundred and fifty times; and the same word is also rendered a man, a person, self, thy, me, him, any one, breath, heart, mind, appetite, the body (dead or alive), lust, creature and even a beast; for it is twenty-eight times applied to beasts, and to every creeping thing.

The Greek word psuche of the New Testament corresponds with the word nephesh of the old. It occurs one hundred and five times and is rendered soul, fifty-nine times, and life forty times. The same word is also rendered mind, us, you, heart, hearty, and is twice applied to the beasts that perish. Professor Driver of Oxford university says, writing of Gen. 1:21, "A soul on the psychology of the Hebrews is not peculiar to man; it is the principle of life, sensibility in any animal organism. The rendering creature obliterates distictive characteristic of Hebrew thought. Here the term denotes all kinds of aquatic organisms, including even the lowest.

The words rendered spirit in the Old Testament are ruach and neshania, but ruach is likewise rendered wind, air, breath, blast, blow, anger, courage, vain, do. The word pneuma in the Greek is used by the sacred writers as an equivalent of ruach; it is translated spirit, ghost and wind; but it is never used as an equivalent of the words translated soul, so that these words no matter how much they are used in orthodox phraseology as synonimous terms are not so used by the writers of the scriptures. The belief, however, in the natural immortality of man, while not found in the scriptures, can be traced back to very early times, as I will presently show; but the scriptures are opposed to such an idea from Genesis to Revelation, as a few quotations will show. In the third chapter of Genesis, ver. 19, God says to Adam after he had transgressed: "In the sweat of the face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." To prevent him from eating of the tree of life, he drove out the man and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden the cherubim, and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the tree of life." And this was done according to orthodox teaching, to prevent an inherently immortal being from getting at the tree of life. The Scriptures are all in harmony with the idea, that by one man's sin death entered into the world. Gen. 5, 5. "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years, and he died." Is. 6, 5. For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave (sheol, the word often rendered hell), who shall give thee thanks." Ps. 115-17. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 12, 6, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son af man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Eccl. 9, 5, "For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything." Hezekiah says, "For the grave (sheol) cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth." In John 5, 40 Christ says to his contemporaries, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life. John 1, 25. "Jesus said unto Martha, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me though he were dead, yet shall he live." The hope of the early Christian was in the resurrection of the dead. Paul says, 1 Cor. 15, 16, 18, "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins; then they also who are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

In view of such scriptural statements and very many more that could be adduced to the same effect, it seems rather extraordinary that millions of people claiming to be followers of Christ and his apostles, should derive their maindoctrine of their faith from heathen philosophers. A good illustration of the popular belief occurs in Everybody's Magazine for August, the article is by William Hanna Thomson, M. D., L.L. D., and is entitled "Life, Death and Immortality." He says: The belief in immortality is instinctive with us all, and when the kind of immortality which the Judean preached was understood, the appeal became all prevailing." This statement shows how men can have their minds twisted most outrageously by pre-conceived opinions. We have seen that the life which men can attain to in a future state is only by and thru the Lord Jesus, the Christ, and that there can be no eternal life attained by man in any other way. 1 Cor. 15, 22, "For as in Adam, all die; even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

As for the belief in immortality being instictive as this writer asserts, the use of the word in such a connection is simply absurd. Webster's dictionary says instinct is a certain power or disposition of mind, by which independent of all instructions or experience, with deliberation animals all unerringly directed to do spontaneously to do what ever is necessary for the preservation of the individual; such in the human species is the instinct of such is exerted immediately after death, etc. The belief in human immortality does not come under such a designation. When one goes outside of the scriptures to prove natural human immortality, it simply becomes a question of how far can human research be trusted to decide such a question. It generally has been asserted by priests in all ages, that they have the means of deciding this most important question. William James, Professor of philosophy at Harvard university writes: "How can we believe in life hereafter, when science has once for all attained to proving beyond possibility of escape, that our inner life is a function of that famous material, the so-called gray matter of our cerebral convolutions. How can the function possibly persist after its organ has undergone decay?

It is indeed true that physiological science has come to the conclusion cited; and we must confess that in so doing she has only carried a little further the common belief of mankind. Everyone knows that arrest of brain development occasions imbecility, that blows on the head abolish memory or consciousness, and that brain stimulants and poisons change the quality of our ideas, etc." so that science instead of proving the natural immortality of man proves the reverse; eternal life only comes through Christ.

St. Catherines, Ont., Canada.
Dr. Wallace Mason.

GOLD DUST

"A man who lives right and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words."

"Misunderstandings and neglect cause more mischief in the world than even malice and wickedness."

"No single great deed is comparable for a moment to the multitude of little gentlenesses performed by those who can scatter happiness on every side and strew all life with hope and good cheer."

"Amid the tireless breakers of the billows on the shores of experience, there is no surer anchorage than a friendship that beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth al lthings."

"Love is the purification of the heart from self; it strengthens and ennobles the character, gives higher motives and a nobler aim to every action of life, and makes both man and woman strong, noble and courageous."

Dixon, Ill. ANNA DREW

CORN SHEAVES.

Gathered From Everywhere.

A Faithless World.—Another change more important than any of these, in Protestant countries, would be the reduction of the Bible to the rank of an historical and literary curiosity. Nothing (as we all recognize) but the supreme religious importance attached to the Hebrew Scriptures could have forced any book into the unique position which the Bible has now held for three centuries in English and Scottish education. Even that held by the Koran throughout Islam is far less remarkable, inasmuch as the latter (immeasurably inferior though it be) is the supreme work of the national literature, whereas we have adopted the literature of an alien race. All the golden fruit which the English intellect has borne from Shakespeare downwards may be said to have grown on this priceless Semitic graft upon the Aryan stem.

The Charity of Science.—The truth is that the charity of science is not merely different from that of the charity of religion; it is an opposite thing altogether. Its softest word is vae Victis! Christianity (and like it I should hope every possible form of future religion) says, The strong ought to bear the burdens of the weak. Blessed are the merciful, the unselfish, the tender hearted, the humble-minded. Science says: "The supreme law of nature is the survival of the fittest; and the law, applied to human morals, means the remorseless crushing down of the unfit. The strong and the gifted shall inherit the earth, and the weak and simple go to the wall. Blessed are the merciless, for they shall obtain useful knowledge. Blessed are the self-asserting, for theirs is the kingdom of this world, and there is no world after it." These morals of evolution are beginning gradually to make their way, and to be stated (of course in veiled and modest language) frequently by those priests of science, the physiologiste should they ever obtain general acceptance, and Darwinian morality take the place of the sermon on the mount, the old droit du plus fort of barbarous ages will be revived with more deliberate oppression, and the last state of our civilization will be worse than the first.

Manager's Column

This is going to be another talk about getting new subscribers. Most of us didn't seem to take the talk of two weeks ago seriously. At least you wouldn't think so by the results obtained. We did get some names, it is true, but the number was so small that I'm a little bit ashamed to give it as the combined efforts of some three or four thousand earnest readers of this paper. Why, I know of a boy who rode a very many years ago around and in less than two weeks time secured in order to earn a bicycle, more new subscribers for a small paper than the combined mailing of this paper has received, and I bet it didn't ride after school hours at that. Of course he had a bicycle to ride, I admit that, but he had to work for it. And maybe right here is the point. All of us do not take a personal interest in the welfare of the Restitution. Since the paper has been turned over to the church every member should feel that he has a personal interest in it. It belongs to the community and those who have given financial aid to put it there and those who are doing the work incidental to the publishing of the paper to keep it there are but doing so for the common good.

Don't you think its up to YOU to do what YOU can to help. To hundreds of readers the visits of The Restitution has to take the place of weekly assembling together with others of like precious faith, which some of us enjoy. It is the means of binding us together; it is the means of keeping in communication with each other; it brings words of instruction, of comfort and cheer and in many other ways its work for the brethren is invaluable.

Seeing then the importance of supporting it as individuals let us each turn to and do what we can. It will be an easy proposition to give this paper a permanent income if we can secure a larger mailing list and it will be easy to get the larger list of subscribers if YOU will do YOUR part to help get them. Ask every brother you meet to become a subscriber; ask your neighbors and friends, and don't let them get away till they subscribe.

We can't give bicycles to all of you, but to every brother or sister who will send us in two new names we will send in addition to the regular premium something you appreciate far more. Now lets start all over again and not stop till we have secured the balance of the five hundred new subscribers. Send for sample copies if you can use them.

This is the start of a real campaign for new subscribers and you will be kept posted each week as to how we are winning out.

THE MANAGER.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Thos Glover $3.00
D. B. Wilson 3.00

Here is my work to do, not to worry over. My work, I say, but if I can know that it is not my work, but God's, should I not cast away my restlessness, even while I worked on more faithfully and untiringly than ever?—Phillips Brooks.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and 4 cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Reagion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age 16 Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

40 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 40 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Poptular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER,

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 65 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN THE RESTITUTION

RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 238 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American,

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts whetever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) and the exaltation with Him in the government of the world (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the world (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisite to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 3; 3:18); and all other truths of "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12, 28:23, 31).

foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of—
Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 20, 1911 No. 36

CANAAN.

Tune America.

Fair Canaan, land of rest,
Home of the pure and blest,
Thy name I love.
Fair Canaan, land of light,
Land where there is no night,
Home of the robed in white,
'Tis thee I love.

Blest Beulah, married land,
The pure and good shall stand,
Within thy walls;
No sin shall enter there,
Nor pain, nor want, nor care,
Oh, land beyond compare!
Of thee we tell.

For there is life's fair tree,
'Tis there we'll Jesus see,
And with him reign.
'Tis there we'll meet again,
Those who in death have lain,
And shout the victory gained
O'er death and sin.

Loved Zion, glorious home,
We watch, and wait, and long,
For that blest day,
When God's name all shall fear,
His laws obey with care,
Oh, age, beyond compare,
For thee we pray.

The light begins to dawn,
We're nearing home sweet home,
Lord Jesus come.
We long thy face to see,
From sin to be made free,
The world has need of thee,
Come, quickly come!

LILLI H. WILLIS.

Galva, Ill.

THOU SHALT NOT SURELY DIE.

A Sermon by the Late Brother M. Joblin.

"Thou Shalt Not Surely Die."—Gen. 3:4.

The question we propose to discuss is a very important one. To me it contains the very key of truth.

Do the scriptures of truth teach the natural immortal of man? If they do, and we wish to consult our own interests, and God's glory, we should believe it with all our hearts. If they do not teach it, we have the same interests at stake, and must be bold to reject it as spurious. The word declares that that which is revealed belongs to man, and in this investigation I shall not try to pry into the secret things that belong to God; but to profit by that which is spoken is revealed. I shall use no sarcastic remarks toward those who, like me, were taught from earliest recollection to believe in man's immortal nature. I shall endeavor to speak the truth in love. But I most sincerely hope for your calm earnest attention. Do not be alarmed if you hear something that are strange, and in the light of your educational conscience, appear like untruths, for I hope to establish every position by the unerring Word. To the law and the testimony, if I speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in me.

I shall therefore, as it were, stand behind the scenery, and only help to move on the machinery—that a panoramic view of God's benign purpose may pass before you.

To proceed then, we will commence

Where God Commences.

to tell us what man is. Man himself may talk till doom's day to me about his immortality, but if he knows any thing of man—of his formation—of his origin—of his destiny—of his creator, where did he get his information from but the Word of God? And if he has learned such an important doctrine from the Scripture, I ask him to point out a "thus saith the Lord," that I, too, may see and believe. I think he should stand as the apostle enjoins, "ready to give the reason of the hope that is in him with meekness and fear."

Recollect the circumstances God placed man in circumstances of his own character. But says one, "was he not created righteous?" By no means, for while he was without sin, he was also without righteousness. He was just as God created him—that is, capable of choosing right to the rejection of wrong. If he had done so he would have had a righteous character, as he did not do it, he became positively unrighteous. God told him the consequences, the devil contradicted him in the word of the text. Here is the word of God and the devil in juxtaposition; which shall we believe? But before you decide positively, I wish to say that the testimony of the latter has been called in question by one whose own character is unimpeachable. Yes, by one whom God appointed to destroy this devil or evil. Yes, dear friends, by one from whom the most ineffable beauty of character constantly flowed. By one, who on coming out of the water at his Baptism, the Holy Spirit descended in the shape of a dove; and of whom a voice from heaven said, "this is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased." Why friends, this was the loveliest being that ever trod our earth in mortal flesh. Will you take his testimony? Oh, do take it; no guile was ever found in his mouth! No such thing as malice, or revenge, was ever manifested by him; for even when dying as the just for the unjust, he prayed "Father forgive them for they know what they do," for his enemies.

You cannot refuse the testimony of such a witness! But if you still have doubt, I will add further proof of the respect due to this witness. In fulfillment of his own word, the great Jehovah raised him from the dead, and allowed five hundred and more witnesses to identify him as the same Jesus who went about among the hills of Judea preaching "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." After this he ascended to heaven, and is now exalted at the right hand of the Lord, God Almighty. Has a name which is above every name—is heir of the world, and at the appointed time he will come forth in his majesty, arrest the arch usurper—roll back the curse that for 6,000 years has darkened our ball. Are you not prepared to listen to his testimony? Are you not prepared to listen to his testimony, I say? If you are, turn with me to John 8:43-44. There is a character for you! Now we see the author of our text in a true light. It says he is

A Murderer.

And friends, I must have better authority than this before I believe that man did not die after he ate of the forbidden fruit.

But, says an objection, I always believed that man's body died at least, in consequence of his guilt, but he certainly died a spiritual death the very day he ate for God said he should. Very well, but it is not exactly in harmony with the Scripture. I shall take the liberty to show a few discrepancies. In the first place, you make it appear that God was not addressing the whole man, when he said, "in the day thou eatest thereof, thou shal surely die," or dying, thou shalt die, as it reads in the margin, but think I can show to the contrary. Please turn to Gen. 2:7. Notice particularly the wording of the text: "Man was formed dust of the ground." You observe he was not existing yet. The whole machinery was complete; man was formed—remember that—but there appears no motive power—no vitalizing agency. What was necessary? The word says: "God breathed into his nostrils the breath of his life, and he became a living soul." This implies that he was a dead soul or person before; because the primary meaning of the word soul is person. He became a living person. Refer to the 19th verse and you will see it was the man, the whole man—that was formed dust—vitalized by the breath of life, that was commanded not to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Not the slightest intimation yet of any mysterious entity; and we find in the 19th verse of the 3rd chapter, that God addresses the same unit of a man. No one claims that it would be sensible to tell a man's immortal soul not to eat of a tree. No one claims it to be reasonable for a man's soul to hearken to his wife; for it is well known the ear is the [illegible] through which sound comes; and yet they will persist that body knows nothing, but that was the mind, or immortal part that was addressed.

But look again: The 19th verse proves beyond almost I was going to say, beyond controversy but it is controverted that the being formed dust was the one that sinned, and the one that was to die in consequence.

"Dust thou art!" Who was the thou here addressed? It was Adam! and unto dust thou shalt return! What was the person here addressed as thou, to return to dust for? Why he had listened to his wife with his ear formed of dust, and with the hand formed of dust, took of the forbidden fruit, and ate it with the mouth formed of dust, and now the whole person has got to go back again to dust because of his sin of disobedience.

But I think the objector will see that if the mind, or the part which he alleges to be immortal, was the part addressed by God, the sentence never could be executed! And this lie of the devil would be true! Because that which is immortal cannot die—its a contradiction of terms! Again, why punish the body by sweating and toiling for his bread, and then send him back to dust for what it could not help?

Once more I would refer to this interesting scripture in Gen. 3:22, 24. There, dear friends, is the first act of mercy to fallen man! To cut him off from the tree of life—what for? Why he was jealous of his word. He had said man should die if he ate of that tree—the serpent had said he should not: which is to be correct? Why God is jealous of his word! So he drove out the man from the tree that would perpetuate his existence if he had access to it. But still further we see mercy not to allow man to [illegible] come immortal in sin—out of harmony with God, and consequently in a suffering state.

But lest any should still think that the breathed breath into man was the immortal part, or anything more than the agency that sets all the breathing creation in motion, I will direct your attention to Ecclesiastes 3:18, 19, 20. This should, I think, forever settle in one's mind the great fact that man is a unit, not two, an outside and an inside man. "They all go to one place," that is, the grave—to the dust. Oh! says one "You will make us out to be no better than the brute creation by your course of reasoning—I don't believe a word of it!" Stop friend while I deny in toto the charge, and prove from the same scripture, man's capabilities to become an immortal, undying and glorious being. I have often heard the cry of infidel, etc., from those who neglect to search and see for themselves what is taught on this subject, but believe so and so, because it is told them. I sincerely hope that this matter will be seriously examined by all who have never done so.

We saw that Adam was cut off from the tree of life—to dust he came, and would, with all his numerous progeny, have been forever as though they had not been, if, if what? If a new way of life had not been provided. It was embodied in the solitary promise that the seed of the woman should

Bruise the Serpent's Head

In the lapse of time God was pleased to confirm and enlarge on this promise to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and David. The poet Prophet Isaiah sang sweetly of this great Deliverer and of the life and blessings to come through him, and even the weeping prophet tuned his lyre and sang triumphantly in advance of the branch of righteousness that was to arise. At the appointed time, lo! he heard angels sing the song of peace, good will to man—the star walked on in its majesty and brightness to mark the place where Jesus lay and a was granted to the world. What need of a Savior? Why man had sinned and died—there was no way out of the tomb; hence we find this same Jesus who was crucified, broke the bars of death asunder, and brought life an dimmortality to light. He is further said to be the first fruits of them that slept. Did you never feel puzzled while reading Paul's account of the prophets and apostles and worthies in Heb. 11? who he says has not received the promise, because they are to be made perfect with all the faithful of all ages! when they at that time had been dead for hundreds of years? If the popular theory be true, it is not strange to read in Acts 2: that David had not then ascended to heaven, but his grave was with them at that day?

Prince and a Savior

If the theory of the immortality of the soul be true, how absurd to think that such a verse as the 7th of Rom. 2, should have crept in! There we read that those who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor, and immortality, shall be rewarded with eternal life! Why seek for that which we already have. If we had not the truths on this subject, why does Job say that the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction to be punished? Where are they reserved? Let him answer for himself. "If I wait the grave is mine house," and another scripture reads, "The dead know not anything." "In death there is no remembrance of thee!" "The dead praise not the Lord." The wicked did not praise him while alive, therefore this must refer to the righteous dead! Here is positive proof that the righteous dead are not praising the Lord, and must of necessity have a resurrection to life, if the promises of God are ever made good to them. But the state of the wicked dead is also made clear in the oracles of God!

1st. The dead know not anything applies to both classes.

2nd. The wicked are reserved to the day of destruction as proven by Job and Peter! If they are reserved, they certainly are not punished at death, and not being punished at death, it is reasonable—more, it is binding on us, if we claim to believ in revelation at all, to say they are dead and know not anything.

Now let us turn to Job 14:11, 12, 14. Does any one holding the popular view presume to say that all Job has mention was of that inferior portion—that which in life is only a tenement for the man himself? I say it is without the least proof, man here, as before shown, is addressed as a unit. You can see by the 14th verse, that its the part that once lived that dies. Its the part that once lived and that once died—that is to live again. But, if I understand the popular theory correctly, the immortal part of that that lives; takes that away to exist in a separate state, and the body returns to dust. Now, in all candor, in all difference to your opinions, I say, just look this matter squarely in the face. See to what absurdity we reduce the subject, by taking such liberties with the word of God. We have that dying which never had any life—we have that which never had life and never died. living again, without the least proof from the context, that these are figurative scriptures.

But we were to prove that the wicked would wait in the grave for their reward. I would refer you to Prov. 11:31, the sinner is to be recompensed in the earth. Says one, "That's strange doctrine. Yes, friend, its really so!! But mark you! We have the particulars in another place where it says, they are not troubled in their life time like other men, and there are no bands in their death. Psa. 73. Now then we should be at a complete standstill without the word to enlighten us still further—and we find there is to be a resurrection of the just and the unjust, that these two classes may be recompensed. One is crowned with glory and honor—the other receives the wages of sin which is death.

(To be continued.)

WHAT OUGHT WE READ?

Only Good Literature, Chief Among Which is the Bible.

There is no question of more real value to the young people today than that of reading. I have read with much interest a magazine article written for the Ladies Home Journal, by Jerome K. Jerome. In that article he says a great many good things. Mr. Jerome suggests that we read to get rid of our brains; not to think but to save ourselves the trouble of thinking. The truth is, that books to be of any use—to be of any enjoyment even—must demand thought. Literature is essentially an appeal to the intellect, not to the emotions. Books are the speaking of mind to mind. A book either does good or it does harm. You can not divorce literature from life.

In my boyhood days I was much interested in the short articles written by Fannie Fern, and those written by James Parton. I had but little regard for romance. Ohio at that time had a school library, made up mostly of books of travel, history and biography. I read many of those books with pleasure and profit. One of our United States Senators was asked how he was able at all times to speak intelligently on all subjects. His answer was: "I never let a day pass that I do not commit to memory some good thought from some of our best writers." What an honor and pleasure to have spent a leisure hour with Longfellow, Whittier or Holmes! Yes, we may do still better, we may converse with them through their writings, which were produced during their study, and not leisure hours. In these days of books, magazines and libraries, we are compelled to choose the best and leave the rubbish. I observe that light reading prevails among both old and young. We are inclined to condemn publishers for furnishing such book. If we would cease reading them they would stop publishing them. They publish what the public demand. We are strengthened or weakened intellectually as we partake of the kind of food that weakens or strengthens us.

I met a young man whom I advised to read a book that I was interested in. After requesting and urging him I succeeded in getting him to read it. He stated afterward that that book and my talks along the line of reading, changed his whole life. He became interested in reading good literature and became a religious young man. Today he is one of our successful teachers. I have known high schools that were far advanced in mathematics and language, and other studies, where literature and civil government had never been taught. They were strangers to the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and the State of Ohio.

The most valuable book from which to glean is the Bible. Here you can get the most accurate history, the most beautiful poetry, and the most fascinating stories. The biographies of the ancients are instructive and interesting. If you have never become interested in the life of Noah, read it, and think about it. Think of how many jeers and scoffs were heaped upon him while he was building the Ark. We can imagine a thousand things that happened while he preached to them and warned them of the coming destruction. Take your pen and write the story out. It will do you good.

The story of Abraham should interest you. He was a strong character. Read the story of his slaughter of the kings; and the rescue of Lot and family. Note that he met Melchisidec, king of Salem, and priest of the most High God. See what Paul says of their order of the priesthood in Heb. 7. Connect it with the Eloah priest of Gen. 3:21. You have an everlasting priesthood to which you may belong if you are an overcomer. Their order it perpetuated through the Christ.

There is no more beautiful story written anywhere than that of Joseph. Follow him down into Egypt; how did he behave while there; how God protected him while there, and made him useful to the king who made him ruler, and next to him in the throne. Read the story of his brethren coming down into Egypt for bread and how he treated them. Read the speech of Reuben to Joseph, asking for the relief of Benjamin. Imagine their thoughts when Joseph made himself known to his brethren. The whole story becomes more interesting the oftener you read it. Do not forget the old father in his sorrow and rejoicing. Make their stories real things. Make them a part of your life.

Then you have the beautiful story of Esther and Ruth. Read these two stories and be strengthened by them. There is no literature like that of the Bible. If you want gems of poetry, you can get them in the Psalms. How beautiful is the 19, the 23, the 133, the 149 chapters. These are only a few. Don't only read them, but analyze the language. Make notes of the choice expressions found in each; commit them to memory. Read and study Proverbs. You will find in this book gems of thought more valuable than gold. Note this one and practice it: "A word fitly spaken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Imagine one of the masters painting such a picture. Don't make your mind a rubbish room when you have so many beautiful pictures to adorn it with. May our young people be benefited in reading good literature, is my prayer.

D. C. Robison,

Salem, Ohio.

Revenge generally hurts both the avenger and the sufferer. The foolish bee, which in its anger envenoms the flesh, loses its sting, and lives a drone ever after. True courage forgives a wrong and enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that it could do an injury, but disdains to do it.—Bishop Hall.

They trust not God at all who trust him not entirely; he that stands with one foot on a rock and another foot on the quicksand, will sink as surely as he that hath both feet on a quicksand.—Joseph Trapp.

Tying oranges on a Christmas tree does not make an orange tree of it. Nor do outside regulations and forms change the heart of a man. But let the gospel of grace and glory get into him to the very core and work out through, and he will be "a new creature" sooner or later—generally sooner than you think (2 Cor. 5:17-18); and if he continues to walk by that rule, peace will be on him and mercy.—Copp.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 503 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his indorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Sept. 20, 1911

EDITORIAL

Examine what is said: not the man who says it.

In China an imperial edict has cancelled all private concessions for railroads given before 1911. Conditions in the Province of Sze Chuen have become serious, because the edict has affected a road which was to be built in that part of the country. The ire of the natives has been aroused, shops and schools have been closed, payment of taxes has been refused, and serious disorders have resulted. United States warships were ordered there September 8, and they will join the formidable international array of warships that will guard the lives of foreigners in this unexpected crisis.

The press reported that Etna was pouring lava from four craters on September 12th. Eruptions from the main crater, the three lesser craters which have opened and the fourteen fresh fissures which now gape in the mountain side are said to be steadily increasing in violence, and the air in Catania is near unbreathable from the clouds of ashes. To the immense streams of lava which is flowing from the fissures there is added the terror and danger of earthquakes, which shake the mountain side at brief intervals. It is remarkable that Mt. Etna with its first eruption in B. C. 476 should become active in A. D. 1911, and contribute its part in calling attention to the signs of the times.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Brother Huggins:

My father, W. L. Skeels, and I made a trip to the Coast Range Mountains, to a point called Nashville, on the Corvallis & Eastern R. R. There was a basket dinner with two meetings, he spoke at 11 a. m. and in the afternoon. We were royally entertained by the brethren and friends with a very fine luncheon at the noon hour.

We had a very pleasant visit with Bro. Dan Pitzman and wife. It being the express wish of the people for more meetings to be held in the near future, an appointment was left for October 18, 1911.

Bro. A. W. Darby will occupy one hour and my father the other, with a basket dinner. We also expect a goodly number of the brethren from Corvallis to attend.

Yours sincerely,
S. R. SKEELS.

Fall City, Ore.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Inclosed please find P. O. order for which please credit me on subscription for The Restitution. And may the dear Lord grant you rich blessings. The paper is fine, and fills my heart with rejoicing. I send out every number I get; it must open the eyes of many. The print is so nice for old people to read. Do not get discouraged.

Yours in brotherly love,
H. ZIGENFUS.

Niles, Mich.

CORN SHEAVESS

Gathered From Every Where

Mistranslated Texts.—In Proverbs xi. 2, we read:—

"When pride cometh, then cometh shame,
But with the lowly is wisdom."

Now, that a contrastive parallelism was intended here by Solomon, is manifest from the structure of the verse. But in reading it as it stands in our version, we cannot help feeling that it is somewhat lame and halting contrast. We may read it in the "Bible twang" and think we understand it, but in what does the intended contrast consist. Between pride and lowliness, indeed, the contrast is evident. But between shame and wisdom the contrast is not so clear. Why not? Because the one is not the exact opposite of the other, and therefore the contrast breaks down. How then shall we arrive at the exact meaning and intended contrast of the writer? By bearing in mind that the Hebrew word for pride in this passage is derived from a root which means to swell, and "shame" from a word which denotes lightness emptiness, lowly, from a root which signifies to be chipped, smoothed, or fashioned by a hatchet, and wisdom from a word denoting solidity.—tGhochmah.]

Let us now combine these various meanings and the parallelism is complete, and the sense manifest. When swelling (pride) cometh, then cometh lightness. But with those who have been chipped (pruned by trial) there is solidity. The contrast being between lightness and solidity. Again in Proverbs xiv. 9, we read in the A. V.:

"Fools make a mock of sin,
But among the righteous there is favor."

Here the contrast is utterly lost. "Among the righteous there is favor." For what? For the fool? For his mockery? or favor for sin? Neither of these meanings is permissible. The latin vulgate is equally ambiguous:

"The fool will mock at sin,
And favor will linger among the righteous."

This flings no clearer or fuller light. The Septuagint differs in toto, both from Latin vulgate and authorized version, and renders it thus:

"The houses of transgressors will need expiation
But the houses of the just are acceptable."

Now this rendering, while it differs from the [illegible] versions referred to, introduces a doctrine into the verse utterly obnoxious to the universal teaching and doctrines of the Bible. For it teaches that transgressors need a sacrifice for sin, but that there are men in the world who, being just, need no such sacrifice. This rendering cannot therefore be admitted. But how did the idea of expiation, sacrifice, or atonement, get into the Septuagint rendering at all? Perhaps a literal translation of the Hebrew will answer this question, while at the same time it removes the difficulty from the verse as it stands, and makes clear the contrastive parallelism intended by the wise man:

"Fools mock at the offering for sin:
But the righteous regard it with delight."

The word used in this verse Ahsham is not the usual word for sin, which is ghat-tahth, but is the word used to describe the sin offering many times in Leviticus and elsewhere, and is rendered in Isaiah liii. 10, "when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin." Hence the idea of expiation in the Septuagint rendering, wrong as it is in other respects.

In Proverbs xviii. 8, the authorised version gives us a very singular statement:—

"The words of a talebearer are as wounds,
And they go down to the innermost parts of the belly."

The Latin Vulgate renders—

"The words of a double-tongued person are as it were simple, yet these very words penetrate even to the inner parts of the belly."

This same verse is repeated in chap. xxvi. 22, and there it is rendered by the Septuagint:—

"The words of cunning knaves are soft,
But they smite even to the inmost parts of the bowels."

Now let us pause here to look at the confusion introduced into this passage, by these various and contradictory renderings. (1) For "tale-bearer" in the Authorized Version we have a "double-tongued person" in the Latin Vulgate, and a "cunning knave" in the Septuagint. (2) For "words are as wounds," in the English, we have "words are simple" in the Latin, and "soft" in the Septuagint.

How shall we get out of this confusion, and really find out what Solomon meant? The best Hebraists of the day, combining with knowledge of the Hebrew, a knowledge of its cognate languages, the Arabic, Chaldee, etc., give the following, as the most correct rendering:—"The words of a talebearer (i. e., of a slanderer) are as delicious food, which goes down to the innermost parts of the stomach," that is, that the depravity of human nature is such that it sucks in slander and talebearing, as a hungry man does the choicest dainties of the table.

Rouchefoucault, the French moralist, referring, though in no condemnatory way, to this miserable fruit of human nature, says, "cynically, the best of us feel some sort of pleasure in hearing of the misfortunes, or failings of our friends."

FOUR HUNDRED SHOTS A MINUTE.

A new gun, whose use in the United States army, it is said, may mean the revolutionizing of even the most modern methods of war on land, and which for lightness, power and general effectiveness is said to be the most terribly destructive weapon ever invented, is now being secretly manufactured in the Springfield armory for Uncle Sam's use, says a Springfield, Mass., dispatch to the New York American.

This gun, weighing less than twenty pounds, and manufactured after the fashion of an ordinary fowling piece, pours out a stream of bullets when in action at the rate of 400 shots a minute.

The new firearm is called the Benet-Mercier, and is of French invention. It has a stock that is placed against the shoulder. In action the soldier lies on the ground, resting the gun on two supports. This gives an advantage in safety over the Hiram Maxim rapid firing model, since the operator of that gun is compelled to stand in feeding it. This brings him in full sight of the enemy, or rather it brings three men in sight, for three are required for the manipulation of this heavier weapon.

Once a row of men is brought up on the firing line with the guns, they will drop down after the fashion of sharpshooters. It is the work of a second to raise the guns onto the low supports. Another second and everything is in readiness for action. With the word of command the pull of the trigger sends hundreds of bullets hurling into the ranks of the enemy.

Army officials are more interested in the new Springfield gun than in any hitherto built. As against the old Maxim three man gun the new gun requires only one soldier.

The Maxim gun weighing 400 pounds, when loaded on the battlefield, received its charge from a gunner who perched himself on top of the weapon in full sight of the enemy. The new gun is loaded and operated by one man lying flat on the ground.

The Maxim owing to its unwieldiness, had to be wheeled about. The new gun is, therefore ten times as effective, because it is carried about as easily as an ordinary rifle. With one of these weapons, it is cited, Custer could have stood off the entire Sioux nation.

The work on the new guns at the armory is being guarded with strictest secrecy. About fifty men are employed on them, and it is expected that within a few weeks some will be ready for trial.—Chicago Daily News.

Says the Prophet Joel: "Alas for the day! For the day of the Lord is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come." Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up:

Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong."

"Prepare War!" The preparation for War being made right now in the days in which we live, is of such a terrible nature, as to make one's blood run cold to contemplate; and this is being made parallel with the "peace and safety" cry. "No more war—arbitration," being the cry, and at the same time inventing guns, weighing less than twenty pounds that will pour forth a deadly volley of shots at the rate of 400 per minute. Oh, what destruction, and carnage there must be from armies equipped with guns of that sort.

The Russians, Persians, Germans, Ethiopians and Libyans, says Ezekiel shall ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee. And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company and a mighty army. And thou shalt come up against the people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land. And I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea: and it shall stop the noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude, and they shall call it the valley of Hamin-gog.

And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land."

Now, if weapons as above described are used, when Russia and her allies shall invade the land of Israel, during the last half of the "twentieth week of Daniel," it is no wonder that it will take "seven months" to bury the dead as the result of that war.

Now, dear ones in Christ, if events now happening won't arouse the church of God to action, nothing else will. I have it in mind to collect these evidences together and publish them in book of 96 pages, bound in [illegible] to cost 25 cents each, the [illegible] of the book to be, "The Destiny of Russia and the Signs of the Times."

Do you want such a book? If you do, sit down right away and tell me how many copies you will take, if published. Send no money for it until it is printed. If I get enough orders to simply pay the cost, I will issue it at once. Don't delay a day in notifying me.

In the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.
625 N. Willow Ave.,
Austin Sta., Chicago, Ill.

THE LAND OF THE JEWS FOR JEWISH PEOPLE.

God Has Promised it, and His Promises Never Fail.

"Jehovah will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them, and ye shall dwell in the land I gave to your fathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God." Ezek. 36:24, 27, 28.

At this present day the Jewish people owa in Palestine 125,000 acres of land. They have planted over 15,000 olive trees. They have the Jewish Colonial Bank in Jerusalem, with a capital of $1,500,000. 135,000 Jews are subscribers mostly in small amounts. They established a bank in Jaffa, in Beyrouth, in Haifa, in Hebron and in Safed. The foundation for a permanent home for the Jewish people has been laid, all in fulfilment of God's promises.

The Jewish population of Palestine is now one hundred thousand, and thousands of Jews are daily to enter the home of our fathers. The Jews have 38 agricultural colonies, they have schools and colleges, children's homes, and they speak Hebrew on the streets and in business in Jerusalem like they did 2,000 years ago, when Jesus, the Messiah, walked the streets in Jerusalem. The Jews are looking and praying for the Messiah, and he will come again as He said. It be none other but Jesus, the King of the Jews; who died on the cross, who gave His life for the lost sheep of the house of Israel, (the Jews) who went away from God and worshiped the golden calf, as many of them do today in America and in other nations, and to save the Gentiles, who two thousand years ago worshiped idols and knew not the God of Israel. But now, many of the Gentiles are born of God's Spirit and they worship God in spirit and in truth.

The apostle Paul tells us; "Has God cast away His people? (the Jews). God forbid; have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid; but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles. For God has concluded them all in unbelief, that He might have mercy upon all." Rom. 11:1, 11, 32. The Prophet Zechariah tells us: "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem." Zech. 14:4. "And one shall say unto Him, what are these wounds in thy hands? Then he shall answer, those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." Zech. 13:6.

The prayer that Jesus made for His people, the Jews, on the cross, will be answered in our day. "Father forgive them, they do not know what they do."—Moses Nye in the Bible Banner, 328 E. State St., Columbus, Ohio.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

An Integral Part of the Everlasting Covenant.

The Restoration of Israel, or of "the Multitudinous Seed."—as Bro. J. S. Hatch loved to call them—is our faith and one of the lines of demarcation between ourselves and our crisis brethren. It, the very promise of an everlasting possession of all the land of Canaan to the nations and kines that should spring from Abraham,—was an integral part of the everlasting covenants.

They were to be "exceedingly fruitful," "as the stars of heaven and as the sand of the sea for multitude," and, as if this were not enough, it was said to Rebekah, prophetically, "Be thou the mother of thousands of millions," and Jacob, prophesied of Ephraim, the son of Joseph, that he should become "a nation and a company of nations;" and of Manasch, that he should be "a great nation," while Hosea re-iterated the statement that "the children of Israel should be as the sand of the sea which cannot be measured nor numbered," and that "in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it would be said unto them, ye are the sons of the living God."

We know that the children of were divided into two distanct kingdoms after Solomon—"the Kingdom of Israel," and "the kingdom of Judah:" and that God ever thereafter in talking of them kept the two distinct: making the people of Israel to be carried away captive out of their own land, to Assyria, and divorcing them from himself and the Sinaitic covenant because of their sins, but having mercy upon Judah for a time in saving them from the hand of Sennacherib, "not by force, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses nor by horsemen," but by the hand of an angel, who smote in one night in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred four score and five thousand men, and sent the king home "with shame of face to his own land." It was not in God's purpose that Israel and Judah should be taken captive by the same people and united into one nation. He must have the "two olive trees," or "two witnesses" to the end. So Judah was not divorced from the law, and although held captive by the Babylonians for seventy years, was permitted to return to their own land, and to remain there until after the birth, ministry, death and ascension of Christ, when they were dispersed among all nations.

The twelve tribes were in the days of James, still in existence, for his letter is addressed to them and Jesus knew the whereabouts of "the lost sheep of the House (or Kingdom) of Israel," for it was to them that he commanded the disciples to go.

Josephus said "the Ten Tribes had become an immense multitude in his day."

And "the sealing" of Rev. 6: 12-17, was of nearly all the tribes It commenced in the time of Constantine A.D. 313, when Pagan Rome fell, as if overturned by a mighty earthquake.

Now we believe that all these tribes will be restored, each receiving its own alloted possession as mapped out by the hand of God himself in the 48th chapter of Ezekiel.

We believe that Israel and Judah will be "joined one to another into one stick" or "nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel and one king, be king to them all," and that "that shall no more be two nations, neither be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."

We know that the seed of Israel will no more cease from being a nation before the Lord, than will the ordinances of heaven depart. And that as we cannot measure heaven above, nor search out the foundations of the earth beneath, so God will not cast off His people for what they have done. Jer. 31:35-38-34:20, to close the chapter.

"He hath remembered His Covenant forever, the word which He commanded to a thousand generations, which Covenant He made with Isaac and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law and to Israel for an everlasting Covenant. Saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance." Psalm 105:8-12.

The unbelief in the churches, as to the literal fulfillment of the promises made to the fathers, was what made infidels of Tom Paine and Bradlaugh and scores of others, while on the other hand the teaching of those, who believe that these promises are sure and steadfast is converting athiests and infidels by dozens and dozens on the top of dozens.

If this thing be true, "Let truth stand against the world."

"No word He hath spoken was ever yet broken."

S. Roxana Wince.
Pierceton, Ind.

THE FAITH ONCE DELIVERED TO THE SAINTS.

"The Faith;" "The Saints."

Jude, the ervant of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God, the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called:—Mercy unto you and peace and love be multiplied.

Beloved! When I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith, which was once delivered unto the saints.

It is the greatest and most important question which confronts us today, to determine who has the faith which was once delivered unto the saints, for without faith, it is impossible to please God, our creator, Heb. 11:6.

In order to make my text more impressive, and without discriminating against the law of God, I will substitute the word which, with the faith to which it refers; and now listen how my text reads: "The Faith which was once delivered unto the saints!"

What positive language! What great comfort to know that the faith can be found in Holy Writ, without guessing for "the faith was once delivered unto the saints!"

Every word in the text is of great importance:

1. The faith, or the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, was once delivered unto the saints.

2. The faith was delivered once unto the saints.

3. The faith was once (not twice, nor thrice) delivered unto the saints.

4. The faith was once delivered unto the saints.

To show you dear ones of how great importance to know and to understand the text, will put some questions:

Who sent the faith which was once delivered unto the saints? Who was the deliverer of that message? Is it the message which is commonly known as the Apostles Creed? If so, who delivered it, and who sent it? As these two questions can not be answered by Holy Writ, as the apostolic creed is not recorded in the Bible, we will have to search for something else, and in a very diplomatic or childlike way, for you know—the child is the greatest diplomate. And so as children of faith let us search to find out what about him, who might be the father of all them that believe, namely,

Father Abraham.

Could it be possible that Abraham of old has received the faith, or the substance of the things hoped for?

Who delivered it, and who sent it?

These two questions must—I say—be answered by the scriptures, and I pray you to have patience with me, and listen to what the God Jehovah had to say to Abram.

In Gen. 17:1-22 we read how that God made an everlasting covenant with Abraham and his seed after him, of which covenant and promise Paul wrote to the Hebrews: "For when God made promise to Abraham, he cause He could swear by no greater. He swear by himself." God's covenant with Abraham was also confirmed unto Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. God's oath-bound promises unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are the great underlying principle of the faith which was once delivered by God himself, and so these three are not only the fathers of the Hebrew nation, but also of the saints to whom the faith was once delivered.

Paul in his letter to the Ephsians wrote that ye being in time past gentiles in the flesh, that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hone and without God in the world."

Friends, get acquainted with God's oath-bound promises; see how they are to be connected with the "common salvation," of which Jude speaks; accept them and obey them from the heart, that in due time ye may sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God.

Brethren, shall we meet there?

H. JUERGENSEN.

Barberton, Ohio.

THE BEREANS COLUMN.

Held Their Thirteenth Annual Business Meeting at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 18, 1910.

Reports Show a Successful Year's Work.

The Thirteenth Annual Business meeting of the Berean society of the State of Illinois, was called to order on Friday, August 18, 1911, at 4 o'clock, by the President, Anna E. Drew.

Meeting opened by song and prayer. The Secretary's report was then read and approved with the following correction: This motion was omitted. It was moved, seconded and carried that Bible reference for their next lesson, the former white covered books combined with the lessons on Ephesians already prepared, and that the different state Berean organizations be communicated with in regard to use of same. The president reported no points visited during the past year. About 100 letters written and 100 received. Although no new societies were organized, received some encouragement as to the prospect of organizing at some new points.

Treasurer's report as follows was accepted:

Balance in treasury Sept. 1, 1910..... $23.36
Receipts during year..... 37.72

Total 61.08
Expenditures $11.76

Balance, Sept. 1, 1911... $49.32

W. T. HARDESTY, Treasurer

Reports from all the different committees were read and approved.

Interesting reports were read from the Dixon, Adeline, Ripley, Chicago and Oregon local societies. Indiana, Iowa and Nebraska gave interesting reports of work in their states, showing progress and interest.

Letters and articles were received from the following isolated members: Mrs. Lillie Willis, Galva, Ill.; Selma Samuels, Pocasset, Mass.; Mrs. Kenurah Rogers, Fair Dealing, Mo.; Hanna Barber, Oklahoma City, Okla., and Mrs. Mittie Chandler, Burbank, Okla.

Unfinished business was then taken up. It was moved, seconded and carried that Illinois accept the following arrangement of lessons and confer with the other states as regards the same: Rearranged lessons in white book Predestination from Life of Christ, Lessons on Ephesians, Logos Lessons from Life of Christ, Christ's second Coming, from Life of Christ. Moved, seconded and carried that if the arrangement is not satisfactory to the other states, that the committee be given power to change order.

Under new business the President asked the Secretary to read Article 6 of the Constitution as regards dues, and then gave a talk on the slackness of many societies in living up to this article. She made an able plea for the rights of the State Treasury. It was moved, seconded and carried that each Berean in the State of Illinois be asked to contribute as a free will offering one dollar to the state treasury, said amount not to include dues. It was moved, seconded and carried that the president be empowered to draw on the treasury for funds for any trip or trips that she may deem necessary to make for the good of the work. It was moved seconded and carried that the president be empowered, if the condition of the treasury warrants, after consulting with any one officer, to pay expenses to Bible School of anyone she desires.

Moved, seconded and carried that the secretary be instructed to write to the management of The Restitution, asking for a column once a month for Berean material. Moved, seconded and carried that in case such column is granted, all reports and official notices be sent to that paper.

Election of officers. It was moved, seconded and carried that the secretary be instructed to cast the white ballot for all incumbent officers for the following year. Elected as follows: President, Anna E. Drew, Dixon, Ill.; 1st Vice President, Adaneda Chatfelty Lamark, Ill.; 2nd Vice President, Kathryn Townsend, Lebanon, Ill.; Secretary, Emma L. Van Antwerp, Vermont, Ill.; Treasurer, Wm. T. Hardesty, Oregon, Ill.

The president appointed the following committees for ensuing year:

Program—Vernon Wood, Geo. Herrick, Hazel Lindsay.

Literary—Anna Adams, Jennie Townsend, Mrs. Mary Gesin.

Isolated—Jessie Wilson, Mrs. Chandler, Pearl Wood.

Tract—Ida Goehning.

It was then moved, seconded and carried that we adjourn.

EMMA L. VAN ANTWERP, Vermont, Ill. Secretary.

Happiness of the Christian Life.

Dear Bereans:

When I was asked to write for our Berean column, I thought at first I could not possibly do it, as I find it so hard to put my thoughts on paper. But I am going to do the best I can, as I feel it is one of the many Christian duties to help keep up our Berean column.

We are three isolated members and endeavor to keep up with the Berean lessons, but find it rather difficult sometimes, and feel the need of a more learned mind.

I am so much more happy and contented when trying to be a Christian. The petty trials and annoyances are so much easier to contend with when I am right with God.

I feel that the end is fast approaching, and we haven't any time to waste on sinful desires; and my daily prayer is for strength to be more Christlike, so that people are better and happier for my being a Christian.

Aurora, Ill. EDNA B. ANDERSON.

KINDNESS TO THE LIVING.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them; the kind thing you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy.

Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial or cremation. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the troubled spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over life's weary way.—Selected, by Kathryn Townsend.

IOWA CONFERENCE.

The 24th Annual Conf. of the Churches of God in Iowa Was Held as Usual on the Beautiful Camp Ground at Waterloo.

The attendance from other states was not as large as usual, but there were more of the brethren from Iowa present than ever before. Every church was well represented, and the personal interest that each one took made the conference one of the best we ever held.

Every one felt well repaid for time and money expended, and deemed it a blessed privilege to be able to hear again the precious promises proclaimed, the glories of the kingdom, the way that leads to life eternal, and the goodness and mercy of God, who leads us and guides us in the way, if we are willing to obey his commandment.

We had with us, who gave us some excellent sermons, John Garton and A. J. Eychaner, of Iowa; S. C. Oliver, of Kansas; Joshua Miller, of Texas; J. A. Patrick, of Minnesota; Eldred Marsh and S. J. Lindsay, of Illinois. Others present outside the state of Iowa were: Mrs. J. A. Patrick and three sons; Miss Kate Abbott, of Minnesota; William Platt, Sr., of Fonthill, Ont.; C. P. Oliver and Sadie Allard, of Kansas; J. M. White and Mrs. King and daughters, of Nebraska; Mrs. Craine, of Chicago; and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Robbins, of Rapid City, South Dakota.

Report of Officers.

Secretary's Report:—

Signed 17 orders amounting to $978.98.

Treasurer's Report:—

From subscription ...	$1073.80
Conference Dues	71.50
Misc. Sources	75.25
Total	$1220.55
Aug. 26, '10, overdraft ...	$ 95.07
Paid out on orders.....	978.98
Total	$1074.05

Report of Evangelist and Preachers.

A. J. Eychaner preached 10 sermons.

John Garton preached 5 sermons.

O. J. Allard.

Total number of day worked for conference, 222.

Total number of days worked outside conference, 84.

Number of sermons preached at Gladbrook, 10; Hickory Grove, 4; Irving, 4; Avon, 2; Eagle Grove, 5; Marathon, 4; Sac City, 13; Pleasant Prairie, 3; Brumfield, Ky., 10; Morse Mills, Mo., 11; Tuttle, Col., 14; Holbrook, Neb., 17; Grand Island, Neb., 6; Baptized 10. Funerals 3.

Total number of sermons for Iowa Conference, 118.

Total number of sermons for other states, 70.

Rec. from Iowa Stat Con.. $554.65
Rec. from other States... 227.62
Total ex. to Iowa 86.14
Total Ex. outside Iowa .. 110.47

Report of Churches.

Number of sermons preached at the following places:—

Gladbrook 21. Paid	$166.85
Marathon 14. Paid	18.25
Eagle Grove 5. Paid	15.00
Sac City 13. Paid	80.00
Hickory Grove 27. Paid ..	158.50
Irving 4. Paid	26.00
Waterloo 14. Paid	66.00
Avon 21, Paid	not known

New Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected:—President, O. J. Allard, Fort Dodge, Iowa; Vice President, A. J. Eychaner, Cedar Falls, Ia.; Secretary, Eva L. Stearns, Sac City, Ia.; Cor. Sec., Ada Moran, Clinton, Ill.; Treas., G. P. Allard, Fort Dodge, Ia.

The following were appointed Conference Secretary of various churches:

Mabel Evans, of Avon, Ia.; Mrs Mary Garton, Marathon; Mrs Maggie Moore, Waterloo; Mrs. Sadie Clark, Gladbrook; Mrs. Ida Marsh, Irving; A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove; Alma Rouse, Sac City; Mrs. Isaac Fish, Hickory Grove; Mrs. R. O. Herick, Lapotte City.

Motions Carried.

The following motions were carried:

1. That the tent be sent to Holbrook, Neb., for a meeting.

2. That we hire an evangelist and pay $75.00 a month and traveling expenses.

3. That the work of Evangelist be left to Conference Board.

4. That the selecting of Evangelist be left to Conference Board.

5. That the Conference elect the dining room officers.

The following officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. Moore; Secretary, Mrs. Moran; Treasurer Mrs. Eychaner.

The table committee reported as follows for last year:

Bal. on hand, 1909 .....$ 35.98
Sale of meal tickets 235.11

Paid for provisions.....$230.11
Paid for new kitchen.... 25.00

Bal on hand Aug 29 '10. $15.98

Letters were received and appreciated from Oscar Marsh and E. R. Hawley, of Sioux City; Mrs Mary Allard, of San Fernando; R. P. Story, of Holbrook; also greeting from Missouri Conference.

Resolutions.

The Resolution Committee reported as follows:

Your committee on Resolutions for the Iowa State Conference of the churches of God in Christ, Jesus for 1911, make the following report:

1. We record with regret the loss by death of Frank Cummings and also of Aleta Fetz, members of our conference, and hereby express our approval of their Christian work and fellowship, cherishing the hope of meeting them again beyond the resurrection.

2. We heartily welcome to our communion and fellowship those who have repented and yielded obedience to the Gospel, during the year, and pledge to them our counsel and help to assist them in their Christian journey.

3. Whereas our local churches in this state conference have duly considered and voted upon the question relating to a creed which was referred to them by the so-called General Conference, held at Waterloo, Ia. last year, and without exception all our churches expressed themselves against any man-made creed, and that they were in favor of the Bible only, as the standard of faith and conduct, and thus reported to the State Conference and, whereas, many of the members of the Iowa State Conference do not belong to any local church, yet are members in good standing and desire to be placed on record as not approving of any creed-making, but to recognize the Bible as all that is necessary and all that they want as a discipline.

Therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the expression and voice of the Iowa State Conference of the churches of God in Jesus Christ, that we take the Bible, and the Bible only, as our discipline and the rule by which our faith and conduct should be regulated.

4. Whereas, the churches of God, throughout the United States and Canada, have never expressed themselves by any general statement of articles of faith, or authorized any paper of publish such articles as the official organ of the church, and

Whereas, There are several publications of merit among us that are taken and read by the members of this Conference,

Therefore, Be it resolved that no restrictions nor abridgement be placed upon any member in his choice of any publication, and that we as a conference recommend our members as far as we can to support those religious papers which stand for advancement and freedom of thought and expression of the truths of God as set forth upon all the themes of the Bible, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to all our papers, that the brethren of our own and other states may know where we stand upon these questions.

5. Whereas, Conference should be for the purpose of promoting harmony where there is a difference of thought among our people and

Whereas, the Conference desires to set before outsiders, the truths believed among us.

Resolved, That at our Conference next year, That we set aside a certain portion of the time for public preaching and the remainder be devoted to Conference work and the study of the Bible.

6. Whereas, As a circular has been published and widely distributed in which O. J. Allard is mentioned misrepresenting his position and stating that in his attempt to carry out his idea at the General Conference, that disgrace was brought upon the church, and

Whereas, A majority, who made and circulated this statement were not present at the General Conference.

And, whereas, the majority of those present were members of the Iowa Conference, who are here today, and were eye-witnesses and know all the facts.

Therefore, Be it resolved,

That we, the members of the Iowa State Conference hear testimony that the conduct and spirit of our president were commendable in every way, and we believe that the call made by him with the consent and approval of the different State Conference presidents was made in good faith with the hope of building up and uplifting the church, and if disgrace was brought upon it, it cannot be laid to our president, nor to those members in good standing among us.

A. J. EYCHANER,
J. A. PATRICK,
MRS. M. APPLEYARD,
Committee.

On motion the resolutions were adopted.

Those Baptied were: Howard Gifford, Leo. Rock, Evelyn Storr, Nellie Kithcart, Earnest Svranson, Clifford Stearns, Mr. E. Moran, Mrs. Fitz, Miss Rose Fish, Mrs. Chris Sohnekson and A. L. Schurring.

EVA L. STEARNS,
Sac City, Iowa. Secretary.

INDIANA CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

Thursday, October 5.

7:00 p. m. Song and Prayer. Address of welcome, D. T. Halstead. Response and sermon by Fred Austin.

Friday, October 6.

9 to 9:30 Song and prayer service, Emma Railsback.

9:30 to 10:30 Bible School, S. J. Lindsay.

10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Nature and Operation of the Holy Spirit.

1:30 to 1:45, song service.

1:45 to 2:30, business meeting.

2:45 to 4:30, sermon, Fred Austin.

7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Mattie Benjamin.

7:30, sermon, S. J. Lindsay.

Saturday, October 7

9:00 to 9:30, social meeting, Bennett Boggs.

9:30 to 10:30, Bible school, S. J. Lindsay.

10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Fred Austin.

1:30 to 1:45, song service.

1:45 to 2:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Image of the Beast.

2:45, business meeting.

7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Jessie Pence.

7:30, sermon, subject, Faith, Fred Austin.

Sunday, October 8.

9:30 to 9:30, social and song service, Wm. Huffer.

10:30 to 11:30, sermon, Revelations, S. J. Lindsay.

2:00 p. m., sermon, Fred Austin.

3:00 p. m., communion service, D. T. Halstead.

7:00 p. m., social and song service, Ezra C. Railsback.

7:30 p. m., sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Blood of Christ.

Conference Notice.

To the Church of God in Indiana greeting.

The Conference this year in Indiana has been arranged to meet at Rensselaer as per program above, and it is the urgent desire of the officers and program committee that a goodly representation from each of the several churches in the state be present.

Let us lay aside the cares of our business life for a few days and take up our Father's business, and He will recompense us at the resurrection of the just. Come all that can and enjoy a season of song and praise to Him who gives us life and its enjoyments. Bring this program. Address communications relative to the conference to D. T. Halstead, Rensselaer, Ind.

F. M. McCrory, Vice-Pres.

Are You helping to get the 500 New Subscribers?

See Last Page

OBITUARY.

Israel G. Roberts—A Pioneer of Our County Passes Away. —A Brief Sketch of His Life.

Israel G. Roberts was born in Hendricks County, Indiana, July 15, 1831. His father, Andrew W. Roberts, was born in Kentucky in 1804, and his mother, Malinda C. Gibbons, was born in North Carolina, in 1806. They were married in 1829, and came to Marshall county in 1834, settling in South-east Center township, where they lived three years, then removed to Green township for six years, then back to Center township in 1843, taking up their abode in the old Roberts homestead four miles north from Argos, where they lived and died. To them were born seven children; Israel G., subject of this sketch, Elizabeth now Mrs. John Jordan, living north from Argos; Jemima, deceased wife of Hiram O'Keen; Sarah A., now Mrs. Dennie, living in Chicago; Miriam E., deceased wife of the late Basil R. Ladd; Mary E., deceased, former wife of Anson Elliott, of Plymouth; and Lucinda A., now Mrs. Mrs. Smith Pomeroy, of Plymouth.

The lot of this family was cast in the wilds of our county when the original forests stood untouched, the home of the Indian and the habitation for beasts of prey and game of many varieties. The hard struggles, the privations and sever trials encountered by the pioneers, developed character of fortitude that only the close communion with nature and the doing of the task it has set, could create. The result of such a life was strongly imprinted upon the character of our subjects. A giant of physical strength coupled to an indomitable will, he entered the battle of life with such energy and fixedness of purpose that he countenanced no thought of failure. It was his ax that echoed from the hillside from early morn till late at night as he felled the mighty poplar, walnut and oak, and lay them low at his feet, in his conquest of the primeval forest, converting it into fields to bloom and blossom, to bring forth a rich harvest to bless the earth. By his toil he cleared for the plow many acres in his neighborhood, including much of what is now known as the D. E. Snyder farm.

Being full of experience and noticing the advance of age, he made the acquaintance of an estimable young lady, Nancy McIlravy, of Green township, whom he married June 17, 1858, and went to housekeeping at his late home in Center township. This home has since been the scene of his achievements. In the course of time they became the parents of three children: Andrew C., born in August, 1860; Esther E., born April, 1864; and Mary M., born in December, 1867. He was a devoted husband and father, and rejoiced in his home life and made it the central thought of his activities. From its fireside he went forth to strive in the battle of life, always glad to return to hearty welcome of the dear ones there. He with his noble wife, watched the development and education of their children with anxiety. This anxiety was satisfied when he saw them come to manhood and womanhood exhibiting the characteristics of intelligent Christian citizens. He often said in his later years that he had accomplished all he had sought in this life. For he had learned the greater lesson that experience leads into every soul. His life was softened and sweetened by the love of God through Christ, which he deeply appreciated and rejoiced over. He united with the church of God in 1862, at old Pisgah, and was transferred to Antioch upon its organization in 1866, where he has since held his membership. He was an ardent worker for the cause of the Church, and contributed liberally of his means and time to further the preaching of the Gospel, both in the local church and in the evangelistic field. His home was the scene of many gatherings of ministers and influential church workers during the yearly conferences of old Antioch, where they enjoyed the benefits of his hospitality and counsel. His walk has been exemplary. He was an absolutely honest man. He knew the splendid dictum, "The highest obligations among men are not written, signed and sealed, but reside in honor." He was independent in his thought and action, clinging to the truth as he saw it regardless of the favor of friend or foe. One has said, "If it were not for the independent man that breaks the chains and scales the walls, and stands out against the many headed mob like some great cliff that meets and breaks the innumerable billows of the sea, the dust of antique time would lay unswept, and mountainous error be heaped too high for truth to overpeer." He sensed the full force of this thought. So the ostracism of society could not alter his course, for he followed with keen eye of discernment the example set by Christ himself. His, only though was, what is the truth, what is right, then followed his decision, ever willing to abide by the consequences of the course pursued without complaint. He was a splendid, noble man.

His home was broken into by the loss of his companion, April 22nd, 1891, and the marriage of his son and older daughter later in the same year. He and his younger daughter, Mary, kept house until her marriage in 1905, since which time he has lived with his children. His last sickness was long and tedious. He had lost the use of himself and the right possession of his mind for over a year. He quietly and peacefully fell asleep at the house of his daughter, Mary Cuffel, in Akron, Indiana, September 5th, 1911, at the age of eighty years, one month and twenty days. He leaves surviving him, three sisters, three children and one grand daughter, Lois Taylor, of his immediate relatives.

The funeral services were held from the residence of his daughter, and interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery at Plymouth.

D. E. VAN VACTOR.

Argos, Ind.

"A crowd of troubles passed him by
As he with courage waited.
He said, 'Where do you troubles fly
When you are thus belated?'
'We go,'" they said, 'to those who mope,
Who look on life dejected;
Who weakly say good-bye to hope—
We go where we're expected.'"

"I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then set on the lid an' smile."—Mrs. Wiggs.

Manager's Column

WANTED

A representative of The Restitution in every community. One who will devote a few hours each week to taking subscriptions and making collections. This is a particular need for such a representative in each church body. If you will undertake to to this work, communicate at once with the manager.

Be sure and get the full address on letters sent to this office, it will avoid delays and mistakes.
The Manager.

Well, they are beginning to come in, the first of that 500. Here and there a brother or sister got busy, and wherever they did we got results, one name, or two or three. It is not a question as to whether you will get results if you put forth the effort, the thing is to get you to try. Just suppose tonight before you go to sleep you resolve to get one new subscriber before you go to bed tomorrow night. The first thing to do in the morning is to take a Restitution and put it in your pocket, no, better carry it in your hand, for if you are a man you will forget you have it with you. Then make it your business to try and indnce the first person you meet to subscribe, and if you fail, keep on trying till you do succeed. You know it doesn't cost any more to succeed than to fail. Every brother in the church should read The Restitution, and yet if you stop to think, doubtless you can think of several who do not take the paper. You would not want to get along without it, neither would they if they knew what they were missing. Make it your business to interest them and it will be easy to get them to subscribe.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

The only way to have happiness as a permanent guest, is to keep your door open to the helpless.

True spirituality can see the altar in the cookstove and the washtub.

"For I do know
God's patient love perceives
Not what we did
But what we tried to do."

"Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you."—I. Peter 5:7.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Helping Fund.

Margaret Wilson	$1.00
C. Hammond	1.00
Wm. Stephens	4.00

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing of 50 DIFFERENT and children which will be perfect as style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Price Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents. 100 for 50 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Gratitude for Mankind;" and "Shall We Do to Be Saved." Foolishness of Preaching Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN
THE RESTITUTION
RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. E. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution
TRY IT
For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution
May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each
Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolatedbrethren, send for some this remaining stock.
The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 27, 1911 No. 37

THE OLD CHURCH BELL

When the sun has set and twilight scatters
Oe'r the earth her radiant glow,
And the wind with scented breezes,
Breathes forth music sweet and low,
Then in solitude and silence
When the birds have hushed their song,
And all have gone to solace,
Ee'n the happy, laughing throng.

As in quietness I listen
'Neath the old thornapple tree,
I can hear the green leaves whisper
Of a liberty most free;
And as I sit in silence
(Since has hushed the merry throng),
I can hear a distant echo
List! 'tis the old church gong.

It recalls to my memory
Of the years long passed away,
When as a youth I laboured
In the straight and narrow way.
Of the many joyful times I spent
'Neath the tower of that old bell
And the many mournful accents
When it tolled the funeral knell.

But now the light grows brighter
And the music seems more sweet,
When I think of all the glory
I shall have when those I meet
Shall embrace me in their presence
As a friend still dear to all
And a servant to the One who
Even marks the sparrow's fall.

Alas! the bell peals slowly,
And more distant seems the sound,
And with peaceful love attending
I recline in sleep profound.
Tho' the birds have hushed their singing
And I hear the bells no more,
I'm at peace, asleep in Jesus,
Waiting for the resurrection morn.

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

THE EARTH RESTORED TO EDENIC BEAUTY: HOW AND WHEN?

A Sermon By The Late Brother M. Joblin.

Let your minds wonder up and down the earth for a few minutes. Examine the state of affairs among the inhabitants of earth! Look at the toils, the sorrows, the universal dominion of death, the want of some, the luxurious voluptuousness of the other; look at the rich grinding the life out of the poor, and by means of corruption preventing justice to men! Look at the earth as it spontaneously sends out thistles and weeds of every imaginable form to compel the execution of the sentence: "In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread," until thou return unto ground, and then say if we had a commission from God Almighty to tell that he was going to put a stop to this sad state of things by taking the government out of the hands of wicked, corrupt mortal men, and giving it all into the hands of his son, who has been constituted the immortal king of glory, and rolling up the curse and causing the earth to bloom like Eden,—we say, would you not call this good news—news worth listening to? How you would rejoice to hear it! Visions of plentiful crops, of delicious fruit, and abundance of grain—no such thing as failure, doctor's calling becoming extinct, fraud and oppression vanished away; the arduous task of providing for one's family changed to a delightful recreation! Ah, says you, "That's the time I want to see; I wish it would soon roll round." We could all join in here, could we not! We think we would like to live right on—on—on—ever so long—always—maybe! As we before remarked we could all chime in here and say, Soon may it come and long may it last when it does come. All would like to stay here with such a state of things. But to leave these suppositions and come down to sober realities. There is a word that is at times in everybody's mouth almost about here, for one purpose or another; but for all its extensive use, it means one thing to them, just about as much as another, i. e., nothing definite; and the word we have reference to is the word "Gospel."

If the dictionary is consulted you get little benefit, for Webster says gospel, God, good; spell history of Jesus Christ, containing his doctrines and precepts. Now, Gospel meant the history of Jesus Christ, etc., why the word gospel was only made or added to the Greek language some 1800 years ago, to express in short, the history of Jesus Christ, for surely they would not have a word expressive of a thing before it happened. But such nonsense does not begin to satisfy the thoughtful. We offer for such the following as the best definition of the word gospel, that we have seen. Remember Jesus did not use the word gospel when he commissioned the apostles to go and preach, for he spoke Greek! And to learn its meaning we must know the meaning of the original from which it is translated. It is euangellion, composed of eu, an adverb of quality, viz: good, and angelica a message delivered in the name of any one. Putting both parts together, euangellion, a good message, or good news. Now when we tell you that the gospel of God, the gospel of Christ, and the gospel of the kingdom are only different names for the same gospel, and that the gospel or goodness referred to is composed of promises about that very good time you were all wishing for just now, you must not talk of sending me to the asylum for we can prove it to you by God' holy word; besides we would rather you would see the proof, for we do not want you to believe what we can without the proof. You will then, please read Acts 3:13-21 The point we are after here is that Jesus is in heaven, and heaven must retain him until the times of restitution or restoration, of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets. So you see that when time for restoration rolls round Jesus leaves heaven and comes to earth again; for it is on the earth that the restoration is to take place, for God's prophets have never said a word about a restoration in any other sphere; besides how do we know that there is any need of any restoration anywhere else besides on earth? Say, will you all agree with us in this,

That there is need of restoration on earth?

You do, very well; and do you agree that the restoration spoken of in the text quoted relates to earth? Well, yes, I suppose so! That will do then! We next invite you to look at Rev. 22:3-6 1st clause: "And there shall be no more curse." It being admitted that the bible is a revelation to man and not to angels—A book about the kingdom of God on earth, etc., and knowing that the earth has been cursed, see Gen. 3:17, cursed is the ground for thy sake," and here reading, "there shall be no more curse," where is the use of giving man such an assurance, if the removal of the curse did not affect him. Besides, you surely will not contend there ever was a curse in heaven, therefore it would not be proper to say of it there, "there shall be no more curse." But it refers to a time where there shall be no more curse in the place where there once had been a curse—on the earth! You know very well that the curse of sin is what makes earth teem with suffering and disagreeable phases; you know very well it never would have been cursed but for sin, and you must know too, that if the curse were entirely removed all the disagreeable consequences would cease; and you may depend upon it that if the effects of the curse cease, the first cause of the curse—sin, will also have ceased. At some future time then, there is to be no curse, or else John was not a servant of Jesus Christ, he has given us a bundle of fables and not the truth as it is to be developed. It is a most natural conclusion to arrive at then, that when the curse is entirely removed, then it is the restoration of Acts 3 will be entirely accomplished!

We have seen that all things God's prophets have spoken of will be restored; and as they have spoken about the restoration of so many things, we proceed to refer to some of them, just to give you an idea, or an outline of the matter. We notice:

Paradise Will be Restored.

Proof Is. 51:3. "For the Lord shall comfort Zion; he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like;" pause a moment on the word like. The Lord is going to make Zion's wilderness like something—and a comparison is used by the spirit to give us correct ideas of the work he is going to do. "And he will make her wilderness like Eden." Did you ever read these words before? Wilderness of Zion to be made like Eden? Yes, it reads just so! Singular as it may sound to some of you. Like Eden! What do the words like Eden imply? They imply according to Webster, "resembling Eden; equal to Eden; similar to Eden: in the same manner as Eden;" and the text adds: "And her desert like the garden of the Lord." The garden of the Lord was Eden; so this states the same thing as the preceding statement, in different words. If words have any meaning, then Palestine is, according to these, to be again converted into a Paradise like the one in which Adam was placed, and which Jehovah was pleased to pronounce very good; and to show you that Zion in the scriptures never means the church (as fallaciously used in these days), just turnto 2 Sam. 5:7, and read: "David took the strong hold of Zion; the same is the city of David"—Jerusalem—is Zion. If the city of David is the Bible Zion, then nothing else is. Again in 1 Kings 8:1, see further proof that Zion means Zion; and we challenge all to find one place where Zion means the church!

There can be no doubt then, that Palestine is to be made like Eden, and to show how completely this is to be done, Jeremiah says in Chap. 31:40, "The whole valley of the dead bodies, and the ashes and all the field unto the Brook Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate towards the east shall be holy unto the Lord." And Ezekiah speaks in glowing and beautiful language of that glorious day in his 34th chap., verses 20, 23.

Jesus in Luke 21:24 prophesied "and they (Jews) shall fall by the edge of the sword and shall be lead away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden of (or by) the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Jerusalem then is not always to be trodden underfoot by the Gentile, for the Gentile's time is to be filled full, or run out, and then comes the glorious change; and this brings us to notice.

2ndly. That Jerusalem is in ruins now, but will be rebuilt. Proof Is. 65:18, 19: "For behold I create new heavens and a new earth, and the former shall not come into mind, but be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create, for, behold! I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy, and I Jehovah will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people; and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying. Do you believe this?

3rd. Long life will be restored to man. Proof Is. 65:20: "There shall be no more thence (from that time forward) an infant of days," nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall die an hundred years old."

4thly. Universal and lasting peace shall be restored to earth at that time; for it is one of the things the prophets have spoken of, and it must be done. Proof Is. 2:4—"And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." This is glorious news, do you all believe it?

5th. Earth's productiveness will be restored. Men then will not be compelled to wear themselves out in digging and weeding and hoeing, in order to get enough to eat, form Is. 30:23 we read: "Then shall he give the rain of thy seed that thou shalt sow the ground withal, and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plentious; in that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures, the oxen, likewise and the young asses that ear the ground shall eat clean provender which has been winnowed with the shovel and the fern;" so plentiful shall be the crops of that time, and easy to raise. Most delightful tidings, do you all believe it?

6thly. The ravenous propensities of beasts will give place to harmonious submission to men; or rather the dominion of man will be restored. We read in Is. 11:6, 7: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the shepherd shall be down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them; and the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox." This may appear strange, but it is true; and and if you say it is figurative or spiritual, and not real, we ask, can you tell what the spiritual straw is, the spiritual cow and lion are to eat?

These are a few of the "all things" that the prophets have said should be restored. The word restore, or restitution must mean something, what is it? It means a renewal, a bringing back to what it formerly was, a returning to its former state, hence just such a peaceful, glorious state has once existed on earth. But where? In the garden of the Lord—in Eden.—and was not man told to subdue the earth? He was. Did he do it? No.

But you say there was an Adam in the first Eden and if Eden is restored Adam should be restored also. That is quite a suggestion, but did Adam fill well his part when the dominion was in his hands before? Nay, verily, and depend upon it, he will never have supreme power or authority again. But for all that, there will be an Adam in the garden. Do you want to know who it will be? Turn to 1 Cor. 15:47, "The first man of the earth, earthy; the second man, the Lord from heaven." Where he shall take his position as second Adam he will have no rival, he will be supreme ruler; for we have the word of the Lord for it, in Zech. 14:9, that the Lord (Jesus) shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one."

And what about Eve? Will the second Adam have a wife? Ah! Friends, well may you ask the question. Every king has a right to have a queen to reign with him, and this will be no exception to the rule. He who is to be king over all the earth will have a bride! Would you like to know who is to be the queen of that coming age of glory? If you would it will delight us to tell you—in fact, although we have taken a circuitous route to arrive at it, we have invited you here on purpose, to say something to you about the queen of the coming age of glory on earth. Oh! It is a subject big with interest to you all! So big is it that everything else dwindles into insignificance before it. So big that it stretches down through mortal life, and away on, and on, while the endless cycles of the future revolve. Are you ready to listen to the testimony? If so listen to John's description of her as queen as seen in vision by him. In the 9th verse of Rev. 21, one of the angels said to John, "Come hither and I will show thee the bride, the lamb's wife." See also Rev. 19:10. Here under the figure of a gorgeous city, all the saints that ever lived are beautifully represented, and is called the New Jerusalem. It is not a literal city, but it is composed of living saints, who, as in v. 2 have adorned themselves with the righteousness of God by faith in Jesus, ready to meet the bridegroom, as he comes forth from his chamber. The parable of the 10 virgins in Matt. 25, who went forth to meet the bridegroom, is illustrative of the same event. In Eph. 5:23, Christ is set forth in the same relation to the church as the husband to the wife. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is savior of the body. And in Rev. 22:17. The spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely. So you see the spirit invites by the spirit's word—the gospel—the word of truth. 2nd. The bride being actuated by the spirit say come. Here distinctly the church is set forth as the bride, the [illegible] prospective bride, for the marriage of the lamb has not yet taken place. All the saints, then that ever lived, will reign with Christ as his bride, and reign with him on the earth. Rev. 5:9, 10.

CHRIST'S COMING

The Gospel Motive of Repentance, Sanctification, Patience, Diligence, Watchfulness, Purity, Readiness, Love and Abiding in Christ

As a Motive for Repentance

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:19-21.

As a motive for sactification and blamelessness.

"Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sactify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 5:22, 23.

As a motive for exercising patience.

"So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure; which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with the mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day." 2 Thess. 1:4-10.

"Be patient therefore brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient, establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5:7,8.

As a motive for diligence.

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" * * * "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." 2 Peter 3:3, 4, 13, 14.

As a motive for watchfulness and prayer.

"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." Matt. 25:13. "Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house and gave authority to his servants and to every man his work and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: Lest coming suddenly he finds you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." Mark 13:33-37.

As a motive for purity.

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John 3:2, 3.

As a motive for sobriety.

"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light and the children of the day: we are not of the night nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night. But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." 1 Thess. 5:4-8.

As a motive for constant readiness.

"Watch therefore; for ye know no what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched and would not have suffered his house to be broken up." Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Matt. 24:42-44.

As a motive for abounding in love and holiness.

"And the Lord make you to increase and abount in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you: To the end he may stablish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Thess. 3:12,13.

As a motive for abiding in Christ.

"And now, little children, abide in him that when he shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming." 1 John 2:28.

Your brother in "the patient waiting for Christ." 2 Thess. 3:5.

RUFUS A. CURTIS.
Fountain City, Ind.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents. In advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Sept. 27, 1911

EDITORIAL

Italy wants a lease of Tripoli, Turkey is defiant, and declares she will fight for her rights. Against the Turkish force in Tripoli estimated at 30,000 men, Italy will send her whole fleet and an expeditionary force of 60,000 men. As we go to press the papers report that the Italian troops have already landed at Tripoli. The signs of the times were never so interesting as now. Brethren, keep your eyes open: the Lord is coming soon.

In a communication from Sister Lon Greer Butler, she says: "Take your Restitutions and place them in the postoffice and the days for [illegible] and help get the people out of Babylon." Amen.

In response to a sister's query about divorce and remarriage, Bro. J. T. Auld writes:

"It is a sin to marry another if he or she be not legally divorced, according to the divine plan. Our Lord said to the Pharasees: "For the hardness of your heart Moses wrote you this precept; but from the beginning of creation God made them male and female." Mark 10:2-6. In the same chapter he said: Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another committeth adultery against her." And the same with the woman. Verses 10, 11, 12.

A man or woman is free to marry if one or the other should be guiltless of fornication. If the man commits adultery, the woman is free from the husband, and if the woman commits adultery the husband is free to marry, but the ones committing adultery cannot marry so long as the husband or wife lives; if so both have committed adultery. And the persons they marry also commit adultery. Matt. 19:9. Read carefully Paul's argument found in Romans, 7:1-3. You see, dear sister, God's word is "yea and amen."

ANOTHER REQUEST

The sister who requested an explanation on divorce and remarriage has had her desires gratified by contributors in this issue. Now here comes Sister Mason Barb, who says: "I wish some one would explain the 14th chapter of 1 Corinthians; Acts 10:44-47; 11:15, 16. I understand these texts myself, but I have friends who are being led astray with what is called Apostolic Healers. They claim to speak in unknown tongues, and live without sin. Also explain 1 Jno. 3:5-10." Who will respond to our sister's request, and give us some good articles on above scriptures.

The signs of the times is always a subject of great interest to the people of God. New Testament readers have noticed how Paul has united the Lord's advent with the destruction of something he calls "the mystery of iniquity." Where there is ignorance of what this "mystery" is, its identification, its rise and history in the world, its decadence in the last days, and its final destruction at the brightness of the Lord's coming, the signs of the end are dimmed to a great extent. From a journal on the other side of the Atlantic we have found food for thought on the mystery of iniquity; and this week we begin the publication of this interesting matter, copied in part from the Ambassador. Readers are urged to study the articles which will appear for several weeks under the title, "The Mystery of Iniquity and the Signs of the Time."

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

A Scriptural Idea is New and Startling

Rev. R. A. Torrey, the world's greatest evangelist, the Moody of today, has advanced a new and rather startling theory.

"Men after resurrection will walk on this earth, having bodies similar to the present body and will enjoy food as now," he declares.

"I don't know what kind of food it will be. I don't know what kind of bodies they will be. I think they will be like those we have on this earth.

"We know that Christ partook of food after his resurrection. When Elijah and Moses came down on the mountain they were recognized. I don't know how the spirit can express itself without a body."

This paper clipping, handed to us by Bro. Tomlinson, reveals the fact that a Scriptural idea, when it happens to get an expression from the "world's greatest evangelist" even, is at once pronounced a "new and startling theory" by an ignorant world. It must be new and startling to the evangelist himself, for holding on to his disembodied spirit theory, he gets in a daze how to manage both thoughts harmoniously and says in his confusion of thought, "I don't know how the spirit can express itself without a body." The spirit of Abel, for instance, has been in heaven since his death, but for all the thousands of years it has been there, it has not been able to "express itself" for the want of a body! In heaven thousands of years but not able to "express itself" in song or prayer, or praise! Just as well not have any spirit there, Dr. Torrey.—Editor.

Wanted: A Worker.—God never goes to the lazy or the idle when he needs men for his service. When God wants a worker, he calls a worker. Scripture and history attest this truth.

Moses was busy with his flocks at Horeb.

Gideon was busy threshing wheat by the winepress.

David was busy caring for his father's sheep.

Elisha was busy plowing with twelve yoke of oxen.

Nehemiah was busy bearing the king's wine cup.

Amos was busy following the flock.

Peter and Andrew were casting a net into the sea.

James and John were busy mending their nets.

Always Growing.—"Not as though I had already attained either were already perfect." With short-sighted haste, the Christ-follower often looks forward to being in this present life so pure and strong as to escape temptations. Then because he finds that old temptations still assail and that new ones come, he is prone to be discouraged, disappointed, to count himself a failure. The Christian is ever justified in looking at himself with optimistic hope, rejoicing in the fact that the perfection of which his soul is capable is not yet discerned. He who strives is to go far, far beyond his present ideals and hopes. The life with God is one of continual growth and development.

Hanging the Prophets.—On the afternoon before Children's Sunday a small boy called at the home of the primary superintendent, and in evident distress of mind, asked breathlessly for his teacher. He was told by her sister that she was not at home.

"Well, could you tell me about the commandments?" he panted anxiously. "They's two of 'em we have to say tomorrer for Children's Day, an' they aren't in gramma's Bible. She's looked and looked."

"Come in, dear, and sit down," said Miss Alice, "and we'll look for them in my Bible."

"Now, which ones do you mean?" she asked, as she brought it. "'Remember the Sabbath day-' 'Honor thy father and thy mother?'"

"No, none o' them," answered the small boy, with wrinkled brow "I know all that set. It's—the ones that have got all the prophets hangin' on."

"'On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets?'" softly quoted Miss Alice, with smiling eyes.

"Yes'm, oh, yes'm! That's it!" he cried joyously, drawing a long breath of relief, and Miss Alice wrote down the reference in Matthew for "gramma's" benefit, also.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Bro. Huggins:

High and deep was the feeling of happiness experienced at Brush Creek, on Sunday morning September 10th, when it was was made known that Davis Pearson had accepted "the promises made unto the fathers," and was entitled to sit at the Lord's table with us.

Bro. Pearson has been a firm believer and a staunch defender of the truth for many years. He has been a regular attendant, and a keen listener to all the meetings.

Just after Bro. Huggins closed a series of meetings here, on January 21, 1911, Davis Pearson obeyed and was baptized by Bro. Rufus Curtis. He has guarded the secret until now, but his cup was full to overflowing, and he could keep the secret no longer.

May the Lord strengthen and keep him and find him worthy of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ at His coming, is the prayer of—The Church of God at Brush Creek, Ohio.

IMITATE JESUS—OVERCOME.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him," James 1:12. We see here that we must all be tried; for it is he that "endureth temptation that shall receive the crown of life." 1 Cor. 10:13 we read: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." Heb. 4:15: "For we have not an high priest, which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we [illegible] yet without sin."

Let us follow our ex[illegible] as nearly as possible, for in these last days the world is full of temptations and wickedness. In Rev. 3:21 it is written: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." What blessed promises these are to the overcomer! Are they not worth striving for? They certainly are. Yet how hard people will strive in this life for a corruptible crown that they have no assurance will last for even an hour, and let the promises of God go unheeded. Dear brothers and sisters, let us ever strive for that crown of life which fadeth not away, which the Lord has promised the overcomers.

W. B. TOWNSEND.

Salem, Ohio.

THE DIVORCE QUESTION ANSWERED.

Adultery is Possible in Four Ways.

In answer to a sister concerning divorce and remarriage, we would say: The law of God gives only one condition by which either a man or a woman can remarry, and that is when the wife or the husband dies; there are no exceptions to this rule. The law of God, of which we speak, is the one He gave to the church of God, by Jesus Christ, not the one he gave to the nation, of Israel by Moses; and any who marry the second time while his other companion is living, has committed adultery. We would say here incidentally that we as a people have been too lax in this matter, and we hope to see every such man and woman eliminated from our ranks, if there are any, and we presume there are.

The Lord says through Paul: "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband is dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord. 1 Cor. 7:39. There are two propositions contained in this verse which we want to emphasize: First, The woman is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth. Then the man is bound by the law as long as his wife lives, or God is a respecter of persons. When either man or wife takes it upon themselves to remarry, whether they are divorced or not, they simply trample God's law under their feet, and put the law of the god of this world in its place, and if there should be any children born in this kind of wedlock, they are legitimate as far as the god of this world can make them and no farther; that is, if either companion is living when the remarriage takes place. The second proposition is that although the husband or wife may be dead they are at liberty to marry only one who is in the faith that once was delivered to the saints, and this applies, we understand, to those who have never been married as well as to widows and widowers. The Lord says in Rom. 7:2-3. For the woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lived; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then if while her husband liveth (even though the God of this world has divorced her), she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress." This is just as applicable to the husband if his wife be living and he marries another woman; he will be an adulterer. Jesus laid down but one law for divorce, and that was for fornication. Hear him. Matt. 19:9: "And I say unto you, whosoever shall put away his wife (or her husband), except for fornication, shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whosoever married her (or him) which is put away doth commit adultery." Hear him again in Luke 16:18: "Whosoever putteth away his wife (or her husband), and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her (or him) that is put away from her husband (or his wife), committeth adultery." Mark 10:2-12—"And he said unto them whosoever shall put away his wife and marry another, committeth adultery against her, and if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery."

These scriptures give four possibilities for adultery: First, The man who divorces his wife, except for fornication; Second, the man who marries her that is divorced; Third, the woman who divorces her husband except for fornication; Fourth, The woman who marries the man who is divorced. Then let it be remembered that death only can free the living from his or her marriage bond; and that fornication only can divorce either husband or wife, but it does not permit either the offender or the offended to remarry.

H. M. WILLIAMS.

Ashton, Kansas.

THE MYSTERIES OF INIQUITY AND THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question.

In the developments resulting from the Spirit's operations in the first century, there has been a "Mystery of Iniquity," as well as a "Mystery of Godliness;" and the one mystery has been as much the subject of misapprehension and controversy as the other. The cause of the misapprehension is the same in both cases—the illogical reading of the word. Certain passages are seen in a strong light; a theory is—not extracted from, but built upon them; others are left out of account, and the result is a view which, while simple and satisfactory on the limited evidence considered, does not harmonize the Scriptures as a whole, but causes lameness by inequality; and which, when closely scrutinized on its own merits, reveals inherent defects that are fatal. In the absence of "authority," the truth of the matter requires, for its perception, what might be called a round-about process of taking many things into account, which makes it difficult and distasteful to those whose minds act on the surface. There will always be those who will take the short cut of judging by appearances. It is easy and satisfactory for the uninstructed swain to believe that the sun is a little ball of fire revolving round the earth. The truth of the matter is to him simply impossible. So it is in other things.

A correspondent, impressed with the truth, has been reading or hearing some specious mystifications on the subject of the Man of Sin, and being new to such questions, he is overpowered with the apparent evidence, and in the heat of premature conviction, runs a tilt against "the whole structure" of the truth, violent enough to make it topple over, if it were not securely riveted on an immovable foundation. He rushes no fewer than twenty-three times to the assault, in a series of as many categorical questions and observations, the united force of which he evidently considers sufficient to lay our citadel in everlasting ruins. If it were not for the respect we have for his honesty, we should let his impetuous onslaught shiver itself on the granite walls, as the same sort of attack has done before. But as an honest man is better inside the wall than outside, dashing his brains out in the vain attempt to beat them down, we take notice of his questions.

Question 1.—Is corruption apostacy; or have the Papists ever fallen away from the truth?

Answer.—"Corruption," here, is metaphorically employed. Let us see what it is literally, and we shall be able to see whether metaphorically, it is apostacy or not. Corruption is the decomposition of animal substance. It is a process that destroys life, as in putrefaction. It involves the change of that which is good and healthy and vitalizing, to a state in which the opposite prevails. "Apostacy" is a Greek word, occurring but twice in the New Testament. Once it is translated "falling away," (2 Thes. ii. 3.) and once "forsaking." (Acts xxi. 21.) This is about as near an English equivalent as can be given. Corruption is a process of "falling away" from or forsaking vital conditions. Therefore corruption is a process of apostatizing, and when complete, is a state of apostacy or a state of having fallen away, or having forsaken. Now the application of this to the matter in hand, is very obvious, and may in brief be put in the form of "Yes" to the first part of the question.

As to the second part of the question, we can only understand it on the supposition that the querist restricts it to the contemporary generation of papists. We take it that he means the papists are not in the truth, but that they cannot be said to have fallen away from it, never having known it—it being too absurd to suppose he means they are in the truth. Well, nobody affirms that they have fallen away in the individual sense, but the community of which they are the perpetuation, has. As founded by the apostles in the ecclesia that received Paul's epistle, the Church of Rome was originally in the truth, but gradually fell away from it until there was developed in her midst the absurd pretender who now rules the roost in the cage of unclean birds now established there—illustrating the statement of Paul, that the revelation of the Man of Sin would be consequent on the "falling away" that was to come "first." The present generation of papists are just as much in the fallen away state as if the falling away had taken place in their day; and that they are scripturally to be looked at and spoken of in the light of what their fathers did, is evident from Christ's language to the Scribes and Pharasees, who were but the living representatives of an apostacy that had taken place long before their day; and from the fact that then unborn generations of Jews have suffered for the national sin committed then. When descendants endorse the crimes of those having gone before, they share the guilt.

Question 2. Have the Popes ever come in their own name?

Answer.—Who says they have? They ought to have, our correspondent may reply, if they answer to Paul's Man of Sin. How so? We know the answer; for this is a very old controversy, if our correspondent knew. Because it will be answered, Jesus said to the Jews, "If another come in his own name, him ye will receive." This is no answer at all. Jesus is not speaking of the little horn of Daniel's Fourth Beast and Paul's "Man of Sin," who were to have to do with Gentile dominions and institutions. He is speaking of what the Jews would do, in the event of a false Christ presenting himself to them in his own name, while rejecting himself who presented himself in his father's name. And his words came to pass. For as he predicted (Mark xiii 22) false Christs arose and deceived many. Notably was his saying illustrated in the case of the imposter Barchochebas, who proclaimed himself the Christ in his own name, and was received by the Jewish nation, who revolted against the Romans under him, and brought upon themselves dire disaster in consequence.

(To be Continued).

DEATH NOT THE LORD'S COMING.

"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. 15:26

1. If, as the Bible says, the Lord's coming is the "blessed hope" of the church, and "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death," why do men say that the Lord's coming is death? Tit. 2:13; 1 Cor. 15:26.

2. How can the Lord's coming be death when the "dead in Christ" are to rise in their graves at the coming of the Lord? 1 Thess. 4:16.

3. If death is the Lord's coming, what would be the significance of Paul's prayer, "that your whole—body be preserved entire unto"—death? 1 Thess. 5:23.

4. If the Lord's coming is death how could Jesus say positively that Peter would be put to death before the Lord's return? John 21:18-23.

5. If the Lord's coming is death, is it not a more extraordinary circumlocution in Hebrews where it says "when He bringeth again the first begotten into the habitable earth?" 1:6.

6. Did the angels say at the ascension, "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen Him go into heaven?" or "in like manner, as he died and was buried?" Acts 1:11.

7. If death is the Lord's coming, how could anyone "love His appearing?" 2 Tim. 4:8.

8. Can human ingenuity extract the idea of death from "his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives—and half of the mount shall remove toward the north and half of it toward the south?" 2 Zech. 14:4.

9. Is not the Lord coming to destroy death?

10. Is the Lord coming to destroy the Lord's coming?

11. Is not calling death the Lord's coming, wresting Scripture and ruining the dictionary?

12. Is it not barely possible that the Lord's coming means the Lord's coming?

13. Would it help a Christian in trouble to say, "be patient, you will die soon?" Jas. 5:8.

14. Should not a theory of the Lord's coming have something more to recommend it than mere absurdity.—The Lord's Coming, a booklet published by C. C. Cook, 150 Nassau Street, New York. Price 5 cents per copy.

"BUT HE SPAKE OF THE TEMPLE OF HIS BODY."

The Temple of His Body Now on Earth—the Church of the Living God

A temple signifies "a house or dwelling of God, a building erected and set apart for the worship of the true God." It is spoken, first, of that magnificent building erected by Solomon at Jerusalem; secondly of the tabernacle, which was of the same use and significance as the temple; thirdly, of Christ's body. "For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily," as the glory of God did visibly in the temple. John 2:19-21. Col. 2:9. Now what constitutes the temple of his body? Paul in writing to his brethren at Corinth said: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" Then gives them this warning, "If any man defile (or destroy, mar) the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." 1 Cor. 3:16-17. Ye are the temple of the living God. 2 Cor. 6:16. And the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple. Mal. 3:1. When does the Lord come to his temple? For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. 1 Thess. 4:16-17. Then the temple of his body is here on earth, and consists of people that have believed and obeyed the gospel that Christ and his apostles preached; in fact, all that have their names written in the book of life and are not blotted out.

The temple of his body is glorious. For our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body.

The temple of his body is the church. Fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church. Col. 1:22-25. And he is the head of the body, the church. Col. 1:18. Gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body. Eph. 1:22-23. Eph. 5:24, 27, 32.

Now if the baptized believers of the true gospel are the temple of his body, how necessary it is that we all speak the same doctrine and no divisions [illegible] the building, or it cannot be fitly framed together, unto an holy temple in the the Lord. Eph. 2:20-21. We sadly fear that many who think they are fit material for to be framed into the temple are not sound timber, and if found so, will surely be discarded. Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. * * * What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God. Now here are various idols and whosoever worships any one of them is not the temple of the living God, nor a part of it. 2 Cor. 6:14 to 18.

Now let us "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus, the Author and finisher of our faith: who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God," but very soon coming to receive the temple of his body. Then what glorious joy awaits the waiting ones.

E. W. KNAPP.
Monkland, Oregon.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE REPORT.

The twenty-sixth annual conference of the churches of God in Nebraska, was held in Moorefield, from August 26 to September 3 inclusive, with a good representation from all parts of the state; and we pray that much good will come to Christ's cause as a result of each and every meeting and talk held during the session.

Five took a stand for the truth through the preaching of the gospel by Bro. Adams and Bro. Huggins. How zealous we should be for the few simple words of the gospel, which have the power to start us in the right path, and also to give us the necessary hope and encouragement to keep us there. May each one who has taken Christ's name upon himself so draw upon this source of strength and hope that he may be purified and made fit to retain that name when he comes. We can draw upon this source for strength only by studying the gospel for the food and essence contained in it.

The reports of the churches showed in general a splendid interest in local meetings—regular Sunday Schools or Bible Readings being held in most of the places.

The officers chosen for the present year are:—Bro. M. D. Newell, Blair, Neb., president; Bro. Wesley Stephenson, Moorefield, Neb., vice president; Sister Emma E. Davis, 3301 Taylor street, Omaha, Neb., treasurer; Sister Alta King, of Cushing, Neb., secretary.

Bro. Almus Adams was again unanimously chosen as Evangelist to spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom, and the things concerning Christ's name.

ALTA KING, Sec.

WHAT IS IMMORTALITY?

Is it ours Inherently, or by Acquisition?

The above question is answered in two different ways: One party claiming that it is an inherent principle, that by our natural birth we inherit it in the shape of an immortal soul; another party claiming that it must be acquired—in other words, immortality is conditional. The second statement expresses the writer's conception of immortality. There are two words in which are expressed the two conditions; viz, mortality and immortality. Mortality expresses a condition subject to death. As God's creatures under the present environments, we are subjects of mortality and death. As material beings we are composed of a number of elements. These are derived from the food we eat and the fluids we drink. Through the law of begettal, growth and birth we become material beings. The life we receive is derived from the atmosphere which we breathe and is composed mainly of the following gases: Oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and carbon. The man whom God created was made of the dust of the ground. After the Lord God had created or formed him he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. This is the principle that animated the dust-made man. This changed the man from an inanimate to an animate being, to a being that could not act to one who was active. This changed condition the prophet calls a living soul or a soul that lives. Soul and living soul are each applied to beasts and creeping things. See Gen. 1:20 and 30. This being true, it can not be that living soul means more than a person that is animated. Solomon says of the sons of men and beasts, that they all have the same breath or spirit, (ruach); All come from the dust and all return to the dust. As one dieth so dieth the other. Eccl. 3:19-20. The Psalmist says that the day that man's breath goeth forth his thought perish. Job says in speaking of this class of creatures, "He cometh forth as a flower and is cut down; he fleeth as a shadow and continueth not. The dead praise not the Lord nor any that go down into silence." Psa. 115:17. Paul in 1 Tim. 4:8 speaks of "the life that now is," and of "that which is to come." In this scripture the apostle draws a sharp line between the two lives. Each is from a different source. The first is derived from the first Adam who is declared to be earthy. He had animal life only, and his offspring have the same kind of life. 1 Cor. 15:45-49.

We have called attention to the terms mortality and immortality. We wish to contrast them a little more sharply. They express conditions. The source of immortality is derived from the deity and was given to his son that he might give it to as many as would believe in him. In John 4:24 Jesus declares that God is a spirit. In John 5:26 we read that the "Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the son to have life in himself." In these two scriptures we find that the deity is a spirit being, and that he has life in himself. No being possesses this kind of life but the deity. He is the Father Spirit. Jesus in the son Spirit. The father has made his son immortal. The son now possesses a nature above that of our race. Paul says "There is a natural or animal body, and there is a spiritual body." He also declares that Christ is that spirit body; also that he is a heavenly-made body, not of the earth. He derived his life from the Father Spirit. In speaking of the deity, Paul says: He only hath immortality. Our future life can only be derived from "pre-existent life." That there must be a changed condition for all things is evident from the scriptures. The apostle Paul teaches this in his second Corinthian letter 4:18; he speaks of the two conditions. The first is the temporal. The second is to be the eternal. He says: "We look not at the things temporal but at the things eternal." The temporal things here spoken of must mean this arrangement of things; viz: political, social, commercial, religious, etc. These constitute the earth and the heaven that must pass away in order that the heavenly things can be instituted.

The apostle then speaks of the two conditions. We give McKnight's translation, chapt. 5:1, etc: "For we know that when our earthly house, which is a tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." The present is political, social and religious, and when Jesus comes all these things which the apostle calls "a tent" will vanish away. When these unsubstantial things are no more then the permanent things will have been established. The political arrangement that God will establish will endure forever; for the prophet says: "His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and shall never pass away." Further, the apostle says, "But yet, in this tent we groan, earnestly desiring to go permanently into our habitation which is heavenly." It is not that our immortal soul groans in our body, but that we personally groan and have a desire to go into that permanent building. The order is that the first must pass away before the second can be established. The kingdoms of this world will become a part of the kingdom of God. In the fourth verse the apostle reaches the climax of his argument:

"But yet, we who are in the tent groan, being burdened: not because we desire to go out, but to go permanently in, that what is mortal may be swallowed up of life." We who look at the eternal things are burdened and desire that our Lord will return and establish His kingdom which will make this earth a garden of Eden. In Rom. 8:19 we read, "For the earnest desire of the creature looketh for the revelation of the son of God." Phil. 3:20, 21. "For our polity or citizenship begins in the heavens, from whence also we are expecting a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who will transform the body of our humiliation into a conformity with his glorious body, according to the energy by which he is able even to subject all things to himself." (Diaglott).

Dear brothers and sisters, let us look to the time when we shall have put on that incorruptible nature. Then will we be clothed upon with immortality. Then will this mortality be swallowed up of life. May the Lord come quickly, is our prayer.

D. C. ROBISON.
Salem, Ohio.

BUILDING UP YOURSELVES

Jude 20

"But ye, beloved, building up yourself in your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."

Dear brothers and sisters: Jude in commencing this epistle, designates a certain class to whom he is speaking; "To them that are sactified by God the Father and preserved in Jesus Christ and called." Sanctification is to be set apart or be separated; all such have learned the Father's method of separating those who seek to know and to do his will. Peter addresses them as those who have "obtained like precious faith with us." Simeon also declares how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out a people for his name; the object being to make of them kings and priests that they may assist in filling this earth with God's glory.

Jude's exhortation to the ecclesia of his day of building themselves up in their most holy faith, is of equal, if not more importance in our day, for these last days abound with iniquity. Paul writing to Timothy assures us that all scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable, first for doctrine; next for reproof; next for correction; and next for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, built up, thoroughly furnished unto every good work. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son. Without faith it is impossible to please God; and how can we have faith if ignorant of the basis God has given for our faith to rest upon.

Paul writing to the Ephesians says there is one Faith and one Hope; and if only one saving Faith and Hope revealed in the Word, it is incumbent on each of us to assure ourselves of what it is, before we commence to build. Other foundation can no man lay than is laid, which is Christ Jesus In him and through him ar. all things. A correct faith is built upon the things God has revealed through prophets, Jesus Christ and the apostles. The basis of faith and hope is included in one word "Gospel," or Glad Tidings. Jude's "most holy faith" is divine and pure; it will separate man from all impurities of the flesh and make him zealous of good works. God is selecting world rulers for the glorious coming age, which we feel sure is nigh at hand. Many are called, but few are chosen, because straight is the gate and narrow is the way to life, and few there be that find it. He ye doers of the word and not hearers only. We are commanded to exhort and build each other up, and Malachi says, "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon his name, and they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels and I will spare them, "save them." Let us keep in mind then, that our works are recorded in that book of remembrance and in the day when the book is opened every man will be rewarded as his work shall be. God is infinite in wisdom and power, also just, and the justifier of all those who put their trust in him, whose faith is based on his sure word of promise, to fill this earth with God's glory by him whom he hath ordained, even Christ Jesus. We thank and praise his name for that unspeakable gift, even the gift of his only begotten son, whom to know is eternal life. God is love; Christ is love; how can we thank him enough for the revelation he has given us of himself and his purposes.

Paul says, it is those who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life, that shall obtain it; and that these vile or corruptible bodies will be changed and fashioned like unto his own glorious body. In Adam all die, but when we get into Christ and maintain that status, the promise is to all such that they shall be made alive in Christ. Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. To those who are looking for him he will appear the second time, not as a sin offering, but "unto salvation." These, dear brothers and sisters, are some of the things set before us as inducements to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil age.

What would be earth's best of blessings
For a little lonely hour,
Should we miss those heavenly ages,
And the resurrection power.

The reward for labor done in the Master's vineyard is more than we could ask or think. "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Dear brothers and sisters, this is our labor here, to overcome the desires of the flesh and the world to be servants of God and have our fruit unto holiness, that in the end we may be given eternal life. What is the loadstone that binds us to each other and to God and Christ? It is the love of God, who is so rich in mercy for his great love wherewith he has loved us, even when we were dead in trespass and in sin, and has raised us up to sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus now, that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Jesus Christ. As God's love and purpose unfolds to us, and we see to what kingly honors we are called, through the atoning blood of Christ, our hearts are filled with love and praise, and we long for our Lord's return. Yes, ours is a waiting attitude, waiting for the day when the clouds shall roll away; for the kingdom soon to come; for the saints' eternal home. And when he comes we shall see him as he is, and he made like him, and be forever with him in the kingdom of God on earth; when paradise will be restored, the curse removed and the nations give him the glory due unto his name and God will be all in all. My prayer is that we may redeem the the time knowing how short it is. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Amen.

CHARLES MOORE.
Salem, Ohio.

INDIANA CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

Thursday, October 5.

7:00 p. m. Song and Prayer. Address of welcome, D. T. Halstead. Response and sermon by Fred Austin.

Friday, October 6.

9:30 to 9:30 Song and prayer service, Emma Railsback.
9:30 to 10:30 Bible School, S. J. Lindsay.
10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Nature and Operation of the Holy Spirit.
1:30 to 1:45, song service.
1:45 to 2:30, business meeting.
2:45 to 3:30, sermon, Fred Austin.
7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Mattie Benjamin.
7:30, sermon, S. J. Lindsay.

Saturday, October 7

9:00 to 9:30, social meeting, Bennett Boggs.
9:30 to 10:30, Bible school, S. J. Lindsay.
10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Fred Austin.
1:30 to 1:45, song service.
1:45 to 2:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Image of the Beast.
2:45, business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Jessie Pence.
7:30, sermon, subject, Faith, Fred Austin.

Sunday, October 8.

9:30 to 10:30 social and song service, Wm. Huffer.
10:30 to 11:30, sermon, Revelations, S. J. Lindsay.
2:00 p. m., sermon, Fred Austin.
3:00 p. m., communion service, D. T. Halstead.
7:00 p. m., social and song service, Ezra C. Railsback.
7:30 p. m., sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Blood of Christ.

Conference Notice.

To the Church of God in Indiana greeting:

The Conference this year in Indiana has been arranged to meet at Rensselaer as per program above, and it is the urgent desire of the officers and program committee that a goodly representation from each of the several churches in the state be present.

Let us lay aside the cares of our business life for a few days and take up our Father's business, and He will recompense us at the resurrection of the just. Come all that can and enjoy a season of song and praise to Him who gives us life and its enjoyments. Bring this program. Address communications relative to the conference to D. T. Halstead, Rensselaer, Ind.

F. M. McCrory, Vice-Pres.

GOLD DUST

"A good example is the best sermon."

"The true critic knows that others know something."

"Don't wait for extraordinary opportunities—seize common occasions and make them great."

"Real knowledge, like everything else of value, is not to be obtained easily. It must be worked for, studied for, thought for, and more than all, must be prayed for."

"True religion is no Sunday dress; God expects us to wear it every day of the week, especially in business transactions."

"The best thing we can give one another is appreciation. We are helped when we receive it—we love those who bestow it. The tacit tribute of respect or loving esteem is the very oil of gladness to our drooping hearts."

Dixon, Ill. ANNA DREW.

PASS ON THE PRAISE

To Wife—To Mother—To All

"You're a great little wife, and I don't know what I would do without you." And as he spoke he put his arms about her and kissed her, and she forgot all the care in that moment. And, forgreeting all, she sang as she washed the dishes and sang as she made the beds, and the song was heard next door, and a woman there caught the refrain and sang also, and two homes were happier because he had told her that sweet old story—the story of the love of a husband for a wife. As she sang the butcher boy who called for the order heard it and went out whistling on his journey, and the world heard the whistle, and one man, hearing it thought, "Here is a lad who loves his work, a lad happy and contented."

And because she sang her heart was mellowed, and as she swept about the back door the cool air kissed her on the cheek and she thought of a poor old woman she knew, and a little basket went over to that home with a quarter for a crate or two of wood. So, because he kissed her and praised her the song came and the influence went out and out.

Pass on the praise.

A word and you make a rift in the cloud; a smile and you may create a new resolve; a grasp of the hand and you may save a soul from destruction.

Pass on the praise.

Does your clerk do well? Tell him that you are pleased, and if he is a good clerk he will appreciate it more than a raise. A good clerk does not work for his salary alone.

Teacher, if the child is good, tell him about it, if he is better, tell him again. Thus you see good better, best.

Pass on the praise now. Pass it on in the home. Don't go to the grave and call "Mother." Don't plead, "Hear me, mother; you were a kind mother; you were a good mother, and smoothed away many a rugged path for me."

Those ears cannot hear that glad admission. Those eyes cannot see the light of earnestness in yours. Those hands may not return the embrace you wish to give.

Why call so late? Pass on the praise today.

—Heart Throbs. Selected by E. W. Knapp.

I Thess. 4:16,17 interpreted literally

I Thess. 4:16,17; "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." I think other scriptures justify a literal interpretation of this. Read Acts 1:9-11 Here we find the law of gravitation suspended or counteracted, for Jesus to ascend to the right hand of the Father. Jesus also suspended the law of gravitation when he walked on the sea. Matt. 14:25. St. John says, "Behold, now, are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3:2. Then gravitation will not limit their power. Jesus said, "Neither can they die any more, for the are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Matt. 20:36. The angels are not limited by the law of gravitation: see Judg. 13:19.

In Daniel 9:21, we find the following language: "Yea, while I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation." I cannot believe that Gabriel found a wild horse or camel, or that he borrowed or hired one, in order that he might "be caused to fly swiftly." After the heavenly host praised God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, etc., the angels went away from them (the shepherds) into heaven, etc. These and other passages of similar import, confirm my mind in believing that 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17, is to be interpreted literally.

Submitted in love of the true gospel.

D. D. LATHROP.

OBITUARY

Alleta Ann Bruner was born in Ohio, May 18, 1834. She was united in marriage to John Fitz, October 1, 1857. At an early date they removed from their native state and located in Irving, Tama County, Iowa. It was there that they heard and embraced the glad tidings of God's coming Kingdom on the earth, and signified their faith in the gospel by obedience in baptism. As pioneer members of the Irving church they assisted in the erection of a house of worship which, for many years, was a center of religious activity for those of restitution faith, and stands today a monument to the zeal and enterprise of this early body of believeres.

Five children were born to brother and sister Fitz, but the arch enemy robbed them of two sons, Alva O. and Spencer A., who were laid to rest in the Irving cemetery. One daughter, sister Etta M. Fitz, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and two sons, Oris I. and Elmer R., survive their parents; the husband and father having entered the land of shadows some two years ago.

Sister Fitz will long be remembered for many acts of loving service performed during her residence in Irving.

Her death occurred July 16, 1911. The funeral was conducted from the Restitution Church in Irving, and she was laid to rest beside her husband to await the return of the Master.

Mrs. Ida Marsh,
Irving, Ia.

Miss Hazel L. Rouse, the only child of Charles H. and Emma J. Rouse, was born May 25, 1896, at the parents present home in Hamlet, Indiana. She has grown to young womanhood under the care of her doting parents, receiving the advantages of good schools, from which she graduated in the common branches in good standing in the spring of 1910, and would have entered High school today, had it not been for her lamentable death. Her teachers have testified to her splendid school record and good behavior in the discharge of her duty, while under their care. Hazel has always shown a disposition of obedience to parents, kindness to associates, and friendliness to the children with whom she came in contact. She surely possessed a character that would be acceptable to the Savior of the world.

She was taken sick last Tuesday and was taken to the hospital in South Bend on Friday, where she passed out of life, Saturday morning at 5 o'clock, September 9, 1911, at the age of 15 years, 3 months, and 14 days. She did not realize her critical condition, but was rational and hopeful to the last, falling asleep in a faint without any struggle. She leaves her loving parents, many other relatives, her school mates and numerous friends to mourn because of her untimely death.

Funeral services were held from the M. E. church in Hamlet on Monday, September 11, 1911, at 2 o'clock, p. m., conducted by D. R. Vanvactor, of Argos, Indiana, and she was laid to rest in Fletcher cemetery to await the coming of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and his resurrection.

D. E. Vanvactor,
Argos, Ind.

"Resolved! That worry is work. People who worry have got a life job with no pay envelope on Saturdays. Worry is crossing the bridge before you come to it and while you're on it and after you're over. Tige says he never thinks about it until he gets there, and if the bridge is down he swims the creek. I guess we can't worry if we stop saying 'if'."—Buster Brown.

Manager's Column

This week's mail brought a letter from a sister in the West who is entirely isolated from brethren of like precious faith. She writes, "I have not met with any of the brethren for over four years, but I do get the weekly visit of 'The Restitution.' It's worth a lot of good hard effort just to be able to help that sister in her loneliness.

The new subscribers have been coming in pretty good this week. Let's keep the good work up. It isn't so hard when once you get started is it? Those sending names of one or more new subscribers for a year should remember that they are entitled to a premium. See offer on this page. Be sure and specify which one you want, as it saves delay. Those who do not want copies of Brother Wilson's books, or the one by Brother Huggins, should take advantage of this offer, as by sending in a new subscriber or two you can secure one free.

Another thing to remember. Each week we always print additional copies of the paper to be used as samples, we are always glad to send you as many as you can use, all you have to do is send a few stamps to pay postage. If you are to hold special meetings of any kind send for additional copies to give to those attending.

That was a good suggestion made several weeks ago in regard to sending in photos of interest to the brethren at large, but so far we have not received any to publish. If you have a photo that you think would be of interest, take it to your local printer and have him make an electrotype, and a few words of explanation and we will be glad to print it. Don't be bashful, send them along.

PLEASING THE LORD

"Ye are not your own." 1 Cor. 6:19-20. The true Christian is not his own but belongs to another. We are not to seek to please ourselves, but seek to please our dear Lord. He bought us with his precious blood. We should obey him by doing his will. We should glorify our Heavenly Father through his son and our anointed Lord in our "body" and "spirit;" they are both the Lord's.
Reform, Ark. J. M. MAJOR.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

NOTICE.

Those who are concerned will please take notice that the secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Conference is Brother W. C. Heacock, 230 Arlington avenue, Canton, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

N. E. Nelson $3.00
Herman Dickle ..... .50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. Its New Fashion Features in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and general matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Send us a postal today or send 5c for a sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make up your own home, with economy and style, clothing for yourself and children, which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalog and Cash Price Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 60 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN
THE RESTITUTION
RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
B. H. LANG W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon Annex

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (I Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 3-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, OCTOBER 4, 1911 No. 38

THE WONDERFUL NAME.

"The Mistakes of My Life Are Many."

There's a name that we love best of all, friends,
There's a name that in heaven's most sweet,
'Tis the name of the crucified Lord, friends,
And we're waiting our loved one to greet.

Chorus:—
Sing it softly in cadences sweet, friends;
Sing it loud till it reaches heaven's dome,
He is coming again, he will stay, dear friends,
He's coming to make this his home.

Long ago they did scoff and reject him,
Long ago they condemned him to die;
But the Father did love him and raise him,
And take to his home in the sky.

Chorus.

There the angels in glad adoration,
Bow before him and honor his name;
Here his people of every nation,
Bow before him and honor the same.

Chorus.

They tell us he's coming again, friends,
To the land and the home of his birth,
His scepter shall sway o'er the seas, friends,
His dominion shall be o'er the earth.

Chorus.

Then the nation's will bow before him,
And be glad their allegiance to own:
And his people will hover around him,
And share in his honor and throne.

LILLIE H. WILLIS.

Galva, Ill.

"THOU SHALT NOT SURELY DIE."—Gen. 3:4

A Sermon by the Late Brother M. Joplin.

Objections Answered.

(Continued issue of Sept. 20th)

1. "It must be true that we have an immortal soul, because we have witnessed the dying of some loved ones who were enraptured with the foretaste of the glory immediately to be entered upon by them in heaven after the mortal coil had been rolled off."

Of course the objector will allow us to examine the truthfulness or validity of this objection and would inquire, first, whether the principle on which this objection is based is a good one; if it is, it will stand the testing we may subject it to. It is whether a falsehood when believed will impart joy and peace like that of ones' expecting to go to heaven? You will all recollect the fearful war of the Crimea, between Russia and the allies of Europe. You recollect also the report that came of Sebastopol having fallen! You recollect also the extravagant demonstrations of joy that were made by our neighbors across the line! Now what was it impelled to make such demonstration. It was not because Sebastopol was taken; it did not fall for a year afterward, if I remember rightly; but it was their faith in the report!

And friends, we can come pretty close home to illustrate the fallacy of this principle. Once upon a time we were startled by the ringing of bells and the booming of cannon in the dead of the night and hundreds of happy voices made the very streets of Cleveland ring with "Hail Columbia" and "Marching Along." Now allowing the objectors principle to be correct, Richmond must have been captured at that time or men could not experience such joy. But friends, they believed the report and proved their faith by their work, but the report was not true their faith was vain, but it gave them joy just the same.

Let these reflections cause us all to search the Scriptures to see if these things are so, and then believe. But not only is this principle false; the hope itself is a false one. "Faith," says the apostle, "comes by hearing the word of God." You cannot find one promise in all God's revelation of dying and going to heaven at death. Well now it has been a false report you have believed. We have already shown who started this report, proved him to be a base liar and a murderer—not fit to be believed; and I say it boldly, not one plain, positive Scripture can be produced to show that man has natural immortality.. If he would have it he must obtain it through him who brought life and immortality to light in the Gospel.

Another Objection

is "that this doctrine cannot be true because it would destroy all the influence of the Gospel. No good could be done if men said they were mortal and would be destroyed if they did not repent, etc. But it is true nevertheless, for God says "the soul that sinneth it shall die; moreover you have yet to learn what is the motive power of the Gospel! It was love that compelled the apostles to love. They loved because they were first loved. A man who loves what is right because he is afraid of the consequensees of wrong doing, is no better at heart than many who are not restrained in that way. God does reveal himself as the God of love; and it is contrary to his revealed purpose to be pleased with the service of dread.

Still Another Objection

is that the thief on the cross was promised to be in Paradise with Christ, that very day which could not be of man was mortal as you say.

We will see if any such promise was made! I believe the Lord Jesus heard and answered the petition of the thief, not something else. "Lord remember me, when thou comest into the kingdom." This was an intelligent prayer! Believed the person before him to be the promised Messiah, and that he would come again and establish the kingdom! Verily, I say unto thee today, thou shalt be with me in paradise. When? Why when he comes in his kingdom, not before he—said he would remember his people and come again. Now where is your proof? It just rests on the position of a single comma, which was not placed there for 1600 years after it was written, and when this false doctrine was rife. I am a compositor myself, and when a piece of manuscript is put into my hand, it may or may not be punctuated. If it is not the idea of the author must pass through my head before I can punctuate it correctly. If I fail to get the ideas intended, the author changes the punctuation to suit himself or the public would misunderstand him. This scripture was punctuated honestly, no doubt, but the whole tenor of the scriptures is against this construction, and thus we can even submit it, you see to the heavenly author, for decision. Let us read it again: Verily I say unto thee today, thou shalt be with me in paradise." Always place the comma after today, instead of after thee. If this is not so, how do you get along with what he says three days after: "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my father." These passages then, would evidently conflict!

Only One More Objection.

that is the parable of the "Rich Man and Lazarus."

Now, this is either a parable or some other figure of speech, or it is plain, positive teaching; which is it? I claim that it is a parable, because Christ was addressing the Jews and it is said he spoke to them only in parables; besides, the parables of our Lord which he afterwards explained, should be a guide to us hence we learn that not one parable, was figurative, but the whole was a figure to illustrate some great truths. So we see if the man covered with sores in Abraham's bosom, is too absurd to be read literally, neither can that which relates to the Rich Man being in hell fire. Now I will ask you to remember the proof we gave that men are not rewarded till the judgment. Then notice that this matter, if directly literal would have transpired before the judgment! For the judgment has not taken place yet, and I hope none will presume to say after this, that God punishes before judging!

Again you will bear with my plainness of speech in this matter, while I would remark that taking it literally involves you in still more difficulty. You see the fact of his being covered with sores destroys your own doctrine, for the saved spirit of a person could never be troubled in that way by your own admission; while, as I understand man to be mortal—all mortal—till resurrected incorruptible—not subject to sores, this must be a parable. We have found what it does not, cannot teach, but cannot at present, for want of time say what it does teach:

The evils growing out of the great falsehood are beyond all calculation—"Thou shalt not surely die," was a few years ago, the sum and substance of nearly all the gospel that could be heard or in other words, the torments of a never-ending—burning hell was constantly kept before all congregations—and the love of Christ as a motive comparatively neglected! Not quite so bad now; I think they begin to doubt themselves, if there is no outlet, no slackening of vengeance! Look at the thousands of those, who in our own land, having tried to reconcile this doctrine with the character of the God of the bible, but failing to do so, have rushed to the opposite extreme, and teach that all will ultimately be saved.

Look at the thousands in this land of bibles, who profess to communicate with the spirit of the dead, while we read that they are conscious, and endowed with wisdom so as to instruct us?) No! But there is no work, nor device, nor wisdom, nor knowledge, in the grave (Heb. Sheol) Greek hades whither thou goest." Ecc. 9:10.

Oh! How thankful I feel, that I can read straight out from the living oracles, a reason for my hope. Titus 1:2. "In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the time of the ages!" How many of us have that blessed hope? How many of us are expecting a crown of life when the chief shepherd shall appear? For to them that look for him he is to appear unto salvation, or life, which is the meaning of the term? Am I looking for the dear Lord to come and remember me with all the faithful when he comes in his kingdom? Am I living as becometh the gospel? Believers, how is it with you? Answer to God and your consciences! But poor sinner you must believe, repent, be baptized, and continue in the narrow way that leads to life everlasting, or what? Why death, death everlasting! a death from which there is no reprieve—depend upon its God's word will be verified. The soul that sinneth it shall die! Mark! It is for your own sin you shall die the second death, if you do not repent, for Christ having died, and rose again, that as in Adam all died, so in Christ shall all be made alive, but it is to be rewarded according to your deeds: if you have sown to the flesh, you shall reap corruption.

Oh! Let me entreat you by all the anguish of love in the garden, by all his love on the cross, to come to him for that life which enable you, when the voice of him who burst the bars of death asunder shall redeem, to rise triumphant over death, then you will be able to eat

The fruit of life's fair tree;
To walk the golden streets of the new Jerusalem;
Range through the peaceful fields of our long-lost Eden home.

Shout all our trials ended and be forever with the Lord. But let us all remember the injunction of Paul, Col. 2:8: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ."

FAITH AND WORKS

United They Stand; Divided They Fall

Faith is a trusting belief in something: Sometimes it is in the words and promises of some one; sometimes it is placed in a plan by which we mean to bring to pass an object in life. It has a stronger meaning and carries the mind one step farther than the term "belief." It is such strong belief that it stirs us to action. If we truly have faith in a plan by which we mean to bring to pass some object in life, this faith will cause us to risk all things, and sacrifice all things to accomplish that object. We will make money, education and pleasures bend to its furtherance. We may start to work with only belief but just as fast as we get strong absolute proof, that the plan will work, by experience or otherwise, this belief increases to faith.

Faith produces in our minds the next thing to absolute knowledge. The only difference between the knowledge which we hold because of faith and that which we hold because of experience, is the actual happening of what we have faith in, but we have gained the faith by sure absolute proof that we can consider things that are not as though they were.

True faith is always and essentially active and will bring results.

This is why faith in God and the promises contained in His word is made the condition of our salvation. Salvation is the act of being saved from sin and all its results, such as sorrow, remorse, sickness and death, and this action rests wholly with us. We must work out our own salvation. It is evident that we can not accomplish anything which we may have to do without inducement, encouragement and assurance of its success. These three incentives are essential to success. Take them away and effort stops. God has given us all three to aid us in working out salvation, if we have perfect faith in Him, and no matter how strong our desire to rid ourselves of sin we will fail if we do not have faith in Him and His words; for there is no other sure and perfect source from which we can draw the necessary encouragement and assurance.

For inducement and encouragement to keep us in the right way, God has given promises of eternal joy and happiness, and of living in this world perfected as kings and priests with Christ. For assurance that the purification of our minds and bodies will not be for naught, we have the promise of a resurrection to a never ending existence in which we may enjoy our purified condition, and above all, to help others to the same conditions and blessings. That we may have perfect faith in these promises, God has given us strong clear proofs. The chief of these proofs is the life, death and resurrection of Christ. Here we have God's plan of salvation, which he has given us to work by, demonstrated on a small scale. We are sure if the plan brought life and happiness to Christ it will bring the same to us, if we purify ourselves as He was pure. We see that success rests with us and if we have faith, we will work accordingly to bring success.

God says no sin shall enter his kingdom where these blessings are obtained, therefore we can not gain these blessings until we are pure. This purification is accomplished only through faith in God and His Gospel. God's word says faith will, (and this makes faith an active element in our minds), purify our hearts, will sanctify us, will exclude boasting, will cause us to please God. In a few words, faith will work in us a Christ-like character. It will cause us to dig out all evil thoughts and actions, and purify ourselves as Christ was pure; it will cause us to set ourselves apart for His work; through it we will receive the sentence, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." We have God's word for it as to what faith will do. If we claim to have faith and yet do not show these results we may be sure that what we claim as faith is not the active faith required by God, but only a passive, dead belief which brings no results.

If we read God's word we learn what works He approves of our doing. "The fruits of the spirit are love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance." These characteristics can result in nothing but a Christ-like character. Since a Christ-like character can only through faith in God and His Gospel, the works approved by God is a natural outgrowth of true faith. True faith and Godly works are of equal importance in the plan of salvation; they are as inseparable as cause and effect. True faith is the only sure foundation for character building and final salvation: If one is missing the other is missing also.

If we boast good works but have no knowledge of God's Gospel and promises, we may be sure the works are done—simply from a moral standpoint—from a sense of duty to mankind, or because it is natural for us to do good, or for show to the world. These works are not works of salvation. God says all things must be done in Christ's name—for love of Him. Otherwise our wills would not be in subjection to his, and boasting would not be excluded.

After we have been baptized into Christ's name, after we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine given us by Christ, and have exercised faith, the aim and ambition of our life will be to work out a Christ-like character. Making this the aim and ambition of our life does not in the least lessen the importance of faith in God and the Gospel; for this is the very foundation upon which we must work. Therefore we must continue our faith. When it begins to grow weak, effort begins to drag, because encouragement and assurance are being taken away.

On the other hand, if we allow our efforts at purification to lag, faith begins to weaken, because its natural outlet is closed. It weakens just as our muscles weaken when allowed to be idle. Faith, to be strong, must be allowed to exercise and flow thru its channels of good works. Faith and works each has its place in the plan of salvation, and neither can be dispensed within any degree without hurting the other accordingly.

ALTA KING.

Cushing, Neb.

WAITING ON THE LORD.

Service Not Lassitude.

Psalm 27:14—Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait I say, on the Lord.

Now, brothers and sisters, this may be taken by some people in two ways; and I am afraid the general run of people take it the wrong way. They take it to mean, Wait for the Lord to wait on you, or to look after you, without you doing any of the waiting on the Lord. The way this is generally taken reminds me of the old and new business mottoes: The old, "Everything comes to him who waits." The new, "Everything comes to him who hustles while the other waits." So while the other waits for the Lord to serve him, the good things of his house, we want to hustle and have the Lord bless us because we have waited on him, and not he on us.

"Be of Good Courage."

It surely is necessary to be of good courage, and exceptionally so if we are waiting for something to happen to us, and are simply waiting in a blank sort of a way.

While waiting that way we often become deadened to a certain extent, and do not realize the beauties and the opportunities that surround us, and are daily being neglected. If we are of good courage, and appreciate the temporal blessings, and all the blessings and mercies we have already enjoyed, then we are in a condition to take unto ourselves and enjoy all those things which generally are passed by, and are not recognized as blessings. How true is the saying, "We never miss the water until the well runs dry."

Where are we in a few months if we do not have rain? And if we did not have the winds in the summer time, and the days and nights and seasons, and trades, where are we?

The Lord surely has waited on us already, and it is time for us to realize it, and appreciate the things he has done for us. If we want to enjoy the things the Lord has done for us we want to wait on the Lord, and be of good courage. Then he "shall strengthen thine heart."

We all know that there are times when we lose courage, when we are apparently doing the right thing, and think we are very much deserted, and become discouraged. We must have the courage of Paul as expressed in Romans 8:28: "For we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Then we must realize we have not been waiting on the Lord, or being his servants, as we should, for he rewardeth his servants bountifully. We forget that everything we have is the Lord's, and that only through him we live and move and have our being.

Only through his tolerance do we receive our present life, and only through his grace and love for us do we have any promise of a future life.

"Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord."

P. L. MORRON.

Salem, Ohio.

PRESIDENT OF INDIANA BEREANS RESIGNS

Indiana Bereans:

Realizing that the office of president of the Berean society of the state of Indiana requires more time and strength than I have been able to devote to it, and having the greatest good of the society at heart, and sincerest wishes for its service for the Master.

Because of ill-health and pressure of work, I hereby tender my resignation as president of the Berean society of the state of Indiana, said resignation to take effect October 1, 1911.

EVELYN K. HARSCH.

South Bend, Ind.

P. S.—According to the Constitution, Art. II., Sec. 4, the officers have elected Mrs. Emma C. Railsback, of 411 E. South street, South Bend, Ind., to fill this vacancy, said term of office to begin October 1, 1911.—E. K. H.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 802 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Oct. 4, 1911

EDITORIAL

Brother John Foore, of Parsons, Kan., familiarly known as "Uncle John," writes to say that his health is still poor. He says he is some better now than formerly, and in concluding his epistle says, "I want my brethren to know how I am and where I am, and that I am strong in the faith of the soon coming Lord. Let us be ready when he comes." Interested brethren will please note that his address is 2012 Corning avenue, Parsons, Kans.

Brother O. J. Allard, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, writes: "Will some one give an explanation of Acts 20:29,30. Does this scripture refer only to doctrine or to business matters as well?" Some more work for our contributors, but they are both able and willing to work.

VALUABLE POSTAL CARD.

From Bro. H. M. Williams, of Ashton, Kansas, we have received the following communication, written on a postal card, and a valuable card it is:

Rom. 2:7; 1 Cor. 15:51-54; 1 Tim. 1:17; 6:16; 2 Tim. 1:10. Every verse in the bible where "immortal" and "immortality" are used. They say God only has it; that Jesus brought it to light through gospel; that saints must seek for it, and will get it when this mortal puts on immortality. By comparing 2 Cor. 5:4 with 1 Cor. 15:51-54, we know that eternal life and immortality mean the same thing. God has this life, and has given it to his son. John 5:26. God's record is we have eternal life in Jesus, and if we do not believe this record we make God a liar. 1 John 5 10-11. Saints hope for eternal life, and are heirs of it (Titus 1:2; 3:7), and will get it in the age to come. (Mark 10:30.) when they that sleep in the dust shall awake. Dan. 12:2. No man has ascended to heaven, John 3:13); neither Jews nor apostles could go where Jesus was going, John 7:32-34; 8:21; 13-33. David is not ascended into heaven, but is dead and buried. Acts 2:34-29. After he served his own generation, he fell on sleep, and saw corruption, Acts 13:36. He will be satisfied when he awakes in God's likeness, Psa. 17-15. God will redeem his soul from the grave. Psa. 49:15. In death there is no remembrance of God- (Psa. 6:5; the dead do not praise him, (Psa. 115:17; their thoughts perish. (Psa. 146:4); both men and beasts go to the same place at death (Eccl 3:19-21) love, hatred, envy perish and they know not any thing (Eccl. 9:5-6); he neither works, devises, has knowledge or wisdom in the grave, (Eccl. 9: 10); his sons come to honor and are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them (Job. 14:21); all in the grave shall come forth to life or damnation (John 5:28 29); if the dead rise and not them that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished, 1 Cor. 14:18.

From these truth we know that men has no immortal soul or immortal spirit, but he will live again, whether good or bad (Dan. 12:2), and be rewarded in the earth, not heaven, at the resurrection, not at death. The reward is now in heaven (Mt. 5:12), but we do not go there to get it, for Jesus brings it with him when he comes with all the holy angels, Matt. 16:27. For us to get this reward we must hear the gospel of the kingdom and gladly receive it, Acts 2:41; 3-28); secondly, we must believe the gospel (Rom. 1:16); thirdly, we must be converted (Acts 3:19); Isa. 6:10); fifthly, we must confess the name of the Lord (Rom. 10:10), and sixthly, we must be baptized (buried, Rom. 6:4), in water to wash away our sins, Acts 10:47; 22-16. When we take these steps we are in Christ, (Gal. 3:27); and out of him God is a consuming fire, Heb. 12:29. He consumes the wicked into smoke (Isa 37: 20), and burns them into ashes, Mal. 4:3, they will be destroyed both soul and body in hell, Matt. 10:28. This is the second death, Ezek. 18:20. A wicked man "dies in his sins" when he dies the first time, but he "dies for his sins" when he dies the second death. This death is called "everlasting punishment" in Matt. 25:40, and the Holy Spirit through Paul explains it to mean "everlasting destruction" in 2 Thess 1:9.

THE LORD FROM HEAVEN

"Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Phil 3:20, 21.

Our conversation is in heaven because it is from there we look for our Savior, and also because we are told in Colossions 3 that if ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." We als have the promise of "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in Glory." When our Savior does appear, he will change our vile bodies that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, which change takes place at the resurrection, as Paul makes plain in his letter to the Corinthians, in which he says: It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkle of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

OWEN A. POTTORF
Salem, Ohio

ITALY IS CELEBRATING THANKSGIVING EARLY THIS YEAR.

—By kind permission of The Cleveland News

"COME AND SEE."

Turkey Must Reap What She Has Sown—Prophesy Requires Her Gradual Decay—Italy's Forces Compared With Turks.

Always interested in the signs of the times, but more so since the weeping John (Rev. 5:4) was invited by the first of the four living ones in a voice of thunder to "come and see." (Rev. 6:1), the servants of God are watching with undivided attention the war cloud which now hangs darkly and threateningly over Italy and Turkey. Tripoli, a Turkish possession in Northern Africa, "looks good" to Italy; and without one plausible pretext for invasion, she has sent Turkey her ultimatum. National aggrandizement usually hides behind some provocation, real or pretended. "The Italian government's position in the Tripoli affair," says the Leader, "is very naked. Little serious effort is made to hide the true nature of the raid upon Turkish territory. The best and most that is said makes only a vague claim that the Turkish authorities in Tripoli have opposed Italian industrial and commercial enterprises in that region and that now, after Italy has declared its intention to seize Tripoli, Italian subjects are not secure there.

This is very bald. It does not mask the real nature of the adventure in colony-building upon which Italy has embarked. Such explanations might as well be dispensed with and the whole enterprise placed upon broader ground. Italy might remind the world that the Turks have for centuries grossly misruled Tripoli; that they are still an alien element there, governing by force; that they have not earned respect for their legal rights as masters in Tripoli, and that it ill becomes Turkey to protest, on moral grounds, against the efforts of any civilized power to better the condition of territory which the Turkeys themselves seized by force of arms, which they do not occupy, and which they govern by the strong arm.

It is the plain truth of history that the Turks sowed, long ago, the seed of such harvests as the one which they are evidently to witness in Tripoli. They won their empire by ruthless wars of conquest. Much of it they have never colonized, never developed, never cared for in any other or higher sense than as despots wringing tribute from unwilling subjects.

Turkey has misused and held back some of the choicest parts of the earth. For many generations Turkish rule has been so flagrantly rapacious, incompetent and scandalous that on moral grounds the Ottoman Sultans may well be held to have forfeited all rights to provinces and possessions which are held only by force, against the will of their inhabitants. Tripoli is such a territory."

This scribe thinks that the explanation of Turkey's invasion by another power without even the semblance of an excuse, is a case of reaping what she has sown. That is the shell of the proposition; it takes a servant of God to "see" the kernel after the shell or "scroll" (Rev. 5:1) has been broken by the strong hands of the Lion of Judah" (C. 5). In the sixth vial of Revelations, 16th chapter "the great Euphrates," that is, the Turkish empire, it is declared must be "dried up," or waste away, before the "way" is ready for the kings of the East. A drying river is the symbol of events of a gradual character, internal rather than external, exhausting the power of the nation. The strong Turkish power began to wane in 1826, when the Sultan destroyed the provincial soldiery, called Janizaries. Signs of weakness and decay soon began to be manifest. Greece (which had been under Turkish rule for 400 years) revolted; then Egypt; then Moldavia and Wallachia, (now Roumania); then Servia; then Bulgaria; then Bosnia and Herzegovina were taken and annexed by Austria; and now Tripoli goes to Italy. We say "goes," for Turkey must not only reap what she has sown, but prophecy must be fulfilled. The harvest of what she has sown must be reaped; prophecy must be fulfilled. Even from the standpoint of natural probability, Italy must win in this contest. This is apparent when Italy's Forces and Turk's are Compared.

ITALY.

Navy.

Battleships	15
Cruisers, first class	10
Cruisers, second and third class	16
Gunboats	13
Destroyers	33
Torpedo boats	75
Submarines	19
Officers and men, 29,931.

Army.

Total war strength	525,000
Available unorganized	1,200,000

TURKEY.

Battleships	4
Cruisers	6
Gunboats	2
Destroyers	4
Torpedo Boats	8
Officers and men 3,800.

Army.

Total strength	725,000
Available unorganized	2,000,000

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins, Brethren and Sisters:

Please turn with me to Ezekiel 44:10-16. You will notice there are two classes of people spoken of here: One class minister unto the people; the other class, unto God. I think the two classes are types of two classes spoken of in Revelations. In the 14th chapter we read of a Lamb standing on Mount Sion, and with him a 144,000 (a limited number) being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb. They are the bride. They will be raised when Jesus comes for his saints.

They form the great Christ body, the body of anointed ones; Jesus is the head.

Then in Rev. 7th hapter, we find a great multitude which no man could number. They are the great harvest. The first class are rulers with Christ; the second "serve God day and night in his temple." The first class "enter into his sactuary, and they shall come near to his table to minister unto Him." They will have glorified bodies, be like Jesus, and see him as he is; but the second class "shall not come near unto God, to do the office of a priest unto Him, nor come near to any of his holy things, in the most holy place; but they shall bear their iniquity." They are not worthy of the bride-ship; but they will be immortal beings. They will stand before the people to minister unto them. Such are my views of these verses in God's holy book.

Your sister in Jesus,
Galva, Ill. CLAUDE H. WILLIS.

CORN SHEAVES.

Gathered from Everywhere.

Zeal.—Exercised with knowledge and prudence in a good cause is praiseworthy, and he who evinces it with steadfastness and perseverence gains the admiration of discriminating minds. Witnessing for God, whether by preaching, by private instruction, or by maintaining a consistent position as one of the assembly of the faithful, all give good scope for zeal in a good and noble cause. One who comes with fire and thunder in discourse, is not as some may imagine, necessarily zealous. He who is rightly entitled to this character acts thoughtfully, calmly, resolutely, and is continuous. He is not easily moved from his purpose, but should adverse circumstances bear him down for a time, he steadily rises again to the surface. May we all know something of that spirit that said:—"The zeal of Thine house hath eaten me up"—zeal in glory to God, and in seeking to bless each other, and in making God's house a house of prayer. How otherwise can we have companionship with those "of whom the world was not worthy?"

Christ was Master of three languages.—It is a mistake to suppose "that Hebrew was the only tongue Christ knew. Aramaic had gradually given place to Greek, and we have several proofs of our Lord's acquaintance with both. When He raised the daughter of Jarius, He addressed her in Aramaic, Talitha cumi; which might be paraphrased, 'my little lamb, rise up.' When He opens the ears of the deaf man He says, Ephphatha, also Aramaic. But in the most trying circumstances of all, when hanging upon the cross His agony found expression in the words of the xxii. Psalm, He does not quote it in Greek, nor in the original Hebrew, but in Aramaic, Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani. This last fact is full of meaning, as it affords proof that our Lord knew Hebrew as well as Aramaic. No Aramaic version from the Hebrew was then in use. He must have translated for Himself.

"The question in regard to Greek, however, is more interesting, for the literature laid open by the possession of Aramaic was relatively small compared with that of which one was made free by the possession of Greek. It seems indubitable, however, contrary to ordinary statements in regard to this matter, that not only did our Lord know Greek, but it was the language which he customarily used. Now what do we find? Our Lord invariably is represented as quoting the scripture in the words of the Septuagint, or only with such small variations as may be due to a pharaphrase. Thus our Lord was master of three languages.—Hebrew, Aramaic and Greek.

Mr. Edison on the Nature of Man.—Mr. Edison has taken time from his scientific investigations, which have centered chiefly in electricity, to take a look into things metaphysical and spiritual. In a magazine article recently he discussed the immortality of the soul. He brought to his subject the reasoning and philosophical powers of a gifted brain accustomed to look more carefully than usual at the relationship and bearing of one principle upon another, one theory upon another, one fact upon another. Mr. Edison denies the immortality of the soul; he declares that he can see no facts in nature leading to any such conclusion. As a sample of his close reasoning on the subject we quote one of his statements which he considers too self-evident to need proof. Indeed, we doubt not that Mr. Edison's position would be that human immortality is not to be assumed, in view of the fact that we are a dying race. We presume that his position is that the proofs must be sought in the opposite quarter—that man must be assumed to be mortal and that any disputing this position must give the proofs of his immortality. We quote Mr. Edison:

"A man's intelligence is the aggregate intelligence of the immeasurable cells which form him—just as the intelligence of a community is the aggregate intelligence of the men and women who inhabit it. If you cut your hand it bleeds. Then you lose cells, and that is quite as if a city lost inhabitants through some tremendous accident."

Meeting Mr. Edison's statement, above quoted, with such candor as the gentleman's intellectual prowess seems to justify, we must admit that there is a great deal of force and logic in his deduction. Mr. Edison has apostolic authority for considering man as made up of various members, each intimately related to the welfare and intelligence of the whole. St. Paul uses this argument in illustrating the true church, "the Body of Christ." He likens one member to the hand; another to the foot; another to the eye, etc., and declares that each is necessary to the completeness and harmony of the whole and adds, "So, also, is The Christ."—1 Cor. 12:12, 27, 28.

We will not here follow the apostle's argument to the Church to note particularly how Jesus is the head of the Church, how every other member is united and interested in each other member. We will take the same example of the human figure. It seems to justify the statement that a man's intelligence is represented in the intelligence of all his members. Human skill is related to human intelligence. Consequently the man who has lost his hands has less intelligence, less opportunity and less skill than previously. If he lose also his feet his intelligence decreases proportionately. If he lose his sight, his hearing and his sense of smell, each loss diminishes his intelligence. A whole village of people devoid of sight, hearing, taste, the sense of smell and of touch would be a very unintelligent community.

This we understand to be Mr. Edison's argument, expressed in different terms. Mr. Edison's terms seem appropriate if we take a sufficiently broad view of his language. To illustrate: If one lose a few drops of blood the loss may make no perceptible impression upon his intelligence. But if he lose a quart of blood his intelligence will be considerably diminished; faintness, stupor, may be expected. This would seem to prove Mr. Edison's statement correct, and that the loss of a few drops of blood is really a loss, to same extent, of vital power, and hence a loss of intelligence, but in so small a degree as not to be appreciable to one in health.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337

Primitive Doctrine

Between these two periods there were immense changes. Some contend that these changes were the result of natural development, the outcome of which was expected and intended by the Founder of the Christian religion. Many others, however, contend that while some of the changes were the result of natural development very many of them were gross perversions, which led latterly to all kinds of abominations. We will find in this period the germs of most of the religious theories of later days.

Gibbon, in the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, in xv chapter, says: "A candid but rational inquiry into the progress and establishment of Christianity may be considered as a very essential part of the history of the Roman Empire. While that great body was invaded by open violence, or undermined by slow decay, a pure and humble religion gently insinuated itself into the minds of men, grew up in silence and obscurity, derived new vigor from opposition and finally erected the triumphant banner of the Cross on the ruins of the Capitol." It shall be the object of the following inquiry to make a careful and candid examination as to how, when and by whom the changes were made. We will quote many well known authors, both ancient and modern, giving credit to each when quoted.

There ought to be very little question as to the belief of the disciples at the beginning of the period, as we have the plain positive statements of the apostles. They had been with Jesus during His ministry; some of them had been with John His forerunner; they were all Jews, and, as far as we know, all humble and mostly illiterate men, from the world's standpoint. They shared with their countrymen an intense hope and desire for the throne of David to be restored to Israel. Christ's followers were sure that "it was He who was to redeem Israel" in the national sense. Mary, His mother, had been told by the angel: "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David. And He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end."

When Jesus witnessed a good confession before Pilate, after being asked: "Art thou a king then? He answered: "Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." (John xviii. 37.) His disciples had expected constantly, during His ministry that He would assume His kingly power at once, and they could not understand Him when he spoke of His death and resurrection, because their minds were full of the idea that He was immediately to take His kingly power and give them positions under Him. His death came to them like a blinding flash of lightning, and they were perfectly amazed; they could not comprehend that He had first to suffer and then enter into His glory.

He was with them forty days after His resurrection, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Their last question to Him was: "Lord, will thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" In answer to this question He does not upbraid them that they "were fools and slow of heart to understand all that the prophets had spoken," as He had done to the two who did not understand about His death and resurrection, but "He said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power."

This personal coming again of Christ to reign here was looked for with intense longing for two hundred years by the majority of professed Christians. Gibbon says: "The ancient and popular doctrine of the Millenium was intimately connected with the second coming of Christ." Christ had taught His disciples to pray: "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done upon the earth as it is in heaven;" and in the sermon on the mount He had told them: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Their whole hopes, thoughts and aspirations centered round the announcement made to them by the angels when Jesus ascended: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner." He, Jesus, had previously told them (John xiv. 2, 3): "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." He had likewise told them (John xiii. 33): "Whither I go ye cannot come." This last saying they could not understand at the time, because they did not expect Him to leave them. They did not understand previous to His resurrection the ex Psalm: "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit Thou at My right hand until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool." On the day of Pentecost Peter quoted this passage to show that it was necessary for Christ to go to heaven and remain there some time; but they did not expect to go there themselves. They believed with the Psalmist: "In death there is no remembrance of Thee; in the grave who shall give Thee thanks?" (Psalm vi. 5.) And Peter asserts that "David is both dead and buried and his sepulchre is with us unto this day * * For David is not ascended into the heavens." (Acts ii 29, 34.)

The immortality of all mankind was not believed in by Christs's followers then. Edmund Stapfer, Professor of Theology in the Protestant University of Paris, writes thus in his work, The Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ: "Let us study more closely the testimony of St. Paul. Like all Jews, he believed in the possibility of a resurrection. The Jews, he believed did not clearly hold the doctrine of the immorality of the soul, according to which death is deliverance from the body, which fetters the spiritual part of one's being; without which the spirit can live, and, indeed, without which it is more happily circumstanced. The Jews understood little or nothing of this doctrine, according to which man is composed of two more or less inimical substances. In their view the world was to be transformed, the dead raised, the body done away with and the kingdom of God thus set up. St. Paul had been brought up in these ideas: he not only admitted a future resurrection, but believed that partial or individual resurrections took place now and again. He found it in no sense incredible that God should raise the dead." Renan, in his work on The Resurrection of Christ, says: "Belief in the immorality of the soul, which under the influence of Greek philosophy has become a Christian dogma, allows us very easily to deprive death of its meaning, since the dissolution of the body is thus the deliverance of the soul, set free henceforth from the burden that weighed upon its true life. But this view, making of a man a compound of two substances, was not intelligible to the Jew. The kingdom of God, or the kingdom of the Spirit was to the Jewish mind a complete transformation of the world, and an annihilation of death."

Christ had taught His disciples that He was "the resurrection and the life" (John xi. 25). "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life" (John iii. 36). He gave them the commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark xvi. 15, 16). This gospel, as understood by the disciples, was the good news of the coming kingdom and eternal life in Christ at the resurrection of the dead. The great fact to be believed by the Jew was that Jesus was the Christ; and when three thousand on the day of Pentecost were convinced of this fact, and asked what they should do, Peter commanded them to "repent," and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

The custom of immersing believers at once was universal in the early church. Philip S. Moxon, in his work, From Jerusalem to Nicea, says: "Admission to the church was by the simplest process imaginable. There were no dogmatic tests of membership; there were no doctrinal examinations; and there were no creeds. Confession of belief in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God was followed immediately by baptism in the name of the Lord Jesus. Baptism might apparently be administered by any believer. After the development of the clergy it was usually administered by one of that body; but as late as the end of the second century baptism by laymen was enjoined * * * * The primitive form of baptism was immersion, and for the first thirteen centuries this was the form almost universally observed. The testimony of Stanley on this point is incontrovertible. "Baptism," he says, 'was not only a bath, but a plunge, an entire submersion in the deep water, a leap, as into the rolling sea or the rushing river, where for the moment the waves close over the bather's head, and he emerges again as from a grave.

The form of church government at first was most simple. Dr. Mosheim in his Ecclesiastical History, says: "The people were undoubtedly the first in authority, for the apostles showed, by their own example, that nothing of moment was to be carried on, or determined without the consent of the assembly * * * It was, therefore, the assembly of the people which chose their own rulers and teachers, or received them by free and authoritative consent, when recommended by others. * * * The rulers of the church were called either presbyters or bishops which two titles are in the New Testament undoubtedly applied to the same order of men." Philip Schnaf, D. D. L. L. D., Professor in Union Theological College, New York, says in his history of the Christian Church: "The terms presbyter (or elder) and bishop (or overseer) denote in the New Testament one and the same office, with this difference only, that the first is borrowed from the synagogue and the second from the Greek communities, and that the one signifies the dignity, the other the duty." The distinction between these, as two separate orders of ministers, dates from the second century, and is made a dogma of the Greek and Roman churches. * * * The identity of these officers is very evident from the following facts:

(a) "They appear always as a plurality, or as a college in one and the same congregation.

(b) "The same officers of the church of Ephesus are alternately called presbyters (Acts xx. 17) and bishops (verse 28).

(c) "Paul sends greeting to the bishops and deacons of Philippi, but omits the presbyter because they are included in the first term.

(d) "In the Pastoral Epistles, where Paul intends to give qualifications for all church affairs, he again mentions only two orders, bishops and deacons, but uses the term presbyter afterward for bishop. Peter urges the presbyters to tend the flock of God, and to "fulfil the office of bishops" with disinterested devotion, and without lording it over the charge allotted to them.

(e) "The interchange of terms continued in use to the close of the first century, as is evident from the Epistles of Clement of Rome (about 95), and still lingered toward the close of the second century."

From the above it is evident how the early church was governed. There were no clergy nor any so called laity. They were all "lively stones, built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people" (1 Peter ii 5-9). "And hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father" (Rev. i. 6). It was not till much later, as we will see, that men commenced to lord it over God's heritage. A bishop or presbyter was not to be "greedy of filthy lucre" (1 Tim. iii. 3; Tit. i. 7). Each little community generally met in each other's houses, or in an upper room, assembled at least weekly, and broke the bread and drank the wine as their Lord had appointed, in remembrance of His death, exhorting one another to steadfastness till their Lord should come again, which they expected to be very soon. They were hated and persecuted by the unbelieving Jews, but till the time of Nero they were not generally known by Roman officials as a distinctive people from the Jewish nation.

Renan says: "It would seem that, in general, man in the early Christians' view did not exist without a body. This view was long held, and did not give way until the doctrine of immortality in the Greek philosophic sense had been adopted in the church, and associated for better or worse with the Christian dogma of a resurrection and universal renewal of life. * * * The general resurrection was at hand—the body would have but a short repose in its rock bed."

So much for the primitive doctrine of the church—that taught and practiced by Jesus Christ and His apostles. In my next I will state the changes which had taken place after 300 years.

Toronto, Canada.

A. WALLACE MASON.

FEEDING ON THE WORD.

Circumstances do Not Make Wrong Right.

The child of God who wants to grow, must do so by feeding on the word of God. How many there are who are baptized, and then forget to do the most helpful thing, to read and study the word. How many there are of the older ones in the way, that forget to warn beginners of the danger of starvation if they forget to feed on the only thing that can give strength and make us able to overcome. Just as a person will starve physically if they refuse or neglect to eat, so will we starve or grow cold and die spiritually, if we neglect to feed on the word. If people knew the help, strength, and knowledge to be gained by reading God's word, they would read it, and warn others of the danger of neglect. Some claim they don't understand the Bible, and think they are excused. Do you mean to say that God put a guide here for his people, one that they could not understand?

The mind of God must be sought after as a hidden pearl. If we are determined to see and understand the word we will, for a child can understand; but we must work for everything worth having.

If we are not filled with the word we are liable to walk in the dark. For example; some Christians will say "well, I don't believe such or such an act would be very wrong, because"—and then some circumstance is given which to the said Christian's mind makes the deed seem right. Then they will add: "Well, my conscience don't tell me it would be very wrong, because"—again a circumstance.

This brings a story to my mind. When the Ark was being brought to Zion, and the oxen shook the cart that carried it, Uzzah put forth his hand to stay it, and God smote him, and he died there: why? Because in this act he broke a commandment. Circumstances cannot change wrong into right. A sin is a sin, and the fact that we excuse the wrong in our mind shows we had a lack of knowledge of His presence there. Here is the danger. If we are not constantly filled with the word we are liable to forget, and use our own reasoning, and measure wrong wrongly; let us be filled with all knowledge of the will. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." II. Tim. iii. 16, 17. It will furnish "unto all good works" it will make us able to measure right, for we will not measure our acts by others acts, but by the True Rule—Christ and his life—and then we will not be so apt to make the mistake of allowing circumstance to be the standard we measure by. Child of God, you are in danger of losing your way if you forget the word. Feed on it daily.

Mrs. Chas. Thomas.

Proctor, Montana.

ENDURANCE.

Exemplified by Crusaders—Henry IV. of Germany—Martyrs of Inquisition—Christ.

(Matt. 24-13.)

"But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

Jesus said these words when he was sitting on the Mount of Olives, telling his disciples of the signs of His coming and of the end of the world. He had been telling them of the wars and commotions, and of the trials and tribulations that would befall the people in those days, that they would be afflicted, and killed and hated by all nations for His sake: But said he, "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. 24-13).

The trials which we have to endure are few, very few. They are indeed few, when we consider the trials of our Saviour when He was on the earth. No doubt we have many temptations in these sinful times, but they are incomparable to the temptations that Christ has endured. James says: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." (James 1-2.)

Christ endured all the trials and temptations which were placed before Him, and as a reward He has already received the crown of life, and is now seated at the right hand of His father.

We know, brothers and sisters, that we all fall short of our faith; for these are wicked times, and we are surrounded by evil. But dear ones, when we can so clearly discern the wickedness and its daily increase, ought not we, having the truth, so bind ourselves together in that one precious faith, that, regardless of the heavy chains of wickedness we will not be dragged asunder and down into the pits of darkness and wickedness.

Ought not we with Christ as the source of our light, so shine in the darkness, that the eyes of those groping about will be dazzled with our brightness and our holiness? When we shine as lights above those in the darkness of sin, (and not until then), will be what Christ says we should be, "the light of the world," as "a city on a hill which cannot be hid." He tells us to let our light so shine that men may see our good works and glorify God. We have not as yet accomplished this, for God is not glorified by very many yet.

By thus binding ourselves together and separating ourselves from sinners, we bear the reproach of the world. We are scorned and ridiculed because we are a peculiar people. But Christ gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. With our blessed hope in view, we should be able to endure all reproaches, especially when we consider what Christ endured.

"If in thy path some thorns are found,
Oh, thou who bore them on his brow:
If grief thy sorrowing heart has wounded,
It reached a holier one than thou."

We should be able to endure all our trials (few or many), for there are many who have greater trials, and who work more earnestly in the Master's field, when they have not the truth that will lead them into the kingdom of God.

We read in history of the Crusades. These were journeys made in order to protect the holy sepulchre. Hunger, thirst and weariness caused the greater part of the travelers to perish on the way. They were working for a good cause, and they endured to the end.

We read again of Henry's humiliation. King Henry IV. of Germany refused to bind himself to the Pope. He was excommunicated from the church. In order that he might be received again into the body he went to the pope in Canossa without shoes or robes in the snow, waiting to kneel at his feet and receive forgiveness. He was finally reconciled to the pope, but after great endurance.

Again, during the time of the Inquisition, people who departed from the established church were burned as heretics. But they endured rather than submit to a church not teaching what they believed.

I call this endurance, and when we think of the few things we have to endure, I think sometimes, brothers and sisters, that we ought to feel ashamed of ourselves for not enduring more; also, for not being more zealous when we know we have the truth, and when we see others working so earnestly who have not our "Blessed Hope."

Let us therefore brethren and sisters, strive to endure unto the end, for we have the blessed assurance that "he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." (Matt 24-13).

VIOLA GAZELEY.

Cleveland, Ohio.

OBITUARY

Priser

Samuel Priser, deceased, was born in Montgomery county, O., in the year 1826, and departed this life September 13, 1911, his age being 84 years, 11 months and 5 days. He came to Kosciusko County, Indiana, in the year 1849, and on October 13, 1855, was united in marriage to Salome Hapner, who is Kosciusko county, and settled on the farm on which he lived until death. To this union was born five children, three sons and two daughters. The daughters are now deceased, leaving the wife and three sons to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. He was a Christian and a member of the Church of God, living a faithful life to the last, oftimes speaking of his Master. He was of a kind and generous disposition, and will be missed by a host of friends and relatives.

Mrs. Salome Priser and Sons.

Packerton, Ind.

Eva A. McChesney-Stilson

Eva A. McChesney-Stilson, daughter of Robert and Jeanette McChesney, was born September 11, 1857, at her late residence in Marshall county, Indiana. She was the second of a family of twelve children, six of whom have preceded her in death.

She grew to womanhood under the care of her parents, receiving the advantages of the common schools, in which she afterward taught two years.

She was united in marriage to Alexander F. Stilson November 23, 1878, and went to housekeeping in this neighborhood. They afterward moved to South Bend, then to the farm to care for her mother during her last sickness, and death. They afterward moved to Walkerton, and finally back to the place of her birth, where she has since lived.

She was the mother of five children, namely, Floyd A., born June 17, 1882, now a professor in the South Bend business college; Myrtle, born April 22, 1889, now Mrs. Houser, of Lakeville, Indiana; Rolland, born Jan. 30, 1892; Iris, born August 19, 1900, and Forest, born Jan. 27, 1902. The last three were at home with their mother at her death.

Sister Stilson united with the Church of God at North Salem, and was baptized into the name of Jesus April 7, 1877, and was an active member in good standing at her death.

She has been in declining health since a year ago last February, her husband died last January, since which time she has continually failed until death came September 22, 1911.

She suffered greatly during the last days of her life, but bore it with Christian courage and fortitude. She was conscious of her condition and knowing she must depart, prayed for relief from pain.

She leaves three brothers, Schuyler McChesney of South Bend, Mace McChesney, and Robert McChesney of this vicinity, and two sisters, Mrs. Jeanette A. Conger, of Plymouth and Mrs. Francis A. Pierce, of South Bend, her five children, six grandchildren and many good friends and neighbors to lament because of her death.

Sister Stilson's life has been eventful in the things that are the common lot of human kind. She has climbed life's hills, surveyed the fields of activity that lay before her, wrought where they led her, and having achieved her mission, and being wearied by disease, and tired of the struggle, she lay down the thread of life in peaceful rest. She had no fear of death because of her trust in God and her Savior Jesus Christ.

The funeral services were held from the Union church near North Salem, Sunday, Sept. 24, 1911, at 2 o'clock p. m., conducted by the writer. A very large concourse of friends and neighbors attended the services, showing the esteem they had for the deceased sister. She was laid to rest in the adjacent cemetery to await the coming of our Lord and Savior and His resurrection.

D. E. VANVACTOR.

Argos, Ind.

INDIANA CONFERENCE PROGRAM.

Thursday, October 5.

7:00 p. m. Song and Prayer. Address of welcome, D. T. Halstead. Response and sermon by Fred Austin.

Friday, October 6.

9 to 9:30 Song and prayer service, Emma Railsback.
9:30 to 10:30 Bible School, S. J. Lindsay.
10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Nature and Operation of the Holy Spirit.
1:30 to 1:45, song service.
1:45 to 2:30 business meeting.
2:45 to 3:30, sermon, Fred Austin.
7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Mattie Benjamin.
7:30, sermon, S. J. Lindsay.

Saturday, October 7.

9:00 to 9:30, social meeting, Bennett Boggs.
9:30 to 10:30, Bible school, S. J. Lindsay.
10:45 to 11:30, sermon, Fred Austin.
1:30 to 1:45, song service.
1:45 to 2:30, sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Image of the Beast.
2:45, business meeting.
7:00 to 7:30, social meeting, Jessie Pence.
7:30, sermon, subject, Faith, Fred Austin.

Sunday, October 8.

9:30 to 10:30 social and song service, Wm. Huffer.
10:30 to 11:30, sermon, Revelations, S. J. Lindsay.
2:00 p. m., sermon, Fred Austin.
3:00 p. m., communion service, D. T. Halstead.
7:00 p. m., social and song service, Ezra C. Railsback.
7:30 p. m., sermon, Joseph Williams, subject, The Blood of Christ.

Conference Notice.

To the Church of God in Indiana greeting:

The Conference this year in Indiana has been arranged to meet at Rensselaer as per program above, and it is the urgent desire of the officers and program committee that a goodly representation from each of the several churches in the state be present.

Let us lay aside the cares of our business life for a few days and take up our Father's business, and He will recompense us at the resurrection of the just. Come all that can and enjoy a season of song and praise to Him who gives us life and its enjoyments. Bring this program. Address communications relative to the conference to D. T. Halstead, Rensselaer, Ind.

F. M. McCrory, Vice-Pres.

SMALL CARES AND VEXATIONS

Small cares and vexations fall to the lot of all. It is not the petty-minded who can bear them with fortitude and calmness, but those who can rise above them into a region of purer thought, where they can obtain a wider view. It is much less effective to attack them one by one, with perhaps a vastly exaggerated idea of their importance, than to occupy the mind with more worthy matters and the heart with nobler purposes. Then they often sink into smaller and truer proportions, and it is easier to bear them with courage and serenity.

Manager's Column

MANAGERS COLUMN.

In some way the Linotype man mixed up a sentence in regard to the premium offer which was spoken of in this column last week, and instead of saying that those who do not own a copy of Bro. Wilson's books or the one by Bro. Huggins, should take advantage of this offer, it said something about those who did not want a copy should take advantage of the offer. We are sorry this mistake took place.

Talking about Linotype, we have received so many letters from readers who appreciate the clear cut type, which is so easy to read, that we feel entirely justified in having changed from the old style hand type to the machine set type, although the latter has considerably increased the cost of production. Its impossible to get good clear printing from type after it has been used for a time.

Those who subscribed for stock in The Restitution in July should bear in mind that their second payment is now due, and remittances should be sent to this office as promptly as possible. There is still some stock for sale, and a good many brethren who have not taken any to date. You brethren who are financially able to do so should not let this stock remain unsold. We assumed large financial obligations when we bought The Restitution which must be taken care of, and it will only be possible to do this by selling this stock. You can pay for it in four payments, and you can rest assured you could use your money to no better advantage. Money in the bank will not help along the work we should be doing for the cause of Truth, and money wasted on our pleasures and luxuries will bear no interest when we have to account to our Father. It will be like the buried talent. There is no need for your help, give it cheerfully.

To all of us the expressly appointed schoolmasters and schooling we get are as nothing compared with the unappointed, incidental ones whose school-hours are all our days and nights of our existence, and whose lessons, unasked or unasked, stream in upon us with every breath we draw.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

NOTICE.

Those who are concerned will please take notice that the secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Conference is Brother W. C. Heacock, 230 Arlington avenue, Canton, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

N. E. Nelson $3.00
Herman Dickle ..... .50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with economy and ease, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by I. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER,

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN
THE RESTITUTION
RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — N. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (3 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism in the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

Terms of Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, OCTOBER 11, 1911 No. 39

THE GOSPEL.

Rom. 1:16.

The Gospel, God's power to save,
Gives hope and life beyond the grave:
If the Gospel call, we obey,
And from its precepts do not stray.

It gives life in the promised land,
With the patriarch we shall stand,
In the Kingdom of God's dear son
If with patience the race is run.

Where'er the Gospel is believed,
No more by sin and death bereaved,
In that wonderful age to come,
Jesus will raise us from the tomb.

The Gospel gives us joy and peace,
With precious promise of release,
From this body of sin and care,
When fashioned like unto the heir.

The Gospel consists of good news
To the Gentiles and to the Jews,
Of the Kingdom of God on earth,
Saints will recieve after new birth.

And the name of the only one,
Given 'mong men under the sun,
Who will save us from death and sin,
If time believers we have been.

J. C. THOMPSON.
New Milford, Ohio.

THE PROBLEM OF IMMORTALITY.

A Sermon by Bro. Wm. Grant, Delivered in Edinburgh, Scotland.

The question of immortality should be of supreme importance to every one, yet, unfortunately, multitudes pay little or no heed to anything beyond the things of the passing hour. But thoughtful people turn the questions over and over in their minds—whence are we? what are we? whither are we going? have we always existed? and shall we always exist? or is our existence bounded by the brief space between the cradle and the grave?

Now where shall we go for a solution of this problem? Shall we go to nature? to the heavens above, or the earth beneath? We may ask the starry host by the aid of the astronomer, or the strata of the earth by the aid of the geologist; but we get no answer. The beasts of the field, the fish of the sea, the fowls of the air know nothing about Immortality. Everything and every creature give ample evidence of mortality—change, decay, and death—but nature is absolutely silent about immortality.

Then we enquire at man. What has he ascertained about Immortality? There is biology—"the science that treats of life or of organized beings"—what has it found? With regard to life it has found this beyond dispute, that there is no spontaneous generation, that is, that there is no life without pre-existent life. Bishop Ellicott said: "Life from life is the voice of all experience." Professor Huxley, in an article on "Biology" in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, wrote: "There is not a shadow of trustworthy evidence that anything of the kind (viz., of the derivation of life from in-organic matter) does take place or has taken place during the period within which the existence of the earth is recorded." Professor Allman, in an address to the British Association, said: "No one has ever yet built up one particle of living matter out of lifeless elements: every living creature, from the simplest dweller on the confines of organization up to the highest and most complete organism, has its origin in pre-existent living matter."

Yet, although the biologist has ascertained this, he has not been able to determine what life is in itself; he knows something about its phenomena, but nothing as to its essence, or its origin. And then the perpetuity of life is beyond the province of the science of biology.

Has philosophy any solution to offer? The late Professor Calderwood, professor of moral philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, in reply to a question put to him on this subject, said: "Philosophy knows nothing about Immortality."

Is the problem of Immortality then incapable of solution? Let us try another source—the Bible. Does it solve this problem? It deals, as we all know, with man and his origin, and gives him guidance amid the vicissitudes of life, not merely for his present career, but for a life which, it avers, is yet to come. We therefore ought to find in its pages some light upon this question of Immortality.

Now let it be observed that the opening words of the Bible postulate a Creator. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Turning over its pages we come across such statements as—

"I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside Me."

"I form the light and create darkness: I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these."

"I have made the earth and created man upon it: I, even My hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded" (Isa. xlv. 5, 7, 12).

"I kill, and I make alive: I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of My hand. For I lift up My hand to heaven and say, I live for ever" (Deut. xxxii. 39, 40).

Here then is something definite to start with—that there is a creator and thus we get the origin of life. In the language of the Bible it is expressed thus: "For with thee is the fountain of life." The apostle to the Gentiles, when he stood on Mars Hill and addressed the cultured Athenians, taking for his text the inscription on an altar—"To the Unknown God"—declared to them that God "giveth to all life, and breath, and all things." "For in Him we live, and move, and have our being."

Let us now go a step further. While the Bible shows that the life we now have is from God, we make bold to say that if you go to the Bible without any preconceived ideas, you will find it teaches that we have not life bestowed upon us in perpetuity, but have only a brief tenure of it: that it is only lent to us, and we have to give it back to our creator. He has not created us immortal. Whether we shall attain unto immortality we shall deal with further on. Meantime what we are considering is what we now are. We are mortal, subject to death. Run your eyes across the pages of the Bible, beginning at Genesis and ending with the book of the Revelation to John, and you will find everything to prove this: nothing to contradict it. Nowhere within the boards of the book is a man in his present state said to be immortal, or to be in possession of Immortality. On the contrary, he is emphatically designated "mortal man." His ephemeral state is depicted over and over again in language that is absolutely devoid of meaning if we are inherently immortal. He is compared to the most fleeting and perishable things—to a wind that passes away, to grass that springs up and is cut down, to flowers that bloom and wither and die. The Psalmist, instead of claiming to be a being of eternity, thus acknowledges his mortality—

"Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is, that I may know how frail I am.

"Behold, Thou hast made my days as an handbreadth: and mine age is as nothing before Thee: verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity" (Ps. xxxix. 5). The agrees with the Apostle James:

"For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James iv. 14).

Notwithstanding this, the Bible speaks of immortality. If by the light it sheds we are able to see the origin of life—that we are created by God, and the life we now have is lent by Him to us—may we not also obtain from its pages some light whereby we may solve the problem of Immortality? The Bible shows us that we are mortal, and why we are mortal. It is because of sin—transgression of the Creator's law.

"Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin: and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned" (Rom. v. 12).

Immortality is not ours. Not only is it not ours, but we have no claim upon our Creator for it. Why should we any more than the rest of his creatures? He could bestow perpetuity of existence upon them all—from the huge monster to the smallest animalculae—if He so willed. But He has not so willed. He could bestow Immortality upon all men, or withhold it from all men, as might seem to Him good, for "none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, What doest Thou?"

Well, the first argument we adduce by way of attempting to solve this problem, i. this—that the Creator has already bestowed Immortality upon one of our race; if this be a fact, then, you must admit, it goes a long way to solve the problem of Immortality. Let us look at it fairly and squarely. Don't say, "We cannot judge of it, because it is entirely beyond our experience." Are we to make our experience the limit of all knowledge? That would be unwise. It would be better to carefully and candidly examine the evidences upon which this fact—or supposed fact let us say meantime—rests. Let us look at some of them.

FIRST. It is upon Jesus of Nazareth that Immortality is claimed to have been bestowed.

SECOND. Who was Jesus of Nazareth? A man of poor parentage, and of humble circumstances. Yet his life has affected the race more than any other life. Renan said of him: "Jesus is in all respects unique, and there is none to be compared to him." John Stuart Mill said that "to live a perfect life we must so act that every action would commend itself to Jesus of Nazareth."

THIRD. Jesus claimed to be the bearer of a message from God: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." That claim cannot be lightly put aside in view of his high moral teaching and his spotless character. (See John xii. 44-50).

FOURTH. He foretold that he would die, but that he would rise again (Luke xviii. 31-34).

FIFTH. Jesus died. But the New Testament is full of narrative, assertion and argument, all going to establish the glorious fact that he rose again, and now lives for evermore.

SIXTH. The followers of Jesus, instead of being predisposed to believe that their master would rise again, which would render them liable to self-deception, or lay them open to being imposed upon, at first refused to believe that he had risen. They only became convinced of the truth of it by seeing him and conversing with him after he rose from the dead. "To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts i. 3. See also Acts v. 29-32). The Apostle Paul who at one time was not only a non-believer in the resurrection of Jesus, but a ruthless persecutor of His followers, when he was convinced of his resurrection by a personal interview, at once preached the faith which he formerly destroyed (Acts xxvi. 19-25; 1 Cor. xv. 5-11).

SEVENTH. The resurrection of Jesus Christ was not an afterthought, but part of a divine plan which has its roots in the Old Testament, and runs throughout the book from beginning to end. You will find a prophecy regarding his resurrection in Ps. xvi. 8-11, which the Apostle Peter applies to him (Acts ii. 25-32; Luke xxiv. 44-48).

The bestowal of immortality upon Jesus is the stamp of the Creator's approval of righteousness. It settles the problem of immortality in so far as the best one of the race is concerned. A writer says: "Man at his best is seen in Jesus, and if men are ever to attain to their best, individually and collectively, it must be by becoming like him."

But is Jesus the only one of the race whom the Creator is to immortalize? The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews says: "For it became him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings" (Chap. ii. 10). It was because of Jesus' loving obedience to God, his patient endurance amid suffering, his love of righteousness, and his hatred of iniquity, that he became the recipient of the unspeakably great gift of Immortality. He is the captain, the chief son. And what God did for Jesus, he will also do for all who become like him. That is divine purpose. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil ii. 5-11. See also Rom. viii. 28, 29).

Jesus Christ is the example of that which pleases God. He is the type of a higher race which God is developing from the Adamic race (1 Cor. xv. 45-49).

Now, that is something definite, certain: it solves the problem of Immortality. What a contrast it is to everything else! Inanimate nature, with all its variety and beauty and greatness points to a Creator. Fowl of the air, fish of the sea, and the beast of the field add their testimony as to his existence, and to the marvelousness of his creative hand and sustaining power. But they are silent about Immorality. The sciences of astronomy and geology and biology are also all silent. Even moral philosophy is dumb. No science can solve the problem. It is a problem that entirely baffles man. But what man cannot do, God has done: and men could see this if only they would go to what he has revealed. In his Gospel-message he revealed immortality and he promised it. In addition to that he has raised up one whom he has been pleased to make the medium of the bestowal of Immortality. That one has "abolished death, and brought life and Immortality to light" (2 Tim i. 10). The revelation is therefore clearer, and the promise is now, from our point of view, doubly sure.

No doubt theology—as it is called—has obscured the revelation and the promise by carrying forward the Pagan theory of inherent Immortality, and mixing it up with the teaching of Revelation. The result is confusion and perplexity. For at once perplexing question arise in thoughtful minds. "If all men are made immortal, then you can never die; and what is to become of those who do not acknowledge the Creator's supremacy? Are they to remain in perpetual estrangement from him, suffering conscious punishment for their unrighteousness?"

We leave these to be answered by those who believe in natural or inherent Immortality.

But inherent Immortality—the Immortality of the soul—is not a solution of the problem of Immortality: it makes the problem more difficult, even insoluble. But the Bible solution is simple, reasonable, satisfying. Consider it. There is a Creator. He is a being not only of omnipotence, but of righteousness. With him is the fountain of life. He will not make permanent that which is unworthy of, or unfit for, permanency. Therefore all men will not live for ever. But Jesus Christ is worthy of permanency. He has therefore been made "after the power of an endless life," an indissoluble life (Heb. vii. 16). To the Apostle John he said: "I am the first and the last, and the living one: and I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore, and I have the keys of death and of hades" (Rev. i. 17, 18). To declare that he has "the keys of death and of hades" is equivalent to declaring that there is Immortality in store for others as well as himself. "For as the father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the son to have life in himself" (John v. 26).

And notice the difference between this divine method and "theology." Theology teaches—what the ancient Egyptians and Greek philosophers taught—that when we "shuffle off this mortal coil," we merely change our form, but do not die. It tells us that what to us seems death is but transition, our existence is perpetuated, we are transferred to another sphere. This is man's speculation, groping after Immorality. But the divine plan takes account of the entire mortality of man—that he dies, and is dead, and would remain dead but for intervention on the part if his Creator. Therefore in the plan provision is made to deliver man from the death state, to bring him back from the grave, to cause him to live again, and, if he pleases God, to live throughout the endless ages to come.

"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that are asleep" (1 Cor. xv. 20).

"This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses" (Acts ii. 32).

"Knowing that he who raised up the Lord Jesus, shall raise up us also by Jesus" (2 Cor. iv. 14). So spake Paul who saw Jesus after he rose from the dead. (See also 1 Cor. xv. 49-58.)

In view of the spotless character of Jesus Christ how thoroughly reliable, how faith-inspiring are the assurances he gave of a life beyond the grave.

To his Apostle Peter he said, "And I say also unto thee, that thou are Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell (hades) shall not prevail against it" (Matt. xvi. 18).

To Martha he said, "Thy brother shall rise again" (John xi. 23).

In his irrefutable argument with the Sadducees, "who denied that there is any resurrection," he gave utterance to those imperishable words: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world (age), and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die more," (Luke xx. 35-36).

What a glorious prospect! To die no more! Youth and strength and beauty do not last always. Everything fades, everything dies. Age creeps over us, leaving its trace in the furrowed face, the bent form, the enfeebled step, the impaired intellect; and then we pass into the silence and coldness of the grave.

But God can restore to life again. It is as easy for him to give us life again, and to give it in perpetuity, as to give us life at first. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" (Acts xxvi. 8) The modus operandi we may not, and do not know; but God is not only willing but able to perform what he has promised. Long, long ago his prophet Isaiah said: "He will swallow up death in victory" (Isa. xxv. 8). Through Hosea he declared: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be th yplagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes" (Hosea viii. 14).

And now in the resurrection of Jesus, "the first-fruits of them that sleep," we have the divine guarantee of a life beyond the grave.

In conclusion we say that God will bestow Immortality upon all who are like Jesus—not in perfection, but in measure. There is no equality in creation, in the physical; and there is no equality in the spiritual. Jesus is the chief of many sons, the head of a new and higher and abiding race. We do not now deal with the various stages of the divine plan, but in its ultimate, in the fulness of times, the earth will be inhabited by an immortal race, developed amid trial and suffering from the Adamtic race, and every unit will be moulded after the character of Jesus Christ. Death, the last enemy, will be destroyed, and God will be all in all (Ps. lxxii 15-19; Isa. lxi. 11; 1 Cor. xv. 24-28).

"And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things have passed away" (Rev. xxi. 3, 4).

GOLD DUST

"Progress depends upon what we are rather than upon what we encounter."

"It is a bad thing to feel stirred over wrong and not stir yourself to right it."

"What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult to each other?"

"We all have our faults; none of us are perfect, but we can try to do the best we know how; Smile and be pleasant, it doesn't cost anything, and it helps one along the ways of life."

"The grand essentials of life are something to do, something to love, and something to hope for."

"God's presence is enough for toil and enough for rest. If the journey with us by the way. He will abide with us when nightfall comes and His companionship will be sufficient for direction on the road and for solace and safety in the evening camp."

Dixon, Ill. ANNA DREW.

We will fit in Somewhere.

"In a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth," (2 Tim. 2:20). Let it be for the encouragement of such among us as are conscious of no higher powers, and who sometimes wonder for what service in Christ's church we are fit, that in a great structure all the component portions are equally great. There are not only the solid and costly—the rock and the timber; not only the precious and ornamental—the gold and silver; but likewise the humble and subsidiary, yea, even the otherwise valueless and the minute; for not even mortar and earth can be spared from the construction.

The great builder has some lowly crevice in his house which the meanest and feebleast of us may occupy. We may not be called to bear up buttresses, or to crown turrets, or to adorn the carved work of the sanctuary; but it should satisfy us if, in some remote recess and unknown shade, we fill the office which the Master has laid upon us.—J. W. Alexander.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Coss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. P. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 503 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Oct. 11, 1911

EDITORIAL

Sin is serving self.

Worry is either too late or too soon.

In its breaking, our bread becomes blessed.

Your future is being made now. Now is the spring time of eternity.

It is not our business to succeed; it is our business to be faithful.

Two things ought to teach us to think lightly of human glory; the very best men have been spoken evil of; the very worst have been praised.

MARRIED

At the home of the bride in the west part of the city, Oct. 7th, 8 o'clock in the evening, the editor officiating, Brother Sterling Groves and Sister Emma Bradshaw. Both contracting parties are members of the Cleveland church; and they have the prayers of the entire body that they may successfully fight life's battles and find an everlasting home in the Father's House when the Lord returns.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY AND THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question

Question 3.—Why make the Son of Perdition a plurality of persons?

Answer.—We don't make it so; it is so. Officially, there is but one, and if the persons installed were immortal, he would be individually one, but being mortal, he is obliged to be replaced. If our correspondent thinks it inadmissible that the singular should be used in merely the official sense, it shows he is more forgetful of the Scriptures than a man proposing to come to a violent verdict ought to be. Dan xi., which outlines the history of a long line of kings, reaching from the days of Persia, speaks throughout as if "the king of the north" and "the king of the south" were one person. In prophecy, they are one, because officially one; in history, they are many, because a succession of individuals filled the same office. So with "the high priest," under the law. In the discourses of Moses, he is spoken of as one, because officially one, though individually many.

Question 4.—When have the Popes exalted themselves above all that is called God?

Answer.—The answer is, they have always done so, in that, claiming to be highest power, they claim to be God on earth, accepting even the title of "our Lord God, the Pope." They admit no rival authority. "All that is called God," comprehends everything current among men, in the . ne and shape of religion. Those to whom the word of God came were called Gods (John x. 35), and over all, the Popes have exalted themselves, as the world has known to its cost, for twelve centuries and more.

Question 5.—When have they been above every other object of worship?

Answer.—Always. No other potentate on earth receives "adoration," or extends the toe to be kissed. Before the Pope, the people prostrate themselves, and receive his benediction, with the reverence due to the voice of heaven. He is higher than kings and higher than all bishops—"above every other object of worship." Is he above God? our correspondent may inquire. This is impossible actually. In the only sense in which it is possible, he is. The only form in which the authority of God is presented to men, at present, is in His word, and the Pope is higher than this for his authority is placed above it, and, as we all know, he has many times tried to prevent its circulation.

Question 6.—What is the temple of God,

Answer.—There are two; one the building erected by Solomon, at Jerusalem; and the other, the community developed by the preaching of the word.—(2 Cor. vi. 16.)

Question 7.—When have the Popes sat in it as God,

Answer.—In the first, they never sat, and never can sit; and any building that might now be erected at Jerusalem, would not be the temple of God, but a mere edifice of human contrivance, like the Mosque of Omar, which now stands upon the site of the ancient temple. The temple of God, in the future age, is to be built by the Messiah (Zech. vi. 12), and he will take care that no "Antichrist" obtains possession of it after he has driven "the unclean spirit out of the land" (Zech. viii. 2), and raised up the desolations of former generations.—(Is. lxi.4).

In the second, they have; for "the church," though now turned away from the truth, was the temple of God, as originally developed by the labors of the apostles, and now presents the antitype of the literal temple, when deserted by the glory of the divine presence (Ezek. x. 18, 19), and profaned by robbers and the abomination of the sow. And their sitting has been "as God;" for they claim to be the vicar of God—that is the substitute, deputy, or representative of God—sitting ecclesiastically and architecturally in a temple as or for God.

(To be Continued).

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP.

No. 14.

The recording of human utterances, etc., in conjunction with the divine is presented as an insuperable difficulty to the application of the Psalmist's statement to the whole of the Holy Scriptures; and to illustrate it reference is made to the serpent's lie and the speeches of Job's three friends. If it had been contended that inspiration did more than guarantee an accurate record of uninspired utterances, the difficulty raised might have some force. Our contention is that the record of them is infallible; to describe it as simply reliable is insufficient: a document may be on the whole reliable and yet contain a few errors. Gibbon's History is a reliable account of the decline and Fall of the Roman Empire; but who would presume to say that it was wholly free from error? In writing professedly divine, we need something more than reliability; nothing less than infallibility.

Salvation being based upon sin God's utterances are necessarily connected with that which is wrong; hence the record of the human is indispensable to the understanding of the divine. How, for instance, could we know the meaning of the prediction about the seed of the serpent (Gen. iii 15) if the words of the serpent had not been previously recorded? and how should we know for what Job's friends were condemned if we had no account of what they said? These and similar wicked deliverances are absolutely necessary for the purpose of exhibiting the expressed wisdom, love, mercy, wrath, forbearance and justice of God. If the record of them be not free from error, it is impossible for us rightly to understand God's words and actions in relation to them. Would it not have been an inexplicable anomaly if God had permitted His infallible utterances to be interwoven with a fallible record of the words and actions which gave rise to them? It was not for these divine utterances disconnected from their context that the Fifth Seal brethren were "slain"; it was for the Holy Scriptures in their possession; and these the Spirit calls "the Word of God" (Rev. vi. 9)—the complete development of the "word" which the Palmist says has been "magnified" above God's name.

To take exceptions to Judges, Ruth, or Samuel being part of that which has been thus "magnified" is to introduce an unauthorized distinction; these books form an integral part of the whole and they cannot be omitted without detracting from the completeness of God's "perfect gift." In Judges we have illustrations of God's promise to protect and rule the nation of Israel, accompanied by exhibitions of faith on the part of those whom he raised up for the nation's deliverance. The book of Ruth, apart from its connection with the genealogy of Christ, furnishes a practical illustration of obedience to one of the Mosaic enactments. (Deut. xxv, 5-6). The books of Samuel among other things, give the life of him whose throne is to be occupied by Christ; the discipline to which David was subjected in the reign of Saul, being an example of the way in which God prepares his Sons for reigning in his kingdom.

One historical incident in Samuel is very pertinent to the present subject. In a conflict between Israel and the Philistines, Saul "adjured the people saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening, that I may be avenged on mine enemies. So none of the people tasted any food." (1 Sam. xiv. 24). This was an unwise command; for when the people had smitten the Philistines they were "very faint," and they "flew upon the spoil," and "did eat" the sheep, oxen, and calves "with the blood." In this they committed "sin against the Lord" (ver. 31, 32 and 33). They were forbidden to eat lawful food and their hunger led to the partaking of unlawful. In like manner, they who are engaged in fighting "the good fight of faith" (1 Tim. vi. 12) are in need of the appointed food to give them strength; if they neglect to partake of it they will hunger for that which is prohibited; and, thus they may not only become faint, but be led into sin.

Jonathan not having heard his father charge the people, was ignorant of the interdict, and accordingly, when passing a wood where honey was abundant, "he put forth the end of the rod that was in his hand, and dipped it in an honeycomb, and put his hand to his mouth; and his eyes were enlightened" (ver. 27); in other words, he was refreshed and strengthened. The rest of the people abstained from food, and to this Jonathan attributed the incompleteness of the victory.

The food of which Jonathan partook is a type of that provided for "the man of God:"—"How sweet are Thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" Ps. cxix. 103). Of the "law," "testimony," "statutes," "commandments," and "judgments," it is written, "More to be desired are they than gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb" (or the dropping of honeycombs, Marg. Ps. xix. 10). Can there be any doubt in view of these comparisons, as to what is meant by the glorified bridegroom, when he says, "I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey; I have drunk my wine with my milk" (Cant. v. 1). "Wine and milk" (Isa. lv. 1) are both used to represent the "good things" with which God supplieth "the hungry" (Luke i. 53); "the honeycomb with honey," is but a parallel to the same. What a beautiful figure by which to describe the inspired word! The honey is the doctrinal part, and the honeycomb, the historical, genealogical, and chronological; the latter is necessarily in order to hold the former; we might as well say that the instinct of the bee produces the honey and not the comb, as that the Spirit has caused to be written the doctrinal but not the historical portions of the Bible. The statement of the bridegroom that both has been "eaten" by him is sufficiently significant to need no explanation; that which he has done the members of his bride are called upon to imitate.

TEXTUAL COMBINATIONS

Sometimes Prove Go-as-you-Please Doctrine—A Congo Prince an Adept at the Art.

We listened last Sunday to a much advertised discourse, the sum of which was that humanity in general has little or no chance to draw near to God in this life, and so another is provided for "all men" in which the conditions will be very much improved; and then straight will be the gate and narrow the way that leads to destruction, and few will find it; and broad the road that leads to life, and many will go in thereat! Now this is a nice grass-yau-please doctrine, and it ought to be popular; moreover, there are several Bible texts that when properly combined, favor the idea; but still it seems to one a waste of effort to preach such as this. Why not wait and let the hearers have the best chance? Don't let us spoil anyone's chances.

Now as the textual combinations, it is strange how readily the Bible lends itself to this sort of misreading to those who are so minded. Some time ago we had a colored visitor at our room; he came from Tennessee, and his avowed object was the evangelization of his people in Maryland. I had seen him about town some time without observing him particularly except to note his magnificent physique; tall, broad shouldered, strong deep-voiced—a congo prince he looked, or a Haussa chief; his manner entirely different from the ordinary negro preacher; stately, self-possessed, calm; but on one occasion a neighbor informed us that our visitor was just across the way holding forth, and as it was Sunday, and we were at leisure, we went to listen. We did not hear the first of the discourse, which was addressed to a crowd on the side walk, principally colored people, but what we did hear gave a lesson in textual combination that was impressive, to say the least. It is impossible to give in cold print the full force of the rhetoric that he delivered, for he was truly an eloquent speaker. His tall and stately form was rather accentuated by a linen duster that swept down to his heels and gave the effect of the Roman toga or the ecclesiastical surplice, and he expressed himself in short, sharp sentences, separated by impressive little pauses, something in this wise: "Adam was no white man—Adam was a colored man—His name signifies red earth—He was a red man—De Jews were colored people—Solomon, de king of de Jews, was a black man—He says so—Solomon's songs, first chapter, fifth verse." I am black but comely." Job was a black man—Job, thirtieth chapter, thirtieth verse, 'My skin is black upon me'—Jeremiah was a black man—Jeremiah, 8th chapter, twentieth verse, 'I am hurt, I am black'—and Lamentations fifth chapter and tenth verse 'Our skin is black.' He gave some more quotations, I think, but I forget them now and summed up somewhat in this manner: 'Any white people mentioned in de Bible?—Yes dere is'—Here he gave a brief, neat summary of the story of the healing of Naaman, the leper, if Gehasi's covetousness and Elijah's curse, and closed hurling forth the quotation with his full voice: 'And Gehasi went forth from the presence of Elijah a leper as white as snow'—adding sotta voce—'Naaman was a white man, Gehasi was a white man.'"

So now when I listen to textual combinations to support peculiar theories, my mind reverts to my Haussa Prince from the wilds of Tennessee, and the black King Solomon.

J. F. GELLETLY.
Baltimore, Md.

DARKNESS AND LIGHT.

What They Are—the Christian Armour—Pay Day.

"Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light." Rom. 13-12.

What are the works of darkness? Evil deeds. "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." John 3-19; Matt. 6-23. Wiles of the devil: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Eph 6-12. Unfruitfulness; "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." Eph. 5-11. Blindness: "But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walks in the darkness, and does not know where he is going. Because the darkness has blinded his eyes." (Diaglott). 1st John 2-11. Lieing: "If we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we speak falsely, and perform not the truth." 1st John 1-6. Crucifixion of Christ: "When I was with you every day in the temple, you did not stretch out your hands against me; but this is your hour and the power of darkness." Luke 22-53.

How do the people of today work the works of darkness? Do any and everything to please the world, join every secret society; be on hand at the dance; at the card table; at the horse race; at the theater; visit the saloon often; and even attend and support any of the fashionable churches; for they are all the works of darkness; work hard to invent some new gospel different from the one that Paul preached.

What is the Light?

Christ: "I am the light of the world; he that follows me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life." John 8-12; 1-9; 3-21; 9-15; 12-46. John: "He was a burning and a shining light, and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light." John 5-35. God: "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." John 1-5. Paul: "I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." Acts 13-47. 1800. 28-28-31. The Gospel: "But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God should shine unto them." 2nd Cor. 4-4.

What is an Armour?

In military terms it is a defense or covering; and to the Christian it is a Christian defense or covering. What is the Christians defense? David said, "God is my defense." Ps. 7-10, 59-9, 46-17; Wisdom is a defense. (Eccl. 7-12); Paul was set for the defense of the gospel. (Phil. 1-17). A Covering: "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins." 1st Pet. 4-8. "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. James 5-20; "Thou has forgiven the iniquity of thy people; thou hast covered all their sin." Ps. 85-2. This armour of light is God's word or the gospel. How are we to put on this armour of light? By belief, faith and obedience. Belief in what? In the Gospel, (not a gospel). What is the gospel? It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. 1-16. It is good news of the kingdom of God. It is that message that was proclaimed by Christ, and that he commanded his disciples to preach; and said to them, "go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Now there is a promise to pay for the one that performs the works of darkness. The wages of sin is death. Rom. 6-23. And there is also a promise of pay, to the one that puts on the armour of light by believing, and being baptized into Christ. His name is now recorded in the book of life and if he does not ac' to have it blotted out, he will be one of the number that will be changed in a moment to immortality, and so will ever be with the Lord. So when pay day comes it will make a great difference which class you have worked with. When one enlists in the army it is his duty to obey the officers, and if he deserts, he is punished if caught, sometimes with death. So in a measure is the duty of one that enlists under the banner of Christ Jesus, he must obey to obtain the reward that is promised, which is eternal life in the future ages; and if he deserts he will suffer the second death. If he had never enlisted when he died, he would die without law and so perish without law. Rom. 2-12. But now having belonged to Christ's body, and deserted it he will have to answer for the deeds done in the body. 2nd Cor. 5-10. Gal. 6-7. And it will be a fearful thing for them to find, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. 2d Pet. 2-20-21. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. (read Heb. 6-4-6, 10:26-27.) Let us try and put on the armour of light and keep it on through this life.

Monkland, Ore. E. W. KNAPP.

BEING ASHAMED OF CHRIST.

(Luke 9-26).

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, of him shall the son of man be ashamed when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels."

There was great power in these words when uttered by our Savior. The wealthy and learned Jews were generally ashamed of Him. They were ashamed of His low parentage, poverty, and his plain and unpretending life. They were also ashamed of his associates, as they were of a poor class. They were ashamed of his doctrine and affected to despise it. Had Christ come with worldly pomp, and explained and enforced the doctrines and words of the age he found them, the Scribes and Pharisees, and doctors would have believed on him, but as it was, they were ashamed of him.

In order that we may impress our hearts with the solemnity of the fearful truth, we will now fix our attention on the persons implicated, and then contemplate their sad reverse.

The persons implicated are all those who are ashamed of Christ and his words. It does not seem as though it would be very pleasant to be out of harmony with Christ, or ashamed of him, for shame is a painful or uneasy feeling of mind, arising from an apprehension of disgrace or injury done to reputation. If we were ashamed of Christ and his words, we would feel as though we were compromising our honor or reputation, by owning him as our Saviour, and trusting him, and by receiving his gospel and obeying it as our supreme law.

Those who might be charged with this crime are infidels, disbelievers, and despisers of the record of Christianity. There are a great many of these classes which look upon the gospel with contempt. They do not want people to think that they admit or feel the need of such a Saviour as Jesus Christ. They seem to think it would belittle their great minds to believe the gospel as the source of all religious truth.

I do not think anyone ought to think he is highly educated if he has not a thorough bible education. The bible contains exquisite literature. Some of the finest literature that can be found is in the bible. As to poetry and song, it contains the finest; for what is more beautiful than the psalms of the old royal bard, David? The story of Belshazzar's Feast, which is found in the fifth chapter of Daniel, is considered one of the finest pieces of literature. The history we find there is most interesting, and is the foundation of all history, as it deals with events from the very beginning. By means of the bible we are able to distinguish right from wrong.

There are some deterred from embracing Christ on account of loss of friendship, and the reproach of the world; but "Christ is a friend in need, and a friend in deed." There have been many persons at many times awakened to a sense of duty to publicly confess Christ, but have been detained by a sense of shame. They are ashamed of Christ before men. But Christ say, 'that if we "confess Him before men, He will confess us before the Father."

There are some professing Christians who are deterred from doing their duty from the dread of reproach.

I will now attempt to contemplate the sad reverse of the persons implicated. When the Son of man comes in his glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels, then will he be ashamed of those previously ashamed of him. This will be a very different change, a sad reverse. There certainly is a vast difference between our being ashamed of Christ and his being ashamed of us. All the circumstances are such as to render Christ's shame overwhelming and final ruin. He will manifest his shame when he comes in his own glory, at the time when his character, dignity, divinity and glory shall be revealed—when Christ is ashamed of the people who were at one time ashamed of him, it will be in the presence of the Father. The people will be judged, and those rejecting him will be forever barred from the kingdom. "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God." (1 Cor. 15-24).

Humanity is perverted and blind to be ashamed of Christ and his words. At this time will helplessness be ashamed of almighty power; ignorance ashamed of wisdom; poverty ashamed of riches; guilt ashamed of innocence; misery ashamed of happiness; the lost ashamed of salvation; and death ashamed of life.

By such a comparison between the object that excites the shame and the object of which they are ashamed, the view is heightened. Man is the object that excites their shame, and makes them ashamed of Christ. When Christ manifests his shame, then the causes which these people have given as their shame for him, will be very insignificant. At this time everything will be reversed.

VIOLA CAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD A LITERAL GOVERNMENT

The Four Universal Empires—The Fifth To be Divine—Testimony of Wilson, Historian.

The dream of Nebuchadnezzar is recorded in Dan. 2:31-45 inclusive. The king was greatly disturbed and required that his wise men declare the dream and interpret it. They were not able to declare it but stated that if the king would declare it they would interpret it. There was one who was able through God's power to do both. Now of the dream and the interpretation we wish to speak. Daniel stated to the king, "He that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass." The dream was revealed that the king might know what was in the future. The dream was revealed in verses 31 to 35. The image that stood before the king was composed of gold, silver, brass and iron and clay. The king saw a stone smite the image on its feet and grind it to powder. There was no place found for these parts. When the prophet revealed this dream he interpreted it. It is of this interpretation that we wish to speak. All admit that this image in its parts represent four human governments. These human governments were to continue until a fifth, a divine government was to set up and established. We wish to state that we are giving the interpretation of the prophet and not our own. The interpretation is as follows: "Thou art a king of kings; for the God of heaven have given thee a kingdom, power and strength and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the power of the heaven hath he given unto thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all."

This language can only teach one truth which is that this king was the head of a universal empire. The Babylonian kingdom was the first to have universal rule and Nebuchadnezzar was king over it. This was a literal and universal kingdom. One among four that was to rule among men until the fifth, which will be divine and literal and universal. The interpretation further states that three other kingdoms should arise and all were to be inferior to the first. Each however was to be literal and universal. These kingdoms are traceable through profane history and are as follows: Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Macedo-Grecian and Roman. These four have followed in the order as given by the prophet Daniel.

A fifth universal empire is spoken of in this interpretation. Can it be that this fifth empire will be less literal than the four preceding? If so, the prophet has failed to so state. He passes from the fourth in its divided condition to speak of the fifth. He does not stop to say that this fifth kingdom is to be a spiritual one or is to be represented by the church. Neither does he intimate that it is to be located in or beyond the skies. The four kingdoms occupied the whole habitable world and the fifth, if it fills the interpretation, must occupy the same territory. It must have a king, subjects, laws and associate rulers. Note what the prophet says: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2:44. It will be different from the others in that it will never be destroyed. It shall never be left to other people. It shall stand forever. In alDniel 7:27, the prophet in speaking of this kingdom says: "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the most high, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions (rulers) shall serve and obey him." This is the fifth kingdom that is called God's kingdom or the kingdom of the most high. This is the kingdom that Jesus directed his apostles to pray for. "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth as it is done in heaven." Then Eden will be restored and the earth made beautiful, as seen by John in Rev. 21 and 22.

In conclusion I wish to give the testimony of a noted historian, Mr. Wilson: "It is upon the warrant of negative scripture testimony that men believe no other temporal universal empire possible. But still the dream of Nebuchadnezzar and the interpretation of the prophet, point to a fifth monarchy, greater than all others, that shall arise when Christianity shall have swallowed up all other forms of religion, and the nations of the earth shall be gathered into one fold, under one all-conquering shepherd—the Prince of Peace."

D. C. ROBISON.

Salem, Ohio.

CONSCIENCE

A Sermon by the Late Brother M. Joblin

This subject is one of great importance. Conscience has furnished a theme that thousands have discussed from different points of view: the philosopher, the theologian, the scholiasts, the rationalist, the skeptic, the evolutionist: all have attempted to define it and have given definitions as widely variant as their schools of belief or thought. Its relation to the soul has constituted the chief ground of dispute. Many teach that conscience represents a principle or faculty in man that discerns the right or wrong of actions. I mean to occupy but little time, but I want to say that I do not believe that conscience holds any such office. I want to say that conscience, in my opinion, is not a knowing faculty at all, and therefore cannot discern the right or wrong of actions. It might be objected here that the Scriptures use the word as if we were expected to obey it, and that fact militates against my position, but I do not think so. The conscience as I understand it, impels or incites one to do what is believed by a person to be right. A person being taught that such and such things are right and such and such things are wrong, conscience bids that person to do what is believed to be right. But this is no guarantee that any particular course of conduct approved by conscience is right. A person may have been wrongfully educated, and therefore may believe that wrong is right or right wrong. Conscience, as I understand it, takes its cue from the intellect and incites a person to what he believes to be right, and that being the case, any one can see that conscience of itself is by no means a safe guide for our conduct, and therefore it is a great mistake to make it an infallible monitor. The same Paul who lived in all good conscience before God while persecuting the saints, also lived in all good conscience before God as one of the saints, and labored night and day to call others to saintship. The same conscience impelled him to follow two opposite courses of conduct. His intellect had been informed, however, in the meantime. He had discovered that he had made a tremendous mistake and what led him to say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Being told what to do, he at once did it.

One thought more and I give place: The lessons for us in view of this example is to be sure, adopted sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty to ascertain what the will of the Lord is, and what the commandments of Jesus are, and then give conscience full play, and our acceptance will be assured. Conscientiousness permits those in whom it is strong to be just in judging of the conduct, opinions and talents of others. Such persons are scrupulous in the performance of promises, and when they make mistakes that subject them to criticism, they are as ready to condemn themselves as others, who may be guilty of the same errors.

Another fact I would give expression to as proving the correctness of my claim. Great crimes have grown out of good intentions. Even veneration for God and the Bible have prompted to evil doing and brought people to a most disgraceful end. Indeed, nothing will prompt people to greater extremes of crime than a mistaken sense of duty. Morbidly excited religious feelings have frequently led to murder. And the most sanguinary pages of history are those that record the religious wars of nations, and the persecutions of religious zealots.

At first it would seem as if we must ascribe downright insanity to the supporters of the Spanish Inquisition, and the English authorities who counseled the horrible outrages upon the Scottish covenanters, but no, they were not insane in the proper sense but fired with zeal in behalf of their faith, deemed commendable by vast numbers of people. You need scarcely be reminded of the conscientious barbarities perpetrated in India.

Brothers and sisters in the Anointed One, let us praise and magnify the Lord for having found the ray of truth with which to regulate and balance the faculty under consideration—and then praise and magnify Him more by the use of it. Amen.

NECESSITY OF BAPTISM.

In the Name of Christ—Praise Due the Lord—Life From Faith, not the Law—An Example in the Eunuch—An Exhortation.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

We have one Lord, one faith, one baptism. (Eph. 4-5). By baptism is meant the washing away of sins and walking in newness of life. Before baptism, repentance is necessary. Peter says, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2-38.) "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." (Mark 1-4).

Blessed is he who is baptized into the state wherein he may walk pure and holy in the newness of life. We read in Titus 3:5-7 that "not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to his mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit" which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour, and that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

We ought to rejoice, brothers and sisters, that we have had the opportunity of hearing the word and of being baptized, that we may have everlasting life. For without baptism eternal life is impossible, Jesus says, "verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." (John 3-3). He again says, "verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." (John 3-5). For "that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." (John 3-6). For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one spirit. (1 Cor. 12-13).

Baptism must be in the name of Christ. Through Christ alone can we be saved. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15-22). Christ is the door to the favor of God. Through this door alone can we enter the kingdom of God. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." (Acts 16-31). "For ye are all children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." (Gal. 3:26-27-29). By this we can see clearly that without baptism we are lost to the promises. Since we have been baptized into Christ, we have become the seed of Abraham, and heirs to the promises. Let us therefore continue in our faith and strive to retain the heirship to which we have adopted, that in the future we may reap the reward of the just and faithful.

Let us gladly praise the Lord for "the lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1-29). He "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." (Titus 2-14). There was no lamb pure and spotless enough to be sacrificed for the forgiveness of the sins of the people, till God furnished a lamb, which was his only son. "Neither by blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." (Heb. 9-12). "How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead works to serve the living God." (Heb. 9-14). "But if we walk in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin." (John 1-7).

In the story of Philip and the eunuch, we have them walking along side by side, when the eunuch said, "Here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" (Acts 8-36). Philip asked him if he believed the word. He said he did, and was at once baptized. Then the spirit of the Lord took Philip away, and the eunuch went on his way rejoicing.

This is certainly a great example to those who have not yet been baptized, and who feel or know that they have the truth. To those who keep putting it off, there will come a time when it will be too late.

Brothers and sisters, let us encourage others; let us speak the word, and let us not delay for the time is at hand. "And behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." (Rev. 22-12.)

We have the command to teach. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." (Matt. 28-19.) "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts. 22-16.)

I pray, brothers and sisters, that since we have been baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission, we may remain steadfast unto the end; so that when our Master appears he may give us a crown of life, and may say to each one of us, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." (Matt. 25-21).

VIOLA GAZELEY.

Cleveland, Ohio.

ON THE REVERENT USE OF THE DIVINE WORD.

"Thus saith the Lord, the heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool; where is the house that ye built unto me? And where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath Mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the Lord; but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." —Isa. lxvi. 1, 2.

Lately, in my reading, I met with the following sentences:—"Jesting with Scripture.—There is a practice which is fearfully common even among professors of religion, and from which, alas! ministers of the gospel are not always free, which cannot be too severely condemned as offensive to God, and injurious to the best intrests of man. We allude to the practice of connecting ludicrous anecdotes with passages of Scripture. We know by sad experience, and we appeal to the experience of others for the confirmation of the remark, that, so lively is the impression which is often produced on the mind by the association of something grotesque with certain texts of the Bible, that such passages can hardly be read in the most serious moments without bringing up to the mind some idea which it requires a strong effort to prevent it producing a smile. This is one abuse of sacred things not less displeasing to God, than under the Old Testament it would have been to desecrate from a holy to a common use the sacred implements of the temple, the holy anointing oil, or the hallowed fire of the altar. If to put new wine into old bottles, or to sew a new patch on an old garment be unwise, incongruous, how much more so, to prostitute the sacred words of inspiration to point a jest for the amusement of a social circle! To do so, in the presence of the young, is peculiarly injudicious. Jeremy Taylor forcibly remarks on this subject: 'Some men used to read Scripture on their knees, and many with their heads uncovered, and all good men with fear and trembling, with reverence and grave attention. For all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is fit for instruction, for reproof, for exhortation, or doctrine, not for jesting; but he that makes that use of it had better part with his eyes in jest, and give his heart to make a tennis-ball; and that I may speak the worst thing in the world of it, it is as like the material part of the sin against the Holy Ghost, as jeering of a man is to abusing him; and no man can use it, but he that wants wit and manners, as much as he wants religion.'"—New York Churchman.

I trust that my readers will take these words to heart, especially any who have a tendency to fall in with the practice. Assuredly they who quote Scripture to point a joke, or evoke a smile, are thinking more of their own humor; and are more desirous to appear smart in the eyes of their fellows than to honor the Divine majesty of God. That is not an evidence of a humble and contrite spirit, or of reverence for the words of the Most High, to rubbing at his word; and the day may come when, in sorrow and pain, they shall miss and mourn for the absence of that benign look which Jehovah promises to those who are of a poor and contrite spirit, and tremble at His word.

Far different was it with the man who, in Psalm cxix., said: "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I offend not against Thee. Blessed art Thou, O Lord; teach me Thy statutes. I will delight myself in Thy statutes: I will not forget thy word. Thy testimonies also are my delight. Thy words are true from the beginning. My tongue shall speak of Thy word, for all Thy commandments are righteous."

There is another form of the absence of reverence for the word of God to which I would call attention, namely, that of perverting it, by quoting it in support of an idea, or practice, at variance with the purpose for which it was spoken. One example for the present must suffice: "Think not that I came to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace but a sword" Matt. x. 34). No person in reading these words of our Lord, in the light of the context, can seriously quote them as a defence of war among nations. Yet I have heard it done. Thoughtlessly yet seriously done. Surely there was little need for Christ coming into the world to promote war among the nations! Long before His coming had it prevailed. Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, Jews and Gentiles, all well merited the indictment of the apostle Paul: "Their feet are swift to shed blood; destruction and misery are in their path; and the way of peace have they not known" (Rom. iii. 15-17). Far, very far from knowing the heart of Jesus is the man who so quotes the words of the Prince of Peace.

But, see the context: "I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law, and a man's foe shall be those of his own household." Such was not the object but the result of the reception of His teaching. Often since then have His words been verified. One portion of a household, from hostility to the truth as it is in Jesus, has bitterly persecuted others of its members for receiving and confessing it. Particularly so in India, and by Jews at home and abroad; and sometimes by professed followers of Him who is faithful and true.

WM. LAING.

DEATH'S BENEFITS—WHAT ARE THEY.

"For I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give to me at that day; and not only to me, but also to all them that have loved His appearing." (2 Tim iv. 6-8).

We have, probably, in Paul's reflections upon his own approaching death, the best and fullest account anywhere given of all the benefits which death can possibly bring to the most exalted believer. They are negative, not positive.

Paul at Rome, looks forward to his being soon brought before the judgment seat of Caesar, where he knew he would be condemned to death. He has now the certain prospect of a death near at hand. He contemplates it exactly as the criminal when he has been condemned to die. He describes his feelings at the prospect. No doubt they are full of faith, full of hope. We more than doubt whether Paul would have looked at an approaching acquittal at Caesar's judgment seat with the smallest feeling of satisfaction, or that, if the stretching forth of his hand to plead for life would have added to his life, he would have raised it from his side. We are satisfied that he would not of his own free will, have put it for a day or an hour the fate that was rapidly drawing near. Now, such are the circumstances, and Paul the man, to give rise and utterance to whatever feelings of hope and joy God all laws to the nearest and dearest of his people at the prospect of death. It will be remarked, however, that Paul uses no such expressions as Calvin tells us the well-taught believer would use at the prospect of death. He does not call it the period of his redemption, but, on the contrary, intimates that it was not. Our popular hymns, comparing the act of dying to the passage of the Jordan, go altogether beyond the ideas of the great apostle. The benefits he expects from it are none of them positive at present, but all either direct or anticipative. Death is the close of a perilous period which has been successfully gone through; or it is the waiting time for a glorious period which will succeed it. But of the blessedness of the actual state of death he has not here said one word. We will examine the passage.

First, then, in death, the warfare, the course, the pilgrimage, the toil, the danger—all are over and gone back for ever. "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." Such is the blessed result of death to the believer. There is no more scorn of the world, no more danger of falling, of the preacher's becoming a castaway. In death Paul has reached the position of the Grecian runner who has come to the goal and runs no more. Victory is his, and he ceases to strive. And what is the next thing which the apostle expects as the consequence? It is the crown. When? As soon as he dies? No; not as soon as he dies. The crown is his but it is not then given him. It is laid up for him and will be given. When? At the second coming of Christ; at the resurrection; and not one hour before. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them that love His appearing." Here, then, is the exact and particular state in which Paul tells us that death places him, and all who resemble him; they are victors who have ceased to strive, and who await the reward of victory.

And what, then, is the state of death itself? What is that condition which is not over, as some seem to think, in the very act of dying, but which continues from that act of dying to the second coming of the Lord? It is, so far as Paul here represents it, a blank. It is neither the strife for victory, nor the reward for victory. It is like the condition of the Grecian runner, when he stood motionless and exhausted at the goal, in a state of utter inaction. The next act in the history of the believer, after he has closed his eyes in death, is opening them in resurrection to receive the reward of victory. All between is a blank.

Or, let us transfer the illustration to the kindred one of the soldier, to which, probably, Paul here also alludes. The armies have struggled in fierce contest from morning light in this, the concluding fight of the war. Severe has been the struggle, but it has ended in a complete victory. The shadows of night are stealing over the scene as the defeated army flies in dismay from the field. Word has gone through the victorious host. "The victory is won." See yonder soldier! He has stood his ground; he has watched the foe; he has seen the waning and the waxing of the fight; he has charged home with fierce onset at command; he has seen his foe retiring through the fast-falling shades of night. With the shout of victory in his ears, to which he has lent his own weak voice, he sinks exhausted on the ground he has won. Sleep, unbroken by the memories of past struggles, unbroken by the anticipation of the rewards of victory, chains him down through the night that follows, and not till the bright sun of the morrow shines full upon him does he awake to receive the reward of the soldier's victory. His condition which corresponds to Paul's in the intermediate state. —The late Canon Constable in Hades or the Intermediate State.

"DON'T WORRY."

Hour by Hour.

God broke our years to hours and days, that Hour by hour
And day by day,
We might be able all along
To keep quite strong.
Should all the weight of life
Be laid across our shoulders, and the future, rife
With woe and struggle meet us face to face
At just one place,
We could not go;
Our feet would stop; and so
God lays a little on us every day.
And never, I believe on all the way,
Will burdens bear so deep
Or pathways lie so steep
But we can go, if by God's power
We only bear the burdens by the hour.

—George Klingle.

Manager's Column

Each week mail arrives at this office from all parts of the country, from Maine to California, and from Mexico to Northern Canada. We consider ourselves a little flock, few in numbers, and yet here we find brethren scattered all over this vast country. Would it not be interesting to know just who and where they are? Doubtless there are many of whom we do not know, some who have moved away from us and of whom we have lost trace, some who would be glad to learn of the whereabouts of brethren of whom they have not heard in years. This suggested the idea of taking a sort of church census. What do you think of the idea? If it meets with your approval drop a line to the office with your suggestion. A blank could be printed in The Restitution which isolated brethren could fill in and send to this office, while secretaries of organized churches could send in lists of members of their respective bodies. These names would later be listed in a directory, and would be useful in many ways. We will undertake the work if it meets with your approval.

New subscriptions took a spurt this week, and two days mail brought in twenty-three. Although we are a good ways from the 500 mark, we will reach it if we keep up the work this way. One new subscriber wrote that he had been handed a copy of The Restitution by a neighbor, and he thought it so good he hastened to send in his dollar and a half.

We still have a quantity of tracts on hand that should be working. Its a little thing to hand out a tract, but it sometimes accomplishes big results. Here is a chance to do a big work on a little capital.

The truth may cost many a pang to utter, strict integrity may have to give up many a coveted gain, the courage of principle may forfeit the good will so highly prized or the position so eminently desirable; but upon the scale of years they will lead their adherents to a condition of honor and happiness compared with which all that had been sacrificed seems utterly trivial.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

NOTICE.

Those who are concerned will please take notice that the secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Conference is Brother W. C. Heacock, 230 Arlington avenue, Canton, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. W. C. Heacock.....50c

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make by your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children, which will be perfect in style and fit. Free—more finished than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 239 to 249 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1860. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?"

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

ADVERTISE IN
THE RESTITUTION
RATE ON APPLICATION

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 318 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for the Restitution

TRY IT

For six months. The cost is only seventy-five cents.

In the furnace the gold is melted, clay is hardened.—Ivan Panin.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

Fred Pauley nB 41

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1. 2:20); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, OCTOBER 25, 1911 No. 40

"TEMPERANCE."

True:—I want to be true to God, therefore I must be temperate. Intemperance leads to faithlessness.

Energetic:—to do good things. Intemperance leads to weakness and indolence.

Manly:—Intemperance makes men lose self-respect, and the respect of others.

Pure:—I want to be pure in thought, word and deed; intemperance leads to impurity.

Esteemed:—I want to live so that my Saviour will say, "Well Done." Therefore I must be temperate.

Rightminded so that I may make wise decisions. Intemperance weakens judgment and will power.

Alert to grasp my opportunities. They pass by rapidly.

Trustworthy:—My captain has assigned me a post of duty.

Ever Vigilant:—The devil goeth about like a roaring lion, seeing whom he may devour.

—S. J. Hopkins, in the Bible Standard.

THE KINGDOM OF THE GOD OF HEAVEN.

Dan. 2:44.

A Sermon by the late Brother M. Joblin.

We take it for granted that you are anxious to know something definite about the kingdom which the prophet here says the God of heaven would set up. So in order to bring before your mind the information you desire, we inquire in the first place,

Has this Kingdom ever Been Set up Yet?

What is your opinion of this matter, friends? Have you got an opinion about it? Do you think it has, or has it not? Or don't you know how it is?

To help you to decide for yourself, we propose to show that the kingdom according to Webster, is the territory subject to a king. A king is a monarch, a supreme magistrate. This is agreed to, so we add, that subjects, laws, rulers, and a seat of government form parts of a kingdom; that is, a kingdom implies all this. Very well. Did you ever hear that the God of heaven ever set up a kingdom like this, or embracing all this, since Daniel said he would do it? We never did. We are entirely ignorant of such a kingdom having somewhere in the past been established on this earth. But it would be very strange indeed, for such an extraordinary event to have occurred and no written history of it handed down to us!

And a kingdom is a kingdom all the world over; it cannot be made to mean something else!

By looking at the text again you may discover other points that will assist you to arrive at the truth in this matter! You observe that the kingdom Daniel foretold had a particular mission to fulfill—it had a specific work to do, so that if it is claimed that the kingdom has come, and yet has not done the work laid out for it to do, we know at once the claim to be a false one! For instance, this foretold kingdom was never to be destroyed! It was to be indestructible! So that if it has already come, it is here now! And we ask where?

Again this kingdom was to break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms. We see many kingdoms that are not broken to pieces and consumed, and therefore we have in this fact a double proof that God's kingdom has never yet been set up, or if it has it has failed to do what the prophet said it should do! And so it is no more reliable than any other!

Still again this foretold kingdom was to stand forever; never cease to be! And moreover it was never to change hands! Never be left to other people! And so in order that the first possessors of God's kingdom, or the rulers that God first places over us in his Kingdom, shall retain office under him forever, why of course they must be a set of immortal rulers! But where do you find such at this day? Where is the history that records the fact of a kingdom ruled by immortal beings that cannot die; that could defy the assassin's knife or bullets; that no human power could dethrone? If God's kingdom was to be ruled by poor fallible mortals, it would be little better than any other kingdom.

We venture a point here we wish you all to note, that in reference to this earth, no two kingdoms of God are ever mentioned. You may call the church the kingdom if you please, but we rather call the church the church; you may call the love of God shed abroad in the heart, the kingdom if you please, but we rather call it the love of God, for that's what it is, and what the Scriptures call it! And we call the kingdom, the kingdom. You never take such liberties with language on any other subject, and why should you in this? You may call heaven beyond the stars the kingdom here referred to if you please; but that won't make it so! Besides you notice it is to destroy and take the place—occupy the very site of the kingdom of the world! You may think this is stretching the words of the text some, but happily the spirit that indited Daniel's prophecy also indited John's Revelations; and you know that John prophecied of the time after Daniel's kingdom of God shall have come; and in Rev. 11:15, it is prophetically recorded by him, "that the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." We see by Daniel the way they become his: by the kingdom of God's establishing breaking down all the establishments or kingdoms of men!

It would seem to be almost a waste of time to give further evidence that the kingdom foretold by Daniel has not yet made its appearance! But for fear any should not yet be convinced, we inquire again, if it has been set up,

When Was it Done?

Perhaps some one here has been taught that the church is the kingdom of God on earth. We reply if that be so, it can be proved by the Scriptures. To save time please produce the term "kingdom of God" where it is applied to the church! But we know before we ask, that no such passage can be found! But we hope now by a very few words to show you plainly that the Christian dispensation could not be the time for the establishment of God's kingdom on the earth. In the chapter from which we have selected our text the prophet had been explaining what God intended to convey by an image dreamed of by the king of Babylon. The prophet told the king that God was informing him by this image of things that should come to pass hereafter. The image had a head of gold and that represented the kingdom of Babylon. It had silver arms and breast, representing another kingdom that should come after Babylon, implying that it would conquer Babylon, and supercede it entirely. Now the Medes and Persians did this exactly—they took Babylon's place as mistress of the world! But to examine the other parts of the image by Daniel's explanation, we find that the 3rd division of the image—the thigh portion was made of brass, and the 3rd part of the image was symbolic of a third kingdom that should arise, reckoning Babylon 1st; Medo Persia, 2nd; Greece come 3rd; and Daniel said in verse 39, that this third kingdom of brass should bear rule over all the earth; showing that it would conquer all obstacles—conquer the Medes and Persians, who up to Greece had been the supreme power among the nations! We suppose there are none here who think it was necessary for Greece to kill all the people before it could become the controlling power of earth, and understand that the army needed conquering and the kings dethroned and the princess wed, and all their dependent monarchs made to transfer their allegiance to the conquering hero? No one would think of destroying the masses of non-combatants; they serve their new master and add wealth to the empire by labor!

Remember then Daniel did not say that it would be the Medes and Persians, and then Grecians—only said it would be two powers that should arise, one after the other, and each should bear rule over all the earth in its day! But since Daniel's statements were made, the prophecy has passed into history, and we know, that so far as the silver 2nd and brass 3rd kingdoms were concerned, it was literally fulfilled to the letter, and more, if possible!

But the image had legs and they formed the 4th kingdom; and was represented as an iron kingdom. It is quite plain then from Daniel's explanation, that however grand and powerful Greece might be in her day, her glory was not to be perpetual, for away on in the dim future the seer deeries by the spirit of the living God, a 4th kingdom of iron character that should break in pieces and bruise everything that opposed it! (See verse 40).

We come now to the merest school boy and ask, What power after Greece controlled the known world? And he will tell you Rome! Ask him what kingdom or power on earth was called an iron kingdom, and he will tell you Rome; and in view of this, we ask, if by the explanation Daniel gave he did not present a comprehensive history in advance? You see that these kingdoms succeeded each other. And now the uninformed will inquire

What is to Become of Rome?

Is it to maintain its power and authority through all ages or what is to become of it? What power is to overthrow it? Who next is to be mistress of the world? We can best answer these questions by looking up Daniel's account. And you will observe by the 41st verse that Rome is not conquered by a young power like those which have preceded her. Yet she is to come down from her high seat! But how is it to be done? You know the legs of the body is the lower part of the body divided, for the purpose of locomotion; very well; Rome divided into two kingdoms just like the legs—had an eastern capital at Constantinople, and a western capital at Rome. This of course weakened it; and being thus weakened, what then? Daniel explains this by the toes—that as it should divide in two, so it should subdivide till finally that remained of the iron Roman power would be ten petty kingdoms. And these ten toe kingdoms are represented by iron and clay, which you know will neither mix nor unite nor bind together at all! In this we only follow Daniel's explanation. Now, where is Rome the once proud dictator of the earth's destinies? Where is it? Do you see the petty sovereigns of earth now bowing to its sway? Where is Rome? We ask? And still may we ask, but all the reply that reaches us, is that the remnants of the two kingdoms can only be found! And Europe furnishes plenty of them! We are all witnesses then to the truth of Daniel's history.

But says one, what is to become of these powers that Rome has split into? Are they always to remain? Is the old Roman territory to be always occupied by the subdivisions of the Roman Empire, or are they to be again united into one? Now as these questions relate to something that is still beyond us, that is still unfulfilled, who can tell? No one, friends, except God's prophets! And happily the eternal spirit instructed Daniel on this point, and we can get the benefit of it; and this is the identical spot where

Our Text Comes In!

Remember the image of Nebuchadnezzar was a means employed by God, as Daniel says in verse 29, to make known what shall come to pass! We have seen that it has come to pass just as he said, down till Rome was divided up into ten kingdoms like the toes of the image! We are all, to some extent, witnesses to the truth of this prophecy so far, and this, of itself, should give us at least some confidence in what he may say about the destiny of these 10 kingdoms. We say again Daniel by this one faithful history hundreds of years in advance, establishes himself as a prophet of the most high! Now we read in the text the destiny of the kingdoms that have sprung out of the iron Roman empire. In the days of these 10 kings, shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom which the God of heaven shall set up, shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these 10 kingdoms and it shall stand forever.

We learn one thing here, for certain, viz.: That God never intended to set up a kingdom on earth while the Medes and Persians had the supreme stage of action, nor yet while the third (Greece) was the mistress of the world, nor yet while Rome was in her greatness, but he plainly stated it to be his purpose to do it in the days of these ten kings. If you ever hear it claimed that the church is God's kingdom on earth and that it was set up on the day of Pentecost, we here give you two or three powerful arguments to refute it:

In Acts 7:38, we read that the church existed in the wilderness and Moses was with it, belonged to it. So you see if the church were the kingdom in the way claimed, it was set up, not at Pentecost, but ages before.

Can you tell us when Rome conquered Greece and became the 4th power symbolized by the image? It was about thirty years before the birth of Christ, and supremacy was gained by the victory of the battle of Actium! And at the day of Pentecost not a single kingdom had sprung from Rome, much less 10! So you see its very poor human speculation that places the establishment of God's kingdom on the day of Pentecost! For it was and still is, to be set up in the days of these 10 kings! And friends we are not living in the days of Babylon, the head of Gold, nor in the days of the Medo Persian arms of silver, nor in the Grecian thighs of brass, nor in the Roman legs of iron, but we are living right down in the days of

The Ten Toe Kingdoms.

Living exactly where Daniel says the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that will break in pieces all others, and stand forever! What an eventful period we are living in! Living in the eve of a revolution compared with which all the political upheavings that earth ever witnessed will be as nothing! Living, when at any moment all God's saints that ever lived may be aroused by the triumph of God and rise to meet the Lord! Living, when all who are living godly in Christ Jesus will ere long hear the once crucified one say: "Come, ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom.

You see by this wonderful Scripture we have been examining, we really can tell

About How Near

we are to the coming of Christ to judge the world in righteousness. God has allowed men to set up their own kingdoms long enough. He knew they would grow worse and worse, and he determined to permit only four universal empires to arise, that the last of the four should split all to pieces, or divide into ten parts, and before these subdivisions shall have passed away, he will set up a kingdom of his own appointment, and put his own son on the throne and elevate all the righteous that ever lived to reign on the earth with Jesus. This is the kingdom he will invite them to. This is their reward, to have eternal life, and to spend it in God's glorious kingdom on this earth! You know God has sworn that all the earth shall be filled with his glory and this is the time when it will be done, and it is this kingdom that will produce this glorious state of things.

"EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION."

Temporal Destruction—Saints Destroyed in this Sense—To "Perish" and be "Destroyed" the Same—Opponion and Timoria—Everlastingly Destroyed, When and How.

As everlasting destruction is the final punishment to the impenitent sinner, it may be of interest to some to consider more closely and in the light of God's word, the nature of same and the time when it is imposed. When Paul says "everlasting" destruction there must of necessity be another which is only limited. But before trying to show the existence and difference of the two, we will first see what destruction in a general sense is; for whether temporary or everlasting it is the same in nature, only differing in duration. And as the Bible speaks of both we must not make any mistakes in our conclusions nor adopt "any private interpretations."

Destruction or annihilation is preceded by cessation of life and may come on in an acute or gradual manner, but the ultimate result is the same. Anybody, whether human, animal or inanimate, when destroyed has returned to dust—ashes. God pronounced to Adam the consequence of his disobedience, viz.; a life in toil ending in death; but that his death is not lasting, neither any punishment, but a consequence of mortality, and an enemy to all life, is proved in 1 Cor. 15:26, where it is written: "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." And this takes place when "this mortal shall have put on immortality" (Verse 54). Is it not clear that the destructible death never could be everlasting punishment, being limited in its own existence?

The Bible, however, defines in no uncertain language when everlasting destruction is executed and in what manner. When God pronounced sentence upon Adam he did not leave him without any hope, but mercifully pointed to the "seed of the woman" as a coming redeemer, and that this must have been fully understood is clear from the fact that Enoch prophecied about the Lord's coming. Adam had forfeited his right or privilege to become immortal—"live forever"—through breaking God's law. Still God did not irrevocably condemn man unto death, for he knew that man could never keep the law and therefore replaced it with the Gospel and it is for not obeying this Gospel, and for this only that vengeance in everlasting destruction is taken. 2 Thess. 1:7-9 reads: "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." What a vast source of information is to be found in these few lines if taken to heart and consciously followed up. How many of all these unbiblical doctrines now preached and so much cherished would be avoided, yes banished. Here is (1) the punishment defined to be God's "vengeance"—not natural death; (2) the time of execution is "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven"—not before; (3) the manner, "in flaming fire"—"into smoke shall they consume away," says David; (4) the class that shall be punished, those "that obey not the gospel," and (5) the nature of punishment, "everlasting destruction," —not torment.

With two exceptions—Jesus and the saints living at the time of the Lord: return—all have been or are destroyed in death, but not everlasting death. Yes! the saints too, are destroyed. Isa. 57:1 reads: "The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none considering, that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come." While in contrast to this, we read in Job 21:30 that "the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction" (consequently not punished yet). That to "perish," or to "be destroyed," is the same, is seen from the fact that the Greek word "appollumi" is translated twenty-three times as "destroyed," and thirty-three times as "perish," while the Hebrew word "abad," a number of times, is used interchangeably for these two words. And thus we see, that without wresting the Scriptures (from which we are enjoined in 2 Pet. 3:16), we can understand that to "perish" and to "be destroyed" are in nature the same, as to die, but not necessarily of everlasting duration.

Rom. 6:23 reads: "The wages of sin is death." The original Greek "opsonion" is used only five times in the New Testament. Once it is translated "charges," once "allowance," and three times "wages." The other two places, beside those above mentioned, are Luke 3:14: "And the soldiers likewise demanded of him saying, and what shall we do? And he said unto them, do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages." And in 2 Cor. 11:8 Paul writes: "I robbed other churches taking wages of them." In all these places, it is reasonable to understand it just as it reads; as wages dues, or anything coming in consequence of labor, or cause, etc. Punishment, which is God's vengeance, is translated from "timoria" and only used in Heb. 10:29, where we read: "Of how much sorer punishment," etc. The writer has previously spoken of death as a penalty inflicted by human hand upon them that despised Moses' law, which, of course is an entirely different thing from natural or accidental death. But here is a class punished by death "without mercy." Still a "sorer punishment" is held out for a greater sin than that of treading "under foot the son of God"—not obeying the gospel. And as these last are punished with "everlasting destruction," the first ones, suffering a not so sore punishment (though destroyed in death) could not then be everlastingly destroyed.

Whether the writer has succeeded in showing the difference between temporary and everlasting destruction, and when, and in what manner the last is executed, others must judge. Humble as his efforts are, his desire is to be found among those that are "rightly dividing the word of truth," and thereby be the means to help others, who may not be settled in their minds upon this question, but ask, as Pilate did "What is truth?"—Fred Bidstrup in Our Hope. Revised and endorsed by the editor.

The man who is not content with merely fulfilling orders, but who puts his mind into his own work, arranging its details, devising methods to speed and perfect it, and using his intelligence as well as his hands in performing it, is sure to rise. The better quality of work he performs will soon be appreciated, and his success and promotion are assured.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents. In advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Oct. 25, 1911

EDITORIAL

We wish to commend Further Remarks, an article by Bro. Blessing, in this issue. "The heaven" and "the heavens" so often confounded by Bible readers, must always be separated; for through the entire Greek of the New Testament there is a marked difference between these two expressions. In illustration of the difference we cite the Lord's Prayer. The first clause in the prayer in the Greek is "Our father which art in the heavens." If it is read "in heaven," as our version translates it, the meaning would be as in Robert Buchanan's "Devil's Prayer: "Our Father who art in heaven—not here." The design of the petition is not to put God at a distance, but to bring him near. "Heaven" in the singular is contrasted with the earth in the words, "Thy will be done in earth as in heaven." But "the heavens" include all places of God's dominions, terrestial and celestial; and we are taught to pray to Him who is in the heavens that are here as well as there, upon earth as well as in the sky.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY AND THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question

Question 11.—If the popes are the man of sin, how is it they are not, at the end of 1260 years, consumed by the brightness of the Lord's coming?

Answer. Because it is not written that so it would be. It was written that the Little Horn should prevail for that time (Dan. vii. 25), and so it has; and now it is a mere shadow, fast sinking to the mere false prophet position in which the Lord finds it when he comes to shatter Nebuchadnezzar's image, in "the war of the great day of God Almighty."

Question 12. If the papacy is "that wicked," how is it that she is destroyed by the beast and not by the Lord?

Answer. She is not destroyed and will not be till the Lord come. It is out of the power of man to root the Roman Catholic religion out of the earth. What the ten horned beast is doing is to persecute the woman on its back—Rev. xvii. 16. The 1260 years being up, (and immediately on the expiry thereof) the military element of the Little Horn (represented by Austria), seceded from the ecclesiastical, and by the dissolution of the "Holy See" to look out for itself, with the result illustrated in the Garibaldian attack in 1867, and the interception of the frogs who have to develop the last phase of the false prophet's fortunes.

Question 13. If the Papacy is the man of sin, on what principle can she hate herself and burn herself with fire?

Answer. To this rather obscure question, we can only say that the Harlot, which is the ecclesiastical element of the papacy—the "Church" as distinct from the "State"—does not and will not hate herself nor burn herself with fire. It is the horns of the beast that do the hating and the eating, and burning—(Rev. xvii. 16)—a process exemplified in the attitude of all the states of Europe, within the last ten years, toward ecclesiastical establishments in their several dominions, and daily tending more and more to open hostility. The secularization of ecclesiastical property—or the taking from the church the property she had, and applying it to state uses—is the unmistakable symptom of the practical hatred of the whore by the horns.

Question 14. Why does papacy perish by human power, if she is the man of sin?

Answer. She does not "perish by human power" (open) will be destroyed by the Lord himself; for nobody else can do it. Let the experiment be tried of upreading a system of superstition believed by half the population of Europe! It is only in respect of her political power and temporal possessions, that the horns, which are "human power" politically embodied, are permitted to vex her towards her latter end, preliminary to her final and utter perdition at the hands of the Lord.

Question 15. What pope has come with power and signs, working miracles—no sham?

Answer. None, nor never shall come. Our correspondent is under a mistake in supposing that such a thing was ever predicted. The workings of the man of sin were to be characterized by "power and signs and lying wonders," or "shams;"—(2 Thess. ii. 9,) and the man must be historically ignorant indeed who is not aware that pretended miracles have been amongst the principal weapons of Rome. "Power" she has had, bestowed upon her by the imperial court at Constantinople, in the days of the eastern empire: in apocalyptic language, "the dragon gave him his power and his seat and great authority;" —(Rev. xiii. 2.) "signs and lying wonders" she has given abundantly, and pity the man who imagines they are "no sham," but "true!" Not so think the servants of Jesus whose glory it is to stand aloof in virgin purity from the ecclesiastical adulteress of the age, and all her besotted progeny.

Question 16. When was "the truth" presented to them, that they might either receive or reject it?

Answer. In the early centuries, just as Israel, under Moses, was offered a blessing or a curse, according to their continuance or departure from the truth. Mosaically promulgated—(Deut. xi. 26-28.) Israel in the early days became disobedient, and subsequent generations, as at this day, inherited the curse. So it is with the Gentiles. The dispensation of faith was extended to them by the ministry of the apostles, but they abode not therein, and have in themselves and successors realized the consequences. "The Jew first and also the Gentile," is the rule of the divine procedure.

(To be continued.)

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere—The Brethren of Christ—

Should Be:—

Pure. Ist. 52:11. 1 Tim. 3:9. Holy. Lev. 21:6. Titus 1:8. 1 Pet. 1:16.
Humble. Acts 20:19.
Patient. 2 Cor. 6:4. 2 Tim. 2:24.
Blameless. 1 Tim. 3:2. Titus 1:7.
Willing. Isa. 6:7. 1 Peter 5:2
Disinterested. 2 Cor 12:14. 1 Thess. 2:3.
Impartial. 1 Tim 5:21.
Gentle. 1 Thess. 2:7, 24.
Devoted. Acts 20:24. Phil. 1:20, 21.
Strong in grace. 2 Tim. 2:1.
Perfect. Matt. 5:48.
Self Denying. 1 Cor. 11:27.
Sober, just and temperate. Titus 1:8.
Hospitable. 1 Tim. 3:2. Titus 1:8.
Apt to teach. 1 Tim. 3:2. 2 Tim. 2:24.
Studious and meditative. 1 Tim 4:13, 15.
Watchful. 2 Tim. 4:5.
Obedient and faithful. (Titus is heaven's first law.)
Prayerful. Eph. 3:14. Phil 1:4.
Strict in ruling their own families. 1 Tim. 3:4, 12.
Affectionate. Phil. 2:7. 1 Thess 2:8, 11.
Examples to the flock. Phil. 3:17 2 Thess 3:9. 1 Tim. 4:12. 1 Pet. 5:3.
"For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. 2 Peter 1:5-8

Should not be:—

Lords over God's heritage. 1 Pet. 5:3.
Greedy of filthy lucre. Acts 20: 33. 1 Tim. 3:3, 8.
Contentious. 1 Tim. 3:2. Titus 1:7.
Crafty. 2 Cor. 4:2.
Men pleasers. Gal. 1:13. 1 Thess. 2:4. Eph. 6:6.
Easily dispirited. 2 Cor. 4:8, 9) and 6:10.
Entangled with cares. Luke 9: 60. 2 Tim. 2:4.
Given to wine. 1 Tim. 3:3. Titus 1:7.
Unwise. Eph. 5:17.
Foolish, disobedient, etc. Titus 3:3. Eph. 5:4.
Unclean or filthy. Eph. 5:3, 4. "From such turn away."

Asking God for Wisdom Implies Conditions.—If any man lack wisdom, let him ask God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him" (James i. 5). This is definite and encouraging, but let us not lose sight of the conditions which underlie the promise. No request for wisdom will be heeded by God unless the one who makes it is moved by a pure motive, and looks in the direction from which wisdom alone can come. Upon the first of these points some further words of James are relevant, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts" In our prayers for wisdom let us have clearly before the mind an object for wanting it which is pleasing to God, and when the blessing has been received, let us employ it in that way, and in no other. How many prayers, may be, remain unanswered, how many brethren and sisters, possibly, advance no further than babyhood in relation to the truth, solely on account of the fact that God knew that His gift would be employed in unworthy ways, as a power to smite and wound unlawfully, or to "show off" to the glory of self. As to the second point, divine wisdom comes through the channel of the Scriptures, and the man who turns from these, can expect no response to his prayer. Let us examine ourselves in these matters, and act the part of true and sensible beings.

Puzzled Over Belief that a Blow that Would Kill Would Enable Man to know Everything.—In earlier days we were told, and tried to believe it, that a dead man knew more than a living one. We were puzzled by the fact that a blow on the head might stun one to insensibility, in view of the fact that we were told that a heavier blow, that would kill the man would enable him to know everything in an instant. The philosophy (?) of this was handed to us thus: The soul is the intelligent being, of which nobody knows very much. It is imprisoned in our mortal bodies and can operate in them only unsatisfactorily. The moment of death is the moment of release to the soul, which then can think and reason more soundly than when obliged to use the brain.

Many of us tried in childhood years to believe such unphilosophical philosophy. We asked for proofs and were told that it was the voice of the Church's philosophers, and if we would doubt it we would be damned to eternal misery. Believing this, and not willing to be doomed to eternal misery, many of us restrained ourselves and that portion of our brain became well nigh atrophied.

Even the religious found it difficult to believe in so immaterial a soul and inquired, why, then, a resurrection of the dead? Will the resurrection signify another imprisonment of the soul and a decrease of intelligence, as this philosophy (?) would seem to imply? Some gave up the quest for knowledge in despair and sought for something more intelligent outside of all the creeds and philosophies of "science falsely so-called." Others of us have held to the word of God and sought to see its philosophy, its teachings, and to harmonize them.

We are glad to belong to this growing class of Bible students who declare, let God and his word be true, though it disproves many of the theories we once believed and almost worshiped. (Rom. 3: 4.) We want the truth!

An Argument on the Soul 171 Years Old.—In Benjamin Martin's philological library, published in 1740, there occurs the following argument against the popular doctrine of the soul:— Notwithstanding the antiquity and universality of the doctrine of the soul's existence, and the many efforts of the most learned pens to support it, I have never yet been able to see anything of reason or truth therein sufficient to render it credible, or indeed intelligible. The grand principle on which this opinion is received is mere matter cannot think. It is granted it cannot; and it is also as evident that mere matter cannot move of itself; yet it does not follow that it is incapable of the power of thinking from the divine being! I have not seen it proved a contradiction by its greatest oppugners; yea, so far is it from that, we have frequent examples of mere matter being immediately endowed with the power of life and thought by the divine omnipotence. Witness Moses' rod. Was it not matter one moment, and a cogitative animal the next? Is not dust mere matter? And did not God immediately convert it into animals by endowing it with life and thought? . . . It is evident, therefore, that mere matter being capable (by the almighty power of the faculty of thinking is no longer an opinion, but real fact; and, consequently the bodies of men and other animals are rendered capable of life and thought on principles more rational and intelligible than of the existence of souls."

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP.

No. 15.

Attention has been called to the a the fact that inspired men have made mistakes; as for instance, Peter (Gal. ii. 11). The only object for which this matter can have been introduced into the present controversy is to teach by implication that they may also have made mistakes in their inspired writings. It has even been contended that if not infallible in all the affairs of life, there is no guarantee of infallibility when speaking or writing under the spirit. Such a conclusion arises from confounding things which differ. Inspiration was not intended to deprive the recipients of the individual responsibility to God. If it did, they would have no probation; and in that case their salvation would be attributable to direct action on the mind, not to faith and obedience. This would be subversive of the principle on which eternal life is obtainable. Inspiration has been confined to giving expression to God's mind. When not so engaged, inspired men have been left to "work out" their "own salvation with fear and trembling" (Phil. ii. 12); a process which compelled them to "keep under" the "body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means," after preaching "to others," any of them "should be a castaway" 1 Cor. ix. 27).

The statement that the infallibility of the written word of God has been embodied in the personal word will not be accepted by those who attribute fallibility to the inspired word. To meet the position of such the argument must be reversed. There can be no question about the infallibility of the personal word of God, seeing that he has attained to the "divine nature" (2 Pet. i. 4). The infallibility assumes a very tangible form in his capacity as "judge of quick and dead" (Acts x. 42). To that tribunal all his brethren must submit. On what basis will they be judged? On that of the inspired word. The principle, embodied in Christ's statement is applicable to all the other words of the spirit:—"He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him. The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day" (Jno. xii. 48). The spoken and the personal word are both comprised in this passage. The "word made flesh" repudiated the office of judge: "If any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not; for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world" (ver. 47). At that time he was not invested, in nature, with the qualities of incorruptibility; these attributes were added when he became the word made spirit; and having fulfilled his allotted task "to save the world," he has become the "one that judgeth him" who rejected his spoken words. In the exercise of this infallible judgment he quotes the words of the unrighteous:—"Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow; wherefore thou gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?" (Luke xix. 23). Thus the personal word of God formulates a description of the evil actions of men as the foundations for his decree. Is the former invested with any less infallibility than the latter? Or is it deprived of any of the characteristics pertaining to the utterances of the personal word? Let him who dares, say yea. The same principles exactly are applicable to the record of man's doings and sayings in the written word. An infallible judge requires an infallible word on which to exercise judgment; the one involves the other, and God has provided both. This is infinitely superior to the preservation of the autograph manuscripts of the inspired word. The demand which has been made for their production before deciding upon their infallibility borders somewhat on presumption. No one man could so test them as to be able to declare them completely free from error; and it is questionable whether any number of men at this stage of the world's history could require the aggregation of all the knowledge embodied in Bible facts to perform such a task. Knowing this, God has not left his word to any such uncertain and fallible tests; He has, in subsequent communications, confirmed the divine authorship to those days, both individuals and nations which have gone before; and this testimony is crowned by the last book of the Bible. It defines the Holy Scriptures to be the "word of God" (Rev. vi. 9); and it declares that Word to be infallible (Rev. xix. 13. The personal "word of God" is infallible. The written word has been given only by inspiration; therefore, the product of inspiration is without error. Its Alpha is God, and its Omega, his son; both author and counterpart testify to its infallibility. Quod erat demonstrandum, which was to be demonstrated.

Behold ye despisers of infallible inspiration, ye who attribute error to the word of God, ye traducers of the most high! Behold, the proof which ye have demanded, God hath heard your unsanctified reasonings; yea, he hath foreseen and provided for them. The absolute proof which ye have incredulously called for is very nigh you; it is in your own hands; it was in existence before ye were; it is in the book whose complete infallibility ye have dared to question; it is embodies in Him who is your appointed judge. Ye have presumptiously denied the infallibility of the written word of God; will ye dare to question the infallibility of the personal word of God? The day is fast approaching when ye will have to appear in his presence. Will ye continue to hold your blasphemous belief until summoned before him? Think you that his infallible and penetrating scrutiny will overlook a doctrine which logically attributes to himself an erring element? If so, ye will continue your self-destroying career; but in that case your blood will be upon your own heads, not upon those who have repudiated your false teaching. If you think otherwise, and change your minds, your only course is to throw yourselves on the mercy of him whom you have unwittingly libelled. Ye will do well to lose no time; for no one knows when the door of mercy will be closed. Wait not till the word of God appears in person, for then will the decree go forth, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still" (Rev. xxii. 11); he that believes a lie, let him continue so to believe (ver. 15).

Behold ye conscientious doubters, ye who, like Thomas, decline to believe unless ye can see with your eyes! Behold the infallible proof which ye have desired. Your father in heaven hath provided it to satisfy such doubts as yours, and enable you, without hesitation, to separate from cavillers and blasphemers. Will ye not accept it? Will ye any longer be faithless? Will ye not, like Thomas, praise your Lord and your God for granting your desire? Will ye continue to countenance a doctrine which dishonors your heavenly Father and your elder brother? How can ye longer partake of the emblems of Christ with any whose belief involves, in effect, the infallibility of him whom those emblems symbolize? Think ye that ye will not be accountable for complicity with them? that ye will not be condemned for suffering them so to teach. Ye hope to be raised to equality with him whose name ye bear: in other words to form part of the multitudinous word of God. Ye believe that ye will then be infallible. The infallibility of the multitudinous word of God rests upon the infallibility of the written word. Will ye allow anyone to impugn either the one or the other? Will ye remain in fellowship with those who thus tamper with your birthright? Will ye not without delay, discard their word nullifying and saint-vanquishing doctrine and join those who have already taken this righteous step?

Behold, ye who have already believed? Behold the top stone of the mountain of evidence on which your conviction is based! Behold the weapon which your loving Father hath devised to strengthen your hands in the arduous conflict. It has been stored up in His inexhaustible armory to be brought forth in time of need.

Others may believe now that irrefutable proof is produced; but ye are among those of whom it is said, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed" (Jno. xx. 29). Ye have been fighting for the "word of God," and its author hath sharpened for you "the sword of the spirit" that he may henceforth defend with even greater vigor the precious gift committed to your trust. Will ye not "magnify the Lord" and "exalt his name?" (Ps. xxxiv. 3). Will ye not like David, when the ark was brought safely into its resting place, "give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name," and "make known his deeds among the people?" (1 Chron. xvi. 8). "Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works. Glory ye in his holy name. Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord. Seek the Lord and his strength, seek his face continally. Remember his marvelous work that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth. O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones. He is the Lord our God; his judgments are all in the earth. Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations" (ver. 9-15).

"The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in His sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do" (Heb. iv. 12, 13). The written and the personal Word of God are combined in this passage. The written Word is a "mirror" (Jas. i. 23, Rev. Ver.) It enables man to see himself as he really is; its words are "piercing," and he who fulfils them that they "divide asunder soul and spirit"—that they unerringly distinguish between the Old Man the the New Man. Both righteous and unrighteous are accurately reflected in its pages. As the inspired "Scripture" is said to "foresee" and "preach" (Gal. iii. 8) so does it "discern the thoughts of the heart." Its character is too penetrating for the stony ground and thorny place hearers (Matt. xiii. 20-22). They are not able to bear "tribulation" for the Word's sake, or they allow the things of the flesh to "choke" the things of the Spirit. The same is true of the personal Word of God. To depart from the written Word is to depart from Christ, and to "keep" that Word is to "abide in him" (1 Jno. ii. 27).

It is written of Israel in the wilderness, "The Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee" (Deut. xxiii. 14). In like manner the personal Word of God "walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks," or ecclesias (Rev. ii. 1) to "search the reins and hearts." His "eyes" are "like unto a flame of fire" (Rev. ii. 18); and "all things are naked and opened" before him. At irregular intervals he applies his "two-edged sword" to the whole of the One Body to "divide asunder" its "joints and marrow." His object is two-fold, viz., to bring into greater prominence some item of the truth, and "that they which are approved may be made manifest" (1 Cor. xi. 19); the sifting process likewise makes manifest the disapproved.

THE HOLY LAND AS SPOIL OF VICTORY?

Under the above caption there appeared a sensational article in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, of October 12, which naturally catches the attention of every student of the Scriptures, and particularly those of the Abrahamic faith.

The report says in part:" That Italy will not make peace with Turkey until it has wrested Jerusalem and the Holy Land from Moslem sovereignty and presented it to the pope as a papal state, is the statement of L'Italia, a newspaper of Chicago edited by Oscar Durante."

Doubtless this article is true in respect to the great satisfaction such an outcome to the war between Turkey and Italy would give the papacy, but as to the probability of Italy having such a design, or that the great powers of Europe would permit such an arrangement to be consummated, is very far from probable. Anyone familiar with the movements of Russia, England and Germany in the Orient for many years past, knows it has been the rivalry of these powers and their mutual fears of each other in seeking control of the sick man's possessions which has preserved any part of them to the Turk. Each of the powers watches every move of all others.

We need not discuss European political affairs, nor attempt to foretell probable complications which would ensue should Italy try to wrest Palestine and Jerusalem from Turkey, or whether she would present them to the Pope or not. We will point to the prophetic word concerning such schemes.

Turning to Zechariah xii. 2, 3, we read, "Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling unto all the peoples round about, when they shall be in the siege both against Judah and against Jerusalem. And in that day I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all peoples. All that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces though all the people of the earth be gathered against it."

Jesus called Jerusalem "the city of the great king" (Matt. v: 35) meaning himself, for he is the one whom the angel Gabriel told Mary the Lord God "shall give him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, (Luke 1: 32). When that throne and kingdom were overturned God declared it should "be no more"—"until he come whose right it is and I will give it him." (Ezek. 21:27).

The time limit for the down treading of Jerusalem was foretold by Jesus. Luke xxi. 24)—Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. No mortal king, emperor or pope can take it and glorify it for himself and hold it against God word.

"We pray that if this word comes to any who have not learned the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus preached in Galilee, they may search the scriptures while it is yet called today. Tomorrow may never come for you. Speedily accept the offer of eternal life on God's terms, and he will grant you a place with Jesus, as a joint heir and ruler of that kingdom of glory. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

Verily I say unto you, whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein. (Luke xviii. 17. The war of the great day of God Almighty will be fought out on the mountains of Israel. Ezekiel 36:1, and who knows that it is not about to begin in just such a crisis as the present?

The 38 and 39 chaps. of Ezek. show the coming events, with the armies of Russia and Great Britain as the heads of opposing forces.

Is it possible, think you, that this vision of the prophet will fail and that the jealous rivalry of the powers be foiled or checked by peace congresses or Hague tribunals? No, they would be no more likely to agree over Jerusalem than a pack of hungry dogs would agree over a bone.

Pray for the peace of Jerusalem.

CHAS. A. GOSS.

Cleveland, O.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between The Resurrection of Christ And the Death of Constantine in 337

III.—How the Christian Religion Was Perverted.

The main question which troubled the church was the keeping of the law of Moses. For many centuries the Jews had been taught its absolute authority; and the large mass of the early Jewish Christians were strict observers of the law, and considered it binding upon every one who desired to be saved. James, the brother of the Lord, who became a "pillar" in the church, was a most rigid observer of the law. The church at Jerusalem had for their leaders up to the time of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, about the year 70, a Jew who observed the law. Two parties remained at least in existence till the fourth century who professed to be followers of Christ, and adhered also to the law; they were very different, although often spoken of by many writers as one party; they were the Nazarenes and the Ebionites.

Paul who was raised up by God to preach the glad tidings to the Gentiles, contended that the law was only binding till Christ; that he was the end of the law to every one who believed. In the seventh chapter of Romans, Paul uses the illustration of a woman who is married to a husband; she is bound to him as long as he lives, but if he dies she is no longer bound to him, and is then free to marry another; and he shows the Romans that in like manner they are now dead to the law, and are married to Christ. Also, in his letter to the Galatians, he reasons with them in regard to the absurd position they take, when they as Christians attempt to keep the law of Moses. Many professed Christians in all ages have never realized this fact, so clearly taught by Paul in all his letters, as well as by the writer to the Hebrews, who reasons out the same idea, that the law was passed. But still the thought remains in many minds that the law of Moses is still binding, in part at least, upon the Christian. They seem never able to realize that Christ has placed his disciples on a far higher plane. Paul says: "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lust thereof." . . . "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? shall we sin because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." Hence all the spasmodic efforts put forth by professed Christians to partially keep the law of Moses are an absurdity if we accept Paul as an authority.

Gradually working and developing at the dawn of Christianity was another system which crept in to the Christian church, and ultimately distorted and perverted almost every sentiment pertaining to the Christian religion. As we have seen most of the Jews and all the primitive Christians accepted God's statement in Genesis as literally true, when he said that he made man of the dust of the ground; and because man broke God's law he was told: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." They did not use the specious plea which was afterwards introduced, that this sentence applied only to his body, and that the real man Adam, the spirit, had no sentence pronounced on him at that time at all; that though was afterwards worked out by profound theologians, as we will see. They who changed the belief in the essential mortality of man into a belief of his spirit-nature were the Gnostics. The word Gnostic is derived from the Greek word gnosis, meaning knowledge; and they claimed, like some of our modern wise men, that they had all the knowledge that was to be had. The Gnostics later divided up under many leaders, and so had very many different theories, but they all had one essential feature in common at least—that man was a spirit, and that the body was no essential part of him; and all the innumerable creeds and systems that have been evolved in later ages are built upon this idea of the real man being a spirit; they are largely indebted to Gnosticism for their theories.

As the Gnostics played such an important role in the perversion of the Christian religion, it would be well for the reader to understand what was their original starting point in the first century.

They taught "that beyond the mansions of light, where dwells the deity with his celestial offspring, there lay a rude and unwieldy mass of matter, agitated by innate, turbulent and irregular motions. One of the celestial natures descending from the pleroma, either by a fortuitous impulse, or in consequence of a divine commission, reduced to order this unseemly mass, adorned it with a rich variety of gifts, created men's bodies, and inferior animals of different kinds, to store it with inhabitants; and corrected its malignity by mixing with it a certain portion of light, and also of a matter celestial and divine. This creator of the world is distinguished from the supreme Deity by the name of Demiurge. His character is a compound of shining qualities and insupportable arrogance; and his excessive lust of empire effaces his talents and his virtues. He claims dominion over the new world he has formed as his sovereign right; and excluding totally the supreme deity from all concernment in it, he demands from mankind or himself and his associates divine honors.

"Man is a compound of a terrestial and corrupt body, and a soul which is of celestial origin, and in some measure an emanation from the Divinity. This nobler part is miserably weighted down and encumbered by the body, which is the seat of all irregular lusts and impure desires, it is this body that seduces the soul from the pursuit of truth, and not only turns it from the contemplation and worship of the Supreme Being, so as to confine its homage and veneration to the creator of this world, but also attaches it to terrestrial objects, and to the immoderate pursuit of sensual pleasures, by which its nature is totally polluted. The Sovereign Mind employs various means to deliver his offsprings from this deplorable servitude, especially the ministry of divine messengers whom he send to enlighten, to admonish and to reform the human race. In the meantime, the imperious Demiurge exerts his power in opposition to the merciful purposes of the Supreme Being, resists the influence of those solemn invitations by which He exhorts mankind to return to Him, and labors to efface the knowledge of God in the minds of intelligent beings. In this conflict, such souls as, throwing off the yoke of the creators and rulers of this world, rise to their Supreme Parent, and subdue the turbulent and sinful emotions which corrupt matter excites within them, shall, at the dissolution of their mortal bodies, ascend directly to the pleroma. Those, on the contrary, who remain in the bondage of servile superstition and corrupt matter, shall, at the end of this life, pass into new bodies, until they wake from their sinful lethargy. In the end, however, the Supreme God shall come forth victorious, triumph over all opposition, and having delivered from their servitude the greater part of these souls that are imprisoned in mortal bodies, shall dissolve the frame of this visible world and involve it in a general ruin. After this solemn period primitive tranquillity shall be restored in the universe, and God shall reign with happy spirits in undisturbed felicity through the everlasting ages."

When such ideas as these began to creep into the Christian church the persons holding them had no [illegible] resurrection of the dead. So we find some in the church at Corinth were already repudiating this belief, causing Paul to write that wonderful chapter, the fifteenth of first Corinthians, in order to refute such false ideas; in which he shows them that if there is no resurrection of the individual from the ground, there is no future life or hope for man. These primary Gnostic ideas were developed in various directions. Cerinthus was one of those Gnostic teachers; he was a contemporary of the apostle John. Cerinthus taught "that the creator of this world, whom he considered also as the sovereign and law-giver of the Jewish people, was a being endowed with the greatest virtue; and derived his birth from the Supreme God; that this being fell by degrees from his native virtue and his primitive dignity; that the Supreme God, in consequence of this determined to destroy his empire; and sent upon earth for this purpose one of the ever happy and glorious aeons, whose name was Christ; that this Christ chose for His habitation the person of Jesus, a man of the most illustrious sanctity and justice, the son of Joseph and Mary; and descending in the form of a dove, entered into him while he was receiving the baptism of John in the waters of Jordan; that Jesus after his union with Christ, opposed himself with vigor to the god of the Jews, and was by his instigation seized and crucified by the Hebrew chiefs; that when Jesus was taken captive Christ ascended up on high, so that the man Jesus alone was subjected to the pains of an ignominious death." Cerinthus believed to have been a Hebrew by birth, and becoming a philosopher, thus mixed up Judaism, Gnosticism and Christianity, with the above results. It was in reference to his teaching that John wrote 1 John iv. 1. And the writer to the Hebrews wrote the first and second chapters to refute those who were creeping into the church at that time teaching these perversions of the truth.

The greater part of latter-day theologians' work has been to grait Gnostic ideas into the teachings of the Bible, and to try to make them consistent therewith. For this cause the Bible has been made a book of mysteries, which only the very learned can understand and explain; while Christ himself taught that He was the way, the truth and the life—the resurrection and the life. "Let him that is thirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Orello Cone, D. D., in his work, Paul, the Man, the Missionary and the Teacher, published in 1898, after quoting Rom. ii 5, 8, 9; iii. 5; v. 9; Eph. v. 6; says: "This terrible judgment conceived and executed by Almighty power denote the dread significance of death, which is so frequently mentioned as the penalty of sin. This means not only the going out of existence of the physical body of soul (psuche)—life principle of the flesh and body—but also the exclusion of the individual from participation in the resurrection, his hopeless tarrying in the underworld hades, the realm of the dead if not the absolute destruction of his personality. The words corruption, destruction and their corresponding verbs do not mean simply punishment and to punish, and do not convey the idea of temporal overthrow, but their proper sense is exclusion from existence as ordinarily understood, and in particular from the life of believers, who alone, since they had the Spirit, could hope for resurrection." But that Scriptural idea does not suit arrogant man, who has loved in all ages to think and teach that he is an emanation from the Deity, and so is deathless in the true sense of the word.

A. WALLACE MASON

Toronto, Canada.

HUMILITY.

Prov. 15:33.

Fellow members of the Young People's Society:

The fear of the Lord is the instruction of wisdom, and before honor is humility. Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. These are Solomon's and Apostle Luke's own words. They show the reward of our humility. It is not an act of lowering one's self to be humble; no, Jesus himself set us an example of humility when he washed his apostle's feet; and on the same occasion he says, "Ye call me Master and Lord and ye say well, for so I am." He was their Lord, their master, the person having princely authority over them; God's prince-heir and yet he humbled himself to wash and [illegible] servants feet.

We read in Phil. 2, 7-8, "How that Jesus humbled himself: He made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." But remember the reward. He received for his humility. This is found in Phil 2:9-11: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the father."

The Apostle Paul walked humbly before God, for he tells the elders at Ephesus that he was serving the Lord with all humility of mind. He is one of our teachers, our examples and patterns, but of what use is a pattern if we do not follow it? We are required to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with our God. James tells us to humble ourselves in the sight of the Lord and he shall lift us up. Peter exhorts us to be clothed with humility, because God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble. We have all watched a little bird drink at the bank of a stream. When a child I was told that the little bird in humbleness to its maker, bowed its head to drink, then lifted its feathery throat in thanksgiving for the cooling water. In the same way we ought to humbly hear ourselves, and thank our Heavenly Father when we come to the fountain of life and drink the blessed truths of the gospel revealed to the apostles and thru them to us.

Jesus told his followers, "Do not sound a trumpet before thee as the hypocrites do." The egotist and proud one is never happy. He is bent on worshiping himself and is always living in fear lest some one else receive the praise due him. Other people with their interests are unimportant compared with self. How distasteful to the human race are those of the above classes, but we rather esteem the humble man, and cannot help but love those who love the Lord. James says, "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you." Sometimes I wonder if we realy realize what we are when we are called children of God, and heirs according to promise. If we stop to think seriously, how can we be other than humble, modest, and put all thought of self away. Here is our reward: Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. God looks with favor upon those who are humble; and pure-minded people shun the self-exalted. Therefore, beloved, let us, as followers of Jesus and his apostles, humble ourselves and gain those precious words of welcome: "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

FRANCES RUSSELL.

Cleveland, Ohio.

A BLESSED MEETING

What a blessed thing it is for brethren to meet together in unity. We were so blessed today when the brethren of the Newark church met with us in our hall in Brooklyn, and considered the subject of "Resurrection." The forenoon meeting was opened at 11:45 with Bro. Wm. H. Donaldson in the chair. After the reading of the first chapter of First Peter and a few brief exhortations based thereon, we partook of the Lord's Supper. During the recess that followed a substantial warm dinner was served in the lower hall by a neighboring caterer. At two o'clock Bro. Wm. G. Rothe called the afternoon meeting to order. As previously stated, the subject was "Resurrection." The lesson read was the 15th hapter of First Corinthians. The program as arranged was:

Bro. James Brown, "Scriptural Resurrection." Acts 24-15.

Bro. J. Alex Fisher, "Old Testament Testimony," Job, Psalms, Isaiah, Daniel.

Bro. James H. Evans, "Proofs of Christ's Resurrection." 1 Cor. 15: 1 to 8.

Bro. Daniel Dietz, "Christ's Resurretion and Its Results." 1 Cor. 15: 12 to 22.

Bro. William Barton, "Paul's Plea or Truth of Resurrection," 1 Cor. 15: 29 to 34.

Bro. Wm. H. Donaldson, "Believers: How Raised," 1 Cor. 15: 35 to 43.

Bro. James E. Leslie, "Believers: When Raised." 1 Cor. 15:23. Rev. [illegible]

Bro. [illegible] Carmichael, "Natural and Spiritual in Resurrection." 1 Cor. 15: 44 to 50.

Bro. Thos. W. E. Allen, "Christ's Testimony." John 5: 28, 29. John 11: 25, 26.

Bro. James F. Gellately, "Paul's Mystery." 1 Cor. 15: 51 to 57.

Bro. Benj. Macdonald, "Paul's Exhortation." 1 Cor. 15: 58.

Wm. C. Rothe, Chairman, 1 Cor. 15: 24 to 28 and Rev. 21: 1 to 5.

Most of the brethren viewed the [illegible] as to having their "words few and well chosen," still it was five o'clock when the meeting was brought to a close. In the face of the weather being damp and threatening, we had a larger attendance than usual, and all voiced the sentiment that it was the best meeting we have had in some time.

As there was a number of children present, the writer, just before the close, told to them in childish language the story of Jesus and Him crucified, and what his resurrection means for us who believe. We had an attentive audience. May they grow in "truth and grace" so as to be able to take the place of the departing ones, and may God add His blessing to all our efforts to serve Him.

Sincerely in His Name,

ALEX. D. DONALDSON.

Church of God, Brooklyn, N. Y.

OBITUARY.

Mary Warman, daughter of Enoch and Mary Warman, was born March 22, 1830, near Milton, Wayne county, Ind., and died October 3, 1910, aged 80 years, 6 months and 11 days.

Cullius Willits, son of Wm. and Mary Willits, was born December 25, 1827, near Milton, Wayne county, Ind., and died January 7, 1911, aged 83 years and 14 days.

They were united in marriage December 21st, 1852. Three children were born to this union: Omar and Alice Willits, and Mrs. Kate Tonlw, all of whom with eight grandchildren and one great grand child, survive them.

November 22, 1853, they moved to Haward county, Ind., making the journey over land in wagons, settling on the farm which was their late home. The hardships and privations of pioneer life were many, and theirs was a beautiful life story of courage and self-denial in the building of the home.

In early life they united with the Christian church, but afterward united with the Church of God, and remained until death strong in the faith of the second coming of Christ. For fifty-seven years and more they journeyed together, maintaining a hospitable home. No one ever went hungry from their door, and their home was often shared with homeless orphans. They took the Restitution from the beginning of its publication, in all its various forms to the time of their death. And as long as they were able to read or hear it read, they found comfort in the precious promises within its pages, and looked forward with joy to that great resurrection morn whenall His faithful followers shall come forth from the grave and forever be with the Lord. Their memory will be cherished and their pure and noble lives will live on.

K. Trouba and A. W. Willets

FURTHER REMARKS

On an Item in the "Valuable Post Card." Matthew 5:12

True, God said to Abraham (Gen. 15:1), "I am thy exceeding great reward." God is also a rewarder of them who diligently seek Him (Heb. 11:6; and He will reward with glory, honor and immortality all who shall be overcomers. God is in heaven and in that sense, our reward is in heaven. But that is not the meaning of what Jesus said in Matt. 5:12. The Greek reads, "Great is your reward in the heavens." It is not the heaven where Jesus now sits at the right hand of God. There is no promise in the scriptures that the saints will be taken to that heaven. When Jesus comes in the glory of his Father then he shall reward every man according to his works (Matt 16:27.) "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne;" "I will give him power over the nations." (Rev. 3:21 and 2:26.) "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5:10.)

The meaning of heaven and heavens in many passages of scripture is exalted, having authority. Evidently, then, the heavens that Jesus referred to were the heavens that David had not ascended to. (Acts. 2:24.) The heavens that Peter referred to when he wrote: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." (2nd Peter 3:13.)

Wherefore, beloved, seeing we look for such things, let us be diligent, that we may be found in Him in peace, without spot and blameless.

S. T. BLESSING

Fort Worth, Texas.

I WONDER WHY?

Why is it much easier to make folks believe living men can become unconscious than it is dead ones?

If living men have been known to know nothing, why can't dead men?

If "dead men knew so much more than living ones," why is it that the nearer dead we are the less we know?

If "dead men knew so much," why is it that men half dead know nothing?

If "dead men know everything," why is it that living ones know so little?

If sleep is "a condition of helplessness," what is death?

I wonder why death has not been called the "nostril-route to glory?"

If "the soul of man is immortal," and is "the intelligent part of man," why waste time "cultivating the brain?" Men do not have to die to become unconscious, for unconsciousness often takes place while life is in the body.

A man may be alive and know absolutely nothing, and a man may know absolutely nothing and yet be a man!—John M. Kelly in the Bible Standard, Auckland New Zealand.

There is no way of repressing feeling so effectual as to deny its expression. The very effort to calm the tones of our voice as to express less anger than one feels will of itself allay the anger and bring about a milder mood. The brave struggle to endure necessary suffering without inflicting cries and lamentations upon friends will enhance one's power of endurance. He who resolutely changes a whining and fretful tone for a cheerful one will soon find much less to fret about.

Manager's Column

Most of our subscribers doubtless know that in former years it was the custom to publish four issues of The Restitution a month or forty-eight for the year, skipping an issue when five Wednesdays occurred in a month. We decided to publish these four additional numbers so that you will receive a copy each week in the year. Of course this entails some additional expense, but we believe our subscribers will appreciate this liberal policy. If at any time you fail to receive your paper send word to this office, giving date of paper not received and we will mail one to you at once. Postal men are pretty reliable but some times papers will go astray, and as they are sent as second class matter they are not returned to us and we have know way of knowing whether you receive them or not. When you change your address be sure and notify us at once so that we can make the proper corrections in our mail list.

Last week we promised to publish in this issue a "Census Blank" to be used in trying to locate and enumerate the members of The Church of God in America. On this page a blank for this purpose will be found. It will be printed for several weeks, so that every one will have an opportunity to fill one out and send it to this office, address it to "The Census Editor", care The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, O.

In case you do not wish to cut the blank out of your paper, make one out like it on a sheet of paper or a post card and mail it in. Where there are several in one family this would probably be the best way, but be sure and write on one side of the paper only, as it is going to be a lot of work compiling these names, and in using one side of the sheet saves a good deal of time. If this census is going to be any good at all it must be as complete as possible, and can be carried on only with the co-operation of brethren everywhere. Some may not hear about this plan direct, so it will be up to each of us to remind all those we meet. Just appoint yourself an official enumerator in your neighborhood, and send in all the names you can think of, with their present address if nothing more. Remember it will be better to have a name sent in twice than not at all. If you are the secretary of your church it will be easy to copy these names of your membership. This work will require but a few moments of your time and a two cent postage stamp. We do not know of any previous attempt to secure data of this kind being made, and the importance of the undertaking grows as you think of it. We trust you will all take an interest in it and make it worth while.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address. Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. Wm. Starkey	.50
Alice Willis	.50
Mrs. Anna Pickering	.50
Mr. Stephen Hogarth	10.00
Mrs. Daniel Hogarth	10.00

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ. by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents or assorted packages of 100 for 40 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price 5 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 63 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress well and stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send 6c for sample copy.

McCall Patterns will make you to make in your own home, with ease and economy, a stylish and perfect fitting garment which will be perfect in style and fit. Price 10c per pattern. If not at your dealer's send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting only 10 subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Order Blanks.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

80 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolatedbrethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints co-adjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, OCTOBER 31, 1912 No. 43

"GIVE US OUR DAILY BREAD."

"Give us our daily bread."
Claiming as right we come.
No money in our hand;
Before Thee we stand dumb.
If thou a price demand;
Owning our weakness and our need we pray:
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
Thy promises we plead.
Not for ourselves alone,
But each his brother's need
Remembering with his own.
Our Father, Thou; Thy waiting children, we;
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
We ask no future good.
No anxious care we take;
We bless thee for our food;
We sleep in thee to wake;
As, day by day, we empty-handed come.
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
Not bread alone, dear Lord,
But our soul-hunger fill.
Give faith to trust thy word;
Give strength to do thy will.
Remembering all our weakness, all our need.
"Give us our daily bread."
—Mrs. Helen C. Rice.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and The Death of Constantine in 337

IV.—How Matters Stood in the First Century.

The form of church government in the first century has formed the subject of long and often bitter controversy, each party claiming that they are the only representatives of the apostles, and that their form of government is the only correct one. We have now-a-days bishops asserting their authority and pointing triumphantly to the use of the title in the New Testament. Then there are archbishops over them again; this title certainly has no warrant for its use in the New Testament, but no doubt the word bishop itself is not grand enough for the lords of creation. Then come the Presbyterians, claiming that their form of government is the only scriptural one. Another sect discards the use of both words, but all claim to be the clergy of the Lord, and all claim the title Reverend, and speak of the members of their various congregations as being the laity; and they love to be called the ministers of the churches, while lording it over their brethren. In primitive times a minister was a servant in the full sense of the term, and the word minister certainly did not imply one in a superior position any more than our word servant does. The word clergy, so much used at the present time, was not used in connection with the church until the third century. The word reverend was not used by any official of the church till after the days of Constantine, and so its use does not come into the period we are dealing with; the clergy so far had not usurped a title that is applied only to God in the Scriptures. See Ps. cxi. 9.

E. de Pressense, D. D., says: "The word clergy is applied for the first time to those bearing office in the church by Clement of Alexandria and Tertullian. In their time the word clergy signified simply a particular class of men. Thus the Christians of Lyons, in their letter to their brethren in Asia Minor, speak of the clergy of the martyrs. . . . It was not till long after, at what period it is hard to determine, that a certain portion was regularly set aside from the offerings of the church for the maintenance of the clergy."

The same writer says in his work Christian Life and Practice in the Early Church: "Cardinal Manning showed his wit and his prudence when he exclaimed that he hoped the council would deliver us from history." The facts of history are not always palatable to those who appropriate titles and positions which do not belong to them. Neander, in his Church History says: "The notion now of a peculiar people of God (a kleros ton theon) applied distinctively to a particular order of men among the Christians is wholly foreign to the original Christian mind. For according to this all Christians should be a people consecrated to God (a kleros ton theon), and even all their earthly callings ought to be sanctified by the temper in which they are discharged." De Pressense says: "So long as every Christian believed himself to be a priest of Christ no special priesthood could interfere between him and heaven. The true worshiper of the living God stands erect in presence of every human dignitary, and is intolerant of the usurpation of man, just in proportion to his reverent submission to the authority of God."

Towards the end of the first century we have not much literature connected with the church, but we have enough to fully bear out Professor Philip Schaff's assertion that "Presbyters (or elders) and bishops (or overseers) denote in the New Testament one and the same thing"; and there was always a plurality of these officials in every one of the churches of the first century, no matter how small the church might be. The following from the Didache, a document known to belong to the close of the first century or very early in the second, says: "Appoint for yourselves therefore bishops and deacons worthy of the Lord, men who are meek and not lovers of money, and true and approved; for unto you they also perform the service of the prophets and teachers. Therefore despise them not, for they are your honorable men along with the prophets and teachers." Philip S. Moxon, in his Ecclesiastical History, says: "This instruction concerning the appointment of bishops and deacons clearly indicates the very early date of the Didache." Clement of Rome, who lived at the end of the first century, wrote a letter to the Corinthian church, reasoning with them in regard to the wrong they had done in expelling their overseers. He says: "Those therefore who were appointed by them (the apostles or afterwards by other men of repute, with consent of the whole church, and have ministered to the flock of Christ unblamably in a holiness of mind with all modesty—these men we consider to be unjustly thrust out from their ministration. For we see that ye have displaced certain persons from the ministration which they have kept blamelessly." Rev H. S. Holland, in his book Apostolic Fathers, commenting on Clement's letter says: "Bishops and presbyters are still to him convertible terms to some extent; there is no mention of their being a single bishop in the Corinthian church separate from the united presbytery." Holland, referring to Polycarp, who is said to have been acquainted with the apostle John says: "He (Polycarp) urges obedience to the presbyters and deacons, yet even still without a mention of a bishop."

The difficulties and temptations of the Christians of the first centuries are well described by Withrow in his work The Catacombs of Rome. He says: "The Christians were daily exposed to contact with idolatry. The whole public and private life of the heathen was pervaded with the spirit of polytheism. Idolatrous usages were interwoven with almost every act. The courts of justice, the marts of trade the highways and gardens, the fountains and rivers, the domestic hearth and the very doors and hinges were under the protection of their respective deities. The implements of labor, the household utensils, the military ensigns, the achievements of art, the adornments of beauty, were all consecrated to idol worship. The daily meals and rites of hospitality, the social banquets and public amusements, the common language and salutations of friendship, had all a religious significance." Add to this the temptations common to human nature, and we may have some idea of the trials of the early Christians, when we know that every brutal device was often resorted to in order to compel them to deny the faith. The persecution under Nero was the first one by the Romans. Tacitus, the Roman historian, who was born about the beginning of Nero's reign, after stating that a great fire had devastated Rome, and that it was currently believed that Nero himself had set the city on fire, says: "In order if possible to remove the imputation (from himself) he determined to transfer the guilt to others. For this purpose he punished with exquisite torture a race of men detested for their evil practices, by vulgar appellation commonly called Christians. The name was derived from Christ, who in the reign of Tiberius, suffered under Pontius Pilate, the Procurator of Judea. By that event the sect of which he was the founder received a blow, which for a time checked the growth of a dangerous superstition; but it revived soon after and spread with recruited vigor, not only in Judea, the soil that gave it birth, but even in the city of Rome, the common sink into which everything infamous and abominable flows like a torrent from all quarters of the world. Nero proceeded with his usual artifice. He found a set of profligate and abandoned wretches who were induced to confess themselves guilty, and on the evidence of such men a number of Christians were convicted; not indeed on clear evidence of having set the city on fire, but rather on account of their sullen hatred of the human race. They were put to death with exquisite cruelty, and to their sufferings Nero added mockery and derision. Some were covered with the skins of wild beasts and left to be devoured by dogs; others were nailed to the cross; numbers were burnt alive; and many, covered over with inflammable matter were lighted up when the day declined, to serve as torches during the night. For the convenience of seeing this tragic spectacle the emperor lent his own gardens. He added the sports of the circus, and assisted in person, sometimes driving a curricle and occasionally mixing with the rabble in his coachman's dress. At length the cruelty of these proceedings filled every breast with compassion. Humanity relented in favor of the Christians. The manners of that people were, no doubt, of a pernicious tendency, and their crimes called for the hand of justice; but it was evident they fell a sacrifice, not for the public good, but to glut the rage of one man only." Paul was put to death about that time, but he was beheaded because he was a Roman citizen.

The best answer to Tacitus' revilings of the Christian's character is found in the letter of his friend Pliny to the Emperor Trajan, 106 or 107 A. D. The letter shows that the Christians had been systematically persecuted because they were followers of Christ, and that their moral character was of a very high kind at that time.

"C. Pliny to Trajan.—Emperor. Health. It is my usual custom, sir, to refer all things of which I harbor any doubts to you; for who can better direct my judgment in its hesitation, or instruct my understanding in its ignorance? I never had the fortune to be present at any examination of the Christians before I came to this province (Pontus and Bithynia). I am therefore at a loss to determine what is the usual object either of enquiry or of punishment, and to what length either of them is to be carried. It has also been with me a question very problematical whether any distinction should be made between the young and the old, the tender and the robust; whether any room should be given for repentance, or the guilt of Christianity once incurred is not to be expiated by the most unequivocal retraction; whether the name itself abstracted from any flagitiousness of conduct or the crimes connected with the name be the object of punishment. In cases of obstinate perseverance, I ordered them to be executed. For of this I had no doubt; whatever was the nature of their religion, that a sullen and obstinate inflexibility called for the vengeance of the magistrate; some were infected with the same madness whom, on account of their privilege of citizenship, I reserved to be sent to Rome to be referred to your tribunal. In the course of this business, information pouring in, as is usual when they are encouraged, more cases occurred. An anonymous libel was exhibited, with a catalog of names of persons who yet declared that they were not Christians then, or ever had been; and they repeated after me an invocation of the gods and of your image, which for this purpose I had ordered to be brought with the image of the deities. They performed sacred rites with wine and frankincense, and execrated Christ; none of which things, I am told a real Christian can ever be compelled to do. On this account I dismissed them. Others, named by an informer, first affirmed, and then denied the charge of Christianity; declaring that they had been Christians but had ceased to be so, some three years ago, others still longer, some even twenty years ago. All of them worshiped your image and the statues of the gods, and also execrated Christ. And this was the account which they gave of the nature of the religion they once had professed, whether it deserved the name of crime or error, namely—that they were accustomed on a stated day to meet before daylight, and to repeat amongst themselves a hymn to Christ as to a God, and to bind themselves by an oath with an obligation of not committing any wickedness, but on the contrary, of abstaining from theits, robberies, and adulteries, also of not violating their promises or denying a pledge; after which it was their custom to separate, and to meet again at a promiscuous, harmless meal, from which last practice they however desisted after the publication of my edict, in which, agreeable to your orders, I forbade any societies of that sort. On which account I judged it the more necessary to enquire by torture from two females, who were said to be deaconesses, what is the real truth. But nothing could I collect except a depraved and excessive superstition. Deferring therefore any further investigation, I determined to consult you. For the number of culprits is so great as to call for a serious consultation. Many persons are informed against of every age and of both sexes; and more still will be in the same situation; the contagion of the superstition hath spread not only through cities, but even villages and the country. Not that I think it impossible to check and correct it. The success of my endeavors to further forbids such desponding thoughts; for the temples, once almost deserted, begin to be frequented, and the sacred solemnities which had long been intermitted are now attended afresh, and the sacrificial victims are now sold everywhere which once could scarcely find a purchaser. Whence I conclude that many might be reclaimed, were the hope of impunity on repentance absolutely confirmed."

There are many things which this remarkable letter proves, about whose genuineness there is no question. It proves that the Christians had been, and were still, extremely numerous, and in opposition to Taitus' sneer they were a remarkably moral people; that there were many of them who would suffer all manner of torture and death itself before they would deny Christ; that there were a number who could be easily changed when persecution came; that the whole provinces were filled with Christians about seventy years after the death of Christ; that they generally met at night because they could not meet during the daytime.

Trajan replied to Pliny: "You have done perfectly right, my dear Pliny, in the inquiry you have made concerning Christianity. For truly no one general rule can be laid down which will apply itself to all cases. These people must not be sought after. If they are brought before you and convicted, let them be capitally punished; yet with this restriction, that if any one renounces Christianity, and evidences his sincerity by supplicating our gods, however suspected he may be for the past, he shall obtain pardon for the future on his repentance. But anonymous libels in no case should be attended to, for the precedent would be of the worst sort, and be perfectly incongruous to the maxims of my government." This letter of Trajan's was of great service to the Christians for long afterwards, for it prevented anonymous information being laid against them, which previously to this had been very common.

The belief that Christ was coming again to this earth to establish a kingdom here, and that He was to raise His sleeping servants from the dust of the ground where they believed they were sleeping, was strong all through the first century. Polycrates writes: "For in Asia also great lights have fallen asleep which shall rise again on the day of the Lord's coming, when He shall come with glory from heaven, and shall raise up all the saints. Among these are Philip, one of the twelve apostles, asleep in Hierapolis, and his two aged virgin daughters, and another daughter who lived in the Holy Spirit and now rests at Ephesus; and moreover John, who was both a martyr and teacher, who leaned upon the bosom of the Lord, and became a priest wearing the sacerdotal plate. He fell asleep at Ephesus. And Polycarp too in Smyrna, who was a bishop and martyr, and Thrasea, bishop and martyr from Eumania, who fell asleep in Smyrna. Why need I mention the bishop and martyr Sagaris, who fell asleep in Laodicea, or the blessed Papirius, or Melito the eunuch, who lived altogether in the Holy Spirit, and who lies in Sardis awaiting the visitation from heaven when He shall raise the dead." Papias says (he was a hearer of the apostle John): "But I will not scruple also to give a place for you along with my interpretation to everything that I learnt carefully and remembered carefully in time past from the elders guaranteeing its truth. For unlike the many I did not take pleasure in those who have so very much to say, but in those who teach the truth: . . . when a person came my way who had been a follower of the elders, I would enquire about the discourses of the elders; what was said by Andrew or Peter, or Philip, or Thomas, or James, or Matthew, or any other of the Lord's disciples; and what Ariston and the elder John, the disciples of the Lord said. For I did not think I could get so much profit from books as from utterances of a living abiding voice . . . There will be a period of some ten thousand years after the resurrection and that the kingdom of Christ will be set up in material form on this earth."

Baptism was administered thru the whole of the first century, by immersion of the whole body, to those who professed their faith in Christ.

A. WALLACE MASON
Toronto, Canada.

VOLUNTARY BIBLE STUDY

Professors in the great institutions of learning throughout our country have been boldly attacking the Bible and denying the truth of its statements, but God is stronger that they and has means of his own whereby to maintain the honor of his name, for in 1904 he put it into the heart of a young man, a student gathered with others in one of the fraternity houses of Michigan University to say to his fellow students, as captain of their football teams, that he "realized that students face some pretty serious problems and temptations in college, and he thought these problems could best be considered in connection with the study of the Bible." He confessed that he knew little of the book himself, but said he was determined to begin its study, and if there was no one else to do it he would lead a group of athletic men in his own fraternity house.

"A surprising number of the company," says Mr. John E. Bradley, who reports the incident, "immediately expressed a desire to join in the study and the result was the formation at once of numerous groups for Bible study in fourteen fraternities in Michigan University. The movement thus begun has spread, like the dawn of a new day, there being last year 4930 fraternity men studying the Bible in voluntary groups in their own society house in their university; schools and colleges having no fraternities responding no less freely, all sections and all classes having been reached."

In the United States and Canada 537 colleges reported large numbers last year pursuing Bible study in some form—more than 4,000 being in self-taught, voluntary groups.

Will the old Book stand? It will! It will! Faith is not yet dead and the embattled hosts of all the enemies of truth throughout the world cannot capture the forteresses wherein the old Book is entrenched.

S. ROXANA WINCE.
Pierceton, Ind.

Time and Its Apportionment.—Whatever other inequalities we may labor under, we have an equal amount of time, the only question being how to apportion it. One will be indefatigably busy every moment through the day and painfully exhausted at night, and yet the results may be quite unsatisfactory to himself and to others, because he has worked erratically or from impulse, without foresight or judgment. Another knows what he can and cannot do, and plans his time accordingly. He arranges for needed rest and leisure, he selects his employments in the order of their importance, and lets the rest go without a struggle. He may not accomplish quite so much of certain things in a day as his unmethodical neighbor; but on the scale of a year his achievements will be far more valuable, and on the scale of a lifetime his own health and happiness and that of his family, as well as his usefulness to society, will be immeasurably greater.

Let your recreations be manly, not sinful. Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.

As in war steel is better than gold for use, so wisdom is better than wealth. The chief business of a wise man is to distinguish what is good and to shun what is otherwise.

Our powers are all limited, and their best efficiency is never secured by straining them to the utmost. Always to leave a margin, a reserved force of strength, or means, is a valuable rule of life.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lone, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Oct. 31, 1911

EDITORIAL

Bro. Mason is now holding a series of meetings with the brethren of Solina, Ont. Let all hope and pray that much good may be done in the cause of truth.

Bro. Wilson desires an early response from all who wish a copy of his proposed book, "The Destiny of Russia and the Signs of the Times." Will those interested please note this editorial and act upon it now?

By the aid of readers who have friends and acquaintances to whom they want to introduce the truth we have received many names for our sample copy list. Even alien subscribers have sent us the names of their friends in many instances. The result is already becoming visible. Our subscription list is going up by leaps and bounds. Thanks to brethren, sisters, friends and the Lord.

The revolution in China is progressing prodigiously. A five hundred mile belt through the empire is now lost to Peking. Ten Metre Point, the greatest strategic point of the empire, is now held by the rebels. Many of the imperial troops are joining hands with the revolutionists. To make the situation more pessimistic, the Mohammedans in Kan-su province have assumed a threatening attitude.

While Bible students know by prophecy that Italy must conquer Turkey ultimately, yet it must be admitted in advance that the Turks have fighting blood coursing through their veins and that they will not evacuate Tripoli without a stubborn resistance. Thus far the press reports have not given the public much information about the Turco-Italian war, for the reason they did not have communication with the battles of the antagonists, but now authentic reports are coming in. They show there has been much bloody fighting already; that the natives of Tripoli are firing from sandhill and housetop at Nazarene pirates, and the Italians are butchering prisoners by virtue of martial law. Enver Bey, Ottoman military attache at Berlin, whose orthodoxy and reputation make him almost sacred in the tents of the desert, has confederated the Senussi tribes and the whole of the Hinterlands in a holy war against the Italian invaders. Enver Bey is made of the same stuff as Abdel Kader, and French military history can teach Italy what that may mean. The Italians have in Tripoli a task as difficult as those experienced in Abyssinia and Somaliland. Italy will find that after she has routed Turkey she will have another war to wage; an extensive campaign she has not reckoned on, before the Arabs of the desert and the oases are subjugated.

Mr. Abrahams, of Cambridge, is fathering a scheme to establish a university at Jerusalem. According to the press he is backed in his project by Mr. Rabinerson, the well known Kieff millionaire. "Jewish learning today," says Mr. Abrahams in giving reasons why such an institution should be established in the Holy City, "is in a state of disorganization. There are many men engaged in the work, it is true, but there is no definite goal, and there is no co-ordination. On the other hand there is a complete dearth of colleges for Jewish knowledge. What we have are simply professional seminaries in which rabbis and teachers are trained. In England, at any rate there is no single Jewish institution in which an ordinary layman who wishes to study Jewish history or Jewish literature systematically on modern lines can find admission. I see the only solution in the establishment of a Jewish university. Our great scholars are scattered; a great university would bring them together. A university would reach students who enter out of love of study, as well as those who wish to receive a training for a profession. A university would, therefore be of twofold advantage. It would be a gathering center for our scholars, and it would provide an open door to Jewish culture of all those who wished to enter.

"If a Jewish university is at all desirable there is no more suitable center for it than Jerusalem. 'The law shall go forth from Zion.' —this idea cannot be realized in any other part of the world."

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Purpose of Revelations—Text: "To Shew Unto His Servants Things Which Must Shortly Come to Pass." Rev. 1:1.

I. To show unto his servants, v. 1. Who they are. vs. 1,3; psa. 50:16, Rom. 6; Isa. 42:1,21; Matt. 5:17, 7:21; 1 Cor. 7:23, 6:19,20; 1 Pet. 1:18.

II Things which must, v. 1. Ha is a pronoun and may be rendered "(what) things." II. "Must come to pass." Dei, translated "must," means "it needs, there is need of, there is necessity for." The necessity may arise from a sense of (a). Duty. Matt. 16:21; Luke 2:49.

(b) Right and just, what ought to be done, and is translated "ought" in Lk. 13:14; Mk. 13:14; Jno. 4:20; Acts 5:29; Matt. 25:27.

(c) Divine arrangement or appointment. Jno. 3:14; Acts 4:12; 14:22.

III. There were things in addition to what had formerly been revealed which "must" now in the divine program of appointment be revealed. Psa. 74:10; 89:46; 90:3; 94:3; Is. 6; Dan. 12, 2 Thess. 2:2; Acts 1:7; Mk. 13:32; Jno. 16:12; Rev. 5; 6:10.

IV. The book may be called a prophet, taking the place of the succession of prophets in the Jewish church. By this remarkable prophet, prophecy is continued to us, is always speaking, yet a succession of prophets are unnecessary.

III. Shortly come to Pass. v. 1. This declaration confirms the Historic view of Revelations, while it destroys the Futurist theory vs. 1, 3; 22:10; 4:1. II. "Shortly" means "with quickness, swiftness, speed." (Robinson Lex.) 1 Cor. 4:19; Lk. 14:21; 16:6; Jno. 11:31; Gal. 1:6; Acts 22:18. III. The series of events apocalypsed were soon to begin to occur, though the sequel would be remote. Rev. 20; 21; 22.

"TOUCH ME NOT."

Jno. 20:17.

At the request of Sister Crundwell we make a few explanatory remarks upon this expression for her benefit and the benefit of others who may have been perplexed by the statement. "Touch me not" stands in the Greek "Me mou haptan ia," meaning, if literally translated into English, "Not me touch." Haptomai is used by the Septuagint (Greek translation of the Hebrew scriptures) for dabar in Job 31:7, which word means "cleave, cling, stick, be glued to." It appears from Matt. 28:9 that some of the woman "held him by the feet and worshipped him." Mary was doubtless among the number who did this. To her, then, on the occasion of Jno. 20:17, our Lord in substance says: "Cling not (thyself) to me; spend no longer time with me now. I am not going to My Father speedily—you will have several opportunities of seeing me before I go; but go and tell my disciples that by and by I will ascend to my Father and God and your Father and God."

In confirmation of this exigesis of the Savior's words in John 20:17, we quote these remarks from W. H. Hacking, editor of the Marturian: "Our Lord does not use the verb in the active voice, hapto, but haptomia" (This is the word translated "touch" in Jno. 20:17.—Editor). The imperative mood, in the active voice, is hapte, second person singular, and in the middle voice haptou. Our Lord speaks in the middle voice. Had he said hapte, the detention would certainly have been applicable to himself; but using the middle voice the detention can only apply to the person spoken to. Haptō signifies to lay hold of, to tie up, to fasten up, etc., while haptomai reflects the action back upon one's self, and signifies to hang one's self to an object, to fasten one's self on, etc. Therefore if we understand the word as referring to detention, which is undoubtedly correct, we are compelled to add "thyself" to the word "detain," as that is certainly included. Then the meaning of the words would be: "Detain not thyself with me, because I have not yet ascended to my Father; go, porenon, (middle voice), take thyself away to my brethren, and say to them," etc. The angel had just hurried the women off by telling them to go quickly to his disciples and tell them that he had been raised (passive voice; now our Lord repeats the injunction to Mary, telling her not to detain herself, but to take herself away to his brethren, because he had not ascended, and for that reason they would see him before he did ascend, and thus be witnesses of the resurrection from the dead of the very same Jesus that was crucified, dead and buried."

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY AN DTHE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question

Question. 17.—What is the "strong delusion" and the "lie" which is sent on account of rejection?

Answer.—The "strong delusion" is the state of mind preparatory to the reception of the "lie." It is distinct from the "lie" itself, though leading to it. Our correspondent writes as if it was one and the same thing. A parallel to this delusion is seen in the case of Israel, upon whom was poured the spirit of slumber, making their "hearts fat" and their ears dull of hearing.—(Isaiah vi. 10; Rom. xi. 8; Matt. xiii. 15). This was a judicial retribution for privileges long abused. So the Gentiles when their turn came, were similarly visited, because similarly perverse. The agency of the deluded state in the case of the Jews was their own leaders. The leaders of this people cause them to err.—(Isa. ix. 16.) "Ye (Scribes and Pharisees) have taken away the key of knowledge."—Luke xi. 52.) So with the Gentiles. God has employed their own devices to their own confusion. These devices, as embodied in the system, are symbolized by the apocalyptic mother of Harlots, to whom the words are addressed: "By thy sorceries all nations were deceived."—(Rev. xviii. 23). The strong delusion comes therefore by a natural process from the circumstances developed by human perversity. We see this illustrated in the state of society around us. As to what the "lie" is that this predisposed state leads people to believe, just as "the truth," is a phrase in the singular number comprehending many elements, so "the lie" is made up of many falsehoods. "Wine of fornication" is its apocalyptic symbol, and if any one wants to know its literal constituents, let him study the doctrines ministered to the world by the mother of Harlots, and he will be enlightened. The doctrines of the Church of Rome on God, Christ, the devil, man, duty, destiny, etc., etc., constitute "the lie" which Christendom is led away by to its damnation.

Question 18.—If all the Papists are to be damned for believing the lie, why does the Deity call his people out of her, that they be not partakers in her destruction?

Answer.—In order that ceasing to be Papists, by discarding the lie and embracing the truth, they may be saved from the perdition decreed for Papists and Protestants alike. All will certainly be damned who believe not the truth but have pleasure in unrighteousness.—(2 Thes. ii. 12). Does our correspondent imagine that parties "partaking of the sins" of the Harlot-Mother (Rev. xviii. 4), are God's people while in that state? No, no; the exhortation is "come out from among them, and be ye separate, and (then) I will receive you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters."—(2 Cor. vi. 17, 18.) The "call" is rather to show that at the last moment of Rome's career, even Papists may forsake the communion of "mother church;" and possibly to foreshadow the fact, that contemporaneously with her end, there would be a coming-out from her, resulting in the development of a people prepared for the Lord.

Question 19.—If the time allotted for her existence be 1,260 years, how was it she was developed A. D. 328, and is now in existence 1542 years?

Answer.—The period of 1,260 years is not the "time allotted for her existence;" understanding by her, the Roman Catholic Church. The period mentioned is "the time allotted" for the existence of the little horn of Daniel's fourth beast, and the leopard lion-mantled beast of Rev. xiii. 2, which are both representative of a political development from with in the Roman Catholic Church itself. The apostasy is one thing: the political result of the apostasy is another. The distinction is observed in Paul's chapter (2 Thess. ii.) on the man of sin. "There shall come a falling away first, and (second) that man of sin shall be revealed." The apostasy paved the way for the manifestation of what was otherwise an impossibility—viz., a pretended vicar of Christ, aspiring to, and receiving from, the imperial power enthroned at Constantinople, universal authority over the consciences of men, with power to inflict temporal penalties on those who should disobey his will. This personage was not finally developed till A. D. 606. In 1866, exactly 1,260 years from that period, his existence in this aspect came to an end; for since the military events of that year, resulting in the dissolution of the Concordat with Austria, the substitution of the hostile democracy for the friendly Bourbons in Spain, and the assumption of political authority by France within the walls of Rome, the Pope has ceased to be a political personage, except in name. He can no longer enforce his authority by means of the civil power. The civil power is indeed turning hostile to him in all the countries in Europe, as evidenced in the diplomatic coalition against the doctrines of the Œcumenical council. The answer to question 21 is therefore, obvious.

Question 20. If Popes or Papacy be the Man of Sin, how is it that the one is always a feminine person, "woman," "harlot", etc., and the other always a masculine?

Answer.—The answer to this is involved in the last given. The Papacy has a feminine element and a masculine, answering to "church" and "state." The origin of this distinction must be found in the genuine system of which the Papacy is the counterfeit. That system is the system of Christ, in its full development. In this the masculine element is Christ, who is the husband or the head; the feminine element is the church, which is his bride or body. Hence, the false system presents the same features. There is the Pope the head, and the church his body. The true church is a wife; the false church is, therefore, represented as a harlot; and as a harlot has a paramour, and an outside constituency of traffickers in lust, so this ecclesiastical harlot has a paramour or head in her pontiff king, and customers in "the kings of the earth," with whom she has committed fornication.—(Rev. xvii. 2.) Our correspondent has suffered himself to be led into difficulty by losing sight of the distinction between the Harlot Church of Rome and the monster political power that has grown out of it. The one is "she;" the other "he."

Our secretary not being present at the first, and having to leave before the close of the Nebraska conference, held at Moorefield, her report was rather brief. And thinking that some of the things omitted might be of interest to some of our readers, I submit the following: The meeting was thought by many to be the best we have ever had. I do not know the exact number reported by the registration committee, but there were, I think, considerably more than one hundred present. It was the first time the conference was ever held there, and the brethren deserve a great deal of praise for the success of the meeting. Every one was well cared for, the only thing more needed was more room to hold the crowds that attended the evening services. Brethren Adams and Huggins were the speakers, so at whatever time one attended they were sure of hearing a good sermon. One afternoon was given to the Bereans; their program, which consisted of music, scripture verses, select readings and recitations, was good. This service was followed by a memorial service for those of our dear ones who have fallen asleep during the year. There were five; the most of any year of Bro. Adams' ministry of twenty-five years.

A great pleasure to many of us was meeting with Bro. J. T. Prime and wife; also his son, Dr. J. M. Prime, better known among the Nebraska brethren as "Brother Jimmie," and his wife. Brother Prime is unable to preach any more, but sang a few of his old favorite hymns for us. His tender heart was greatly touched and tears coursed down his cheeks at meeting and parting with the dear ones he had not seen for so many years. His last words at parting, down on the banks of the Medicine creek where we had met to administer the sacred ordinance of baptism, was: "Good bye, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

If God so wills that we meet no more in this age, may we by His loving favor meet in that glorious kingdom without the loss of one.

CARRIE M. FREE.
Secretary pro tem.

Blair, Neb.

P.S.—Dear Brothers and Sisters:—You have seen Brother Adams' appeal for aid to bear his expenses to answer three calls in Kansas, Okla., and New Mexico. Brethren, we must not let them be neglected. It is our duty to help. I hope enough that are able will respond. The time is short; the Lord is coming soon. Let us send the message where they want it so badly. The Sewing Circle at Blair will put forth an extra effort of some kind, perhaps a bake day or food sale, and will see if we cannot raise enough for the fare one way. It is the Lord's work, and we are his servants. Let us get busy.

Yours in faith,
CARRIE M. FREE.

COMMUNCATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I have just finished reading your book, "The Bible," and find it grand. I borrowed it from Bro. P. J. Graham, of Fredericktown, Mo. I am preaching for the church at Blush, also at Morse Mills. Have had two meetings at Morse Mills since the conference and baptized two sisters in the one faith. Have held one meeting at Blush since conference and baptized Bro. Robt. Cooper's wife. I hope to meet you at some of our conferences. I would enjoy your presence with us at our conference in Missouri next year. God bless the Restitution and its editor. I remain your brother in Christ.

JOHN L. WINNINGHAM.
Dixon, Mo., R. No. 2, Box 35.

I thank you for sending me the paper. I am in sympathy with what you say, knowing "God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

I am looking for God to open the eyes of all my Jewish friends, and let them know the love God has for them. King David tells us in Ps. 85:2-4: "Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people; thou hast covered all their sin. Thou hast taken away all thy wrath. Thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thy anger. Turn us, O God of our salvation, and cause thine anger towards us to cease." The prophet Jeremiah tells us, I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict, so will I watch over them to build, and to plant, saith the Lord, Jehovah." Jer. 31:28. The Prophet Ezekiel tell us, "Jehovah will take you from among the nations and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land and God will put His spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes and ye shall keep my judgments and do them, and ye shall dwell in the land I gave to your fathers, and ye shall be my people and I will be your God." Ezek. 36:24, 27, 28. The Jewish population of Palestine is over one hundred thousand, and thousands of Jews are getting ready to enter the home promised by God to our father Abraham. What a change since fifty years ago; no Jew was admitted in any of the cities in Palestine, but today the Jews have a bank in Jerusalem, in Jaffa, in Beyrouth, in Haifa, in Hebron and in Safed. All of God's promises will be fulfilled. Jesus tells us: "Verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, on jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, (God's word, the Bible and God's promises), till all be fulfilled." Matt. 5:18. The orthodox Jews all over the world do look and pray for the Messiah so he will gather his people, the Jews, he will come and he will be none other but Jesus, the king of the Jews. He gave his life for the lost sheep of the house of Israel, Jews who went away from the living God and worshiped the golden calf and to save the Gentiles." The Apostle Paul tells us: "Has God cast away his people (the Jews). God forbid: Have they stumbled that they may fall? God forbid but arther through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles." Rom. 11:1-11. The Prophet Zechariah tells us: "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem." Zech. 14:4. And one shall say unto him, what are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends Zech. 13:6. The Prophet Amos tells us: "And I Jehovah will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof. They shall also make gardens and eat the fruit of them, and I Jehovah will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them saith the Lord thy God." Amos 9:14-15. The prayer which Jesus made when dying on the cross, God will answer: "Father forgive them, they do not know what they are doing."

Let us pray for my people, the Jews, and for all the Gentile nations, that God and Christ will open their eyes, unstop their deaf ears, and circumcise their uncircumcised hearts and fill each soul with the blessed and divine truth. Then the words of Isaiah the prophet will come to pass." "The wolf shall also dwell with lambs, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them." Isa. 11:6. Wars and rumors of war will not be heard, and the building of war ships and keeping of standing armies will be past. May God and Christ hasten that day should be the prayers of every converted soul.

Your brother,
MOSES NYE,
A Converted Jew.
328 East State St., Columbus, O.

The following is part of a private letter received the other day from our dear friend and brother, George Aldridge, of Auckland, New Zealand. It shows what can be done by an energetic man, having a live church at his back. I know your subscribers would like to read it. May it be as an inspiration to us all, so that our God may be greater glorified, is the prayer of.

Your brother awaiting the coming One,

ALEX. D. DONALDSON.
127 Ryerson Street, Brooklyn.

Brother Aldridge's Letter

I am just now about as busy as a preacher can be. Latterly a Socialist orator called in question the historicity of Jesus and offered to discuss with any local minister. I accepted the challenge, and then he declined to give me more than one night. Some little excitement rose in the city and the Methodists approached me with a request that I should give some Sunday afternoon addresses to present my position on the question. They offered me a perfectly free hand and I accepted. For three Sundays I have spoken to audiences numbering 1000 and over and have been freely questioned. I am to give three other addresses. The entire list of subjects being (1) 'Is Jesus an Historical Person;' (2) 'What of the Virgin Birth;' (3) 'Is Christianity indebted to Heathen Myths?' (4) "The Bible Testimony to Miracles' (5) 'The Resurrection of Jesus,' and (6) 'The Historical Accuracy of the Bible.' The whole series is to be concluded with an address (not submitted to questions, because I want to appeal) on 'Christ God's Ideal Man.' Our own people are delighted as they can see that the strength of my position lies in the view we hold on Man's nature, and the provision of the Kingdom.

CHRIST THE LIFE GIVER.

Purposes of Meeting—Nearness of Christ to the Father—His Power Over all Flesh—Conditions of Eternal Life—Our Helpship.

Every time we gather together we should seek to make it an occasion of holy rejoicing and joy. Whatever would interfere with this object, whatever would mar the peace, gladness and the hope of the Gospel, should be left outside the door. Especially should we come here with thoughts of love towards each other. If there has been any bitterness in our hearts towards our brethren; if we feel we have been aggrieved by unkind or unjust actions or words of others: if we have allowed ourselves to entertain unkind thoughts of those whom we imagine, or perhaps know certainly, have wronged us, here is the place to forget the wrong and forgive the unkindness, for here we contemplate the love of one who "commandeth his love towards us; in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Rom. 5:8. If God loved us when we loved not him, and to such a degree that he sent his son to be the propitiation for our sins, then the conclusion of the apostle should be realized in our experience—"we ought also to love one another," remembering that "he that loveth not knoweth not God: for God is love." 1 Jno. 4:7-11.

The practical object of meeting together surely is that we may grow up into Christ our living head in all things. It is of no use our coming here for mere custom's sake, for an hour or so, with hearts unmoved by the spectacle of patience and love of humility and submission that passes before our mental vision, and then going away into the world to plunge into its pleasures as though we were essentially of it, and to finger its gold as lovingly as those who make no profession of religion at all; and who acknowledge that they are looking after what is called the main chance, though when they have obtained their object they are often more worried and more miserable than they were before; and neglecting the word of life, and seeking not the good things promised in the gospel, they lose the main chance—the only chance of "Glory, honor, and incorruptibility," being at the last laid in the grave—as the Psalmist says—"like sheep," when death becomes their shepherd, and has perpetual dominion over them. Ps. 4: 59:14.

No, it is vain to act in this way. We do not presume for a moment that that is the case with a single one of us here: we rather assume that each one is reaching after God, striving to get nearer to him through Christ, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, desirous of copying from the divine pattern exhibited in the man Christ Jesus; longing to know more and more of the revelation of the Father's will; desiring to apprehend with all the saints what is the breadth, and length, and heighth, and depth, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that we may be filled with all the fulness of God." Eph. 3:18-19.

In Jno. 5:24 we read: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath eternal life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." Here then is a being clothed with divine authority, commissioned by God to confer endless life upon certain conditions—upon the sons and daughters of men. No other man ever spake like that man. This one stands forth distinct from all others upon the page of human history as the Lord of life and glory. No other being has ever been able to say to the Almighty, "thou hast given me power over all flesh, that I should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given me. And this is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Jno. 17: 2, 3. Jesus was the revealer of God to men. Between him and the Father there existed a union; closer, of a higher nature than had ever existed before between God and man. He was—so to speak—in the "bosom of the father," receiving revelations that none ever did; therefore he "hath declared him." "He whom God sent spoke the words of oGd; for God gave not the spirit by measure unto him." Next to God, he is the highest in the universe. The angels of God, those immortal and glorious beings, occupy a position of honor and glory beyond our power at present to realize, yet Jesus is higher than they. He is "the Brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person." By the word of his power he upholdeth all things, for "when he had made purification of sins, he sat down on the right hand of the majesty on high; having become so much better than the angels, as he hath inherited a more excellent name than they." This exaltation is an honor specially conferred upon Jesus. It is this exalted personage, this being—so closely united to God, to whom all judgment is committed—who doeth the same works as the Father, who declareth that he that honoreth not the son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him—who speaks to us of life—eternal life. In him we have this life—in the prospective sense, of course; not as an actual possession.

Believing his word, accepting his message, believing in the God that sent him, we have been introduced into a new relationship. We have severed our connection with the old Adam, and so in the prospective sense, "have passed from death unto life."

The life is not actually conferred upon us now; it is in God's son, he has the power to confer it, and will bestow it upon the faithful. In having him we have the life. This is what John says in his 1st epistle, 5th chapter, 11th and 12th verses: "This is the record that God hath given to us eternal life and this life is in His son. He that hath the Son of God hath the life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not the life."

We are united to the life given. We believe he came from God, and we believe the messages he brought. We have in obedience to him buried the old man and risen to the new life and thus in symbol passed from death into life.

If we are faithful we shall not come into condemnation, because "there is now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and of death." Rom. 8:1,2.

"Being justified by his grace" we have become heirs according to the hope of eternal life. Tit. 3:7. How great the privilege that we have been permitted to share this hope! The Jews to whom Jesus spoke missed it. A vail was upon their hearts. "How can ye believe," he asks, "which receive glory one of another, and the Glory that cometh from the only God ye seek not?"

That was the secret of their unbelief and hardness of heart. They sought the praise of men. All their works they did with this object in view—to be seen of men. It would not do for God then, neither will it do for us now.

EMMA GROVES.

Cleveland, O.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S PALACE.

Confirmations of Bible Inspiration Dug out of Babylon's Ruins—Destructive Criticism will be Swept Away in God's Judgments—Skeptical Ministry and their Topics of Discourse—A Great Day Coming.

I quote from "Our Hope" as follows: "In the book of Daniel, Chap. 4:29, we read from the inspired pen of the prophet, that the great King Nebuchadnezzar walked in the palace of his kingdom, and uttered the words of boasting which lead to his degradation.

Exploration in the ancient city of Babylon is proceeding, and the last report of the German Oriental society gives interesting particulars of it. The palace of Nebuchadnezzar is being laid bare in all its vastness, and the line of fortification of the heights on which the palace stood, is now almost completely traced. The streets and private dwellings lying round the foot of the hill are being cleared. Among other finds is a small temple, the work of Nebuchadnezzar, beautifully built in apparently perfect preservation, and still showing the black and white color scheme, characteristics of the Assyrian.

Operations on the thick stone wall 30 feet high, connecting Palace Hill and the so-called Hill of Amran, led to the discovery of a magnificent gate, which Prof. Koldewey identified with the gate of Urasch, often referred to in terms of admiration by old Greek writers.

We believe most interesting things will yet be brought to light out of these old ruins of ancient Babylon. We may look for still greater confirmations of the history of that empire as given in the book of Daniel. Will the destructive criticism give up its position that Daniel, the eye witness of the glory and fall of the Babylon empire, did not write the book which bears his name? We think not; it would mean the complete collapse of their theory. God gave them space to repent, but they repent not. How awful will be the fate of the enemies of the Bible when at last God enacts the predicted judgments of his Word.

While God's Word is being derided by scoffers, sceptics, infidels and many so-called ministers of the gospel, the stones are crying out from the ground "God's word is true."

Under the leadership of a skeptical ministry, is it any wonder that the congregations have become mere social clubs. A short time ago I was passing by the Christian church in Austin, Ill. On the front of the church was an announcement of a church entertainment to be held that night: "Side-splitting fun, here tonight."

In a Los Angeles newspaper the pastor of Temple Auditorium announced himself as a "brilliant, fearless, earnest preacher who makes you think." One evening his topic was: "The Man of the House; is he the Head of the House?" Another evening his topic was: "How to be Happy, Though Married," with special solo entitled, "Daddy." Dr. Johnson, of Boston, called a "great divine," announced his subject as "The Hobble Skirt." Other churches are holding theater and moving picture shows. A Presbyterian Evangelist in Chicago preached on the subject: "Cotton Is More Better Shortening than Lard." Read 2 Tim. 4: 3: "For the time will come (has already come) when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts will heap to themselves teachers having itching ears." It would be interesting to apply these things to other scripture, showing them to be astounding signs of the times, but the space of a short article forbids.

But beloved in the Lord, there is a great day coming. "Many of these preachers will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied, (preached) in thy name? And in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them I never knew you." In the day that is coming God will wipe out this filthy, slimy trail of the serpent brood, like he rolled back the surging waters of the deluge, and smiled upon a purer world.

So he shall yet clothe the world "with a deeper verdure; shall beautify it with the tree of God; shall garland it with Sharon's roses; shall roll crystal rivers through its waste, and call forth sparkling fountains in its deserts; and shall have a brighter bow of promise in its heavens than Noah ever saw, and shall bless it as he never blessed Eden of old; shall plant Jerusalem as a gem of unfailing beauty upon its verdant bosom, and shall welcome his people to it as their resting place—the paradise of God."

"O hark! I have glad news for thee.
It has thrilled my soul with joy,
And to sound it abroad henceforth shall be,
My life-long sweet employ.
The morning cometh! The radiant time
We have longed for: draweth nigh!
O publish the tidings in every clime
Proclaim them from earth to sky."
Will you join me in this blessed work?

In the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.

625 N. Willow Ave.,
Austin Sta., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIED.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Phelps, in Oregon, Ill., on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 25th, when their daughter Bernice was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Thompson Rogers of the same place.

Sister Bernice is well known among our young people both in Iowa and Illinois, having attended several conferences in the former state, and acted as conference organist in the latter for a number of years. She is a proficient musician, and is highly respected both for her musical talent and for her sterling Christian character.

The groom, who is an electrician of ability, comes of an excellent family, and we feel sure will make rapid advancement in his chosen profession, for he is both industrious and ambitious.

The marriage was solemnized at 4 o'clock. After an impressive rendering of the beautiful song—"Because God Made You Mine," by Mrs. Mary Artz, the bridal couple took their places beneath a wedding bell of vines and yellow dahlias, and made their mutual vows of fidelity and affection, symbolizing the endlessness of their union by the bestowal of a ring.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white silk marquisette over white satin, trimmed with bands of the same material and Irish crocheted lace. The only ornament worn was a garniture of pearls. The groom was dressed in the customary black.

After the ceremony a five course dinner was served by Mrs. Ella Jenkins, assisted by Miss Laura Howard. The house was tastefully decorated with yellow, pink and white dahlias, ferns and vines.

Mrs. Edna Bacot, a sister of the groom, and her three sons, of Oak Park, Ill., Mrs. Lois Retteuhouse, another sister of the groom, and her little daughter from Colorado; Mr. Vivian Phelps, the bride's brother; Mrs. Ella Jenkins, of Winthrop, Iowa, an aunt of the bride; Mrs. Mary Artz and Miss Laura Howard, of Oregon with the parents of the bride composed the company witnessing the ceremony, which was performed by the writer.

After returning from their wedding journey, which includes visits in Chicago, Niagara Falls, New York and Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will be at home after November 15th, at 210 N. Fourth street, Oregon, Illinois. Together with their many friends we wish them a happy and prosperous life journey.

G. ELDREL MARSH.

Oregon, Ill.

REPORT OF SO. ILL. CONFERENCE.

The tenth annual conference of the Church of God of Southern Illinois was held at Moriah, Illinois, September 30 to October 7, inclusive. We are glad to report an enjoyable and most profitable meeting, although the weather was unfavorable during part of the meeting, we had several good sessions with good attendance. Bro. G. E. Marsh, of Oregon, Ill., ably conducted the meeting until the middle of the week, when Bro. L. E. Conner arrived, and we once more had the pleasure of hearing him expound the truth, both as to doctrine and practice. We had a Bible study each day, and learned many valuable lessons.

On the closing Sunday the Lord's Supper was commemorated. It brought to our minds afresh the suffering and death of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, whom we are trying to serve.

We would like to give to the readers every good thought given by our preaching brethren, for they were many and excellent; but time and space will not permit. The strongest lessons were from Matt. 5, the central thought being that we are to serve the Lord from the spirit of the law, rather than from the letter "the spirit and truth." The basis or fundamental principle must be right, then the law of love is the outcome of the doctrine laid down by the Son of Man.

Those from a distance attending all or part of the time were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Slack, Wakefield, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Slack, Wakefield, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Lebanon, Ill.; Miss Leona Hansen, Lebanon, Ill.

May we have more such conferences if the Lord delays his coming.

MRS. C. W. WEAVER,
Secretary.

Casey, Ill.

LIFTING THE EYES TO THE HILLS.

"I to the hills will lift mine eyes.
From whence doth come mine aid.
My safety cometh from the Lord,
Who heaven and earth hath made.

Ps. cxxi. Scotch metrical version.

This psalm is frequently given out and sung in churches. How far it is sung "with the understanding" is another question. But possibly the original writer might feel some surprise if he were to hear his psalm sung according to the above version. A clergyman who ministered in a small village, and eked out a scanty living by cultivating a hill farm, is said to have been wont always to give out this psalm to be sung about the time of harvest. Whether the worthy man was only actuated by a spirit of thankfulness for being thus enabled to minister to his flock, and at the same time provide for his temporal wants, or intended to remind his people that he was not entirely dependent on them for his living, one can at least see some appropriateness in singing, under such circumstances —

"I to the hills will lift mine eyes
From whence doth come mine aid,"

seeing that both pastor and people shared in the advantages of the hill farm.

But this does not apply to churches generally; and perhaps blank amazement would, in many cases, be the only reply were those who sing the first and second lines of this psalm to be asked why they should "lift up their eyes to the hills?" or what "aid" is to be expected from such a quarter?

Now, this is not as it should be. Psalms, hymns or spiritual songs, selected to be sung in churches, should give forth no vague or uncertain sound, but should be easily understood, and of such a nature that all who delight to sing God's praise may be able to do so "with the understanding." Few, if any, it is to be feared, can thus sing the first lines of this psalm, and better, surely, that they should not be sung at all than sung with only a vague uncertainty as to their meaning, or without any meaning in the mind of the singers at all.

"Our eyes look upward to the hills, Whence our returning Lord shall come,"

are other line of song evidently borrowed from this psalm, only a little changed. But the writer seemingly desirous to give meaning to the words, introduces the "Lord's return" as that which is to be looked for from the "hills." Now, we have divine warrant for expecting that the Lord will come; but not from the hills, for "the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout," "from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ," and of this we may appropriately sing. But where are the hills, referred to in the above lines, from which our returning Lord is to come? or what are we to expect from the "hills" to cause us to look to them for "aid?"

It was meditating on another portion of Scripture that first led me to suspect something wrong with this psalm: and on turning to the psalm I found the marginal reading to correspond exactly with what I expected the meaning to be. The marginal reading is interrogative:—

"Shall I lift up mine eyes to the hills?
Whence should my help come?
My help cometh from the Lord
Which made heaven and earth."

The meaning when thus read, seems plain. Help is needed, where shall I look for it? Shall I look up to the hills? No! "My help cometh from the Lord," who can help, and "who made heaven and earth."

To contrast with the "Lord who made heaven and earth," something else than merely "the hills" must be understood to be implied, although not stated in this psalm: yet something connected or associated in some way other with "the hills," and from which "help" had been or might be sought, but sought in vain. And are we not furnished with a key to the meaning in the frequent references to "the hills" the word? Just as Jesus said—"Whoso shall swear by the temple sweareth by it, and by Him that dwelleth therein," so in the manner they that "lifted up their eyes to the hills" for help, lifted up their eyes to the hills and to the idols that were worshiped thereon. This connection gives the psalm full meaning, and not as it is sung. The Lord commanded Israel, "Ye shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, upon the high mountains and upon the hills and under every green tree." But Israel transgressed the commandment, as it is written, "Upon every high hill and under every green tree thou wanderest" and hast "burned incense upon the mountains and blasphemed me upon the hills:" but "truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills and from the multitude of mountains. Truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel." (Deut. xii. 2; Isa. v. 7; Jeremiah ii. 20, ii. 23).

J. MILL.

GOLD DUST.

Faith is following truth even though no one sees it.

The soul that aspires to help men is the soul that should be entrusted to lead men.

To seek the truth wherever it leads; to live the life of love whatever it costs—this is to be the friend and helper of God.

If we are living so as to make the tasks of those around us less heavy, their hearts a little lighter, their souls more sure of God, then we are living rightly, and the question, "Is life worth living?" will never occur to our minds as a pertinent one.

One should never be discouraged because the results of his efforts to do good do not come as fast as, or when he expected. Keep on acting in the right line and in due season the results will come. Patient continuance in well doing is a cardinal virtue.

Try to have kindly thoughts of people and the kind words will take care of themselves.

Treat your friends for what you know them to be. Regard no surfaces, consider not what they did, but what they intended.

Character is to wear forever; who will wonder or grudge that it cannot be developed in a day.

A single expression of appreciation and encouragement will at times turn a human life toward an upward path.

Knowing how much suffering there is in the world at the present time should we not be comforted that the hour is at hand when the great physician will return to this earth, not merely to heal men's bodies, but to renew their minds and help them to live pure and godly lives.

Great thoughts are those that go deep enough to take root and bear fruit in lives.

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM NOT THE LORD'S COMING.

"Whom the heaven must receive until times of restitution of all things—spoken of by all prophets." Acts 3:21.

1. If the destruction of Jerusalem was the Lord's coming, how could John say after the destruction, "Even so, come Lord Jesus?" Rev. 22:20.

2. Did not the angels say He would so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven?" Acts 1:11.

3. If the destruction of Jerusalem was the Lord's coming, why were Christians told to "flee to the mountains" when they saw Jerusalem compassed with armies? Matt. 24:16.

4. Why were no features of Paul's description of the Lord's coming fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem?

5. Did the Lord "descend from heaven with a shout?" did the "dead rise?" were the living "caught up?" 1 Thess. 4:16, 17.

6. Did the Jews at the destruction of Jerusalem "see the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven" as Christ told the high priest?

7. Did the Jews who were massacred at the destruction of Jerusalem say "blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord?" Matt. 23:39.

8. Were the Roman armies who came at the destruction of Jerusalem composed of angels?

9. When Christ wept over the coming destruction of Jerusalem was he weeping over his own return in glory?

10. If the Lord came at the destruction of Jerusalem, how could the Lord's coming have been "the hope of the church" through the next two centuries of persecution?

11. If the Lord came, and the Millennium began at the destruction of Jerusalem, did not the Huns, Goths and Vandals come at a very inopportune time?

12. As predicted, was satan loosed out of his prison "when the thousand years were expired?" Rev. 20:7.

13. Does not John say, "When he shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is?" Did all Christians become like Christ at the destruction of Jerusalem? 1 Jno. 3:2.

14. If Malachi's great and terrible day of the Lord" was at the destruction of Jerusalem, why did not the Jews (or the church) "tread down their enemies?" Mal. 4.

15. If, "Elijah must first come before the great and terrible day of the Lord," and John the Baptist said, "I am not He," has the Lord come? Jno. 1:21.

16. In 2 Tim. 4:1, do we not read "the Lord Jesus Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at His appearing and His kingdom?" Did the judgment take place at the destruction of Jerusalem?

17. When all the prophets predicted that the Jews would be delivered at the Lord's coming, is it not strange than anyone should say that the destruction of Jerusalem and of the Jewish nation, was the Lord's coming?—The Lord's Coming, published by C. C. Cook.

I am confident that the Almighty has his plans and will work them out, and whether we see it or not, they will be the wisest and best for us.—Abraham Lincoln.

Manager's Column

DO IT NOW! Fill out a census blank and send it in.

In sending money to this office do not enclose coins or paper money in an envelope, particularly the former, as holes are worn in the envelope and the coins are often lost. Send money orders or stamps, either of which you can get at your local post office without much trouble.

We have received letters from a number of subscribers stating that they were not receiving their papers as early in the week as formerly. Beginning with this issue the paper will be published a day earlier in the week. Articles to be published in the current number should reach the editor not later than Saturday of the preceding week, and in sending in manuscripts remember the rule is always to write on one side of the paper only.

Do not send us matter intended for publication. It imposes upon us the added duty of sending it to the editor, and delays its publication. Send all Mss. direct to the editor, 1023 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

The influence of a good man touches those who meet him day by day.

He who lives with God may depend upon God's guidance in each new case of need.

A true friend tries to guard us from placing hope where it will meet only disappointment.

Nothing is left to fate or chance but God orders all for the best, and each one is free to choose or refuse to come into harmony with God's plans.

It is safer to rely upon the word of God than upon any appearances that seem to contradict it.

God's resources are never exhausted. The wise are quick to seize opportunity.

It is brave to speak with all possible kindness the necessary word though it hurt the hearer.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the brethren scattered abroad:

Our Heavenly Father has now placed me in such a position that I can give four or five months of the year to helping the churches at no money expense to them, unless may railway fare is paid, and that I will pay myself for moderate distances if those who invite me cannot afford to pay it. I have been preaching the gospel for many years. I also am a hygienic physician; also a graduate of phrenology, and have lectured much on these subjects. Any church wishing my services may address,

DR. WALLACE MASON,
Selina, Ont., Canada.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 25 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages. 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The editi should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rotlie, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Fashion designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Ten—more highly than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free premium catalogue and 4 cent Pattern offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints conductors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER 8, 1911 No. 42

WHEN OUR LORD COMES.

When our earthly life is ended,
And our earthly mission done,
We shall meet with all the blessed
When our Saviour comes to reign.
Oh! How sweet will be that meeting.
Earthly words can ne'er declare.
We shall know the bliss of Eden
When we meet our loved ones there.

Yes, we'll meet them in that city
That is only just beyond.
And our hearts shall leap with rapture
When we take them by the hand.
Oh! I'm sure that we shall know them,
Though the angel robes they wear;
We shall meet our dear departed.
We shall greet our loved ones there.

LILLIE H. WILLIS.
Galva, Ill.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A Lecture by M. Joblin.

FRIENDS: Man is a material being, and needs a material home. If the man proper were an entity or essence, encompounded and invisible, and immaterial, it would matter little where he may be. Beyond the bounds of time and space would suit him as well as any other place. In fact he would be so near nothing, it would be right for him to be nowhere. But if a man be something that God created of definite space qualities, it were impossible for him to be beyond the bounds of space. He must be somewhere while he is. As the Word distinctly tells us that in a little while the wicked shall not be, and their place

Shall Not Be,

it is only the place of the righteous that interests us. They will ever live; but where? Who knows where? God knows, and he has told us, and we can know by believing him. He sent word to us by Jesus, in Matt. v. 5, that the meek shall inherit the earth. He sent word to us by David in the 37th Psalm, not only that the meek should inherit the earth, but dwell therein forever. Thus a tangible home has been provided for tangible people. The Psalmist has also brought us word that "the heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's"—Psalms cxv. 16—He has not given it to anyone. It warns us against the presumption that it is for us; it is the Lord's. It is no wonder that Jesus should tell the Jews, and his disciples as well, that where he was going, they could not come—John xiii. 33. But let us turn to the 115th Psalm again: "The heaven, even the heaven's are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Do these statements of the spirit suit you? or do you object to the earth being the of the saints? If so, why do you object? Do you know of a more suitable place? If so, how do you know of it? Has God told you? If so, where? If not, I ask you again, how do you know? It seems strange that you should work so hard to get what you can of earth now, and hold to what you get with so tight a grip, although not certain that you can hold it for an hour, and although it involves heaps of care, and vexation and disappointment and sickness; and yet, when the curse is rolled back, and the earth blooms like the paradise of God, and the tabernacle of God is with men, and the glory of God covers the earth as the waters cover the sea, when incorruption takes the place of corruption, and you could live on and on throughout the mighty roll of everlasting ages, that is not good enough for you. You want to go to heaven. The answer to you from heaven is, "the heaven, even the heaven's are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." As plain as you could be taught, that is the place. No one but Jesus is invited to heaven, and he remains there only till the time for the restoration of all things God's prophets have predicted, as you may prove by reference to Acts iii. 19-26. In harmony with this is the declaration of the spirit in Peter on the day of Pentecost, that David had not ascended to heaven, a thousand years after his death.

Everlasting Home

Returning to the 115th Psalm, he who sees the end from the beginning, knew that men would claim to be what they are not—claim to have never-dying souls, when they have not; claim to be alive and praising God, when they are dead; claim a home in heaven when they have no right to. I say God, foreseeing all this, silences all their presumptions—it ought to silence them—by saying, "The heaven, even the heaven's are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men;

The Dead Praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence;" thus these two verses lay the ax to both the Platonic-inherent-immortality tree, and the sky-kingdom tree.

In the morning paper, some time since, I noticed a discourse by some one high in the world religious, headed, "Thy Kingdom Come;" this was the text. The opening words of the discourse were as follows: "These words are as familiar as the stars above, and also as incomprehensive. We know as much of their meaning as we know of the mystery of the seas.

It gives me no pleasure to make assertions on subjects; indeed I could have wept like Jeremiah when I read those words, because of the darkness that pervades the minds of men concerning God's glorious kingdom to come. But a voice from heaven says to me, through Jeremiah, "He that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully;

What is the Chaff of the Wheat?

We have the unadulterated truth of God concerning his kingdom, and propose to hold up the words of this great preacher to its light. He says of this petition in our Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come," that the words are as incomprehensive as the stars. That means, not comprehensible—incapable of being understood, beyond the reach of human intellect. He told his audience that his text was incomprehensible. Is it not a wonder they did not leave the house? In the name of truth and reason, and common sense, and pure religion, and everything sacred, why did he not select a subject that he did understand? After making this assertion the speaker, to the end of his discourse, showed his idea to be that the church was the kingdom, and that the raising of $1,000,000 this year for missionary work would hasten the coming of the kingdom. I maintain that if his text be as incomprehensible as the stars, this must be

All Guess-Work.

As Paul, in 1. Thess. v. 21, tells us to prove all things and hold fast that which is good, let us prove this. But how shall we prove it? In reply I remark, Jesus in John xvii. 17, says the Father's word is truth; and the spirit in Is. viii 20, tells us exactly how to prove it. It says, "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." This is the way to prove all things. You have heard the assertions and theories of our preacher, but what does the word say about the conversion of the world by missionary effort, or by preaching? I answer, the Lord Jesus distinctly answer ent. 5th Jesus distinctly teaches that the world will not be converted before he comes the second time. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the son of man be." Was the world converted by the 120 years preaching of Noah? If so, why came the flood? "For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the son of man be: then two shall be in the field, the one shall be taken, and the other left."

Do You Believe This

description of the world's condition at the coming of Christ? If you do, you cannot believe in its conversion before he comes. If all were converted why should one be taken and the other left? I believe that Jesus told the truth. To fully realize the force of his reference to the destruction of the world that then was, let us pause a moment. Hundreds of years had rolled away, and the tendency of human character had been from bad to worse. The wickedness of man was great, and the imagination of his heart was only evil. "Sin had spread like a loathsome pestilence, and scarcely any had escaped its polluting power. One man was found just and perfect in all his ways, and found favor with God, and was esteemed worthy to escape the things coming on the earth, and hence he was selected as the medium for the conveyance of divine warnings to mankind. Being warned of the approaching deluge, and moved with fear, he, not only preached faithfully to the world, but he prepared an ark for the saving of himself and house;

Thus He Condemned the World;

thus he was justified before God and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." "But the spirit of disobedience closed the ears of the people against the warnings of the Almighty, and sealed their eyes to the warnings of coming destruction. The hours that might have averted the dread calamity were employed in filling their cup of iniquity to the brim, and treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God. The day sped swiftly on, men pursued their ceaseless round of sin and pleasure, forgetting that they were wearing out the last brief moments of divine forbearance and of human probation and braving the vengeance of the Almighty. Look into the ark a moment. Noah and his family are there; animal creation is represented there; the door is closed by an invisible hand—they wait the departure of the last hours of probation. What a solemn stillness creeps over them! How dread the suspense! How breathless the anxiety! The world moves on as usual. The farmer in the field, the merchant at the store, the drunkard at his cups, the reveler at his revelry and the sinner at his sins. Violence and strife, and iniquity roll on in resistless current. What a scene! Tonight a world's feast—tomorrow

A World's Funeral.

Tonight a world's revel, tomorrow a world's ruin. Tonight a world's exultation, tomorrow a world's execution. Tonight a world's debauch, tomorrow a world's destruction.

But hark the echoes of distant thunder—swift as the eagle's flight inky clouds roll up the sky; earth rocks, the ground swells; the flood gates of heaven are opened; the foundations of earth are broken up; the deep rolls up its flood; the waves roar, the winds howl, the clouds gather, the rain descends, the lightnings blaze, the thunders bellow, sinners wail, joy perishes.

Hope Expires;

and above, beneath and all around is one wild scene of confusion, darkness anguish and dismay. Oh what a funeral!" What were Jesus' words? "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the son of man." Which do you believe, the modern theory of the world's conversion, or the truth as expressed by Jesus? You cannot believe both; they are as wide as the poles apart.

But what of the idea that the church is the kingdom? What say the Scriptures? How readest thou? I read that the saints shall possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever (Dan. vii. 18). But who are the saints that are to take the kingdom? I answer, the members of the Church of God. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, first chapter and second verse, says, "unto the Church of God, which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, Called to be Saints;"

that is, godly or holy ones. If the members of the church at Corinth were called to be saints, they were called to be possessors of the kingdom; and we are told in 1 Thess. ii. 12, that God had called them unto his kingdom and glory. And it was the acceptance of his call or invitation, that constituted them the church of God; the called-out-ones—the called according to his purpose, as it is stated in Rom. viii. 28; the purpose is to give them the kingdom—make them world-rulers. This is the way the Father will bless them; and Jesus will say to them by-and-by, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world." All can see that the church is not given to the church, nor the kingdom given to the kingdom—it is religious nonsense to think so. It is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom to the church, for Jesus says so. And the word of the spirit in James ii. 5 is this: "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith,

Heirs of the Kingdom which he has promised to those that love him?" Jesus said he was born to be a king; and the angel promised Mary that her son should be great, and should be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God would give unto him the throne of his father David and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there should be no end. And when, in addition to this, you remember that he, Jesus, promised his twelve apostles that when he should sit upon the throne of his glory, they should sit upon twelve thrones, ruling the twelve tribes of Israel, you begin to see what kingdom Jesus had reference to when he taught us to pray

"Thy Kingdom Come."

Were we to receive a letter from a rich relative in reference to the disposal of his property, would we dash into the middle of the letter, read a little, and miss a little, then read more, and so on, and finally throw it aside because it was incomprehensible? No! We would note every statement carefully, and form our judgment of the document as a whole, not upon a few disconnected sentences. And I venture to say that the man who opens the Bible at the 6th chapter of Matthew, reads the 10th verse, and ignores the fact that God for ages has been making promises, and giving invitations to a kingdom of his that is coming—I say the man who ignores all this has no right to expect to understand the petition, "Thy kingdom come." Of course it would be as incomprehensive as the stars. How could it be otherwise? As it does not there explain where it is to come from, for what purpose it is coming, who its king is to be, where its territory, which shall be its capital city, who its subjects, and who its rulers, all this information must be gleaned elsewhere. God neither expects us to believe without evidence, nor act without reason. He says, "Come, let us reason together." In Matt. iv. 23 we learn that Jesus went everywhere preaching

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

It is always definite and singular, never plural; and by this we know that the kingdom he preached and the kingdom he taught us to pray for are the same. Joseph of Arimathea waited for the kingdom of God. Wise men from the East asked, where is he that is born king of the Jews? This disturbed Herod the king, who demanded of the priests and scribes where the anointed should be born. How did he know an anointed one was to be born? What was he getting excited about? The answer of the priests and scribes will explain this: "And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea." How did they know? Listen again. "In Bethlehem of Judea, for thus it is written." Now we have it: "For thus it is written by the prophet, and thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Judea art not least among the princes of Judah, for out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people, Israel." Herod knew this was of the people he ruled; he knew they hoped for this because God's prophets had predicted it, but he did not know enough of the Scripture to refer to the prediction himself, so he demanded it of the priests and scribes, being determined to nip this thing in the bud. He slew all the children in the neighborhood of Bethlehem from two years old and under, hoping to destroy the anointed.

The National Hope

In the 19th chapter of Luke we learn that because they were nigh to Jerusalem, and because the people thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear, he said, "Therefore a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return; and he called his ten servants and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, occupy till I come." This was said to correct the idea that he would then set up the kingdom of God. The nobleman was first to be invested with authority, and then return. In his absence his servants must occupy, and on his return they would be rewarded with positions of authority, just before his ascension from the Mount of Olives, his disciples asked him, "Lord, will thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" No! The nobleman was about to start for the far country and his certain return was announced by the men in white apparel, in these words: "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

"Going to a Far Country"

"But," says one, "Jesus did not explain what kingdom he was proclaiming." Very true; he knew the people had the oracles of God which testified of him and his kingdom, and it was their fault if they were not informed on that subject. "Search the Scriptures," said he, "for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they that testify of him." But what do they testify of him? First, that as the seed of the woman he should bruise the serpent's head; second, that as the seed of Abraham, and jointly with Abraham, he should have the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and that conjointly with Abraham he should bless all the families of the earth. The Scriptures further say, that as the

Seed of David

he shall occupy the throne of David forever, and that all peoples, nations and languages shall serve him; and that, as the prophet Ezekiel said, chapter xxxvii. verses 21, 22, "God will take the children of Israel from among the nations whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land, and will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all * * and David, God's servant, shall be king over them all. And the 25th verse says "and my servant David shall be their prince forever. My tabernacle shall also be with them." If you wish to know who this David is who is to reign over them, I answer, you cannot be mistaken if you turn to Luke i. 30-33 and read, "Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor with God." How was His favor to be manifested? She should have a son. "He shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Put these links of truth together and they will make a chain that all the theological doctors in the land cannot break. But there are two other links I would like to add to these. When about to abdicate in favor of Solomon, David said, "Of all my sons (and the Lord hath given me many sons) He hath chosen Solomon, my son to sit upon the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel." At the coronation David said in prayer to God, "Thine is the Kingdom, Oh, Lord." Read I Chron. xxviii. 5, and I Chron. xxix 11 and then read the 3rd verse, "Then Solomon sat upon the throne as king instead of David, his father, and prospered, and all Israel obeyed him. Absolute proof, this, that the ancient kingdom of Israel was

God's Kingdom on Earth

He has no kigdom now. The kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of God was overturned because it did wickedly, and in the overturning edict the Lord said, "It shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." The promise of Gabriel renews that promise, and more than that, it shows us positively that the right to the overturned kingdom of David vests in Jesus, and God will give it to him. This is what we get by searching the Scriptures which Jesus said testified of him. And you see he expects us to believe what they testify of him. The petition "Thy kingdom come" is not as incomprehensive as the stars if we believe all God has promised about his kingdom.

By searching the Scriptures as Jesus bade us, light from Heaven reveals a new order of things to be inaugurated when Christ comes again. All mortality and probation do not end then, but all human government and authority end.

The Kingdom of God

takes their place. Christ being King of kings and Lord of Lords. And oh! thank God, we begin to see that redemption's plans are not a failure—that another chapter of salvation's story is to be unfolded. From Adam down to the second coming of Christ, God has merely been picking out those who shall be the immortal and glorified rulers of this world. And the apostle John has shown us that Jehovah has marked off 1000 years in which to bring about the subjection of all things and says, "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years;" after which another change takes place, but the kingdom stands forever. Think of the myriads that will be born and live in peace and plenty under the mild reign of Jesus and his saints in the age that is just ahead of us, and you will see that God's purpose to fill the whole earth with his glory and teeming millions of holy beings will not be frustrated. It seems to me if people could realize that Christ was coming as a restorer they would be glad to welcome him.

Let me now say to you, that when Jesus went everywhere proclaiming the kingdom of God he was selecting those who shall reign with him. The twelve and the seventy preached for the same end, and that is the object of this humble effort. The Gospel invitation is not an invitation to sing hallelujahs in heaven, nor to become mere subjects of the kingdom when it comes, but to live and reign with Christ; to inherit the kingdom, and we have Jesus' word for it that the kingdom is for them—prepared FOR them—prepared for THEM. In the 8th chapter of Acts and the 12th verse we read of the Samaritans, that when they believed Philip "preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." The man who said the words, "Thy kingdom come" were as incomprehensive as the stars, needed a sermon from Philip. That evangelist did

Prepared

Continued on Page Three

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor.
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio, ..Nov. 8, 1911

EDITORIAL

Obedience is the condition of "eternal salvation." Heb. 5:8,9. Baptism is called obedience. Rom. 6:17. As obedience is necessary to eternal salvation, and as baptism is necessary to obedience, we conclude that baptism is essential to final salvation. Don't you?

Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year, all times specially appropriate to remember the poor, will soon be with us. For $1.50 you can send The Restitution fifty odd times to some needy home, preach fifty odd sermons, and supply other good and sound biblical literature. Can you think of another present worth so much as "The Dear old Restitution?"

Have you read Bro. Gelletley in this number on "Christ, the Seed of the Woman?" Yes! Then read it again, and do some more deep thinking.

The Kingdom of God, a sermon by the late Bro. Joblin in this issue, is the gospel story in a nutshell. We have prepared many of his sermons for the press, but it seems to us that this one far surpasses any that we have yet prepared. It is one of his discourses that is out of print; but is too valuable to be lost to the church and the world, so by the time you read this editorial there will have been printed another large edition. As they are sold at $1.00 per 100, post free, they should be scattered everywhere.

"GALILEAN, THOU HAST CONQUERED."

Such was the dying exclamation of Julian, the Roman emperor. Though once a professed Christian, he apostatized from the faith, and employed all his energies for the overthrow of the religion of Jesus and the establishment of idolatry. He shut up the Christian sanctuaries, re-opened and patronized heathen temples, and in face of the positive assertion of Christ that the Jewish temple at Jerusalem should remain in ruins, impiously attempted to rebuild it. But he contended against One far mightier than himself, and was forced to submit. Wounded in battle by a Persian lance, he took a handful of his blood, and casting it toward Heaven cried, "O Galilean, thou hast conquered."

MANY CALLED; FEW CHOSEN.

The Gospel for All; Only Few Accept It.

There are many ideas, conceptions and theories in the world which make void the law of God. Numerous expressions have recently forced themselves upon our attention which have a decided tendency to relegate the word of Jehovah to desuetude. Coming from those who claim to be enlightened in the gospel, they are not to be ignored as originating in the hebitude of the ignorant. On the contrary, they appear in studied compositions, in discourses that are discantive, and in arguments that are deliberative, bespeaking that those who use them have accepted the dangerous upshot to which they lead.

We refer to such forms of expressions as these: "The gospel is only for the little flock." "It was not meant for the world." "In the next age it will be for the world as it is now for the little flock" etc. By reading Lk. 12:32, the only scripture text referred to, and that one is misapplied—the reader will notice that on Lot leaves to the "little flock." "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Not, as some wrest it, that the preaching of the gospel was limited to the little flock, but to them the kingdom is to be given. To preach the kingdom only to the little flock is one ideal to "give them the kingdom" is another and distinct idea. The message of the kingdom was preached to all; that only a "little flock" should get the kingdom promised in the message in no way circumscribes the universality of the message in its delivery.

Let us enquire at the oracles of God (Rom. 15:4). Was the gospel preached only to a few? Or was it preached to all and accepted by that few? Are the "few" and the "little flock" of the scriptures the ones preached to or the ones saved by the preaching? The gospel was sent to "all the world"—not a little flock! Matt. 28:18-20; Mk. 16:15-16; Lk. 24:46-47. "Ye shall be my witnesses," says Jesus to his apostles, "both in Jerusalem and in Judea" and unto a "little flock"? Just to a few? No! "Unto the uttermost part of the earth!" Acts 1:8. The commandment to repent is intended for "all men", even for the ignorant Athenians (Acts 17:30). To the Gentiles Paul was sent to open their eyes. Acts 26:18. If modern perverters of the gospel had been with Paul they could have enlightened him wonderfully from their standpoint. They would have said, "Paul, you have the cart before the horse; Jesus did not intend the gospel for everybody but the "little flock." Shame on you for introducing it to the ignorant and idolatrous Athenians." To this calumny Paul would doubtless answer that he was divinely commissioned to go to the Gentiles and "open their eyes," Acts 26:18. But to this our erratic critics could complacently reply: "Hold on, Paul, you are wrong about that; you must not open their eyes; they are to be opened in the next age; go now to the "little flock" and preach, and to them only. The gospel is not for the world now; it is only for the few." We think Paul has the best of the argument, and we take our stand with him. I have read in the Book that "many are called, but few are chosen." (Matt. 20:16); only in the books of men destitute of the truth do I find this statement reversed. Dear brethren and sisters, do not be "moved away from the hope of the gospel.

Which Was Preached to "Every Creature Under Heaven."

Col. 1:23. This says "every creature under heaven," let the sacrilegious say to "only a few." God's word says the called are many, the chosen but few (Mt. 20:16); let the presumptuous say, "the called are few—only the little flock." "Let God be true, but every man a liar." Rom. 3:4.

"ALL CHILDREN OF GOD?"

In speaking of the divine Fatherhood in the Review, Washington Gladden, D. D., says: "If what Jesus tells us is true, that we are, every one of us, children of the Father in heaven; if this is the fact which we are to believe concerning ourselves; if it is not merely a figure of speech to enkindle our imagination, but the literal truth; if it is not a remote possibility to which saints attain but the actual condition into which every man is born, and from which no man can any more escape than he can escape from the fact that he is the son of his earthly parents—if all this is true, what a tremendous truth it is!"

"If all this is true," Mr. Gladden has certainly unearthed a tremendous truth. But has he correctly represented our Savior's teachings on this matter? We think not. Hear these words in Jno. 1:12: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God (the right to become children of God—R. V.), even to them that believe on his name." If we are all actually sons of God; if this is not a "remote possibility to which saints attain," but the actual and present "condition into which every man is born," and from which not one of us can "escape" if we tried (?), in what different sense are we to "become" sons of God? If we are born sons of God as he says, then we are children of God without the possibility of "escape"—are sons "every one of us" inherently. From this standpoint John made a foolish exclamation when he said the father had graciously "bestowed upon us" this manner of love, "that we should be called the sons of God." (1 Jno. 3:1).

FALSIFIED EMBRYO PICTURES

Mr Haeckel, the devious scientist and evolutionist, has been caught in trickery by a rebuke of the "common people." The Bible Standard, of Auckland, N. Z., says:

In the course of last year those who are interested in the question of evolution were astounded to learn that to advance his theory of the descent of man, Professor Haeckel had deliberately published falsified pictures of embryos. When Mr. McCabe came out to Australia on his recent lecturing tour, he was understood to deny that this had occurred. The editor of the Bible Investigator, however, took steps to verify the matter, and sent for the paper in which Professor Haeckel's damaging confession appeared. This he has published, and as we deem the matter of sufficient importance to help in giving it publicity, we give the translation of that part of Professor Haeckel's letter in which the confession, that some of the pictures were falsified, appears. The Investigator says:

"To make an immediate end of this entire unsavory quarrel I shall at once begin with the boldly repentant confession that a small portion of my embryo pictures, (possibly 6 or 8 in a hundred) are really (in Dr. Brass's sense of the word), "falsified"—all those, namely, in which the disclosed material for inspection is so incomplete or insufficient that one is compelled in a restoration of a connected development series to fill up the gaps through hypotheses, and to reconstruct the missing members through comparative synthesis. What difficulties this task encounters, and how easily the draught-man may blunder in it, the embryologist alone can judge?" Was there ever a more astounding confession made by a scientific man? Had Haeckel given that explanation when his illustrations were published, he would have killed the embryonic argument at its birth. The reason for his silence is a evident as it is everlastingly dishonorable. No doubt the statement as to Haeckel's confession was denied by our atheistic and other evolutionists for the simple reason that they could not believe such baseness to be possible. But the above confession before them, written by Haeckel's own hand, they must now admit that one of the chief foundations of evolution is vitiated by shameless imposture."

A PREACHER GRILLED.

I asked a preacher recently if a man could be saved without believing what he taught? He first answered, "Yes." I then asked him, can a man be a Christian without being a member of your church? He answered "Yes." Then as I can be a Christian and be saved without believing what you teach, and you preach the gospel, it follows that I can be a Christian and be saved without believing the gospel? "O, but a man must believe the gospel." Then do you preach the gospel? "Yes, of course I preach the gospel." Then, does it not follow that a man must believe what you preach in order to be a Christian and be saved? "Yes, a man must believe the gospel, and I preach the gospel." How many gospels are there? "Just one, of course."

Now as you preach the gospel, and there is just one gospel, and man must believe the gospel to be saved, Rom. 1:16, does it not follow that all men must believe what you teach to be Christians and be saved? Now Paul says, "God takes vengeance on those who obey not the gospel." 2 Thess. 1:8. As you preach the gospel and God takes vengeance on those who obey not the gospel, will not God take vengeance on all who fail to obey what you preach? "Well, yes, I suppose he will." You said at first that I could be saved without believing what you preach. Now you say, I must believe and obey what you teach before I can be saved. How about this any way?

"Well a man must believe and obey the gospel to be saved, and I preach the gospel." Very well; now, if I believe and obey what you preach, won't I, by so doing, become a member of the same church of which you are a member?

"Well, no, not necessarily." As you preach the gospel, and men hear and obey what you preach, just this and nothing more, and do not by this belief and obedience become a member of your church, what do you have to teach men in order that they may become members of your church? "O, I preach nothing but the gospel." People become members of your church by believing and obeying what you preach, don't they? "Of course they do." Then a man becomes a member of your church by believing and obeying the gospel. Does it not follow that all who believe and obey the gospel will be members of your church? "Well, it looks like they would." Then you say a man must believe and obey the gospel to be saved? "Yes, I say that." Now you say the man who believes and obeys the gospel will be a member of your church. Now does it not follow that a man must be a member of your church to be a Christian and be saved? "O, I don't believe that at all."

Again, will what you preach make a man a member of the Methodist church, as you are a Baptist? "No, sir, no man will ever be a Methodist by accepting what I preach." And you preach the gospel? "I certainly do." Then the preaching, belief of and obedience to the gospel will make no man a Methodist. Now, do you believe the Methodists are saved? "Why, of course, I think they are Christians." Can a man be a Christian without believing and obeying the gospel? "No he can not." Now, as you preach the gospel, and man cannot be a Christian without believing and obeying the gospel, and Methodists are Christians, then if a man believes and obeys what you teach he will be a Methodist, won't he? "Never, I tell you never." Then tell me how the Methodists are made Christians. "Well by preaching the gospel to the people." Do the Methodists preach the gospel? "Of course they do." A man has to believe and practice what the Methodists preach in order to be a Methodist, does he not? "Certainly, a man must believe what they teach and by complying with same he becomes a Methodist." You say the Methodists are Christians, and become Christians by complying with what they teach, and you further say the Methodists preach the gospel. Now I ask: Do you preach the same things the Methodists preach? "I do not." Then the gospel to a Baptist is one thing and to a Methodist it is a different thing. Yet believed and obeyed they make the same thing—a Christian! Tell us how this is any way.

"I'll not do it and I don't want to talk to a man who thinks a man can not be a Christian without believing as he does." Well, but—I won't talk to you."

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY AND THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question

Question 21. If times, times, and the dividing of time, in Dan. vii. 25, and Rev. xii. 14, be 1260 years, how is it that the seven times of Dan. iv. 16, are not 2520 years?

Answer. Because, when applied literally, as in the case of Nebuchadnezzar's expulsion from Babylonish society, seven times are seven literal periods of 360 days each. When applied symbolically, the time represented would be the period mentioned, viz., 2520 yea-s; and it is evident from several facts in the case that this secondary sense is intended though on the surface, the vision appears to be restricted to Nebuchadnezzar' individual experience. The tree of the vision represented Nebuchadnezzar, but as Nebuchadnezzar represented the empire, of which he was the head (Dan. ii. 38), the tree in representing him would represent the empire also, and with this suggestion several things agree. First, a tree is a frequent symbol of a kingdom—(Ezek. xxxi.; Matt. xiii. 31, 32). Second, the Nebuchadnezzar-tree after being cut down, was banded with brass and iron. (Dan. iv. 23), which has no counterpart in the individual fulfillment, but answers to the political fortunes of the Nebuchadnezzar-dynasty, inasmuch as Greece and Rome (represented brass and iron.—Dan. ii. 39, 40), were politically wound around the Babylonian tree-stump, after the tree had been shorn by the Medo-Persian sanhedrin ones.—(Isaiah xiii. 17). Third, the seven times, symbolically construed, coincide with the other periods in the way, that 2520 years reckoned as the period allotted for the existence of the kingdom of men, and dating from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, terminate 45 years after all the other periods are run out, and thus give a margin for the second exodus and the wonderful events by which the kingdoms of the world are wrested from the hands of their present rulers, and transferred to the dominion of the son of David. These constitute so many reasons for believing that even the seven times of Dan iv. 16, are representative of as many years as there are days in the period so described.

Question 22. If it be true that the "seven times" of Dan. iv. 16, represent 2520 years, on what passage shall we find Nebuchadnezzar eating grass like an ox?

Answer. Within the seven literal times, the literal Nebuchadnezzar would have been found with the beasts, occupied herbivorously in the manner described, but as the seven times are long past, Nebuchadnezzar is no longer to be found spending his time in that way. He got wiser before he died. We have to do with his political counterpart and the seven times in their political elaboration, and here there is no difficulty in finding Nebuchadnezzar at the grass. The kingdoms of men are everywhere feeding on cabbage, "walking after the imagination of their evil heart," as they have been doing now for nearly seven times of years. But there is hope. As at the end of the seven literal times Nebuchadnezzar's reason returned to him, and he blessed the God of heaven, so at the end of the seven symbolic times, mankind will come unto Yahweh from the ends of the earth. (Jer. xvi. 19), even unto the name of the Lord unto Jerusalem, (Jer. iii. 17), saying, "Surely, our fathers inherited lies, vanity and things wherein there is no profit."

(To be continued.)

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Nature of the Book of Revelations.

Text:—He sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John, who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, of all things that he saw. Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time is at hand." Rev. 1:1-4.

I. He sent xx it by his angel. V. 1.—V. 1: 22:6, 8, 9; Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19; Heb. 2:2.

II. And signified it (s-i-g-n-i-fied it) V. 1.—I. "Signified" means some sign, signal or token by which anything is made known. Rom. 4:11; Gen. 9:12, 13; 17:11; Lk. 2:12; 2 Cor. 12:12; 2 Cor. 12:12; 1 Cor. 14:22. II. Interspersed with the symbolism are God given clews by which the things "signified" are indicated, —they can be interpreted and appreciated. Vs. 1, 12-20; Dan. 12:1; Jer. 1:12; Amos 8:1; Zech. 1:18-21.

III. Who bare record v. 2. Jno. 21:24; 19:35; 1 Jno. 1:2; 4:14.

(a) "Of the word of God" vs. 2. 9; Jno. 19:35; Acts 1:21; 6:2.

(b) "And (Kai, Gr.) of the testimony of Jesus Christ, what?" and things he saw," vs. 2. 3; 4; 14; Jno. 8:18; 18, 37. Mk. 3:17.

IV. Benediction upon readers, hearers and keepers of the book: (a) Reason: "Time at hand." (b)

(a) vs. 3, 4; 22:6; Psa. 19:11; Lk. 11:28; Rev. 22:7, 14.

(b) vs. 1, 3; 22:10; Dan. 12:4,9.

*and of all things which he saw as in the common version is a faulty rendering of the Greek text. So read the writer is made to speak of (1) the word of God, (2) and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, "and" (3) of all things which he saw, as if they were additional to God's word and Christ's testimony, making these both historical and distinct from the "things" of the Apocalypse. John did not write, "And (Kai) all things which he saw," but simply, "what things he saw." The extent of the text is limited to the "word of God" and the "testimony of Jesus Christ" as revealed to John in the Apocalypse. Verse 1.

COMMUNICATION.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Will you permit me to say a few words to the brethren and sisters, through the dear old Restitution? I wish I could tell them that I am well, but alas, I cannot. Sometimes I get better and think I will soon be well, then I will get worse again, and at the present time, have almost lost hopes of ever being well again.

Twenty odd years ago, we started a little paper here as a medium of communication between us, but about two months ago, our printer who so long printed it for us refused to print it any longer for the price he had been printing it for, and our editors thought he wanted too much, hence the paper was suspended for the time. But it will soon be started again, as we have secured a printer at Salisaw, Okla., and it will henceforth be printed there, beginning about November 15, 1911. This will answer the many letters I have received inquiring about it, and also myself. The many letters received from those of like precious faith, inquiring about my health, and the proposals some of them make to help me get my health again, fills my eyes often with tears. There is one sister, the daughter of our late beloved Bro. R. D. Logan, one of the soundest men in the faith I ever knew, was far more than I could accept. She proposed to pay all expenses if I would come to St. Louis and go into a sanitarium there. God bless her in my prayer, but I cannot accept the offer, for it is too much for any one sister or brother to do. I would to God I could find language to express my heartfelt thanks and gratitude for what some of them have already done for me.

When I think of the past when I was heralding forth the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and meeting in public discussion any who might call our teaching in question, writing tracts at my own expense and scattering them here and there, and of the many glorious meetings I held, and of the many baptized, and then think of my present condition, shut in, health broken, and the cause bleeding, I almost sink in despair. O my dear brethren, wake up everywhere. Let the love of God rule in your hearts, and for the sake of the cause try to be united.

I am proud to say that in this part of the country we are a unit. I would love to say more, but for fear this might find its way into the waste basket, I must close. Pray for me, and when you feel like it, write me a line. God bless you all.

T. J. DANIEL.

Magazine, Ark.

THE DEVIL OUTWITTED

Last winter a professor in the University of Berlin published an article in a Berlin paper in which he claimed to prove that no such personage as Jesus of Nazereth ever lived. It attracted attention, and soon a merchant attached a denial of the assertion to his sign. Other shopkeepers took it up and soon the slogan "Jesus Lives" blossomed out all over Berlin. A meeting was called for the following Sunday to be held in the great circus to protest against this attack upon our Lord. When the hour arrived the place was filled packed with a crowd of 10,000 people, while 12,000 more struggled for admittance. Unable to enter this great multitude formed in procession and marched through the streets singing Luther's hymn, "A mighty fortress is our God," and "I know whom I have believed."

—Selected by S. R. Wince.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

More Brains than We Use

Most of us have more brains than we ever use. A man who taxed his muscles as little as a great many people do their brains, would almost be obliged to go about in a wheeled chair. The majority are averse to intellectual effort. They need to be entertained. They believe the same things year after year, and would find it as difficult to change an opinion as an oyster would to take a morning stroll. Intellectual loafing means deterioration of mental forces. Let your brain be idle, and it will be unequal to the slight demands you make upon it. How long has it been since that brain of yours has done any real work? How long is it since you have done any reading which required constant effort for its understanding? How often do you try carrying some problem regarding which you are undecided through to a solution weighing the arguments on both sides, and disregarding those which are not convincing? What is the use of having a brain, if we are not going to use it?

Those who disobey the teachings of the Bible are likely to hate those who press these upon them.

KINGDOM OF GOD

Continued from Page One

not consider his hearers fit subjects for baptism until they believed the things concerning the kingdom of God as well as of Jesus Christ; but here we find a very prominent preacher to others who knows no more about the coming kingdom of God than he does of the stars above us. Could he preach the Gospel of the Kingdom that Jesus said should be preached in all the world for a witness (MATTHEW 24) when he was ignorant of it himself? Nay, verily; and I solemnly say to you fellow mortals, that the modern gospel of going to heaven is another gospel, which is not, is not another, but a perversion of the Gospel of Christ. I observe that the conference is sinworks some of you. But why should you be displeased with it? I have arranged none of God's plans. I report the word of the Savior as found it. I see that the old, old conflict is going on in your mind. One thinks, If I believe the gospel Philip preached, why is that not enough? Another wonders what virtue there is in water? Still another how much better he would be after baptism? First, faith is not sufficient because it is only one of two conditions that are of equal importance. If we were allowed to use an discretion or choice in the matter, some would dispense with faith and some dispense with baptism; so that there could be no conditions at all. Then what a motley crew would possess the kingdom. Who would want the kingdom under these circumstances? Not I: because just as sure as I find something given away without conditions so surely do I find something not worth having. Secondly, there is no virtue in the water. There was no poison in the fruit to kill the Adam, but they died.

Baptism

The Disobedience Dit It

There is no virtue in the water – it is obedience that brings the blessing, even life forevermore. I firmly believe no one from the heart ever believed the gospel of the kingdom of God who refused to obey it by baptism. Thousands who believe the gospel of immortal souls in heaven refuse to be baptised, and I do not blame them. It would not benefit them to be baptized, because they have not believed the gospel. I mean that what they believe as Gospel is not Gospel, for the simple reason that God has never promised it. Multitudes who quibble about baptism have not believed the gospel, but something else. Is not baptism itself a gospel? Do you know any better news than that you can have your sins forgiven, become a child of God, and joint heir with Christ to his kingdom, if we render this obedience to our faith in baptism? Thirdly, as to being

Better After Baptism

Let me divert your attention a moment. That little white yonder loved her betrothed as will be more marriage as afterward, perhaps, but she did not have his name and she had no title to his estate. Had he died worth millions she could not claim a cent. Without a home, and without bread to eat, she pleads her undying affection for the deceased before the probate court: will she acquire any right to his property in that way? You know she will not. I am not saying to you that you do not love Jesus, but through mental or moral obtuseness you are throwing away the grandest privilege ever granted to mortals and withholding the obedience of faith to the gospel that would ensure life forever more. You have not been baptised into the saving name; and therefore have no title to the inheritance. A blind confidence in God is not what is expected of you. You are expected to believe what God promises and not something else. You are expected to obey from the heart that form of doctrine which God has prescribed, and not a substitute of your own devising. But whether you believe and obey him or not, Jesus is coming back to build the tabernacle of David (see Acts xv 16) Can I persuade you to accept an invitation to share that kingdom with him when he comes? Had he not died on your account and made a resurrection it on the dead possible, you never could have been invited. When the grave closed over you, that would have been an eternal farewell to life but for

Christ's Triumph Over Death

Let me entreat you to dwell on it love of that for a moment before we part. Think of him walking over the hills and valleys of Judea telling the people that God's kingdom was coming. Weary and hungry and athirst; a stranger from John the apostle see him healing the sick, cleansing the leper, giving the sight to the blind, and raising the dead, and then lamenting: "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Follow him to Gethsemane; see him bow in agony; hear him say, "Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will but as thou wilt." Follow him as the mob led him to the judgment hall. He is mocked and spit upon and whipped and crowned with thorns. See him nailed to the accursed tree; see him raised up so that every ounce of his weight is a source of pain. Listen! He says, "I thirst;" he is denied a drop of water to moisten his fevered lips. Listen again. He is praying for his murderers, "Father, forgive them they know not what they do." After three drenched hours He says, "It is finished." He is laid in the grave but he does not stay there. He conquer death and comes out of Hades with the key to unlock your tomb, if you will allow him. He is saying to night, "I am the resurrection and the life." And no life no kingdom. Will you accept life in the kingdom to come through him, by faith and obedience? If not, remember, "the wages of sin is death." Rom. vi 23. God help you to secure life before it be too late. Amen.

CHRIST THE SEED OF THE WOMAN.

In reading over the arguments favoring the teaching of the human paternity of Jesus, it seems to me that they are based on an error, a fundamental error, in regard to the being and the working of the eternal God. The idea objected to is more in line with the heathen notion of "God that round hov'r about sits and sip

Deep draughts of nectar, with luxurious life."

Beings that married or co habitated with humans, and that struggled and fought even as they did and sometimes with them. The Hebrew conception is so exceedingly different from anything of this kind that it is difficult to get the two ideas near enough for comparison; but when the true conception of the only and eternal One in whom we all "live, move, and have our being," who is the creator and the force and support of the whole universe, not a God sitting at the far end of creation or outside of it, but the living presence, the soul and spirit of it all—then and not till then, can the Bible doctrine of the relation of the creator, God, and the creature this Christ, be understood.

When this revealed idea is reached we will then be able to comprehend that not only is every living thing the product of the divine power, but we ourselves, even as certain of the Greek poet had said, and the Apostle Paul quoted "We are also his offspring. Now seeing that this eternal being was the source of all our beings, what then is the difference in birth that is signified in the bible between Jesus of Nazareth and the rest of us? Simply this—first, the elimination of the male element; secondly, the reintroduction of a normal human being.

Let us consider the first proposition—"In the beginning was the word," and the word was that the "seed of the woman was to bruise the serpent's head." There was an opportunity right there to have said that the seed of the man was to be selected for that function, but it was not so stated in the bond; neither was it stated that a superhuman or divine person was to bruise the head of the serpent. As we have already noted, there is only one divine person in the whole universe, and his glory will not give to another; but it is so specified particularly and clearly that the eternal promise of the eternal God was by the "seed of the woman."

And we might shut our eyes to the account of the birth of Christ as given in the gospels, and still perceive that the character that he presented to us during his sojourn here, was that of the sweetest and best characteristics of the feminine nature. Then tenderness, the compassion of mother love was the instinct of his nature. There was nothing in him of the masculine swagger of the male animal—he was the full development in male form of all the beautiful and good in the female type. This is best understood by going back historically, as it were, and standing in the world that he stood in; the Roman world. Read Plutarch's lives and realizing the heroic masculinity that obtained in the realm of the Cæsars: Julius, Augustus, Tiberius; then read history and forget from John the apostle who outlived the most of the gentle spirit of the master—no other argument is needed. Now some may think that femininess is weakness. In some respects it is, and doubtless that was one reason for the Father's choice—that his "strength be made perfect in weakness;" but it is a mistake to suppose that the feminine character is all weakness, mother love is not weak. Do you remember that beautiful passage in Christ's discourse, even as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings. Did you ever witness the courage of a brooding hen? We have all doubtless seen the rooster strutting round the yard, and he is no coward in his way. Like his bonger legged "brother in arms" when it comes to fighting one of his own kind, he announces his readiness in the full joy of his little soul; but when the hawk sails overhead, no bush is too thick for his shelter, and no covert too dark! But the brood hen and her chicks in the open; what about her? She is the coward! One of the prettiest fights I ever saw was between a hen turkey and a monster hawk, almost like an eagle. Well, one could hardly say that it was to be seen—there was the swoop out of the sky of the broadwings with the group; there was the leap of the startled mother; there was a turmoil of feathers attached and detached. Then the hawk gathered himself up and got away, seemed glad to get away. And, yet is there anything that looks more foolish and cowardly than a hen turkey? And so also I have seen a frail little woman launch herself between a drunken rough with a loaded revolver and a boy that he was threatening—only a friend's boy too—and she didn't hold up her hands, or her tongue either. Think of a man doing that. Proper male etiquette in such a case would demand clubbing and disarming first, then reasoning after all right too—but we are only speaking of comparative pluck now.

Even in sacred history we have splendid specimens of male—masculine courage. There was Moses when he saw that Egyptian smiting the Hebrew—notice how he hit out! Didn't mean to hit so hard no doubt. There was Samson, too, gentle and loving in his way; one of the "mamma's boys," like Samuel and David; but didn't they strike out though—all get them—but here in the Nazarene we have a new kind of courage that doesn't call down fire from heaven" as Elijah did," the full development of that kind of courage that stayed last at the cross, at I was first at the tomb—the endurance and sacrifice of love. And whenever the witness of the woman's seed has gone just in proportion to the purity of the testimony, so there it will be found that the gentle sex rises from the slavery of barbarism, comes into full companionship and the soothing influence of the softer hand tempers the fierce fervor of strenuous masculinity.

For instance, somewhat over a century ago when men were busy creating iron legislation for the extirpation of crime, casting criminals and unfortunates into the most loathsome dungeons, and hanging boys for stealing a shilling, a little old quaker lady by the name of Mrs. Fry, started the reform in prison management that has altered the whole system of treating prisoners in all nations; even China has at last turned merciful in this respect. Again, while men have been inventing war machinery to cast down fire from heaven on each other, it was a Miss Nightingale that instituted a system for the nursing of the wounded that has resulted in the modern red cross society—also world wide—for the mission of the woman and her seed is to save and not to destroy.

One Sunday last year I happened to be in Woolwich when there was a great mass meeting, an out-of-door rally of all Christian sects and denominations in support of universal "Christian brotherhood." The park where we met was not far from the wall of the vast arsenal of the British Empire that has made the name of Woolwich famous in the wide world. We had a brass band, a fine choir, and the speakers were local celebrities. I listened carefully to hear if any of the speakers would make any reference to the particular murderousness of gunpowder and shot on which the place depends for a living, but I observed that that end of the subject was carefully avoided until the last and best speaker, a woman, who with fine sarcasm and flashing eyes in a few sentences poured the most withering contempt on the whole system of military system represented—over the many a good deal [illegible] way; and even Woolwich applauded and laughed. Thus we see that while the rooster fights with the brood, the hen fights for the brood—and even now in the church one may see the fierce spirit of strutting masculinity, and we all mount on different panels of the same fence and crow, while the women—God help them—try to keep the chicks out of the way of hawk's beaks and cock spurs.

Yes, God's Christ was of the seed of the woman; no argument is required; it only needs observation.

J. F. GELLETY.
Baltimore, Md.

HOPE CONCERNING THE DEAD.

We nail sleep, but not forever. There will be a glorious dawn. We shall meet to part, no never, On the resurrection morn."

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope."—(1 Thess. iv, 13).

The gospel informs us concerning the dead, so that we who have it need not be ignorant. The condition and prospects of the dead, as seen in the gospel, are such as to impart comfort and hope to those whose friends have fallen asleep in Christ.

"God my redeemer lives,
And ever from the skies
Looks down and watches all my dust,
Till He shall bid it rise."

Those who are dead in Christ are to be raised in an improved state, free from all infirmity, sorrow, sickness and death. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory, it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. (1 Cor. xv, 43-44).

Those who shall be alive at the time will be changed. Friends united with friends will see Christ and so shall ever be, with the Lord. How cheerless is the grave, and how dark and starless the night of death, without the hope of the gospel! The gospel triumphs and gloriously dispels doubts and dark shadows. It supports under trials of life with the great promise of a better world.

Ought we not be grateful to our Lord, who has prepared this place for us? This home, this beautiful home where shall dwell only the pure in heart, the meek, the cheerful giver, and the chosen ones of Christ. Think of the great and blessed time when Christ shall come, and we shall meet him face to face, and also our dear ones who were steadfast to the end.

We have many trials in this working-day world, surrounded by sin and sinners. Not even in the kingdom to come. There we shall live a holy life, guarded by our Shepherd and our guide.

As we watch with saddened eyes the departure of our friends and the severing of the bond which holds them to the known world of life and happiness, we know that we still have a hope, and a light shines upon us in our sorrow, and we rejoice.

Think for a moment of those who have no such hope. When they die and return to dust, they have no hope of a share in the resurrection of the just. Think of the glorious time when Christ shall descend from heaven, and shall sound his trumpet, and all his followers shall come forth to meet him. I pray, dear brothers and sisters, that we may all have a share in the resurrection and in that happy day when the sun shall rise to set no more.

"In the bright eternal city.

Death can never, never come;
In his own good time he'll call us
From our rest, to home, sweet home."

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

OBITUARY.

John Baker.

Brother Baker died at his home Dover, Del., on October 6. He was 81 years of age. Was born in Canada, August 10, 1830, where he had many friends and relations. He had been a great sufferer from rheumatism for many years, but bore his affliction with great patience and endurance.

Bro. Baker was a firm believer in the things of "the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," always watching and looking for the return of Christ to establish his kingdom on the mountains of Israel on the throne of David, and rule the world in righteousness.

Bro. Baker was a man [illegible] endurance. His life was a [illegible] kind thoughts, [illegible] many a good deed. He leaves a wife to mourn [illegible] years of age. Sister Baker was always faithful and devoted, attending him through all his suffering with much patience night and day.

J. H. THOMAS.
Wyoming, Del.

Mrs. Albert N. Finney.

Mary E. Stuart, wife of Albert N. Finney, was born in Clinton county, Ind., July 18, 1844, being the youngest in a family of nine children, and fell asleep in the Lord, November 1, 1911, at her home in Michigan township, aged 45 years.

She suffered severely in her last illness, but was not conscious of her condition. Her last sickness was less than two weeks' duration. She realized beforehand that the end was near, but said she was ready, having been initiated into the name of Christ by Bro. Geo. Neill some four years ago. Most of the family in which she was born were and are still members of the body.

She leaves her husband, one daughter, two sisters, Mrs. Rachel Mitchell, of Frankfort, and Mrs. Wm. Brammell, and their families, many relatives and friends, and her brethren in the Lord, to lament the loss of one held in highest esteem for her many and Christian virtues. She was patient, kind and loving in the family, a good housekeeper, industrious despite her years of affliction, and faithful to the high calling of the Father in Christ. Therefore our sorrowing is upborne by the blessed hope. May it soon be realized, when we shall meet no more to part.

The funeral was held at the church of God north of Hillsboro, and interment in the Whiteman cemetery.

Her six nieces, Misses Elsie Brammell, Allie Mitchell and Lena Deford, Mrs. Everett Donnell, Mrs. John Hampton, and Mrs. Joseph Williams acting as pall bearers.

The funeral sermon by the writer.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS.
Frankfort, Ind.

John W. Snoke.

It is with sadness that I report the death of our dear Bro. John W. Snoke, of 118 East Hosey St., South Bend, Ind., October 10, 1911, aged 75 years and four months.

He suffered much for more than a year with internal cancer, and bore his suffering with true Christian patience. About ten years ago, during a meeting held by Bro. Woodward, he made a noble confession of the faith and put on Christ by baptism. Since then he has been an active worker in the church. His fervent prayers and earnest exhortations will be missed by the little band that meet here for worship.

He has been an elder of the church for the past few years, being faithful to his duty. He fully realized that he must go under the power of death, but had full faith that he would be called in the resurrection morning. Blessed hope!"

Bro. H. V. Reed was called to preach the funeral, who set forth in his brilliant way the only hope of future life by a resurrection of the dead. He leaves a devoted wife and five children to mourn his loss; but they mourn not as those that have no hope. May we all so live that we can meet Bro. Snoke in the kingdom of God.

R. C. RAILSBACK.
South Bend, Ind.

INDIANA CONFERENCE REPORT.

The annual Conference was held at Rensselaer, October 5-8, 1911.

The following churches were represented by delegates: Argos, Plymouth, Pleasant View, Hillsburg, Rensselaer and South Bend.

Ministers present were: D. T. Halsted and Joseph Williams, of Indiana; S. J. Lindsay, of Illinois, and E. L. Austin, of Canada.

Reports of churches and ministers were given and are recorded in detail on secretary's book.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports showed that $143.38 had been expended during the year, and that there is a balance of $121.43 in the treasury.

Ministerial certificates were granted to D. T. Halsted, Rensselaer; J. F. Wagoner, Rochester; Joseph Williams, Frankfort; J. H. Willey, San Diego, Cal.; and D. L. Vancaster, Argos.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. M. McCrory Plymouth; First Vice President, O. A. Rowe, Argos; Second Vice President, L. M. Howell, Valparaiso; Secretary, Flora Harris, Rensselaer; Treasurer, R. C. Railsback, South Bend; Bible School Board are [illegible] F. M. McCrory, Dessie McDonald and O. A. Rowe.

On motion of Bro. Halsted a vote of thanks was extended Sister Lydia Railsback, for her services as secretary the past ten years. A vote of thanks was also extended the Rensselaer church for their kind and courteous treatment and entertainment of visitors present.

A motion which was out of harmony with the state constitution as presented and voted on. Although this motion received less than half the votes present it was declared carried. Friends of the constitution think it illegal and can not stand.

Our constitution says in Sections 10 and 11: "This conference adopts The Restitution as its organ," and "this constitution may be revised altered or amended by a two thirds vote of the members present at any regular meeting, notice having previously been given of the proposed change."

LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec
South Bend, Ind.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR OCTOBER.

When I made my last report I was at Tuttle, Colorado, where I continued meeting until October 10th, with fair audience. The county fair being in session detracted from our attendance for two or three nights. There seemed to be considerable interest on the part of some who attended, but not deep enough to make them desire to obey the gospel. We next visited Mesa Zeld where we enjoyed a two days visit with those of like precious faith, speaking for them one night. Bro. McLaughlin took me to Gothenburg where I boarded the train for Grand Island, having promised to spend Sunday, October 15th with the brethren at this point.

While at Grand Island we met Bro. W. L. Crowe, who was visiting his sister. At the request of the brother as well as myself he divided the time on Sunday with me, speaking in the morning on "The Covenants," and in the evening on the "Signs of the Times." His discourses were enjoyed by all. His discourse on the Covenants brought out the facts that we are under the new and not the old Covenant. We spoke in the evening on "Our Pattern."

Arrived at Fort Dodge, Wednesday, [illegible] then went to Color and to Bro. Isaac F[illegible]'s and began meeting at [illegible] point where our dear [illegible] never been preached. [illegible] we had a most attentive as well as a large audience each night. The verdict seems to be "those soul sleepers are not like we thought they were." Now here we leave you for the present, having preached 12 sermons, and expect to continue over Sunday, November 5. Then leave for Minnesota near Worthington, another place where our doctrines have never been preached. Expenses and receipts for the month are as follows:

Expense.

Fare Stratter Col. to Moore field, Neb.	$ 6.17
Supper, Norton, Kan.	.25
Hotel Oxford, Neb.	1.00
Gothenburg to G. Island	2.04
Dinner Gothenburg	.25
G. Island to Ft. Dodge	5.93
Supper, Omaha	.50
Ft. Dodge to Colo.	1.43
Total	$17.87

Receipts.

J. J. Pugh	$2.00
G. A. Root	2.00
A. M. Jones	5.00
Total	$9.00
On hand October 1st	$19.86
	$28.86
Less Expense	$17.87
Balance on hand Nov. 1st.	$10.99

Work.

Days worked	27
Sermons preached	25
Tuttle, Colorado	10
Moorefield, Neb.	1
Grand Island, Neb.	1
Iowa Center, Ia.	12
Wolfe, Ia.	3

Stormed two nights.

O. J. ALLARD
Ft. Dodge, Ia.

A Symptom of Our Condition

Only a starved soul sees the worst side of people. If we find ourselves constantly noting the unworthiness of people we meet, we may well take alarm—not over their condition, but over our own. We need to remember that "the ability to recognize nobleness in others indicates a measure of nobleness in one's self;" and if there seems to be very little nobleness in the world, it is a bad symptom of our own condition.

MANAGER'S COLUMN

The census started a week or so ago is progressing in fairly good shape. A number of those sending their blanks have included a list of other brethren whom they thought might not have seen the blank. As stated before, this census is going to do a world of good if it is at all complete. But it will produce comparatively small results unless it IS complete. There is no valid reason why every brother and sister should not send in their names; it will take but a minute of your time, and there is absolutely no expense connected with it other than the postage. Now, brethren, please cooperate in this work. If you are a member of the church body see to it that your secretary sends in a list of names of all your members.

Already one case where we can do some good has come to light by the means of this census, and doubtless many more of a like nature will result. When you have finished reading this request sit down and fill out the blank before you forget it.

About six weeks ago a notice was mailed to each subscriber whose subscription was past due, giving the amount due the company, and asking that the amount be paid as soon as possible. Our mailing list contains a good many names of subscribers who are unable to pay for their own subscriptions, and when we assumed the management of the paper we were unable to tell which names these were. In sending the above letter we asked those who were unable to pay for their paper to notify us and we would arrange to take care of them by means of the helping fund. A good many responded by either sending in the amount due or notifying us that they could not do so; but there are several hundred who have not replied at all. We can not balance our books until we find out just how much of the outstanding indebtedness can be collected. We do not want those who can not pay for their paper to take offense at our efforts to straighten up this matter. You are perfectly welcome to the paper if you can not pay, but just notify us if you can not. If you can pay you should not neglect it. We have some five or six hundred dollars due us right now which we could use to good advantage if we could collect it. You don't want to be reminded that you are past due and we don't want to have to remind you, so let's do away with the necessity.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the brethren scattered abroad:

Our Heavenly Father has now placed me in such a position that I can give four or five months of the year to helping the churches at no money expense to them, unless may railway fare is paid, and that I will pay myself for moderate distances if those who invite me cannot afford to pay it. I have been preaching the gospel for many years. I also am a hygienic physician; also a graduate of phrenology, and have lectured much on these subjects. Any church wishing my services may address,

DR. WALLACE MASON,
Solina, Ont., Canada.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls. Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents. or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 30 for 25 cents. 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

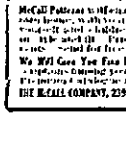
THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rolfe, 124 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 67 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns



McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and furs. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only One a year, including a free Pattern. Sold by the trade or sent for 10 consecutive copies.

McCall Patterns will be found to be the most reliable in every respect; will fit perfect; require less cloth; have the most desirable styles and are the most economical. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send 2c. for free illustrated circular and full particulars.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

80 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"U. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolatedbrethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co

Walter Tomlinson 11
10935 Orville ave

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nation (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-54); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 3-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER 14, 1911. No. 43

THE SAVIOUR'S CALL.

O'er the distant hills resounding
Lo! Angelic voices sound;
All the earth and highest heaven
Are in joyous fetters bound.

Faintly on the air is winging
Breath of joy and peace, good will;
'Tis the Saviour, 'tis the Saviour
Calling, gently calling, still.

Louder grows that voice so sweet—
'Tis the Saviour's welcome calling,
He is bringing as He promised
Peace on earth, good will to all.

Art thou ready, O my brother?
Every one who loves the Lord;
Have ye hearkened to his warning,
Have ye listened to His word?

Linger now, no longer, dear one,
Christ alone can save:
He in might and power and glory,
Can redeem thee from the grave.

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

RELIGION CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between The Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

V.—How Matters Stood in the Second Century.

When the Christians increased in numbers and spread all over the Roman empire, the heathen began to understand who and what manner of people they were; but at first they were confounded with the Jews, and looked upon as a mere sect of that people. The Jewish religion was not only tolerated by the Roman government, but they were permitted freely everywhere to perform their worship, because, according to the policy of the Romans, all conquered nations were freely permitted to worship their own gods; and for a long time at first the Christians principally suffered by the persecution of the Jews, until through their great activity and the rapid increase of their numbers, they were recognized as a distinct people. At this early stage we have the incident recorded in the New Testament that Claudius commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome (Acts xviii. 2). The reason for this expulsion is given by Suetonius, a Roman writer. He says: "The emperor Claudius expelled the Jews from Rome, who were constantly raising disturbances at the instigation of Christus." He, in his ignorance of the real facts, thought that Christ was in Rome causing the disturbances. Claudius was poisoned by one of his wives, Agrippina, the mother of Nero, who succeeded him in the year 54. In the reign of Nero the Christians were well known to be a separate people; hence his persecution of them to divert the odium from himself, as it was generally believed that he had fired the city.

In the beginning of the second century many of the heathen writers understood much concerning the Christians and, to them, their most extraordinary belief, and they vigorously denounced it and them. Among the earliest and ablest of these opponents of the Christians was Celsus, who wrote Logos Alethes (the True Word); the book itself is lost, but considerable portions of it are preserved by Origen, who wrote in reply to it. The following is from a translation by John Patrick, B. D., minister of Grenside Parish, Edinburgh. Celsus says: "The Christians were worshipers of Jesus, who had appeared but a few years before, whom they believed to be the son of God. His disciples regarded Him as a Savior, the son of the Most High." He says: "In books which were written by His disciples it was declared that He was conceived by the Spirit of God in the womb of a Jewish woman, a virgin though poor, was held to be of royal descent. The suspicions of her husband, who was a carpenter, were dispelled by the visit of an angel. At His birth Chaldeans came from the East under divine inspiration, and by their questioning excited the suspicion of Herod, who, in alarm, slew all the children that had been born at the same time. By the visit of another angel, His kindred were warned, and fled with Him to Egypt. He returned from Egypt, wrought as a carpenter, was called the Nazarene. At his baptism it was averred, on His own authority and that of one who was punished along with Him, that the spirit appeared in the form of a dove, and that a voice from heaven was heard adopting Him as the son of God. It was alleged that He healed the blind and the lame, multiplied loaves, and raised the dead. Accompanied by ten or eleven publicans and sailors, He went up and down the country, living meanly, preaching everywhere. He spoke with authority, and in opposition to the religious belief of the age. He spoke of the kingdom of heaven, giving prominence to the virtues of humility and faith, to the doctrines of the resurrection of the dead and a judgment to come. He predicted that He would suffer and die and rise again, that one disciple would betray Him, and another deny Him. He ate and drank with His disciples on the eve of His sufferings. He prayed passionately that the cup would pass from Him. He was taken prisoner, and treated with ignominy before His judges. They put on Him in mockery a crown of thorns and in His hand a reed; He was crucified. On the cross He thirsted. As He expired, He cried out with a loud voice; and earthquake and thick darkness emphasized the catastrophe. He was buried, but He rose again. Angels of God rolled away the stone, and He came forth, showing Himself first to a frenzied woman and afterwards to the disciples, to whom He displayed his pierced hands. To others than the disciples He did not show Himself. The Christians proclaimed in His words that He would return again with heavenly power."

Celsus says: "They (the Christians) have another folly. They suppose that when God, like a cook, brings fire, all the rest of the race will be burned, and that they alone will remain; and that those of them who have been long dead will rise in their flesh from the earth; a hope fit for worms! For what soul of man would long for a rotten body? I am aware that some of you Christians regard this doctrine as impure and impossible. For what body utterly corrupted could regain its original nature and the pristine constitution out of which it was dissolved? With God all things are possible' is their absurd refuge. But God cannot do what is disgraceful, nor does He will what is contrary to nature. He will not carry out our sinful inclinations. He is not author of disorder, but of a nature governed by rectitude and justice. He could bestow eternal life upon the soul; but dead bodies, as Heraclitus says, are cast out as worse than dung. To speak of the flesh as eternal is contrary to reason, and therefore God will not and can not make it so. For He is the reason of all things that are, and He cannot do anything contrary to reason or contrary to himself.

"I know that some hold the Creator—the God of the Jews—to be different from, and opposed to the God from whom Jesus came. In truth their divisions are endless. They have 'carnal' men and 'spiritual' men. Some who call themselves Christians wish to live in all things as Jews. There are among them Sibyllists and Simonians, Marcellians, Harpocratians, disciples who call themselves after Mariamne and Martha, and Marcionites. Some of them wallow about in gross darkness, most profane that they worship Antinous. Some of them are called 'mysteries' some 'enigmas,' some 'signs.' They utter unspeakable blasphemies against one another, and so bitter is their mutual hatred that they would not yield one jot for the sake of concord. But notwithstanding all their divisions and abusive controversies you may hear them all saying. The world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. You contend even unto death rather than forswear your teaching. Your obstinacy does not exempt you from being classed with robbers, who are justly punished for their crimes. How ridiculous to cherish the desire and hope that your body will rise again, as if it were so very precious, and yet cause it to be punished as if it were worthless. It is not worth while to discourse with men who believe this, so closely attached with the body, so boorish and impure. I speak to those who hope that the soul or understanding (whatever name you may employ to designate its nature or origin) will enjoy eternal life with God."

Celsus would have been quite satisfied with many of the modern Christians who believe that the soul or spirit goes to heaven at death and enjoys eternal bliss there, but those "boorish and impure" early Christians who held to the doctrine of a literal resurrection of the dead, and no life or happiness till then, were considered to be beneath his notice. The modern Christians are innumerable who still profess to be followers of Jesus Christ who taught that He was the resurrection and the life. This, according to Celsus, was "a hope fit for worms." "For what soul of man would long for a rotten body?" He could not comprehend that at the resurrection these bodies would be fashioned like His own glorious body.

But there were some even in his day professed to be Christians, and who had at the same time adopted some of the heathen philosophy which led to the many divisions he speaks of and many more after his day, for he says: "I am aware that some of you Christians regard this doctrine as impure and impossible." We have many of the legitimate descendants of that class of Christians at the present time who have adopted the world's philosophy, but there were also very many, as we have seen in Pliny's letter, who were ready to die or suffer the most cruel tortures for this so-called degraded belief—life only through Christ by a resurrection from the grave. Arrian a Stoic, who lived in the early part of the second century, wrote: "Whether by the reason giving an insight into the laws which govern the universe, it might not be possible to attain to the same intrepidity in the presence of death which the Galilæans gained by habit and a mad fanaticism."

Edward H. Hall, in his work Papias and his Contemporaries, says: "At that time, it must be remembered, there could be no genuine heresy, for there was no established faith. No councils had yet rendered their decisions. There was no Christian church. Churches there were, scattered through Asia Minor, Palestine, Greece, Rome, Africa and Gaul; but no church; no one organization including them all; no single head, no full consciousness of unity. We are witnessing in those very struggles and the dissensions which they reveal, the first motives for a compact union. The sense of unity, however feeble, is beginning to assert itself, though writers differ as to the tests to be applied. Before many years there will plainly be some established tribunal before which all teachers of novel or false doctrine must appear and give account of themselves. But meantime all doctrines have their chance. Fortunately these great questions could not be decided in a moment, and the world's philosophy had got well inside the church before the gates were closed." He should rather have said the "world's philosophy took possession of the church and shut the gates against the early faith," as we will see they did. In the meantime, in the early part of the second century, the great majority of the early Christians remained unspoiled by the world's philosophy.

In what is believed to be the earliest philosophy published, generally called the Second Epistle of Clement of Rome, but which probably belongs to some one else and to a somewhat later date, as the so-called First Epistle of Clement was written from the church of Rome to the church at Corinth probably about the year 95 or 96; but this sermon, it is believed by critics, was written some time early in the second century. It contains this strong testimony to the early faith: "And let not any one among you say that this very flesh is not judged neither raised up. Consider—in what were ye saved, in what did ye look up, if not whilst in the flesh? We must therefore keep our flesh as the temple of God; for in like manner as ye were called in the flesh, ye shall also come to judgment in the flesh. Our one Lord Jesus Christ who has saved us was made flesh, and so called us. Even so we also shall in this flesh receive the reward. Let us therefore love one another, that we may attain unto the kingdom of God. . . . . Wherefore let us every hour expect the kingdom of God in love and righteousness, because we know not the day of God's appearing."

There is none of the world's philosophy in this, but the true ring of the faith of the apostolic age. "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (1 Cor. i. 20, 21).

A. WALLACE MASON.
Toronto, Canada.

"FEAR NOT, O LAND!"

"Fear not, O Land; be Glad and Rejoice, for the Lord Will Do Great Things.

"Fear Not ye Beasts of the Field."

"Be Glad Then ye Children of Zion and Rejoice in the Lord Your God."

Who that loves the Lord and hopes in his mercy does not take comfort in reading these words of Joel, so evidently applying to the future? Beginning with the plague of the locusts in their four different stages, as palmer-worms, canker-worms, caterpillars and full grown insects, and with the nation "strong and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion."—Babylon of course—he carries us past the Mohammedan war of the 9th chapter of Revelations, and on down to the gathering of the hosts of God in the valley of Jehoshaphat, and to the coming and reign of Messiah our king.

Through long ages the land, the beasts, the children of Zion have been in fear, not only from the locust in its four different forms, but from the consuming, licking, swarming, gnawing nations, that these insects prefigure—four in order of development, but one, as to religion and hostility to God as shown by the great image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream. But a time is near at hand when they shall fear no more; "shall never be ashamed," or, giving a better rendering, shall no longer endure the reproach of the heathen, or, better still, shall not bear the shame of disappointed hopes, in desolate garners, broken down barns and groaning beasts, because of pastures, trees and vines burned up by incendiary fires.

The Babylonian, the unnamed Persian, the Grecian, the Roman, the Arab, and Saracen, the Turk, have had their day in eating off the meat offering and drink offering from the house of the Lord, and in causing joy to wither away from the sons of men. They may round themselves up with the multitudes that are to gather in the valley of decision, but that will be the end.

And how graphically Joel pictures the closing scenes of that terrible day of the Lord, the like of which hath never been; the invaders there, running upon the walls, climbing upon the houses, and entering the very windows like thieves; everything set on fire as they go, the earth quaking, the sun, moon and stars darkened; the alarm sounded in God's holy mountain, the trumpet blown for war.

Would not we tremble? Would not we be pained? Would not our faces gather blackness, before an invading army that nothing can escape? We could not help but fear. But it is the Lord himself that has gathered all nations against the restored captives of Judah and Jerusalem. Tyre and Zidon and all the coasts of Palestine are now to get their recompense for taking the silver and the gold and the pleasant things of the Lord into their temples, and for selling and scattering his people. The Russian bear will not be alone in his punishment, but even the present inhabitants of the Holy Land, so barbarously cruel in their treatment of the colonized Jews, will have to take their share.

But how is poor Judah to stand in that great and terrible day? How is she to stand before this his army? This his very great camp? By turning to him with all their heart with fasting, with weeping and with mourning. The trumpet is to be blown again, the people gathered, the congregation sanctified. The old, the little children, the infants, the bridegroom and the bride must all be there. The Lord is to be the refuge of his people, for the priests, his ministers, weeping between the porch and the altar, upon which they can lay no offering—are to cry:

"Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them, wherefore should they say among the people, where is their God?"

It is a national humiliation and repentance, a national prayer, such a prayer as perhaps, has never gone up to the heaven's before. And the Lord answers, being jealous for his land and having pity for his people.

Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith, and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen.

And I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate (Arabia, Deserta, Jamieson, Fausset and Brown say) with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the uttermost sea, and his stink and his ill savor shall come up (as per Ezekiel 39:11), because he hath done great things. (Joel supplementing Ezekiel, in telling us that the remnant of the Russian army will be driven out of the land of Canaan).

Fear not, O land! for Gog cannot conquer!

Be glad and rejoice for the Lord will do great things.

Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field, for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do give their strength.

Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God, for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain; the former and the latter rain in the first month.

And the floor shall be full of wheat, and the vats shall overflow with wine and oil.

And, as if this were not enough, he says, "and I will restore to you the years that the locust has eaten." Can we take in the meaning of that sentence? That all, all that those hungry locust-hordes of the gold, silver, brass and iron empires have eaten or destroyed will be given back to God's people in the Restitution Age?

And ye shall eat and be satisfied, and praise the name of the Lord your God that hath dealt wonderfully with you.

For the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. Saved from the paws of that mighty northern bear by his interposition they will know that he is the Lord their God dwelling in Zion.

Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and no strangers shall pass thru her (to attack her) any more. Judah shall dwell forever and Jerusalem from generation to generation.

We too of the household of faith have a share in that holy land, and rejoice with exceeding joy because the time for the fulfillment of the Lord's promises through his prophet Joel, is hastening on, and that sometime amidst all that terrible turmoil of war, and of weeping, fasting and mourning, among the restored Jews, the king, our king will come and we be saved with an everlasting salvation.

Watch, O ye faithful ones, and be ready, putting away all that is wrong in your lives, being careful to keep the unity of the faith in the bonds of peace. I pray most earnestly for you.

S. ROXANA WINCE.
Pierceton, Ind.

SLAP HIM ON THE BACK.

If you should meet a fellow-man with trouble's dag unfurled,
An' lookin' like he didn't have a friend in all the world,
Go up and slap him on the back,
and holler,
"How d' you do?"
And grasp his hand so warm he'll know he has a friend in you.

Then ask what's hurtin' him, and laugh his cares away.
And tell him that the darkest night is just before the day.
Don't talk in graveyard palaver,
but say it right out loud
That God will sprinkle sunshine in the trail of every cloud.

This world at best is but a hash of pleasure and of pain—
Some days are bright and sunny, and some all splashed with rain
And that's just how it ought to be for when the clouds roll by We'll know just how to 'preciate
the bright and smiling sky.

So learn to take it as it comes,
and don't sweat at the pores
Because the Lord's opinion doesn't coincide with yours;
But always keep rememberin',
when cares your path enshroud,
That God has lots of sunshine to spill behind the cloud.

"A word in season" may save a life from wreck, and inspire a life of heroism for God, truth and righteousness, and result in the uplifting of multitudes to immortality and glory. A sentiment has overthrown thrones and revolutionized nations. Every word spoken has its influence for good or evil; although apparently causing but a ripple in the ocean of time, yet it spreads until its circumference is bounded only by infinity. Let your words be as the "orange of gold in its framework of silver"—blossom and perfume and fragrance, delightsome to sight and senses. Withhold not your words of hope and cheer and comfort. The tears of the sorrowing Marys are helpful to the crucified sufferers. The tenderness of "the weaker vessel" often imparts strength to the strong man in his moments of weakness and despondency, and refreshes him and sends him forth as a giant with renewed strength.—The Messenger.

Manager's Column

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Laag, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Nov. 14, 1911

EDITORIAL

Will readers who have pledged to the Evangelistic Fund in Ohio for this year, please send their payments promptly to the treasurer, Brother Heacock, of Canton, Ohio. This notice appears in editorial form by request.

Our paper is so good this week we cannot single out any part of it as "special." However, we ask the reader to note the addition to our heading on the first page—"Founded in 1852." Bro. Wilson's letter published under [illegible] interest.

[illegible] very gratifying to notice [illegible] among the original contributors to The Restitution when this name was assumed in 1871, the following dear ones still survive and are still writers for its pages: J. F. Wagoner and S. Roxana Wince. My brother and sister, your service for the master has been arduous and long; but God will not forget you when the pay day comes. The Lord speed its coming!

A RUSSELLITE TANGLE.

In Dawn, Vol. 1, page 249, Mr. Russell teaches that the kingdom of God will be established in power at the return of Christ. He says: "Not until his second advent will Christ take the kingdom, the power, and the glory, and reign Lord of all." Vol. 1, pp. 283, 284, he says again: "Thus the parable of the young nobleman going into a far country to receive a kingdom and to return etc., (Lk. 19:11-15), clearly locates the establishment of the kingdom at the return of Christ." When Christ comes, then and there the kingdom of God will come in power and glory, for these are, in Scripture, coincidental events. To this Mr. Russell agrees.

See now into what a tangle the admission of this truth leads him. We quote again from his Dawn, vol. 2, page 196: "Calculate and you will see that these two lines of evidence which so perfectly unite in the testimony that 1875 (beginning October 1874), is the date of the beginning of the times of restitutions, and the date, therefore, from which we may know that the heavens no longer contain our Lord." He repeats himself thus in vol. 2, page 211: "The date of our Lord's second coming and the dawn of the times of restitution, we have already shown to be A. D. 1874." And again: "Thus we found the time of our Lord's second advent clearly proven to be 1874, in October of that year." Vol. 3, p. 127. Dawnist theology, a hopeless tangle, is that Christ came in his power and kingdom in 1874. Thus we have had the kingdom in all its power for thirty-seven years, but no one knows where it is, or what it is! Yet this hodgepodge of Russellism is a sweet morsel to many. Some people certainly like to be hoodwinked and humbugged.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—Salutation of the seven churches is destructive of the personality of the Holy Spirit.

Text:—"Grace be unto you, and peace from him which is XXX and from the seven spirits XXX and from Jesus Christ." Rev. 1:4-5.

1. Trinitarian Interpretation stated.—I. "Grace and peace" usually imply superiority; always personality. II. Angels, Rev. 22: 8, 9. III. Holy Spirit.

II. The spirit of God is not a person, but the power of a person. I. Called "he" in parabolic language owing to the exigencies of grammar. No person: if so the Holy Spirit is the only being in the universe without a name?! Jno. 14:16, 17; 16:13-25; 1 Pet. 1:11; Rom. 8:26.

II. It is the power of God. 1 Cor. 2:9-13; Lk. 24:49; Acts 1:8; 2: Mi. 3:8; Jno. 15:26. III. Power of animals—charming power of serpents. IV. Power of man—mesmerism, hypnotism, etc. Gen. 1:26. V. Power of God. 1 Cor. 12:13; Jno. 15:26. VII. Pouring," a metaphor frequently applied to the spirit is destructive of its personality. Isa. 42:1; Job. 2:28; Acts 10:38, 45; Isa. 63:11.

III. Before his throne, v. 4.—I. Nowhere are we taught in the Bible to love, pray to or worship the holy spirit. "Before"—not on—"his throne!" V. 4; 4:5; 7:9, 15; 8:2; 11:4, 16; 12:10; 14:3; 20:12.

IV. The Apocalyptic salutation explained by comparison with the greetings in the Apostolic Epistles.—I. Twelve in all: the holy spirit is not so much as mentioned in one of them! 1 Cor. 1:3; Rom. 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:3; 2 Cor. 1:2; Gal. 1:3; Eph. 1:2; Phil. 1:2; Col. 1:2; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:2; 1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2; Philemon 3.

The article "the" never stands before a name. We do not say the Jesus, the Paul, the James, etc.; nor could we say "the holy spirit" if it were a name.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Church of God Interpretation Called in Question

Question 23.—If a day is given for a year in Numb. xiv. 34, and Ezek. iv. 5, what reason have you for understanding a day for a year in Dan. vii. 25; viii. 14; xii. 7, 11, 12; Rev. x. 3; xi. 14; xiii. 5; and why not apply the year-day principle to Dan. iv. 16; Ezek. xxxix. 12; Jer. xxix. 10; Isaiah xxxviii. 5; Numb. xiv. 33; Gen. vii. 4; xv. 13; Matt. xii. 10; Jno. ii. 19; and several others which are all prophetic times?

Answer.—Our correspondent's emphasis on "prophetic times" in the last sentence would indicate that he supposes the theory assailed claims for all prophetic times the year-day principle of computation. This is a mistake. There is literal prophecy and symbolic prophecy, and therefore literal prophetic time and symbolic prophetic time. The first class is represented by his last string of references, in which political and other events are predicted, or made the subject of discourse in plain language, and in which, therefore, the time is also stated plainly. The specification of time on the symbolic principle would be out of place and meaningless in connection with literal events. The second class is illustrated in his first series of references, where powers are represented by beasts and horns; and events indicated by the movement of one symbol towards another, such as a goat trampling a ram, and having his large horn broken, etc.

To the question, why the year-day principle is to be applied in those cases, there are several answers.

1. The fitness of things requires it. When events affecting millions of people, and extending over vast geographical areas, are condensed into small symbolic objects, such as a ram, a horn, etc., it is necessary that the times be also condensed, so as to agree with the symbol that is the subject of the time.

2.—The scale of the events symbolized, as interpreted to the prophet, shows that the days were not literal days. Thus the vision of the ram and the goat (Dan. viii.) is explained (v. 20) to represent the career of the Persian and Grecian empires, and the political results ensuing on the dismemberment of Greece, including the development of the Roman empire, its destruction of the Jewish commonwealth, and the ultimate outpouring of retribution on the adversaries of Israel. Daniel is told, the vision shall be "for many days."—(26). In answer to the question, "How long shall be the vision, etc.?" the specific answer was communicated to him, "Unto 2 thousand three hundred, (Septuagint—four hundred) days." If this was a literal period, why was it expressed in days in stead of the literal time—six years and seven months. No one, speaking literally, recognizes days except as fractions of a year. The absurdity of understanding this as literal days (less than seven years), is evident at a glance. The first event in the vision alone, viz., the development of the Persian empire, occupied two hundred years; the second, the career of Greece from the days of Alexander, other two hundred years, and the career of Rome to the downfall of Jerusalem, more than a hundred years more.

3.—The clues supplied in the Scriptures themselves. These are referred to in the first two lines of Question 23: Ezek. iv. 5 shows that it is a divine method, when time has to symbolize, to use a day to represent a year. The prophecy of the seventy weeks (Dan. ix.) shows that this is the method adopted in the visions communicated to Daniel. The prophecy declared the appointment of 490 days to run from the issue of the Persian edict to "restore and build Jerusalem," to the appearance and death of the Messiah. Had literal days been intended, the Messiah must have appeared B. C. 452, or two years after the edict. But he was not "cut off" till 490 years after, which shows that though not expressed, seventy weeks (7 by 70—490 days) was intended to express a literal period of 490 years, on the principle of a day for a year. To this, it has been objected that the "seventy weeks" are "seventy-sevens," or heptads, simply, and not weeks, and may be 77's of anything. That this is a mere device to get out of a difficulty, will be evident from the following considerations: The words translated "weeks" (shavuoung) is the only word employed in Hebrew to express a literal week. The following are examples:—1, Daniel, was mourning three full weeks;" "till three whole [illegible] x. 2-3.) "Seven weeks [illegible] number," etc.—(Deut. xvi. [illegible] will also be found in the following: Gen. xxix. 27, 28; Exod. xxxiv. 22; Lev. xii. 5; Numb. xxviii. 26; Deut. vi. 10; 2 Chron. xiii. 12; Jer. v. 24; Ezek. xlv. 21 (translated seven days). In no other text is the word employed. It is never used to represent seven in the abstract. It is derived from the same root as the adjective numeral, shivgah, seven, because expressive of a period of seven days, but it is never employed to express the idea of seven in any other connection than that of the common week of seven days. It is therefore a quibble, and nothing else, to say that Daniel's seventy weeks are only seventy sevens, which may be sevens of years as well as days. This is the more evident when it is considered that those who urge the objection, are those who contend that the times are all plain and literal. If their theory is right, why was 490 years expressed in so equivocal a form as "seventy sevens" (using their suggestion for a moment for the sake of argument); why not "490 years," as in the historical part of the world? —1 Kings vi. 1.) Why "seventy-sevens," which express no definite time whatever? Why use measurement of "seven" at all and why use the word always translated week elsewhere? Upon their principle, there is no answer to these questions, but on the opposite principles, there is no difficulty. "Seventy weeks" is the symbolic equivalent of 490 years, on the principle communicated to Ezekiel (chap. iv. 6), that symbolic time is measured on the principle of a day for a year. The chronology of Daniel's fourth beast (Dan. vi. 25), proves the same conclusion. The division of the Roman empire, symbolized by the appearance of ten horns on the head of the fourth beast, occurred in the fifth century. The appearance of a power answering to the eleventh horn, with eyes and mouth—overseeing (bishopizing) and dictating to the rest—speaking words of blasphemy, and exercising authority in the matter of time and laws, was an event of the following century, in the rise of Papacy. That is over [illegible] centuries ago. Now this [illegible] horn was to prevail "time, [illegible] and dividing of time," or a [illegible] of 1260 days were these [illegible] days or year-days? History decided it, for the Papacy has lasted 1260 years. If they had been literal days, the little-horn power would not have cursed Europe time, times, and a half of years. Again Daniel was told that he should "stand in his lot at the end of the days" (Dan. xii. 11-12), the 1290 days of the complete desolation to ensue upon the scattering of the power of the holy people, commencing in the sixth century, when the Holy Land was laid in final desolation by Persia, simultaneously with the setting-up of the Papal abomination by imperial decree. If these were literal days, Daniel should have been raised more than 1200 years ago, and made to possess or stand in his lot or inheritance in the kingdom all that while ago. But the lapse of more than 1,200 year-days, since the double event specified in the prophecy, without the kingdom being established, shows that they were not literal, but day for a year. Jesus recognizes an appointed lapse of time to be accomplished in the desolation of Jerusalem. He said he should be trodden down of the Gentiles, "till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Now the only "times" on record, in relation to Gentile triumph over Israel, are those mentioned in Daniel. If they were literal days, and were supposed to commence with the down-treading of Jerusalem, they must all have run out before the death of the apostle John. If it is contended that these day-periods are literal and lie still in the future, relating to events to occur in connection with the advent of Christ, the question suggests itself, What was the object in revealing them? They were, without doubt, communicated for a purpose; but if they relate to the last year or two before the coming of the Lord, and there is no means of knowing in what age of the world the coming of the Lord is to be, it is impossible to see any purpose or use in them whatever. Further, even supposing it could be shown they were of use, their usefulness would be confined to the few living at the second coming. On the year-day principle, they are of great service in enabling the servants of God to determine their whereabouts in the great program of his purpose. True, they were not comprehended in their exactness by Daniel, or by the generality of believers in the first century. There was, doubtless, a special providence in this—it was declared that the vision would be "shut up and sealed," (Dan. xii. 9,) till the time of the end. It would have had a discouraging effect on the minds of the ancient servants of God, to have known that their salvation was so remote. It would have wearied them to look so far forward. There was, therefore, a need to seal the book from their understanding; yet it was necessary to reveal enough to enlighten those who should be contemporary with the end. This was done by communicating the information in a form that needed the key of accomplished history to unlock it. The events of the past explain the visions, and show us—especially in the light of the further light vouchsafed by Jesus to his servants in the Apocalypse—that the days were year-days, and that we are now living in the time of the end.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Brother Huggins:

The first number of The Restitution was issued January 4th, 1871. It was a continuation of all the periodicals I had published previously, and was therefore numbered Vol. XIX., No. 1. The volume immediately preceding this was named "The Herald of the Coming Kingdom and Christian Instructor." This was issued semi-monthly, 24 pages. I concluded that the name was too long, and having decided to issue weekly, concluded to shorten the name. This decision was reached after consultation with brethren Reed and Stephenson. The subheading read as follows: "The Restitution is issued every Thursday afternoon, 191 Dearborn street, Chicago. Thomas Wilson, editor: J. M. Stephenson, H. V. Reed, B. Wilson, Corresponding Editors." Under this was a statement of the things it advocated, beginning as follows: "The Restitution advocates the final restoration of all things," etc., the same was continued in the paper for years afterwards, barring a few words added.

As you were not with us in that early day it may be of interest to you a few more particulars regarding the first number of the paper, seeing that you have come to wear the editorial mantle in these latter days of the paper's existence.

I will give you a few items that will be of interest to what few of the "old hands" there are remaining. I know there are some, but many are "sleeping." The first number of The Restitution was made up as follows:

First page:—First article, two columns by Mrs. H. V. Reed, entitled, "The Mission of Christ." A two column article by Mrs. J. M. Stephenson, entitled "An Open Bible, or Truth Progressive." A two column article by "Z" entitled, "Patience." Page 2, Editorial. 1. Change of Name. 2. Our Plan in Relation to Correspondents. 3. What the Brethren think of our New Enterprise. 4. The Times We Live in and Our Duty. 5. New Features, Corresponding Editor's Department: Two columns by J. M. Stephenson entitled, "The Present Crisis." One column article by H.V. Reed, on "What is Religion," and Third page, a two column article by B. Wilson entitled, "The Times of Restitution." Communications—One column on "War and Peace," by John L. Wince; one column by Mack Allen on "Without Faith it is Impossible to please God;" one column by F. Cowghill on "The Judgment Shall Set;" one column advertising books and tracts. Fourth Page—Communicated, "The Saint's Rest," by Asa W. Button, three columns; "Be Ye Also Ready," by H. B. Pierce, one-half column. "The Office and and Work of the Spirit—What is it?" by J. Hatch, one-half column. Department For Your Health—"On Sleep." Department for Children, by Mrs. T. Wilson—"Quick Temper." "Our Father." "A Word to Boys." Poetry—Original. "Heart Longings," by Maggie G. Abdill.

I would add a few more names of correspondents besides those already named:—E. Miller, G. B. Stacy, M. J. Lewis, Joel Simonds, L. H. Chase, B. W. Woodward, J. F. Wagoner, Lewis Hicklin, Newell Bond, B. Sweet, J. F. Wilcox, S. Roxana Wince, A. C. Jones, Wiley Jones and others.

I note with pleasure the improvement you made in the make-up of the paper recently. It looks more like the first issue than it has for a long time—that is, the matter is all solid instead of leaded, and the general appearance is much better than it was. Hoping that you may be blessed in the arduous labors you have undertaken, I am,

Your brother in Christ,
THOS. WILSON.

Oakland, Cal.

In a late "Restitution" there was an article under the caption of "Faith and Works Must Stand or Fall Together," by Alta King. This article, if studied, was worth the year's subscription. Two articles from the pen of Sister Russell were worth another year's subscription; so you are already paid for two years. I mention these because of the worth of the articles and because the writers are young people. We hope they will write often for the paper. Bro. Wilson has the faculty of saying some good things always, which makes his articles interesting. How many, I wonder, are studying Bro. Huggins' sermon notes? Yes, I think most all have read them: but have you studied them? And tried to study out what he said? Here is a chance to study, and if you can't get in every instance what is suggested probably Bro. Huggins would help you some, if asked. Are you praying with your face towards Jerusalem? Italy may succeed in taking Tripoli, and if not Turkey will be greatly weakened: and in either event, the Euphrates will have dried up a little more. Then how long till her complete evaporation? Let us watch. Be faithful; the reward is not far away.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Omaha, Neb.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

"Not Peace But a Sword"

The poetry that was part of Christ's nature made him express himself, very often in language that was primarily symbolic, and this has given rise to many misconceptions concerning His mission and His meaning. Christ is as much the avenger of wrongs as he is the healer of wounds. It is true that in one of his discourses he gave birth to the magic phrase—"Blessed are the peacemakers," but it is also true that in another place he said—"Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you nay." Taken literally those two passages read like a distinct contradiction the one of the other, but when we accept the poetic character of Christ we realize that He was, on each occasion, trying to touch the imagination of a peculiarly unimaginative people. Christ was too intensely human, as well as divine, to be merely a peacemaker. No mere peacemaker could hold the passions of humanity in heck. Had there not been a more virile force behind Him. He could not have stirred the world, and held its highest thoughts in bondage, generation after generation, century after century. Crops will not grow by sunlight alone, the broken earth needs the wash of winter's waters and the bite of winter winds, as well as sunshine, ere it will bear fruit, and humanity needs something more than love and gentleness to keep it from running riot: how else can we account for the pain, and toil, and suffering in the world. God made the world, and all that it contains, therfore he made pain and suffering for a purpose of his own. If there was no suffering humanity would cease to realize the existence of a God, so it is with Christ, if He had been only a peacemaker. He would have been as powerless to sway mankind as a young buck thrown suddenly amongst a pack of hungry wolves. Christ came with a sword as well as with an olive branch.

The Papacy is the Anti-Christ—Popery is a counterfeit of the gospel. Popery has a god of its own—the Pope—whom the canon law calls "the Lord our God." It has a savior of its own—the church. It has a sacrifice of its own—the mass. It has a mediator of its own—the priesthood. It has a sanctifier of its own—the sacrament. It has a justification of its own—of works; a pardon of its own—the pardon of the confessional: and it has in the heavens an infallible, all prevailing advocate, unknown to the gospel—"the mother of God."

It thus presents to the world a spiritual and saving apparatus for the salvation of men. And yet it neither sanctifies nor saves anyone. It looks like a church; it professes to have all that a church ought to have; and yet, it is not a church. It is a grand deception—the "all-deceivableness of unrighteousness."

This vast deceivableness is one of the main sources of the so-called "Church of Rome." Where her purpose is the most cruel, her speech is ever the most bland. Where her motives are the most villainous, her profession is ever the most plausible. She always gives the holiest name to the most unholy deed. When she burns a heretic, she calls it an "auto da fe" —an act of faith. When she ravages a province with fire and sword, she styles it a crusade—that is, an evangelistic expedition. Her torture chamber is styled the "holy office." And when she deposes monarchs, stripping them of crown and kingdom, and compelling them, as she did Henry IV of Germany, to stand with naked feet at her gates amid the drafts of winter, it is said with the make-believe of a kind father administering salutary chastisement to an erring son.

What are the sacraments by which she professes to replenish men with grace? What are the masses by which she professes to impart Christ and his salvation to them? What are the crucifixes, rosaries, scapulars and amulets, by which she claims to fortify men against the assaults of Satan and evil spirits? What are the indulgences by which she shortens the sufferings of souls in purgatory? What are the pardons with which she sends men away into the other world? What the vows of poverty under which she cherishes a pride the most arrogant, and an avariciousness the most insatiable? What are the vows of celibacy under which she veils an unbridled lewdness?

What are he dispensations by which she releases men from the obligations of the moral law, and professes to annul oaths, promises marriages and covenants? Above all, what are her logic and system of ethics, by which she makes vice and virtue, falsehood and truth, change sides, and shows how one, if he but direct aright his "intention," can commit the most monstrous crime, and yet contract not a particle of guilt?

What are these things, we ask, save the "all deceivableness of unrighteousness?" for surely the utmost limits of deception have here been reached, and the deceiver himself can go no farther. He has produced his masterpiece.

The Power of Letters and Words—Do you say there is no power in the letters of the alphabet? That depends entirely upon how they are arranged. There is no more power in these twenty-six letters, for good or evil, as they stand in their order ,than there is in as many grains of sand. But do you know what great power for good or evil may be brought by arranging these letters and setting them in different forms? Letters properly arranged spell words, and words connected make sentences, and sentences communicate ideas, intelligence. To illustrate: Give two scribes each a scroll of white paper, and request each to write a book. They use the twenty-six letters of the English language. One of these men is a very corrupt man: he is vile, his heart is filled with adultery, profanity and crime of various hues, and from the abundance of his heart his mouth—pen—speaks. Now what will be the character of his book? He has given lessons in pilfering, robbing, seduction, counterfeiting and on skepticism. Now, do you want your boy of fifteen to read that book? He has used just the twenty-six letters of our language, and he spelled every word correctly, just as they are spelled in any other book. What harm can come of reading this book? But the other scribe is a man of sterling character. He is known to be an honest man, and he is a pure man; in short, he is the highest type of a Christian. What will be the character of his book? It has given chapters upon honesty, purity, on the necessity of obedience to parental law, to civil law, and to the law of God. Now, would you object to your boy reading this book? You see, everything depends upon the use made of these letters. One of these books has a downward tendency; it is degrading, blasting and damning. The other is elevating, uplifting and saving. No wonder that Paul says: "For the word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart," and James says it is able to save our soul. Parents be careful what kind of books your children read.

BEREAN COLUMN.

Meaning of Forgiveness.

Extracts from a talk on Personal Power, by ex-President Tucker, of Dartmouth College, delivered to college men:

Forgiveness is not a simple erasure of a stain; it is a cleansing of the life; it is not closing the books of account with God, by putting a sum on the credit side sufficient to balance the debit side; it is opening a new set of books and conducting the business of life on lines of purity and integrity. . . . It is not enough merely to cleanse the record; what is involved is a reconstitution of character, a rebuilding of life. . . . A sin that has not been repented of and forgiven reduces a man's spiritual power as definitely and certainly as disease reduces his physical power. . . . It is not enough, therefore, to be forgiven; one must rebuild what has been torn down and reconstruct the shattered life, one must bear fruits meet for repentance. If a man sets his hand resolutely to the rebuilding of his life, it lies in his power to lay deeper foundations and to build on a nobler plan; and out of the ruins of his earlier career to build a monument, not to his weakness but to the strength born in sorrow for his offense, and in passive . . . sire to work reparation."—&c., a from The Outlook.

LELIA WHITEHEAD.
Chicago, Ill.

God's Word Forever.

Dear Bereans:

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away," said Jesus, referring to the truth of the Bible. Even though some of the doctrines of the blessed book are laughed at and called old fashioned, the Christian recognizes it to be God's word to man, the truth of which will last throughout eternity. As we look about us we see nothing but what is perishable. We look upon each others faces and realize that what we see is only a body of clay, whose form will soon be destroyed; and although the majority of people will not allow their minds to dwell upon the fact of the shortness of this life, (to admit the fact is exceedingly painful to the natural man), it is a fact, and people refusing to think about it does not alter it in the least. While we gaze upon the countenance of those who are dear to us, something tells us that these forms will soon be beneath the sod, where we shall never more behold them in this life. This is the case with human beings; they pass away, but God's word will never pass away. Nature teaches us a lesson along this line. When we are in the midst of summer, everything is beautiful; earth is dressed in her most beautiful green, dotted here and there with bright colored flowers; the trees furnish a delightful shade from the warm sun. We walk out in the woods and they fairly ring with the music of the pretty birds, happy and contented for God takes care of them. We enjoy all this beauty of summer, but in a few short weeks nature begins to take on an entirely different aspect; instead of the gentle breezes, the wind is moaning through the trees and about the corners of the house; summer is dying, the thought makes us sad in a sense, the grass is turning brown; the leaves are dropping from the trees, fluttering and whirling away on the wind; the birds migrating to a more genial clime; the flowers droop their heads and die; and soon the sky lowering as though mourning over the death of summer. Perhaps God lets us see these facts from year to year, to remind us that everything of time must pass away. But there is one thing that is not going to pass away—God's Word

As God's Word is something that is going to remain, how important it is that we make that the basis of our hope, the rule by which we daily walk. It is not going to pay us, my dear Bereans, to treat God's word lightly, for our eternal welfare depends upon whether or not we obey it. Do not let your Bible lay unmarked in the book case, or some out-of-the-way place; but let us all study it daily and carefully peruse each page and find what it contains for us, and so shape our lives by its teachings that we may have a home in that kingdom that is promised to the faithful.

ADELLE STARBUCK.
Grandy Center, Iowa.

The Coronation of the King of Kings.

Dear Bereans:

"The dark night is ending,
And dawn has begun."

We who have the better understanding of the Book Divine, know how true this is. Others, may doubt and deny—we believe! The sun of righteousness will soon arise with healing in his beams, and the whole creation that has groaned under its weight of sin and sorrow so long, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God, will put on her bridal robes; for Christ will speak peace to the nations, and wars will cease. The desert will bud and blossom as the rose; the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, the tongue of the dumb shall sing, the eyes of the blind shall see, the lame shall leap as an hart, and the dead shall live again. The miracles performed at His first coming, were but a type of those to be at his second coming. Jesus healed the sick when he was here, but when he returns, the tree of life will be here, whose leaves will heal the nations, and the inhabitants shall not say—"I am sick."

Although at present the nations are beating their plowshares into swords and making preparations for the most awful battle the world has ever known; just a little way ahead the order will be reversed, and those swords will be made into plowshares, and those spears into pruning-hooks; "for nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more." For that day we wait. Men's hearts may fail for fear, and for looking forward to the dark clouds and terrors of the future, but we know what lies beyond, and are glad. "The bugles of battle will blow the marches of peace, and the songs of great joy that the angels began" at Jesus' birth will be resung, and mankind redeemed will swell the chorus—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to man." The coronation of the kings of earth will be nothing to the crowning of the King of kings; and Solomon in all his glory never had one-half the splendor that awaits him who was despised and rejected of men, but honored and owned of God.

In closing we can read and appreciate this poem written by John Greenleaf Whittier:

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born!
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun!
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!
Sing the bridal of nations! with chorals of love
Sing out the war vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the hearts of the people keep time in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord!
Clasp hands of the nations
The dark night is ending and
In strong gratulations!
dawn has begun!
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!
Blow bugles of battle the marches of peace;
East, west, north and south, let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God and good-will to man!
Hark! Joining in chorus
The heavens bent o'er us!
The dark night is ending and
dawn has begun!
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

LILLIE H. WILLIS.
Galva, Ill.

LESSON OF THE VINE AND BRANCHES.

John 15, 5.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me, (or as the margin reads 'severed from me'), ye can do nothing. If a man abideth not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." The branches obtain their life from the vine. The ones which do not bear fruit are cast off: they wither on the ground, and men gather them and burn them. Think of this as our lot: we that have been cleansed by the word of God. It is Christ's word: "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered. Every branch in me that bearest fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." What is our condition, dear ones in the Lord? Let us not lose sight of the cleansing power. This cleansing life-giving principle must continue to cleanse us, or we cannot abide in Christ. How can we have Jesus abide in us? "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." "If a man love me he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." These words of Jesus make it plain to us how we can abide with him, by keeping his commandments, by loving his word, and by trusting in him. "Abide in me and I in you, as a branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me."

He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing." Jesus here makes use of something with which the people to whom he was speaking were familiar; for the hills of Judea were covered with vineyards, and many of the people were vinedressers, so they knew how soon a branch broken from the vine perished. This is why he used this comparison. "Do not his words make us long to have Jesus abide with us; make us strive to be true branches, branches that will be cast off." "Who so keepeth his words, in him verily is the love of God perfected, hereby know we that we are in him."

"This is the promise that he has promised us, even eternal life." a life with Jesus our Savior, who will make the earth his dwelling place; who will make his abode with the redeemed of God.

In the parable of the sower we read in Matt., 13th chapter, "He that receiveth the seed in good in good ground, is he that heareth the word and understandeth it, which also heareth fruit, some an hundred, some fifty, some thirty fold.' In verse 19 this seed is called "the word of the kingdom." "Now are ye clean through the word that I have spoken unto you." "These things have I spoken unto you that my joy might remain in you." Yes, it must remain and bear fruit. May we all with the apostles pray that our love may abound yet more in knowledge, and all judgment: that we approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ; being filled with the fruit of righteousness which is by Jesus Christ; unto the glory and praise of God. Phil. 1. 9-11.

ANNIE BURTON.
Salem, Ohio.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Charles Crawford.

It is with a sad heart I write of the death of our dear sister Crawford on October 30, 1911. She was a faithful member of the church in Salem, Ohio, never absenting herself from the services of the household except for sickness. Nothing else could keep her away, and her bright eyes and keen look, and nod of the head would encourage any speaker to tell the glad news of salvation if only to her. She was baptized into the all-saving name of Christ April 30th, 1903, by Bro. P. Neill, and rejoiced in the knowledge of the covenants of promise made by God to the fathers, never ceasing to thank God that her eyes had been opened to see his great plan of salvation. She was 74 years old, and had been sick about seven months, and suffered much, and did not think she could recover, but was greatly comforted by the blessed assurance of a glorious resurrection from the dead through Jesus Christ her Lord. She sleeps in Jesus, "blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep" if righteous. The funeral was held at her home, and words of hope were spoken by the writer from the text, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." She leaves a husband, two sons, one daughter, one sister and one brother, beside many relatives and friends who will greatly miss her. May we all so live that we may meet in the glad resurrection morning.

MRS. MATTIE NEILL.
Salem, Ohio.

CHRIST A NORMAL HUMAN BEING.

When God first created humanity we are told in the Bible that he was made directly—a creation straight from the hand of his maker—and more, was created in "His image." Adam thus had both paternity and maternity in the living God. Eve likewise had her maternity from the same eternal source. Still I have never heard of any sect of people that claim Adam as a divine being; and even Eve seems to have been just as man of a woman as Adam was a man. True, our friends who claim an immortal soul for Adam do the same for Eve, and all of us, so that in that particular we are all just as divine as each other after all—but the least said about our divinity the better.

We will return to the first proposition that is laid down for the substructure of the whole revelation of God, namely, that there is only one divine being—and he is the living God "in whose hand our breath is." So also we may return to the question as to how the Christ of God differs from the rest of us as a normal human being. The answer to this lies in the fact that humanity was created in the image of God, and the normal position for it is to have control of earth's creatures and earth's elements. As the matter now stands, we have not only lost control, but to a large extent have lost the original resemblance—in fact it might be said that we are almost or altogether out of sympathy with our environment in the universe. We are turned loose, so to speak, to fend for ourselves, gifted with an independent sort of intelligence, that although considerable in some instances, seems in many respects altogether disjointed from everything else; and every individual among us is, more or less of a law unto him or herself. True, there are communities that human being form themselves into, but when we come to study them, the communities they are as various and disconnected as individuals are—sometime, directly opposed; tribe against tribe, society against society, nation against nation. In fact, when you come to think of it, there is really no common ground on which humanity can meet in sympathy. Now this conclusion stands good and true even today in civilized communities after a millenium or two of so-called Christianity. To the student of history, or the reader of travels in strange lands, this dreadful disjointedness is far more abundantly apparent. Disjointed from nature and from nature's God; disjointed from each other, their lives are merely attempts to conform with certain more or less foolish conventionalities that have been invented by their dead ancestors; and in the wilder regions of the earth their ideas are all confused by the most absurd superstitions, so that whatever reason they do possess, is altogether nullified—although even the most savage people are not so wanting in intelligence as some suppose.

Now this peculiar state of affairs is abnormal, and we seem to be the only race of beings in the universe that are so afflicted; all other species, whether birds, beasts or fishes, seem naturally to understand each other and their position in the world, conforming thereto with singular and universal regularity. Now that there is no war between different species for on that principle the balance of nature seems to hang, but each and every species knows perfectly well by natural intuition, what it has to do, and does it. Millions of illustrations could be brought to show this one point, but we will take only one case; on that's just on the topic at present, namely, aerial navigation. Here we have an example of how the independent intelligence of man by diligent study and practice has at last acquired what is called the "mastery of the air"—for we are little independent creators too in a way—one trait of the original image. But notice how little we actually know of flying compared to the other aerial navigators who have hitherto made no nine day's wonder of their art. With 100-horsepower engines, with compass and with charts the human flyers are losing themselves in fogs, and breaking their necks with falls.

I was sitting by the river one day in the fall of the year, and a band of aviators came down out of the sky from the north. The tanks of their little engines had evidently run low and they needed refilling; down they came circling till they just skimmed along the surface of the water. Then without stopping, tipping up their planes, dipped the end of their feed pipes into the water-dip-dip-dip; then a circle round again, then dip-dip-dip, until their little tanks were replenished. Then they all swept on and up, on and up toward the south, on and up, till lost to view. The swallows on the migration, have neither chart nor compass, but are in wireless communication with the strange guiding power of which we degenerate humans have as yet not the faintest idea.

Now this power of orientation, as it is sometimes called, is only one of the five or fifty other senses that other animals seem to have. Were they not in possession of such power, they could not possibly exist. Had they to learn as we have by memorizing and experimental practice, they could not survive a generation. Take the case of a honey bee, for instance: A bee hive is a combination canning house, can factory, storage warehouse, nursery, dormitory and several other things. The manufacture of honey is a most complicated process, and the production and nourishment of the brood is one of the wonders of nature not altogether understood by mankind, even after centuries of observation. Yet bee-men tell us that at the height of the honey gathering season the life of an individual bee is only a few weeks; and during that time the worker bee is wet nurse, expert engineer, building leader, carrier, and when occasion requires, takes her place at the fanning mill for ventilation; yet there is no confusion, and although the business seems to be worked on the principle of division of labor, each drops into her place as occasion requires, readily, willingly, smoothly. When we consider the social systems of mankind—such tragedies of ignorance, stupidity and misapplied effort, we are the more amazed.

Now observing such things intelligently, it's plain that the rest of the animal kingdom have sources and resources of information that we do not possess, and that all God's creatures in their normal condition are equipped with sufficient intuitive intelligence that not only indicates to them the use of their particular faculties, but reveals their application and range, and the general relation they bear to the rest of the creation, at least in their environment; and the conclusion in regard to humanity must be that we are not normal in the sense that the rest of creation is.

In the Bible story we have it that the first man was "made upright;" and we may judge from the Mosaic account, that as head of the animal races he enjoyed similar or superior intuition to them. Likewise in the story of Jesus of Nazareth we read that he also possessed power, strange to us degenerates—but not any more wonderful in its way than is possessed by other inferior natural beings in their way and according to their kind: and one would suppose that it would logically follow that the "lords of creation" would have superior intuition powers to the subjects.

And so we read that the first man was of the earth, and the second man the Lord from heaven. So far there has only been two men—normel men—Lords of creation, intuitively, both "Sons of God;" both in direct communion with the Father and with perfect understanding of His will, without which perfect obedience was not possible.

J. F. GELLETLY
Baltimore, Md.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

Theophylact, an ancient writer, first applies the parable of the Rich man and Lazarus to the concerns of the next life. He then says:—

"But this parable can also be explained in the way of allegory; so that we may say, that by the rich man is signified the Jewish people: for they were formerly rich, abounding in all divine knowledge wisdom and instruction, which are more excellent than gold or precious stones. And they were arrayed in purple and fine linen, as they possessed a kingdom and a priesthood, and were themselves a royal priesthood of God. The purple denoted their kingdom, and the fine linen their priesthood; for the Levites were clothed in sacerdotal vestments of fine linen, and they fed sumptuously, and lived splendidly every day. Daily did they offer the morning and the evening sacrifice, which they also called the continual sacrifice. But Lazarus was the Gentile people, poor in divine grace and wisdom, and lying before the gates; for it was not permitted to the Gentiles to enter the house itself, because they were considered a pollution Thus, in the Acts of the apostles we read that it was alleged against Paul, that he had introduced Gentiles into the temple, and made that holy place common or unclean. Moreover, those people were full of fetid sores of sin, on which the impudent dogs, or devils fed, who delight themselves in our sores. The Gentiles likewise desired even the crumbs which fell from the tables of the rich; for they were wholly destitute of that bread which strengthens the heart of man, and wanted even the smallest morsel of food; so that the Canaanite woman (Matt. 15:27), when she was a heathen, desired to be fed with the crumbs. In short, the Hebrew people were dead unto God, and their bones, which could not be moved to do good, were perished. Lazarus also (I mean the Gentile people), was dead in sin, and the envious Jews, who were dead in sins, did actually burn in a flame of jealousy, as saith the apostle, on account of the Gentiles being received into the faith, and because that those who had before been a poor and despised Gentile race, were now in the bosom of Abraham, the father of nations, and justly, indeed, were they thus received. For it was while Abraham was yet a Gentile that he believed God and turned from the worship of idols to the knowledge of God. Therefore it was proper that they who were partakers of this conversion and faith, should rest in his bosom, sharing the same final lot, the same habitation and the same blessedness. And the Jewish people longed for one drop of the former legal sprinklings and purifications to refresh their tongue, that they might confidently say to us, that the law was still efficacious and availing. But it was not; for the law was only until John. And the Psalmist says, sacrifice and oblations thou would not, etc."—Annot, in loc.

GOLD DUST.

If I take care of my character, my reputation will take care of itself.

The path of duty is the way of safety and the road to honor.

It is not what you say to men but what you are to men that counts.

True religion shows itself in every part of our conduct; it is like the sap of a living tree, which penetrates the most distant boughs.

To live in such a way that, as from the moon by night and the sun by day, light and guidance are issuing, so from you shall proceed an influence that comforts, cheers, instructs and alleviates the troubles and sufferings of life—this is the true following of the Lord Jesus Christ.

ANNA DREW.
Dixon, Ill.

God finds pleasure in us when we find pleasure in God.

Persistent people begin their success where others end in failure.—E. Eggleston.

THE SIN OF DOING NOTHING.

How many easy-going idlers and silent partners we have in our churches. Perhaps only about one in ten is engaged in active, aggressive Christian work. Where are the nine?

Many would claim that they live quiet, peaceable lives, do no harm and bring no dishonor on the cause.

Let us arouse them from torpor by shouting in their ears that many of the severest curses of God have fallen upon persons for saying and doing nothing.

Num. 32:23.—It surely reports itself for retribution.

Judges 5:23.—Meroz was bitterly cursed for doing nothing.

Prov. 24:30-34.—The sluggard is condemned and warned.

Ezek. 33:8.—Those who do not warn sinners perish with them.

Amos 6:1.—Woe rest on all who are at ease in Zion

Zeph 1:12.—Punishment awaits those who are settled on their lees.

Matt. 21:28-31. Idlers disobey God's first command to a convert.

Jas. 4:17.—Knowing and not doing is a sin.

Acts. 1:8.—A witness must speak.

Heb. 2:3.—How shall we escape if we neglect?

Matt. 21:19. The fruitless fig tree is cursed.

It is natural to expect one to do what he advises others to do.

One who suffers for loyalty to right is in fellowship with the good of all ages.

Those who encourage men to false hopes are likely to be missing when those hopes fail.

The hero urges others to flee for safety while he himself remains at the point of danger.

Sarcasm may shine, but it never warms the heart.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the brethren scattered abroad:

Our Heavenly Father has now placed me in such a position that I can give four or five months of the year to helping the churches at no money expense to them, unless may railway fare is paid, and that I will pay myself for moderate distances if those who invite me cannot afford to pay it. I have been preaching the gospel for many years, I also am a hygienic physician; also a graduate of phrenology, and have lectured much on these subjects. Any church wishing my services may address,

DR. WALLACE MASON,
Solina, Ont., Canada.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. A. M. Siple	$5.00
S. T. Blessing	2.00
A sister in the west	1.00
J. C. Daniel	.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats, 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year. Includes a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make the most of your own individuality. Exhibited by yourself. Exhibition which will be perfect in style and fit. Five-minute Helper Book 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium and Catalogue and full particulars.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed. 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 288 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it'

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 336 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read.It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG	W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON	HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON	BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest believers who areanxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolatedbrethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7. 3, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as pre-requisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 2:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HIGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 Read X CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER 21, 1911 No. 44

LORD GOD OF HOSTS.

Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet
Lest we forget, Lest we forget
Thy loving kindness, oh, how great
Thy tender care is no mistake.

Lord God of Hosts, to thee we cling
Remembering still to do thy will,
Forgive the errors of our ways.
For Jesus' sake, forgive, we pray.

Lord God of Hosts, we do confess,
So many time we have transgressed;
In thy dear son we hope and trust
For deliverance and accounted just

Lord God of Hosts, be with us still,
Take our hands, our minds, our will;
Fill us with thyself, thy peace,
Keep us Lord for thine increase.

Lord God of Hosts, we love to live
Even now amid so many ills
Thy kingdom come all ills remove
Flood earth in sunshine of thy love.

Lord God of Hosts, please turn us loose,
So long the bands of sin hold us;
Remove all sin and turn us in
Thy pastures free, men and women.

Lord God of Hosts, this earth shall be
In harmony with thy will set free;
[illegible]
thee.
Spontaneous shouts from sea to sea.

Lord God of Hosts, send Jesus the Christ,
Change this soiled earth to paradise:
'Tis the new heaven we long to see
In immortal youth to dwell with thee.
Forever with thee.

B. Y. FRETWELL.
Danville, Va.

A SNOW SERMON.

By John Leyda Vance, of Aspinwall, Pa.

He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels: who can stand before his cold?—Psalm cxlvii. 16, 17.

A very little reflection will bring us to realize that the rigors of winter occupy small space in the Bible. It is a warm book in more than one sense. It is a temperance book, too, from a temperate clime. There is more winter in these four lines than in all the rest of the Scriptures, unless it be in one or two similar passages from Job. Only twenty-five times is the word snow written in the whole volume, and in many of these instances it is but employed as a figure of speech. The people of Palestine did not have adventures with blizzards such as are familiar experiences in other zones of the earth. There was but a mountain top here and there, snow-white in the sunlight. A single winter-time exploit is twice recorded, when Benaiah went down and slew a lion in a pit on a snowy day. It must have taken a quick eye and sure foot to come off victor with such an antagonist upon such uncertain and insecure standing ground. Certainly the valiant son of Jehoiada earned well the renown it brought him. From this, he and we may know the Psalmist's meaning as to feet in uneven and slippery places.

Allowing for this twice told tale of Benaiah, we would have then but two dozen snow references in all the Bible, and of these our text is easily chief. Ice is mentioned only thrice in holy writ, the hail is spoken of very frequently. The reason for this is as you will reflect, entirely and perfectly natural. But as we read and re-read our text, in thought, we can look out over vast stretches of fleecy drifts like a very sea of billows but for their stillness and whiteness; we can see the air filled with silver spangles of frost, as tho the very stars had been ground to icy powder; we can hear that wintry bell-like tinkle of one fragment of ice as it breaks from or strikes upon another; we can imagine that cold light of the sky whose very intensity seems to make itself visible, as the Egyptian darkness made itself felt. Verily, who unprotected can withstand this frigid cold from heaven? And I am sure there are some lessons for us in the snow.

I. The first and simplest of them is the literal and natural one of this text, and of a few others similar, that the snow is a creature of God.—God who notes the sparrows that fall and who prizes them higher than we do; who counts the hairs of our heads and the sands of the seashore, as He does the stars of light—this God is the creator of the snowflakes. He challenged his servant Job concerning this wonder,, saying: "Hast thou entered into the treasuries of the snow?" Now, this patriarch was much given to nature studies, but I presume he had never viewed a snow-crystal under the microscope, perhaps not very closely with the naked eye, or attempted to fathom the mysteries of the generation of the rains and snows of heaven. There is enough of beauty in every atom of snow that falls and perishes in a moment upon the river or in the mire to convince us of God. The flake of snow, or the fiber of the wool to which it is here compared, illustrate how all divine work excels that of any and every other hand. The more closely the things of God are looked into, the more does their beauty and perfection appear; but if man's work is inspected its flaws are magnified and multiplied.

God maketh both the snow and the wool: they are alike in their whiteness, but unlike in all other respects except that of abundance. And yet these things, the snow and the wool are the compliments of each other; the wool for warmth in the places of snow and times of cold. O Jehovah, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all, the earth; full of thy riches. The God of nature has given us the promise of nature, and redeems it year by year. While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. And through all the frost-bound season of the year God, who clothes his creatures with wool, also blankets his earth with snow. His goodness is as great as His wisdom.

II. But our second lesson might well be, that the time of frosts and snows and ice and cold is the time of the rigors and hardships and exposures and privations of all animate creatures, the children of men not excepted, and especially of the poor; and this being true, winter is the great season and opportunity for the love of kindness. Jacob, in describing his long years of hard tho hopeful and prosperous service under his uncle Laban, says: "In the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night." He endured hardness of thirst and cold, if not of hunger. But many are the cold hearths and scant tables in time of snow, and it is by tempering outward conditions for the comfort of the needy and sick that we may minister to Christ in the person of his blood-bought poor. Feeding the hungry and clothing the naked is holy service when wisely and kindly done. We might well thank God for a time of winter and a land of snows, which make our opportunity of going about doing good. For often it must be by warming the hand that we warm the heart. Let us see that those who need it, and are worthy, have downy beds and fleecy coats in the time of snow. Of course, their parents look out for the children, and the poor have their heavenly Father; but while they are with us we have some stewardship concerning them for which we shall be called to account. So let that worthy woman of priceless value who is not afraid of the snow for her household—for all her household are clothed with scarlet—let her, I say, spread out her hand to the poor, and reach forth her hand to the needy; and let her worthy husband, if she have such, join her in that work.

We must now omit the mention of many snow texts wherein there is only an apt figure of speech, such as Jeremiah's lament over defection: "Shall the snow of Lebanon fail from the rock of the field? or shall the cold waters that flow down from afar be dried up? For my people hath forgotten me." It is said that snow was transported from the mountain to be used in those days, much as we make and use ice on a larger scale today. That custom gives point then to the proverb: "As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him; for he refresheth the soul of his masters." With this might be contrasted another proverb the force of which depends upon the incongruity of things out of season: "As snow in summer (an unheard of thing), and as rain in harvest, (equally [illegible] for a fool."

III. But we must hasten to our third lesson, which lies in the fact that snow is used as the type of moral cleanliness. Job, whose writings contain at least five references to snow, speaks of it, not only as one of the wonders of nature, but uses thus early the symbol of cleansing in a moral sense: "If I wash myself with snow-water, and make my hands never so clean; yet wilt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall abhor me." We all know the landed virtue of melted snow or rain water for purposes of washing. So Job seems to mean that after we have done the best and all that lies in our power, still we can not purge away our own sin, which God views as filth upon us. We must call upon God to wash us divinely using the words and the thought of David: "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me and I shall be whiter than snow." Instead of snow water there is the cleansing blood, and the whiteness of the snow stands for the purity that shall be wrought in us. As Isaiah also has it in his wonderful verse: "Tho your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow; tho they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Snow like wool in whiteness, and the sin-black and sin-vile heart made as white and as pure as the snow and the wool!

It is to me a coincident not a little remarkable that this snow-whiteness, which is the Bible symbol of purity, is at the same time the figure of comparison in connection with the dread plague of leprosy, the type of sin. Gehazi was smitten with a lifetime of snow-white leprosy, for himself and his posterity. Miriam, the sister of Moses, was stricken for seven days with the same snow-white degree of the terrible disease, because she with Aaron, her brother, touched the Lord's anointed with an unwarranted blame. And Moses himself carried about with him the power of God to astound Pharaoh in Egypt by making his hand leprous and restoring it to soundness again, while he hid it in or drew it forth from his bosom, as you would put you hand into your pocket. The snow-white leprosy was a type of sin, yet the soul that is washed from sin is made snow-white, snow-whiteness being made the symbol of purity and the climax of impurity with equal suitableness. We are to become as chaste as the snow, without, however, its repellent coldness. The iniquity and impurity of all intemperance and excessive indulgence are put in contrast with this Nazarite beauty in the Lamentations: "Her nobles were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk."

"Helpless and foul as the trampled snow,
Sinner, despair not! Christ stoopeth low
To rescue the soul that is lost in its sins,
And raise it to life and enjoyment again.
Groaning, bleeding, dying for thee,
The crucified hung on the accursed tree!
His accents of mercy fall soft on thine ear.
Is there mercy for me? Will he heed my weak prayer?
O God in the stream that for sinners did flow,
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

IV. But a fourth and final lesson from the fleecy whiteness of the virgin snow is that God's word employs it as a celestial symbolism. Moral purity is to be rewarded with heavenly glory, and when we are allowed glimpses of heaven, snowy whiteness touches all with light, even the great white throne before which we must stand. The raiment of the resurrection angels was white and glistening as snow beneath the sun. The vesture of our transfigured Lord shone with an unearthly white, less [illegible] ly with the snow, and we are promised to walk with him in white and glory. And this means not only the garb of glory, but the luster of character which shall illumine our countenances there, as it has shined upon some faces here as they were turned thither, for righteousness is the white linen of the saints. The whole host of heaven is arrayed in bright and shining whiteness; and above them, yet in their very midst, the ancient of days doth sit, enfolded in a light that never was on land or sea, where the moon and the sun are no longer needed to shine for the lamb is the light thereof. Daniel and John tell us of His crowning locks like wool and snow, and of His gleaming countenance. In that day may the beauty of our God be upon us, as He has put it already upon the borders of His garments in flowers and jewels and crystals of snow.—Homiletic Review.

EXCEEDING SINFULNESS OF SIN.

"That sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful." (Rom. 7-13.)

After reading what Paul says to the Romans we can see clearly that the fault is not in the law, but in the sinner who transgresses the law. Sin works death in the sinner by the law. "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." (Rom. 7-12.)

To learn the great turpitude of sin we must look at it in the revealing light of the divine law, which law is the standard of right, and when sin is tested by it, it appears exceeding sinful. The law reveals the nature of sin and "sin is the transgression of the law;" and in order to know what sin is we must understand the law of which it is a violation. The law is the will of God, and God's will is the determination of all the attributes of his nature. The sinner wars against the law which emanates from infinite wisdom, goodness, holiness and justice. He rebels against omnipotence.

If we apply the law by the spirit, our understanding is enlightened and our conscience awakened. Sin blinds and hardens, but the law opens the eyes and reveals the state of the heart. No one can tell where the sin which he commits will end. Though hidden for a time "sin will out."

The law reveals the consequences of sin. When the law was given the very appearance of Sinai was significant of the terrible vengeance it would take on sin. "God spared not the angels that sinned." He did not spare the Antediluvians or Sodom and Gomorrah. The righteous will not suffer such consequences as they are willing to understand and obey the law as revealed. God could have given no better law; it is "just and good, and holy;" and those who perish under such are "worthy of death." The law is a great barrier placed between man and perdition, and the sinner rushes upon it to his own destruction. The sinner is at fault: let him repent.

Regardless of all the condemnations of the wicked which are in the Bible, people will continue to sin. "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." (Gal. 3-10.) The wicked will be raised from the dead to be judged and punished; the punishment being eternal destruction. They "shall perish, and be consumed," and "as wax melteth before the fire, so shall the wicked perish at the presence of God." "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." (2 Thess. 1:7-9.)

[illegible] consider that [illegible] the difference in emotions awakened in different places; for instance, difference in emotions awakened in the theater and in the church. In the theater the mind is blinded and hardened by sin; while in the church, the mind is enlightened by divine truth. There is so much licentiousness and debauchery taking place in the present day that it is necessary for us to withdraw ourselves from such great turpitude. "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." (Rom. 1-18.) If we take part in all the pomp and society of the world we cannot love God as we should. John says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." (1 John 2:15-16.) The love of all licentious things which people possess is blasphemy against God and his word.

Let us, brothers and sisters, strive to obey the law as revealed, so that we will not be charged with sin in the judgment, and will not receive the reward of the sinner, for "the wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our God." (Rom. 7-23.)

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

COUNTING THE COST.

Luke 14:28.—"For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?"

A tower is more than a common habitation. A house, cheaper material, not so strong, windows open upon court around which various rooms were arranged, making hollow square. Not intended for defense—some of sundried clay—thieves break through and steal. But a tower was built on the outer walls and on heights to command a view from its windows or its parapet of the surrounding country so as to note the approach of an enemy. A tower must be built strong, able to withstand a siege or violent attack of armed forces. It also afforded a refuge to the surrounding inhabitants in case of invasion by an enemy, and often when most of a city had been forced to surrender or had been slain, the towers or citadels remained unconquered—impregnable.

In the figurative language of the Psalmist we see him using this idea in the 18th Psalm v. 2: "The Lord is my rock and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower."

Which of you intending to build, to provide a safe refuge for any time of danger which may come upon you—which of you would not sit down first a deliberate action is here pointed to. The undertaking is very important; your life and that of your family and friends may depend upon the manner in which your building is done.

First—he begins with a comprension of the importance and magnitude of the undertaking—but he wishes to know the details of the undertaking, and what it is all going to cost him. Now he must get down to business, he must count the cost. This must be very carefully and prudently done for the whole future of the undertaking depends upon the correctness of his estimate of labor and materials, and their value in money. If he is a wise man and gives his work attention, continually consulting a wise master builder to confirm his own understanding, there will be no fear that he will not finish.

In 1 Cor. 3:9—Paul says: "For [illegible] God, ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon. For other foundation can no man lay than is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide, which he hath built thereon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss, but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire."

Eph. 2:19-22.—"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord. In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the spirit."

1 Peter 2:1-8:—"Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile and hypocries, and envies, and all evil speaking, as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby. If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious. To whom coming as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious."

Brothers and sisters, how is our building going on since we first undertook to build? Does it grow from month to month, and from year to year? Are we laborers together with God? Are we closely following the details left for us by such wise masterbuilders as Paul, and Timothy, and Peter; and are we laying up true walls, tried by the line and plummet of God's word? Do we keep strictly on the foundation they have laid? In 2 Sam. 24:24, David says: "Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which cost me nothing."

CHAS. A. GOSS.
Cleveland, Ohio.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, B. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Nov. 24, 1910

EDITORIAL

There are two ways; the "broad" and the "narrow way." Have you heard people contemptuously call the people of God "n-a-r-r-o-w," and boastfully call themselves "wide," "broad," "liberal," "charitable," etc., etc.? Better turn to Matt. 7:13, 14, and see what our Lord thinks of these two ways, marking particularly the end to which he says they "lead."

"Read for us," "lecture for us," are not happy forms of speech. They conceal the fact that in our ecclesial relations what we do is "to the Lord and not unto men." They invite us to look at the ecclesia instead of to God. When a man does a thing "for us" he takes inferior ground. The alien and the stranger might do a thing "for us," but a brother serves "with" his brethren. "Will you come and lecture?" "We will read with brother ——."

A handful of Benjamites did a wrong in Israel. Their fellow-tribesmen would not give them up. War resulted between Benjamin and the other tribes, and the tribe of Benjamin was nearly annihilated in consequence, though not strictly guilty of the original offense. This is one of the many things "written for our learning." Those who deplore the insulation of many who profess to believe in the Divine Sonship of Christ themselves, but who obstinately adhere to those who do not, or shut their eyes to their doctrine, must remember the tribe of Benjamin. Their blood is on their heads.

"The Federation of American Zionists," says the Jewish Independent, "has issued a circular reminding the various Zionists organizations through the country that for a number of years the Federation has set aside the week of Chanukah—which commemorates the War for Independence waged by the Maccabees—as the week during which special propaganda is to be made for the shekel. This year schedule week is scheduled to begin December 16 and end on Saturday evening December 23. The shekel was fixed by the first Zionist Congress as the per capita tax to be paid annually by every Jew who annually by every Jew who endorses the Basle program and who wishes to be enrolled as a member of the International Zionist organization. Every shekel-payer is entitled to vote for a delegate after he has paid the shekel tax for two years."

Among all Asiatic rulers the Emir of Bokhara has probably the largest harem. The Emir is not very scrupulous regarding the manner in which he obtains women for his harem. When the royal carriage passes through the street all women must remain standing on their places facing the Emir, with veils thrown off, and whoever finds grace in his eyes is singled out by a nod and thus becomes a member of the harem. It frequently happens that women voluntarily deface themselves or maim themselves so as to avoid the distinction that might be conferred upon them. Jewish girls are frequently singled out as desirable for the harem, and these must adopt Islam before they are admitted. Many tragedies are being enacted as a result of this inhuman custom. Girls are being maimed by their parents.

PEARLS OF IRRITATION.

Life on earth, says the Continent, would not be worth much if every source of irritation were removed. Yet most of us rebel against the things which irritate us, and count as heavy loss what ought to be rich gain.

We are told that the oyster is wiser: that when an irritating object, like a bit of sand, gets under the "mantel" of his shell, he simply covers it with the most precious part of his being, and makes of it a pearl. The irritation that it was causing is stopped by encrusting it with the pearly formation. A true pearl, therefore, is simply a victory over irritation.

Every opportunity that gets in to our lives today is an opportunity for pearl-culture. The more irritations the devils flings at us, the more pearls we may have. We need only to welcome them and cover them completely with love, the most precious part of us, and the irritation will be smothered out as the pearl comes into being. What a store of pearls we may have, if we will!

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—The Complete Manifestation of God in Christ by the Seven Spirits.

Text:—Rev. 1:4: John to the seven Churches which are in Asia: Gace be unto you and peace, fom him which is, and which was, and which is to come: and from the seven spirits which is (ha estin, Gr.) befor his throne.

I. Apocalypse for John, the seven churches, and all "servants" of God until Christ comes—A him for Futurist, vs. 1-4; 22:11; 22:6, 7, 10, 12, 18, 19.

II. Deity before his manifestation in flesh—"which was." V. 4; Exo. 3:6-7; Jno. 1:14; Zech. 13:7; Jno. 5:18; 14:9.

IV. Deity manifested in spirit —"which is to come." 1 Tim. 3:16; Heb. 4:15; 5:8; Lk. 13:22; 2 Cor. 13:4; Rev. 1:4, 8; Exo. 3:2-16; Isa. 9:6.

V. The complete manifestation of God in Chist and the saints will be effected by the seven spirits.

I. "Which are" (Gr. "which is, ha estin). V. 4; Zech. 3:9; 4:2, 6, 10; Rev. 3:1; 4:5; 5:6; Eph. 4:4; 1 Cor. 12:4-13; Jno. 3:24.

Subject: The Exaltation of Christ and the Saints.

Text:— Rev. 1:5-8: And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us a kingdom (basileian) priests for his God and Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen. Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

I. And from Jesus Christ. V. 5. 1. How Jesus became Christ. Mt. 1:21; Acts 2:36; Jno. 20:31; Acts 10:38.

II. The faithful witness. V. 5; Jno. 8:14; Heb. 10:23; 1 Tim. 6:12, 13; Mt. 27:11; 26:25, 64; Mk. 14:61, 62. 1. Witness. Greek, (martus,) means martyr. Jno. 18:36-38; 19:12, 13.

III. First begotten of the dead. V. 5. 1. (Protos), translated "first," is also translated "chief," and means "foremost." Mt. 20:27; Acts 16:12; 17:4; 25:23; 1 Tim. 1:15; 1 Cor. 15:3. 1. In this sense Christ is the "first" to rise from the dead. Rom. 8:29; Rev. 20:6; Col. 1:18; Acts 26:23; 1 Cor. 15:23.

IV. Prince (ruler) of the kings of the earth. V. 5; Mt. 11:27; 28:18; Jno. 17:2; Phil. 2:9-11; 1 Pet. 3:22; Rev. 17:14; 19:16; Psa. 89:27.

V. And made us (for) a kingdom (basileia),—priests. V. 6; Exo. 19:6; 1 Pet. 2:9. 1. "Dominion," (Kratos,") might, strength."

VII. He comes with clouds in judgment. V. 7; Heb. 13:1; Psa. 18:11-14; 97:2; Na. 1:3; Ezek. 38:9, 21-23. 1. "Amen,"—certainty and assent. Vs. 6, 7; 16:7; 22:20; Mt. 11:26.

Subject: The Church of God in the Pre and Post-Resurrectional States.

Text:—Rev. 1:9-11 17-20.

I. The Pre-resurrectional State. 1. John was a "companion" with the seven churches in the Dominian "tribulation." V. 9; Matt. 20:22; Acts 14:22; 2 Tim. 3:12; Rom. 8:17; 1 Pet. 4:13; Acts 14:22. II. History of the Dominian persecution: Enthroned A. D. 81—Last of the Flavin family—His reign was good at first: persecution began in A. D. 95—First time Christians were persecuted by Law—Domitilla was banished; John was put in a caldron of boiling oil (Tertullian)—Banished to Patmos—Domitian was slain in A. D. 96—Nerva came to the throne in old age—his lenity brought home all the banished except Domitilla—John died at the age of one hundred in A. D. 103. III. "In Spirit". V. 10; Ezek. 1:1; 2:2; 3:14; 8:3; 40:2; Jno. 15:26; Rev. 4:2; 17:3; 21:10.

II. The Post Resurrection State. 1. "In (Gr. en) the Lord's day." V. 10; Jno. 8:56; 2 Thess. 2:3-8; Acts 17:31; Mal. 4:1, 2; Ps. 118:24; II. "Great Voice—Trumpet." V. 10; Exo. 19:13; Numb. 10:10; Judges 7:18; 2 Sam. 15:10; Amos 3:6; 1 Cor. 14:8; 15:52; 1 Thess. 4:16. III. "I am the first and the last." V. 1; Shil. 3:13; Vs. 12, 17, 18, 19; Dan. 8:17, 18; 10:8-18; Zech. 4:1.

Subject:—The Multitudenous Son of Man Glorified. No. 1.

Rev. 1:13, 14.

I. "Son of Man" is an expression which is comprehensive of a multitude.

1. "Son"—an emandation from Adam. Exo. 4:22; Dan. 1:13,14, 22, 27. II. "A Son of Man." (Greek.) V. 13; 14:14; Dan. 7:13; 10:4, 5, 6, 16, 18; Gen. 2:14; 3:24.

II. Clothed to the feet—entire [illegible] 4. Nahum 2 and [illegible] equivalent terms. Gen. 3:7, 10; Exo. 32:21, 25; Rev. 10:15; Psa. 32:1, 2; Gal. 3:27; Rev. 19:8, 14. II. Mortality and Immortality are indicated by nudity and clothing. Zech 3:3-10; Isa. 13:29; 2 Cor. 5:2, 4.

III. Golden girdle (Zone). V. 13; Exo. 28:2-6; Rom. 8:3; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 2:14; Col. 2:17; 1 Pet. 2:25; 1:7; 2 Pet. 1:1; Psa. 45.

IV. Head and hairs like wool. V. 14; 1 Cor. 11:3; Eph. 5:23, 27; Isa. 1:10; Jno. 1:29.

V. His eyes like a flame of fire. 1. Word for eye in Hebrew signifies "fountain." Not "flame of love," but "flame of fire"—wrathful activity. V. 14; Dan. 7; Psa. 104:18; Isa. 10:16-21; 30:27; Rev. 2:18-27; Matt. 10:34; 1896; Lk. 12:4, 5; Isa. 51:12, 13.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Your courtesy in sending The Restitution is much appreciated—Thank you brother. I was not surprised that my article reprinted from "Our Hope" entitled "Everlasting Destruction" was revised as two very bad mistakes somehow had crept in, which entirely misconstrued my meaning. The one place in 49 Ps. you left out; this I was glad to see; but the other place almost at the end of the article, was still there. It speaks of a "sorer punishment" held out for a greater sin, than that of treading "under foot the son of God." "Than" should be omitted; it should read: "A sorer punishment is held out for a greater sin, this, of "treading under foot, etc."

Bro. Pollard, our editor, had a few days vacation at that time and was not responsible, and has corrected both mistakes in a later issue. Your paper is not new to me; it is very ably edited, and your doctrines are as near perfection as we consider our own to be. Thanks to God that he has some few here and there, who believe the whole Bible. May God bless you and all the saints in your church as well as ourselves, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

FRED RIDSTRUP.
Denver, Col.

My Dear Brother:

I owe you an apology for this long delay in answering you letter. I am sure it was not for lack of appreciation of its kind spirit. I have for some years, felt an interest in those branches of our body with which we have come little in contract, among them, your own. "Restitution" has been in our exchange list for years, but aside from this, there has been little to bind us together. In view of the fact that on the main features of our faith there is a unanimity of belief, this is a sufficient reason why we might come nearer together. If your views of the future may differ somewhat from our own, this is hardly more than we differ among ourselves upon some other points. This is probably true of various other branches.

I note your suggestion regarding your series of sermons. The themes certainly are of interest, and would probably fit into any of our churches. However, in that region of the West, and such as we have east of Chicago, our churches are rather weak. I may however, make use of your list later on. Will see.

Accept my best wishes for a pleasant service in your editorial work.

Your Bro. in Christ,
F. L. PIPER.
Editor The World's Crisis.
Boston, Mass.

Editor's Reply

Dating Nov. [illegible] we replied to this letter as follows:

Dear Bro. Piper:—In reply to your letter of the 15th inst. permit me to say:

That I have, for a long time, desired to have a consultation with your church about our differences, and if possible, by prayerful investigation remove them, or at least modify them to the extent that we can unite and work harmoniously together in proclaiming the good news of the coming kingdom. That we misunderstand you on some points, and that you misinterpret us on some doctrines, I feel certain. A face to face interview would clear away much misconception on both sides; and if it did not immediately unite us it would pave the way, and in time, under the blessings of God, the union would come.

To set going such a move, I have labored and prayed incessantly for several months. Our evangelist has just closed a series of meetings at Mt. Liberty, Ohio, the church of which Bro. McClellan is pastor. Both sides now admit that each church is part of the "little flock." What influenced them to make this confession? Association, acquaintance, co-operating together! Let us have some more of this.

If no effort is made to unite us in fellowship of the truth, Bro. Piper, I am not to be blamed. Bro. F. F. Dunham lives at Vermillion, Ohio; and as that is near this city, I have written the brother several times this fall urging him to come to the city and help me in a meeting; or I would assist him in a meeting anywhere he might ask me to go. Also I have urged him the need of us deliberating upon the problem of uniting our forces. I have not had one word from the brother. I repeat, Bro. Piper, that if the division of our churches continues, I disown all blame.

Very truly yours, Brother
[illegible]G. HUGGINS.

OUR [illegible]NGER

"We are too exclusive. That is the reason that so few outside of ourselves come into our services."

Thus some one said and others possibly think. What is meant by this? Is it meant that we do not enjoy the presense in our service of outside people? Then why do we personally invite them to come and spend money in advertising our meetings that others may come and enjoy our faith and worship? When they do come why do we hasten down the aisle to greet them warmly and say, "We are glad to see you; come again?" Certainly we are not exclusive in such a sense! Is it because we speak as though we have the truth and know it? Have not holy men in all ages talked that way? Did not Abraham, Moses, the holy prophets and apostles talk that way? Have we reached a time when it is presumption to think that one can have the truth and know it? Better read 1 Tim. 4:3.

Paul's mission to the Gentiles was to open the eyes of their understanding that they might "Know what is the hope of his calling." Was that mission a failure and was not Gentiles know? Should people shun us because our eyes have been opened? Read the writings of Paul and count how many times he says "I know." Then read the Gospels and the Epistles and count how many times it is said, "We know." Shall we clothe what we know in doubtful phraseology to please unbelievers that they may come again?

But we think we have something better than others have and they don't like it. Yes, that's true blessedly true. We never should have been anybody if we had not thought so. Abel knew he had something better than Cain had. Noah knew he had something better than others. Moses knew there was something better for Israelites than for Egyptians, and he chose it and forsook Egypt. Abraham forsook his kindred and enjoyed something better; Paul had something better than the Sanhedrim promised; John had something so much better that it made exile in Patmos blessed, elsewhere we can claim no relationship to the saved of ages unless we feel that we have God's best in the Christian hope. If Canites, Kenanites, Balaamites, Egyptians, Pharisees and last day apostles don't love us, we cannot afford to dilute our faith and hope to buy their polluting fellowship.

We keep aloof from organized association with others, and from fellowship with "unfruitful workers of darkness." If this be our exclusiveness, happy are we. Saving religion has ever been thus exclusive. Eve would not have fallen if she had excluded the serpent. Abel suffered martyrdom for excluding Cain's religion, but his name is among the honored of God awaiting glory. Moses excluded Egyptian religion. God commanded all Israel to be exclusive when they reached Canaan and have no fellowship with the nations around them. To the New Testament church the command is equally explicit: "Come out from among the maud be ye separate." Christ promised a special blessing upon his disciples "when they shall separate you from their company," and a special woe "when all men shall speak well of others, and from fellowship with "unfruitful workers of darkness." If this be our exclusiveness, happy are we. Saving religion has ever been thus exclusive. Eve would not have fallen if she had excluded the serpent. Abel suffered martyrdom for excluding Cain's religion, but his name is among the honored of God, awaiting glory. Moses excluded Egyptian religion. God commanded all Israel to be exclusive when they reached Canaan and have no fellowship with the nations around them. To the New Testament church the command is equally explicit: "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Christ promised a special blessing upon his disciples "when they shall separate you from their company," and a special woe "when all men shall speak well of you." Why then shun the blessed separation and covet the woeful favor? When Israel got broad-minded and mingled with Moab they felt the woe. Jehoshaphat got very liberal, visited the Israelitish king Ahab, and joined affinity with him. Why should he be exclusive? They belonged outwardly to the same Jewish family. Who be narrow and refuse to fellowship a professed Jew? What was the result? The rejection of God's true prophet, Micaiah, for following the counsel of Baal's prophets, a narrow escape from death, and the rebuke of a holy prophet who said: "Shouldst thou help the ungodly and love them that hate the Lord"? 2 Chron. 19:2. This man of God preached exclusiveness. So does Paul when he sits forth perils of the last days among which he reckons a pleasure-loving church and adds, "from such turn away." Read the reported actions at Christian Endeavor and Epworth League socials, and what soul-saving pastor could encourage Loyal Workers to affiliate in such fleshly delights, and expect that any of them could grow in grace or be filled with the Spirit of God? A few good words may be spoken, but "the love of pleasure" holds the hour. No, beloved, our danger is not from exclusiveness (unless we exclude heaven-born piety wherever found), but from inclusiveness. If Aaron had not included Israelites who had more Egypt in them than Canaan he would not have been among those who danced around an Egyptian calf, nor have caused the deaths of many thousands. It is written of those that they "sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play" (harmless games of course) Is it not still true that those who have more of earth than of the kingdom, more of flesh than of the Holy Spirit, sit down to late suppers and then devote themselves to "games"?

Aaron was inclusive and he went wrong. Moses was exclusive and [illegible]s face shone with glory and his heart with divine blessing. Our safety and not our danger lies in a scriptural exclusiveness. —H. F. Carpenter.

CORN SHEAVES GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.

Atheism—The whole spiritual universe is shattered and shivered by the hand of Atheism into innumerable glittering quicksilver globules of individual personalities running hither and thither at random, coalescing and parting asunder, without unity, coherence or consistency. In all this wide universe there is none so utterly solitary and alone as a denier of God. With orphaned heart—a heart which has lost the great Father—he mourns beside the immeasurable corpse of nature, a corpse no longer animated or held together by the great Spirit of the universe—a corpse which grows in its grave: and by this corpse he mourns until he himself crumbles and falls away from it into nothingness. The wide earth lies before such an one like the great Egyptian sphinx of stone, half buried in the desert sand: the immeasurable universe has become for him but the cold iron mask upon an eternity which is without form and void.

The Last Hours of Nero, the Persecutor.—(The following is an account of the last hours of that wicked persecuting Emperor whom the apostle Paul referred to as "the lion" out of whose "mouth" the Lord delivered him. His miserable death seemed to be the natural end of a wretched life, reaping as he had sown.)

There is no need to dwell on the miserable spectacle of his end, perhaps the meanest and most pusillanimous which has ever been recorded. The poor wretch who without a pang had caused so many brave Romans and so many innocent Christians to be murdered could not sum up resolution to die. He devised every operatic incident of which he could think. When even his most degraded slaves urged him to have sufficient manliness to save himself from the fearful infamies which otherwise awaited him he ordered his grave to be dug and fragments of marble to be collected for its adornment, and water and wood for his funeral pyre, perpetually whining 'What an artist to perish!'

Meanwhile a courier arrived from Phaen. Nero snatched his despatches out of his hand, and read that the Senate had decided that he should be punished in the ancestral fashion as a public enemy. Asking what the ancestral fashion was he was informed that he would be stripped naked and scourged to death with rods and his head thrust into a fork. Horrified at this he seized two daggers and after theatrically trying their edges, sheathed them again, with the excuse that the fatal moment had not yet arrived. Then he bade Sporus begin to sing his funeral song, and begged some one to show him how to die. Even his own intense shame at his cowardice was an insufficient stimulus, and he whiled away the time in rapid epigrams and pompous quotations. The sound of horses' hoofs then broke on his ears, and, venting one more Greek quotation, he held the dagger to his throat. It was driven home by Epaphroditus, one of his literary slaves. At this moment the centurion who came to arrest him rushed in. Nero was not yet dead, and, under pretense of helping him, the centurion began to staunch the wound with his cloak. "Too late," he said, "is your fidelity." So he died, and the bystanders were horrified with the way in which his eyes seemed to be starting out of his head in a rigid stare. He had begged that he body might be burned without posthumous insults and this was conceded by Icelus, the freedman of Galba.

So died the last of the Caesars.

Keep the Atmosphere Pure.—Keep clear of personalities in conversation. Talk of things, objects, thoughts. The smallest minds occupy themselves with persons. Do not heedlessly report ill of others. As far as possible, dwell on the good side of human beings. There are family boards where a constant process of depreciating, assigning motives, and cutting up character goes forward. They are not pleasant places. One who is healthy does not wish to dine at a dissecting table. There is evil in man, but it is not the mission of every young man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible, and fragrant with gentleness and charity.

One String People — We have all met such persons, because they are found in all ranks and conditions of society, and perhaps nowhere else are they met with more frequently than in religious circles. No matter what phase of Christian life or doctrine is being conversed upon, they have but one point of view from which they can see it and be happy, and if this point, which is often narrow enough, does not embrace what is being spoken about, then they either have nothing to say, or secretly fret and fume for a chance to bring out their one favorite topic for remark, or contention, as the case may be. Now this "one string" which is continually harped upon, may be in itself a most melodius one, but even that good quality will not redeem it from wearisomeness in repetition, to those who have it persistently pressed upon them, in and out of season; besides, it is doing despite to a good thing to treat it so inconsiderately. The field of Divine truth is very wide, and richly varied, and he enjoys most of its variety and richness who seeks to know these most, and does not confine himself to the admiration of one beauty, where the beautiful is so abundant and attractive.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

VI. Plurality of Bishops.

There is of recent years a theory which claims to be sustained by momentous events occurring in the first century. It is claimed that Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem, which occurred in the year 70, and raised his saints from the dead, and took away all the living ones and gave them immortality, and they were taken away to reign with him over the earth; and that a period of about forty years elapsed between this event and the Christians again preaching the gospel of salvation to the world. To any person who will pay attention to the facts of history, this theory will at once appear absurd. A cruel persecution raged against the Christians right in the middle of this period, which is claimed to be a blank in all Christian life upon the earth. The evidence already given from Pliny and other writers shows clearly that at the opening of the second century the Christians were extremely numerous and very active; not only had the religion of Jesus Christ during this period spread amongst the freedmen and slaves of the Roman empire, but it had worked its way into the household of Caesar, and some of his own relations had become earnest believers; and this was probably the reason which caused Domitian to persecute the Christians. Haanach, one of the most careful and able of ecclesiastical writers, says: "An entire branch of the Flavian family embraced Christianity. Flavius Clemens and his wife Flavia Domitilla; the former the cousin of the emperor, the latter his niece." Dion Cassius informs us that these two persons were accused of atheism and going astray after the custom of the Jews. Clemens was put to death, and Domitilla was banished to the island of Pandataria in the Aegean. Gibbons, in referring to the above statement of Dion Cassius, says: "A singular association of ideas which cannot with any propriety be applied except to the Christians." This Domitilla apparently returned to Rome after Domitian's death, for she gave a cemetery to the Christians for a burying place. "The cemetery of Domitilla has been discovered by the labors of De Rossi, with inscriptions abundantly attesting her ownership of the ground and its use for Christian burial."

The so-called letter of Clement to the church at Corinth, already referred to, was written before the close of the century, and it is a great stumbling-block to the modern bishops who claim descent from the apostles, as this latter clearly shows that there was no one bishop in authority either in Rome or in Corinth at this time. It is assumed by all writers at least after the second century, that Clement was the bishop of Rome at that time, that is, that he was head of all others; but the letter itself contains no evidence to this effect; it is entirely written in the name of the church of Rome to the church at Corinth, which had for some reason expelled their bishops; they are spoken of all through the letter in the plural, and no one individual is ever mentioned as being head of the church. Various attempts have been made by believers in the authority of one bishop to account for this to them, strange omission in the early writers; it is always assumed by those who believe in the authority of one bishop that this was the condition of the church from the beginning. Rev. H. S. Holland, already quoted, referring further to the church at Corinth, as shown in the letter to it from the church at Rome says: "What the inner constitution of that body was we are not told. There may have been a chief seat in it, without which it would not have had such high powers attributed to it. We do not think that the words of St. Clement exclude such a possibility, but they say nothing of it." The condition of things then at Rome moves far more clearly in familiar episcopal lines than seems to have been the case at Corinth without any explanation. It may be that Corinth was exceptionally backward in organization, yet Clement speaks with immense respect of the former condition of the Corinthian church before the "impious and detestable schism." It seems to have been in the very first rank of the Christian society, a high and pure model of Christian living; and this good life had been marked by peculiar respect for authority. There is no hint given of insufficient or imperfect authority." Then Holland adds, "May it not have been during a vacancy in the chief seat that this revolt against the presbyters occurred?"

The fact is, there was no chief seat in any of the churches at this time, and never was a chief seat till after this, unless an apostle was present in a church. It was not till long after this—till men commenced to lord it over the church and claimed to be the "successors of the apostles. They could have no successors in the sense in which this claim is made; they were directly appointed by Christ for a special purpose; they were witnesses of His resurrection (Acts i 21,22). And Paul claims to be an apostle because he had "seen Jesus Christ our Lord." Consequently no one could be an apostle unless he had seen the Lord after His resurrection.

The appointment of bishops, presbyters or elders, all synonymous terms in the New Testament, for a different purpose there was a plurality of them appointed, no matter how small that church was; and their duty was to "take care of the church of God." They were not to be "greedy of filthy lucre," which many of those who claim apostolic succession have been. Paul left Titus in Crete that he should "set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city." He was not to ordain a bishop in the island of Crete. According to Rev. H. S. Holland, Corinth was "exceptionally backward in organization." Later, when Paul sent for the elders of the church at Ephesus (Acts xx.17), and told them that he had "kept nothing back that was profitable" unto them, surely if a chief seat was necessary or profitable he would have appointed it.

A beautiful specimen of how facts can be twisted to suit theories, where interests are concerned, is the following concerning the elders of the church at Ephesus. This extract is from Archbishop Wake's work, The Apostolic Fathers. After speaking of the high position of the church of Ephesus in Revelation, he says: "Nor is it any small confirmation of this opinion that when St. Paul passed through Asia to Jerusalem we read (Acts xx) that, not having time to go himself to Ephesus, he ordered the elders of that church to meet him at Miletus, and there gave his last charge to them. Now who those elders were we are plainly told (ver. 28); they were the bishops of that church. But it is certain that in those days there was but one bishop, properly so called, in a church at one time, and therefore these could not be the bishops of that city alone, but must have been rather the Bishop of Ephesus together with the bishops of the other neighboring churches within that district; and it was probably Timothy who now came at the head of them." What a pity from these modern "bishops'" standpoint that they could not re-write the New Testament: they would then be able to fix it so that it would teach exactly what they wished. Contrary to the statement of Archbishop Wake, the matter of the development of "one bishop" over a church was of slow growth, and was not fully developed till well on in the second century. Mosheim, who is much more exact and candid on this subject, says: Such was the constitution of the Christian church in its infancy, when its assemblies were neither numerous nor splendid. Three or four presbyters, men of remarkable piety and wisdom, ruled these small congregations in perfect harmony. Nor did they stand in need of a president or superior to maintain concord and order where no dissensions were known."

The Epistle from the Romans to the Corinthians, commonly called Clement's first Epistle, says: "The apostles received the gospel for us from the Lord Jesus Christ; Jesus Christ was sent from God. Christ then from God, and the apostles from Christ. Both commissions therefore were given in due order by the will of God. Having then received their orders, and being fully assured by the resurrection of Je us Christ our Lord and trusting in the word of what was about to come, as they preached through the country places and cities they appointed the first fruits of their preaching to be bishops and deacons of those who would believe, when they had proved them by the Spirit. Disgraceful is it, beloved, very disgraceful and unworthy of your training in Christ, that it should be reported that the most stedfast church of the Corinthians, at the instigation of one or two persons, hath rebelled against its presbyters." The Didache, already quoted, written probably in the first half of the second century, by its instructions shows that at that time the church had no chief seat. The majority of the churches, for probably nearly a hundred years after Paul's death, followed the rule set them by the apostles of having bishops or elders in every church as well as deacons. We are told in Acts xiv. 23 that Paul and Barnabas, after visiting the churches, "ordained them elders in every church." And Peter, in 1 Peter v., writes: "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder. * * * Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind. Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock;" and their reward for undertaking this arduous work, without getting any present pay, was to be "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." At first this was all-sufficient, and the bishops not only often worked with their own hands to maintain themselves and their families, but they also assisted the poor from their own earnings.

There were many in the early church who had particular gifts, and while it was the duty of the elders or bishops to rule in love, Paul says (Rom. xii. 4-8): "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness." The rulers might do all these things, but every other one was to do any of these things he was able; and this condition of things continued to exist for many years; they were all one in Jesus Christ, and if any one had a word of exhortation he was at liberty to give it, so long as everything was done decently and in order. Holland's statement that "the condition of things then at Rome moves far more clearly in familiar episcopal lines than seems to have been the case at Corinth," goes upon the assumption that the letter was written by Clement as the one bishop of Rome at this time, but such an idea is foreign to the whole structure of the letter.

We see, then, from this review, that no great changes had taken place in the Christian church at the end of the first century from the state of things in existence at the death of Paul. The keeping or non-keeping of the laws of Moses was no longer a troublesome question with most of the Gentile churches. They met on the first day of the week, often very early in the morning to remember the Lord's death till He would come again; many of them were slaves, and they had to steal back again to attend to their various duties. They did not attempt to keep the seventh day because it was not required of them, and to do so under their circumstances would have been an impossibility. They were earnest believers in the second coming of Christ; that was their great hope and expectation. When they laid the dead away in the silent tomb, they laid them in the hope of glorious resurrection when the Lord would come. They took comfort that that "were asleep," and the Lord would awaken them; they as yet had no belief in an intermediate state; to them the faithful one was dead, and would remain so till the resurrection. They baptized by immersion, and only on confession of faith; on a simple confession this was done, and there was no delay. This confession embraced the belief that Christ was the son of God; that He came in the flesh; that He was born of the virgin Mary; that He suffered and was tempted on a points as we are; that He literally died and was literally buried; that He was raised again. This literal death was strongly insisted upon about this time on account of the spread of Gnosticism towards the close of the century, which taught that Christ only seemed to die; that the body of Jesus died, but that Christ left the body and went to heaven when Jesus was crucified. They as yet knew nothing of the doctrine of the Trinity, which was evolved much later. The form of church government was still as the apostles had organized it. There was a plurality of rulers in every church, no matter how small the church. These rulers were called bishops, presbyters, or elders, all terms meaning the same persons. There were deacons appointed under them, but there were as yet no salaried officials; they all did their work for love, and worked with their own hands. They collected money, and gave to any one in need.

Toronto Canada.

A. WALLACE MASON.

OBITUARY.

Julia Garn.

Julia Kemmerling Garn, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Kemmerling, was born May 11, 1848, in Sandusky County, Ohio. Her mother died when she was ten years old, leaving her to the care of her father.

She was united in marriage to James Garn, February 14, 1867. They soon afterwards came to Marshall county, Indiana, locating upon a farm north from Culver, where they lived until 1896, when they moved to this place, where they have since lived. Her husband died, December 12, 1901, leaving her a childless widow.

Sister Garn has always been religiously inclined, and found a home in the Evangelical church in her early life in Ohio. Upon hearing the gospel preached by Brother L. E. Conner, she was baptized and received into the Church of God, March 2, 1891, where she remained a loyal member until her death. She was an active member of the local W. R. C. lodge, and was held in high esteem by its members. Her relations in society were such as to make many warm friends and neighbors, who will ever hold her in kind remembrance.

She has been in declining health for three years, and confined to her bed for two months, and finally succumbed to the inevitable, Friday, November 10, 1911, at her home in Culver, Indiana, having lived 62 years, 5 months and 29 days. She leaves two sisters, two brothers, one half-brother, three half-sisters, and many other relatives to mourn because of her death.

The funeral services were held from her late residence on Monday, November 13, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m., by the writer, and she was laid to rest in the Poplar Grove cemetery to await the coming of her Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and his resurrection.

D. E. VAN VACTOR.

Argos, Ind.

NO CONVERSION OF THE WORLD BEFORE THE LORD COMES.

"A Prudent Man Forseeth the Evil;" but the Optimist Thinks Each Earthquake to be the Last.

1. Did Christ expect the world to be converted in His absence, when he said that the wheat and tares "must grow together until the harvest" and that the angels shall not "sever the wicked from amongst the just" until the end of the age? (Matt. 13:38).

2. In Matt. 24, Mark 13 and Luke 21, does not Christ definitely say that the worst "time of trouble" for "the elect" shall immediately precede His return?

3. If the Lord did not expect the world to be converted before His return why should the optimist?

4. In as much as Christ predicted that there would be a "time of trouble such as never was" just before His return and also that "wars and rumors of war" would continue until that time, what will stop war? Will the optimist by saying, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace?"

5. Did Paul expect to convert the world when he said, if by all means I might save some?"

6. Did Peter when he said God intended "to take out of the Gentiles a people for His name?"

7. Did Christ expect the world to be converted in His absence when He said "I come not to bring peace but a sword?" and, "A man's foes shall be those of his own household?"

8. Is there a verse in the Bible which says the world will be converted before the Lord returns?

9. Did the writer of Hebrews expect the world to be converted during Christ's absence? "But this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever sat down on the right hand of God from thenceforth expecting till His enemies be made the footstool of His feet."

10. If the world is converted before the Lord returns when will the Scripture be fulfilled about destroying those at His coming who obey not the gospel of His Son?

12. "When the Son of Man cometh shall He find faith on the earth?"

13. Is the predicted apostacy of the latter days the conversion of the world?

14. Will the apostasy of the latter days occur before after, or during the conversion of the world?

15. In any case will so-called optimism hasten or retard the apostasy?

16. Did any historic creed, Protestant or Catholic, teach that the world would be converted before the Lord comes?

17. At the judgment of living nations (Matt. 25) did the sheep inherit the kingdom before or after the judgment?

18. If the world is to be converted before the Lord's return, must not the "narrow way" gradually be broadened? But since the broader a church becomes the less missionary work it does, when will the world be converted?

19. If the world is converted before the Lord returns, is it not strange that "all the (Christian) tribes of the earth shall mourn when they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven," and still more strange that the Jews will say, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord?

20. Is it not expressly stated that the coming of the Son of Man in a cloud shall precede the coming of the kingdom? "When ye shall see these things come to pass know ye that the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

21. Is our citizenship in heaven "from whence also we look for the Lord," or in the "city of destruction?" Are people to be saved out of the city of destruction, or is the latter to be converted into the celestial city?

22. Did not Christ teach that "leaven" stands for corrupt doctrine? Is then the church the leaven which is to corrupt the world, or, is the leaven the false doctrine which has corrupted the church in Latin and Greek countries for instance?

23. Does not John's description of the Seven Churches of Asia, indicate that the church may become badly leavened?

24. Are not the once Christian nations around the Mediterranean, now the most un-Christian? Was the Christianity of Paul less vigorous than modern Christianity?

25. If fifty pagans are born for every one converted, when will the world be converted?

26. Was any city or town ever entirely Christian even for a short time?

27. If in 1650, nearly all the inhabitants of Boston were Christian, and in 1902 ten per cent. only belong to evangelical churches, when will the world be converted? What then is the hope of the church?

28. Judging from American politics, will the theocratic kingdom be established by means of a republic based on the theory that fools and sinners will never be in the majority?

29. If the Lord is not coming until after the Millenium, will the scientists be able to find antidotes for disease, death, cyclones, floods earthquakes and volcanos?

30. Can it be done if the prince of this world is not to be chained until after the Lord's return?

31. If the Lord when He returns is to destroy the "man of sin" how can the world be converted before the Lord returns?

32. Since the apostle said, "Little children, it is the last time, and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come," why not believe it?

33. Do not all the New Testament writers betray as one has said, a "strong pre-millenial bias?" How did they get it?

34. If loosing the devil is to break up the Millennium, will it begin while he is still loose?

35. Which is the optimist, the man who is waiting for the Lord to come to bring about the resurrection and "rapture" of the church, the consolation of Israel, and the "restitution of all things spoken of by the prophets" or, is it the man who thinks the Lord must wait until the world is converted in spite of prophecy?

36. According to Acts 15: 16. 17, will the "residue of men" seek after the Lord before or after his return?

37. Does not the New Testament predict for the church, "in this present evil age tribulation" rather than triumph?

38. Is not a man who says he is mildly "catastrophic" and is neither a pre nor a post-millennialist in a pre-post-erous position?—The Lord's Coming.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

"Did any of the early Christian writers teach the total unconscious of man in death? If so, who? And in what language?" Answer.—"The soul, O Grecians, is not immortal in its nature, but mortal. For it dieth and is dissolved with the body, if it be ignorant of the truth. But riseth again in the consummation of the world together with the body, suffering death in immortality by self by way of penalty and torment." Tatian A. D. 172. Oratio Centra Grecos.—Sec. 13, p. 59.

"He (Tatian) fancied that the soul was dissolved with the body, and rose again with it at the resurrection. For as he makes all souls to die with the body, so he makes them all rise again with it also."—Dr. S. Clarke, letter to Dodwell.

About A. D. 245, the Arabian Christians, where Paul had preached were found to be entirely out of the line of false philosophy. "These asserted that the human soul as long as the present state of the world existed—perished at death and died with the body, but was raised again at the time of the resurrection."—And as a considerable council was held on account of this. Origen being again requested, likewise here discussed the point in question.—Eusebius' Eccl. Hist. B. 4, ch. 37.—Observe:

1. These were called heretics, men, who, like Paul, who had preached salvation in Arabia, worshipped after the way that men called "heresy."

2. This doctrine prevailed so much that "a considerable council" was held about it.

3. Origen had met the question before, for here "being again requested" he discussed the point in dispute.

The champion brought to teach Arabian brethren to reject Christ's truth and receive heathen philosophy, was an old, half-converted heathen philosopher who believed in the pre-existence of souls, (I think also their transmigration)—in the restoration of all wicked men and devils; who brought more fooleries into the church than any other man who had lived, who interpreted one scripture so literally that he made himself a eunuch in his holy fanaticism, and who interpreted other scriptures so figuratively as to spiritualize, not only almost all the Old Testament, but even the Egyptian midwives!—Exod. 1. He of course would be just the man to "spoil" the Arabians thru philosophy and vain deceit after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ," and of course on the spiritualizing principle could prove that life was death, and death life; sleep, waking, and waking, sleep; curse was blessing, and blessing curse; light, darkness and darkness light; good was evil; and evil, good; sweet was bitter, and bitter, sweet.—Sel.

Courage for the great sorrows of life and patience for the small ones. And then, when you have accomplished your daily task, go to sleep in peace. God is awake. —Victor Hugo.

Glad is the singing of workers,
Workers 'neath shadow and sun;
Blessed the hand of the toiler
Leaving no labor undone.
—Frank Wolcott Hatt.

What is the end of life? The end of life is not to do good, though many of us think so. It is not to win souls, though I once thought so. It is to do the will of God, whatever that may be.—Drummond.

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to and the last duty well done.—George MacDonald.

Failures.—Probably it is a good and wholesome thing for the advancement of mankind that very few persons contemplate or make any special preparation for failures. Hope buoys them up with visions of success, and though they see example all round them of broken fortunes, hard times, and defeats of every kind, they fondly believe such evils will not come to them. Only thus could the work of the world go on steadily and cheerfully. Were each one occupied in imagining possible disasters and mentally gauging his fortitude to bear them his power and enthusiasm for actual effort would be sadly diminished.

The First Law of Childhood.—The first law of childhood to be followed as rigorously as it is inculcated, is that of absolute obedience to authority. This is a necessary condition for safety, not to speak of peace. Where children do not obey orders to attend to prohibitions they are always in some danger. From the rotten branch of the tree up which they are told not to climb, and up which they forthwith swarm, to the reading of a forbidden book—from the treacherous morass which they are warned not to cross alone to the undesirable acquaintance whom they are urged to drop and forbidden to bring home—it is the same thing. Age and experience know—youth and ignorance do not, and the only safety for youth is to be guided by the better wisdom of age in those things where experimentalizing is dangerous and a mistake is a disaster.

When the Sun Shines Through. There is a great difference between the effect of a stained glass window on a dark day, and that of the same window when glorified by the rays of the sun. Tasks that look dark and unlovely take on another aspect when the sunshine of cheerfulness shines thru them. And cheerfulness is a sun which never sets, though sometimes it suffers partial or total eclipse.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the brethren scattered abroad:

Our Heavenly Father has now placed me in such a position that I can give four or five months of the year to helping the cause at no money expense to them, unless may railway fare is paid, and that I will pay myself for moderate distances if those who invite me cannot afford to pay it. I have been preaching the gospel for many years, I also am a hygienic physician; also a graduate of phrenology, and have lectured much on these subjects. Any church wishing my services may address,

DR. WALLACE MASON,
Solina, Ont., Canada.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

A Lover of Truth	10.00
W. H. Eidmiller	1.00
E. Randolph	.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Pattern Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with great economy, clothing for yourself and children who is still be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents. 100 for 40 cents.

Modern events in the Light of Prophecy. By H. V. Reed, 5 cents each, or 30 for $1.00.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

THE MESSENGER.

is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 65 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that It is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

"is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE :: CLEVELAND

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Ohio

Capital Stock $5000 Shares $10 Each

Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

B. H. LANG, PRESIDENT
C. A. GOSS, VICE PRESIDENT
BUELL W. NUTT, SECRETARY-MGR.
HARRY POTT, TREASURER

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

B. H. LANG — W. G. ROTHE
W. S. TOMLINSON — HARRY POTT
D. C. ROBINSON — BUELL W. NUTT
C. A. GOSS

While most of the stock to be sold has been subscribed for, there is still some left. If you want to be one of the helpers, if you want to be identified with a band of earnest workers who are anxious to spread the Gospel and bring cheer and encouragement to hundreds of isolated brethren, send for some this remaining stock.

The terms are 25 per cent. down, the balance in three payments. Make checks payable to

The Restitution Publishing Co.

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (1 Thess. 4:13-18:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (1 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER 28, 1911 No. 45

ONLY LAST YEAR

By S. Roxana Wince

Only last year
He was here—
My blessed companion in hope,
Holding fast to the rope,
And rejoicing with me
In the glory to be.
When Jesus returns and the earth
Shall smile in her beautiful birth.
Only last year
He was here—
Dear writer of sermon and song,
And pastor of church for long
All eager to live
Every moment to give
To Christ and His glorious cause
And the spread of his life-giving laws.
Only next year
He again may be here,
Transfigured in garments of white
His face like the light,
Reunited once more
To the loved ones of yore
And joining with Jesus in song
That only to saved ones belong.
Only next year
He again may be here;
Then hasten, O hands to thy work
No duty to shirk;
Seeds of truth must be sown
Lost sinners be won.
The Gospel be carried afar
Where no gates from his own can the Saviour debar.
Only next year
He again may be here!
My heart gives a bound
For my love will be crowned,
When the Master comes down
To His country and throne
And the work that was dropped on mortality's sands
Will go on forever, its immortality hands.

Hereford, Ind.

THANKSGIVING AND THANKS-LIVING

By James Silvester, M. A., of Nympsfield, Gloucestershire England

And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto God and the Father by him.—Col. iii. 17.

A prevailing note of this epistle is in its precepts of thankfulness. The Colossians are bidden to thank God for their Christian state and standing, "giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." Col. 1:12. They are exhorted in their Christian walk and their faith's establishment to abound therein with thanksgiving. Col. 2:7. The anthem of praise is the war cry of faith. To masters, the Apostle says, "Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving." Col. 4:2. The work of praise will keep them from dulness and deadness in their devotion. In the third chapter the thankful disposition is urged with the call to the inward controlling peace of God: "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, unto which ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful." And in our text the outward life is to be governed by the thankful spirit.

Let us regard the subject, then, under the two aspects of Thanksgiving and thanksliving:

I. Thanksgiving is a duty; it ought to be a pleasure and a delight.

We are not worthy of the least of God's mercies which He has shown to us. Our only worthiness is in thankfully accepting them. This is the spirit of public worship. "We assemble and meet together to render thanks for the great benefits which we have received at His hands, to set forth God's most worthy praise." in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs we echo the choral harmonies of heaven. The incense of this sacrifice rises up before the throne, and is well-pleasing to the Majesty on high. "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me." And this should be, as the text says, the spirit of our daily life and our private devotion.

"For mercies countless as the sands
Which daily I receive
From Jesus my Redeemer's hands
My soul, what shall I give?"

"We bless God for our creation, preservation, and the blessings of this life." He has given us a being in which we may enjoy the works of His hand. He gave us the precious things of heaven, the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and the precious things put forth by the moon, the chief things of the ancient mountains, and the precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof, and of the deep that coucheth beneath. It is He that fills the heart with food and gladness. It is He whose providence insures our safety, and in whom we live and move and have our being. It is He who teacheth us more than the beasts of earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven. Indeed, to recount all His blessings would be to write the story of our lives. And so many are the deeds of mercy to men which Jesus, the divine Mediator has done, that if they were written, every one, even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. "Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
My daily thanks employ;
Nor is the least a cheerful heart
That tastes these gifts with joy."

Yet how little gratitude is rendered to the giver of every good and perfect gift! How many hours, how many hearts, as speaking praise to God are as silent as the grave! God has brought up children, and they have rebelled against him. What other proof do we need than this of man's utter backsliding from the ways of God and of his need of those higher blessings, "the redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ, the means of grace, and the hope of glory?" Here is matter for endless thanksgiving and eternal praise. The true Christian can never tire of this theme. It is his life, it is his salvation, it is all his desire. "We joy in God," writes the apostle in another epistle, "because we have now received the reconciliation" (Rom. v. 11). Christ is in the Christian the hope of glory. He has redemption through his blood—the forgiveness of sins. He is dead with Christ to sin, risen with Him to righteousness. Emptied himself of grace and goodness, he partakes of the divine fullness in Christ, and is made full in Him. And in the presence-chamber of the King he knows by whose right and title he enters, in whose name he claims audience, and by whom he offers thanksgiving—even by Jesus, the only mediator. It is more common to think of Christ as offering our prayers than as offering our praises; but even praise can not be offered without His intercession. Even when we would thank God, He is the way to the Father; no man cometh unto the Father but by Him.

II. But Thanksgiving is the best form of giving thanks, even as, according to the true proverb, "Actions speak louder than words."

And in "doing all in the name of the Lord Jesus," we are in a real way thanking Him for His loving-kindness and His tender mercy. We then "have that due sense of all God's mercies, that our hearts being unfeignedly thankful, we show forth his praise not only with our lips, but in our lives, by giving up ourselves to His service." Thus to do all in the name of the Lord Jesus means something more than in invoking His name at the beginning of our labors, like Mohammedans, who, it is said, never undertake work, eat meat or write a book without this invocation, "in the name of the most merciful and compassionate God."

True, we read, "Let him that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity;" but the name of Christ has too often been used to cover the works of the devil. Yea, verily, the precept means much more than the verbal use of Christ's name. This would be nominal Christianity indeed. A name is a title to credit, as when we tell a person he may use our name to gain him some position of promotion. And in this way we use the name of Christ. Indeed, He puts His name upon us, and his church like Himself, is called the Lord our righteousness. Therefore, in carrying out this precept, the Christian is to remember his position before God, as in Christ and one with Christ; not his own, but one bought with a price; one to whom old things have past away and all things have become new. Thus naming the name of Christ, he departs from iniquity. Again, a name is used to denote the character and reputation of another; indeed, this is only another aspect of the name as we have already seen it used. Doing all things in the name of Christ will thus lead us to serve and glorify God, and to bring honor to that holy name by the which we are called.

Therefore, "Whatsoever ye do, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." The precept extends to all our actions and comprehends all our life. "Whatsoever."—that is a hard saying. It means that Christ must control all we say and do, and that in our words and deeds He must be our guide. Our service must not be in the spirit of the son that said, "I go, sir," and went not; but in that of him who said, "What wilt thou have me to do?" It is ever to make a shift of Christ—to carry about a pocket religion which we can hide away at any moment. It requires no great effort and it keeps conscience quiet to say a few prayers, to read a few verses of Scripture, to hear a Sunday sermon. But if we really have Christ in our hearts, and rejoice in his salvation, our religion will go further than all this. We shall be root and branch Christians, taking root downward and bearing fruit upward evermore.

"Whatsoever ye do, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." So will Christ preside over our life; and we may not expect His blessing in anything in which he is not Jesus our Lord and King. The text divides our life into its two parts of utterance and action: "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed."

1st. "In word." (1) Let speech be in the name of Christ. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth—no ribald talk, no wanton jest, no profane speech, no careless oath, no coarse revilings, no foolish, vapid, worthless words, no vain boasts, no savage threats, no base insinuations, no unfeeling sneer, no untruthful and malicious stories, no uncharitable suggestion. This is not the conversation for Christians. But how unruly and untamable is the tongue! And what need there is to pray. "Set a watch, O Lord, upon my mouth; keep the door of my lips"! Yet what a noble instrument is that member called by the Psalmist his "glory"! Let us pray that our tongue may be bridled and our speech sanctified, that what we say may be good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace to the hearers. Let us speak a word in season as opportunity arises and help is given from above. My brother or sister, is this what you are seeking to do?

(2) The same rule applies to song. We are not called to be singing psalms all day long; but let us see that what we sing we may sing in the name of the Lord Jesus to the glory of God. Let it be something that is true, something that is honorable, something that is just, something that is pure, something that is of good report, something that is virtuous and worthy of praise (Phil. iv. 8).

But let us always all treasure up in our hearts the songs of Zion, for there are none like them. Sing and admonish one another in them; and both in public worship and in social gatherings turn teachers and teachers, one to another, in the voice of praise. Let your heart's petition be:

"Take my voice, and let me sing
Always only for my King."

2nd. "In deed." A parallel text is that wherein St. Paul enjoins the Corinthian Christians, whatsoever they "do, to do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. x. 31). This explains the precept to "do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Indeed, the two texts are mutually explanatory, for to be guided by the grace of Christ is to live to the glory of God. And such a principle lifts all work above the mere earthly character of its own. So St. Paul, speaking to the Colossian Christian slaves, says: "Whatsoever ye do, do it from the heart, as to the Lord, and not unto men knowing that from the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance, for ye serve the Lord Christ." (Col. iii. 23, 24).

(1) Endeavor to make this truth your own in your business or calling, whatever it may be. The Christ that wrought in the workshop at Nazareth, that expounded in the synagogue and taught in the Temple, that traveled north, south, east, west, with willing feet and hands ever reached out to heal and bless, was a man of labor and acquaintance with toil, and He puts the seal of his holy name upon every honest work. Do your work, therefore, "in the name of the Lord Jesus." But how often it is that we see all this is true—men do not glorify God in the labors of their calling. They do not recognize that it is He that giveth them power to get wealth; they forget that these earthly activities are to prepare us for the services of the heavenly sanctuary. They too often allow a general adherence to right principle to cover many an unscrupulous transaction or custom in this or that part of their work. Ah! they are not sanctifying their work by regarding it in its true light, and by doing it in the spirit of Him who said: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." (John iv. 34).

(2) Seek to realize the precept of the text in your pleasures and recreations. Here, again, men err not so much in doing what is wrong as in engaging in recreation in the wrong spirit. The spirit of Christ and of Christian thankfulness is to have no enjoyment apart from God; and the best test to which to bring doubtful occupations and amusements is to ask ourselves the questions: first, Can I follow them in the name of Christ, and have they His approval? And, second, Can I therein maintain my communion with Him and my character as a Christian? Joy in God must be joy before Him. (Rom. v. 11; 1 Thess. iii. 9).

(3) How blessed it is when men are led by the Holy Spirit to fulfill the text in their public capacity! How great a change would come over our country if the principle of doing everything in the name of Christ and to the glory of God were observed in the committee room, in the council chamber, in the senate house! The low maxims of worldly expediency, the impotent, because time-serving, public morality of the present day, in yielding to the nobler law of Christian life and love would prepare the way for such a revolution in social and national life as would antedate the final blessedness, and give the world in these last days one more convincing proof of the truth of Christianity.

I am glorifying God: I am working for eternity! Let this thought possess and encourage us all. Look at those temples of God, noble monuments of mediæval art in our land, and learn a lesson from them. Beautiful for elevation as they often are, they are beautiful to the searching eye in their elegant proportions and delicate and rich embellishments. The workmen that wrought such wondrous work have long mingled with their kindred dust; but their work remains a glory of the ages for strength and magnificence. Even so we in our own little life may, by our work of faith and labor of love and patience of hope, be helping to build up that glorious temple of God's elect which shall be seen and known of all men in the day of Christ's coming—the day of the gladness of our heart.

"Greatness is not goodness; yet so akin, it may be greatly good.
The good are great; the greatest he
Who closest walks, my God, to thee."

PRAISE THE LORD.

Dear friends scattered abroad: We have been blessed for the last year, and hope we may enjoy God's blessing through another year, if our dear Lord don't come to reign before another year comes forth.

Dear brethren, may we publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all his wondrous works Ps. 2:7. With thanksgiving, and with singing, with symbols and with harps. Neh. 12:27. Let us offer unto God thanksgiving and pay our vows unto the most high. Ps. 50:14. We will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify Him with thanksgiving. Ps. 69:30. Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms. Ps. 95:2. If all the saints will unite in praising the Lord, joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody. Isa. 51:3. Let us sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving. Gal. 2:7. We being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving unto God. 2 Cor. 9:11. Let everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving be made known unto God. Phil. 4:6. Let us be found, abounding in thanksgiving unto God. Col. 2:7. Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving. Col. 4:2. All things that we eat and wear we are there with to be content, with thankful hearts. God has created them to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth. 1 Tim. 4:3.

Those that do not know "the truth," but preach immortal soulism and eternal torment to the impenitent, going to the happy hunting ground when their house dies, and say the kingdom of God is in their little hearts, do not give God thanks, for they do not know "the truth," nor the God we worship, because they worship a god-man.

All of God's people in Christ Jesus are commanded to obey the above injunction and to "believe." And fully believed from the heart; then what? When the Lord shall come to set up the kingdom and judge the world in righteousness all the faithful will say, "Amen, blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, unto our God for ever and ever." O happy day! Rev. 7:12.

And in the final restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began: the following joyful song shall be heard: "Praise ye the Lord, praise God in His sanctuary; praise Him in the firmament of His power. Praise ye the Lord. Sing a new song. The Lord taketh pleasure in his people. Let everything that hath breath praise ye the Lord."

All these songs shall be voiced by fleshly Israel. When God restores them to their own land; for he has hid his face from them for a little while, but he will redeem them with great mercy. See Isa. 54:7, 8.

God hid his face as it were for a small moment to Him, but a long time to Israel; for ever since Titus besieged the City of Jerusalem, they as a nation have not had no king or kingdom. Read Isa. 52:13-15, and you may see who will be ruler over the Israelites. They will consider at Christ's second coming, but they did not consider at his first advent. Just as sure as God is God, all prophecy shall be fulfilled in the order he has planned in his purposes down through the ages until all shall be fulfilled.

When our blessed Lord shall come, and not until then, will righteousness be in the earth. For he told his disciples to pray "Thy kingdom come, that his will may be done in earth as in heaven." Dear brethren, hold fast the faith and continually rejoice and praise God with thanksgiving.

JAMES T. AULD.
Chrichsville, O.

THE MILLENNIUM NOT HERE YET.

"The Inhabitants of the land shall not say I am Sick." "But Now we see not yet all Things put Under Him."

1. Is it not strange that a man who is old enough to read the papers or walk around the corner, should say, "we are now in the millennium?"

2. Has the "whole creation" been "delivered from the bondage of corruption" in which it now "groaneth and travaileth?"

3. With ten thousand murders a year in the United States, will there not be ten millions in the United States alone before this millennium ends?

4. Are there not many other unpleasant incidents happening every day?

5. What have saloons, jails, asylums and hospitals to do with the millennium?

6. Are Jew-baiting mobs less brutal now than in the dark ages?

7. Does the European Jew or the American Negro think the millennium has come?

8. Has the millennium come in Finland Poland, Armenia or Russia?

9. Is increasing Sabbath desecration a sign of the millennium?

10. Did General Sherman think war a feature of the millennium?

11. Has human nature in heathen lands improved any since Paul wrote the epistle to the Romans?

12. What kind of a millennium can begin while death is the "prevailing habit?"

13. If the millennium is here, why pray "thy kingdom come?"

14. In view of frequent fires, floods, famines and earthquakes, should a man say the millennium is now here, simply because he himself feels comfortable?—The Lord's Coming, published by C. C. Cook.

He has not learned the lesson of life who does not every day surmount a fear.—R. W. Emerson.

Keep your eyes open to your mercies. The one who forgets to be thankful has fallen asleep.—R. L. Stevenson.

Little is much when God is in it;
Man's busiest day is not worth
God's minute.
So work with God and nothing's
lost;
Who works with him does best and most.

—Selected.

Press on, press on! nor doubt, nor fear;
From age to age this voice shall cheer;
Whate'er may die or be forgot,
Work done for God, it dieth not.

—Thomas Knox.

Always write your name in kindness, love and mercy upon the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. —Chalmers.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor,
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Poll,
Chas. A. Coss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Nov. 28, 1911

EDITORIAL

Plenty of sample copies on hand; can you use some?

If the minister is a light giver, the church should be a light bearer.

A sister suggested that those sisters who had married since being immersed put their maiden names on the blank as well as their present name—a good idea.

Dating November 21, a note from Bro. Adams says that Sister Free is getting a good many responses to the Evangelistic call to send Bro. Adams to Oklahoma and New Mexico. The Lord bless all the helpers.

Owing to a circulated report that Brother Underwood is now "the largest stock holder in the company," we wish to state that he owns not one cent of stock in The Restitution Publishing Co.—not even one cent.

Many of our readers will not be able tho agree with Bro. Webster in this issue on the time of our Lord's entombment. However, give his views a patient hearing, and if you cannot accept his theory you will at least have had a view of the "other side."

We are a poor poet. Our young people have been trying to sing, and the editor not knowing "jingle" from real poetry, has given their productions in The Restitution. Some readers of highly refined poetic sense have almost objected to this. However, Sister Wince expresses the general sentiment in a recent letter. She says, "Do not stop the young people's singing, let them write jingle if they choose."

Sister Eidmiller, of Troy, O., in sending a new subscriber remarks: "The paper is so good. We rejoice because we have such a grand messenger to come to our home every week. Almost every paper has an article that is worth the price of the paper. Oh, that we might all wake up and do our duty before it is too late!" Amen. Just think, if every subscriber of The Restitution would get one new subscriber during the year our mailing list would be doubled! Vast possibilities are within our reach. "Work, brethren, work."

Sister Woodbury, of Springfield, Ohio, writes of Wm. Sunday's big revival there; of the one thousand voices in the choir, lady soloists, the 7,000 "conversions," etc., etc. People do not object to being "revived" occasionally, provided they are left free to fall back into the slumbers of sweet sleep again. If Sunday preached the truth "as it is in Jesus" his method of sensationalism, creating an ocean wave instead of a ground swell, would render him practically useless in the Lord's service. The truth is only served by permanent light as in the apocalyptic "candlesticks" or lamp stands; flash lights are only blinding. That Sunday's work at Springfield was superficial we judge because a wet mayor was elected right on the heels of the meeting.

We likewise wish to contradict intimations that are being scattered by some, to the effect that the editor is a big stockholder in The Restitution and "runs things generally." We only own one share in the company, and therefore only run things to the extent of $10 worth! Since assuming the responsibilities of the editorial management of the paper, we have not received one penny as salary for our work, and only $1.00 in the form of a donation, which a good brother voluntarily handed me one day. Because we had no money to help the company in its publishing enterprise, we offered them all we had to give—our knowledge and experience, humble though they be, in literary work. They accepted the offer. "It is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing." 1 Pet. 3:17.

A sister who rather inclines to the theory of mortal emergence writes: "There is considerable testimony which bears out the idea of immortal emergence, but I believe Saul is speaking elliptically when he says the dead are "raised incorruptible." To me Christ's prerogative as judge is nullified by a pre-millenial judgment. "It is appointed to men once to die, and after this the judgment." Heb. 9:27. What do you think on this question?

We think that diversity of opinion on this subject results from finite minds mistaking half of the truth for the whole truth; or of making one part of truth antagonize another part. To repudiate a premillenial judgment because we find texts which speak of a post-resurrectional judgment is to accept one half of truth at the sacrifice of the other half. The ext quoted to prove a post resurrectional judgment, Heb. 9:27, does not do it exclusively, for the next verse is declaratory of those who will be saved at the judgment "after" death: "Those that look for him"—to these he will appear the second time "unto salvation." Let the sister diligently study the messages of Christ to the seven churches of Asia, recorded in the second and third chapters of the Apocalpse, noting carefully how our Lord commends some things and how he condemns others, and we fell sure she will not deny again that judgment is now in process of administration. Postresurrectional judgment is not the beginning of a process but the completion of a process already begun. If we pass the time of our sojourning here "in fear," as Paul admonishes us; if we make our calling and election "sure," as Peter exhorts, the future judgment, however terrible it may be to the ungodly, can have no terrors for us. If we are "faultless" we have the promise of being presented before the presence of His throne and glory "with exceeding joy." Jude 24.

THREE NIGHTS AND THREE DAYS IN THE TOMB.

It is the generally accepted belief that Jesus was crucified on Friday, and raised from the dead on Sunday morning. That this was not the fact is proven in many ways. The error comes about by thinking that the Sabbath day mentioned, which was preceded by a preparation day was the ordinary seventh day Sabbath. Jno. xix-14, says, "And it was the preparation of the Passover."

1st Corinthians v-7: "For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." In order to get a full understanding of this matter it is now necessary to know something of the Passover, which was a type of Christ. By turning to Exodus the twelfth chapter, we find many interesting things concerning it. We first notice the third verse: "In the tenth day of this month, they shall take to them every man a lamb." In the sixth verse we learn it was to be killed at even the fourteenth day. If it was taken in the morning it would be kept up nearly five days. Please bear this in mind; we will refer to it again.

It must be "a lamb without blemish," the firstling of the flock, which was all true of Christ. In the seventh verse, "And they shall take of the blood and strike it on the two side posts, and on the upper door posts." Christ's blood was spilled for us on the upright post and on the upper post of the door, whereby we are saved. The Cross.

In this same chapter, verse 16, "and in the first day there shall be an holy convocation, and in the seventh day, there shall be an holy convocation to you. No manner of work shall be done in them, save that every man must eat, that only may be done of you."

Here we have the Sabbath days instituted. They are here called holy convocation days. The first was kept by Christ and his disciples in the upper room; the second one was the day following his crucifixion. It may be asked, "Why, if this was Sabbath day was it not so designated at that time?" The reason is evident. First, because the law was not yet given; Second, neither was the Sabbath at that time instituted. The Sabbath was first mentioned while in the wilderness while gathering manna. Ex. xvi-23. In Leviticus xxiii, the Sabbath day is called holy convocation day.

Now that we have this matter clear, let us follow the footsteps of the Master during those terrible days.

The Passover lamb was slain on the fourteenth day of the month of Nisan at even, before the going down of the sun, according to the command of the Lord to Moses. Ex. xii-6. The day of the week was Thursday; it was an high and holy day, a convocation or Sabbath day, after which he institutes the memorial feast; then taught the eleven the beautiful lessons as recorded in John 13-14-15 and 16; then his prayer to the Father.

Jno. 18-1—"When he had spoken these words he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron. Here was a garden into which he entered and his disciples." He then told his disciples to sit, and took Peter James and John and withdrew to pray, telling them to watch. Twice he returned and found them asleep, then the third time said: Mark xiv. 41, "Sleep on now and take your rest, it is enough, the hour is come." He is then betrayed by Judas. None of the gospels inform us of the hour of the night, but from the fact that the disciples were so sleepy and all that had gone on before, it must have been past midnight.

In four gospels the account differs, each witness setting out such facts as made the greatest impression on his mind. Much is not told by any of them. Some tell facts that others seem to think of no importance, yet all agreeing as to the main events. As to the hour and days, but little is said, but enough when compared with other Scriptures, that we ascertain when the main events occur. Luke says, xxii-66: "As soon as it is day, the elders and the chief priests and the scribes come together and led him in to their council." John supplements this by saying, xviii-12-13: "Then the band and the captain and the officers of the Jews took Jesus and bound him, and led him to Annas first." In the 24th verse John says as though it was an after thought, 18-24: "Now Annas had sent him bound unto Caiphas the high priest." And it is John that tells something of his examination by the high priest Caiphas, when he asks Jesus of his disciples and his doctrine. Jno. 18-19, and it is here that we have a record of his having been first struck. After his examination and abuse, a general council is called as soon as it was day. And Luke says, 22-66. "The elders of the people and the chief priests and the scribes come together, and led him into their council."

Mark 14-55. "And the chief priest sand all the council sought for witnesses against Jesus to put him to death but found none." Please notice that they sought for witnesses, that means went out and looked for them.

The 56th verse says, "For many bare false witness, but their witness agreed not together." The fact I wish to present for consideration is this, that first, in the morning the council is called, it naturally takes some time for the chief men, the chief priests, the elders and the scribes to get together. Second, they spend more time looking after witnesses, as they were hard to find; Third, it takes time to examine all these witnesses.

Mathew 26, 59 and 60 says, "Now the chief priests and elders and all the council sought false witness against Jesus to put him to death, but found none, yea, though many false witness came yet found they none." After this lengthy examination of many witnesses the high priest arose and said, "Answer thou nothing, what is it these witnesses say against thee?" But Jesus held his peace. Then said the high priest, "I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the son of God."

64th verse Jesus said unto him, "Thou hast said, nevertheless I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven."

65. Then the high priest rent his clothes saying, "He has spoken blasphemy, what further need have we of witnesses, behold now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66. What think ye? They answered and said, he is guilty of death.

67. Then they spit in his face, and buffeted him, and others smote him with the palm of the hand.

68. Saying, Prophecy unto us thou Christ, who is he that smote thee?

Not until all the above had transpired is he led away to Pilot. Luke records says.

Luke xxiii-1. And the whole multitude arose and led him to Pilot.

2. And they begin to accuse him saying, we found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ a king.

3. And Pilot asked him, saying, art thou the king of the Jews, and he answered him and said, thou sayest it.

4. Then said Pilot to the chief priests and to the people, I find no fault with this man.

5 And they were the more fierce saying, he stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jerusalem, beginning at Galilee to this place.

6. When Pilot heard of Galilee he asked whether the man was a Galilean.

7. As soon as they knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at the time. It probably is at his first appearance before Pilot, that his wife asked him to have nothing to do with that just man, for I have suffered many things this day in a dream, because of him. A record of above is found in Mathew xxvii, 19-20. The responsibility led him to send him to Herod. It was not because of any love of Herod, as they were enemies up to then. See Luke xxiii-12.

And this ends all the record we have of Jesus second trial. The first one was before Pontius Pilot. All of the above events, each of which must have been long have taken place on Friday, the day following the Passover, and the day was drawing to a close for the Jewish Sabbath begins at sundown. Jesus is kept prisoner during all that day, he is brought before Herod, probably on Monday, the 18th day of the month of Nisan.

Four short verses tell of his trial before Herod. Much that transpired is recorded by the other gospels but the record of the two trials in the other gospels are merged, or at least not so clearly separated as in Luke.

Luke xiii-8. And when Herod saw Jesus he was exceedingly glad, for he was desirous to see him for a long season, because he had heard many things of him, and he hoped to now see some miracle done by him.

9. Then he questioned him with many words but he answered him not.

10. And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him.

11. And Herod with his man of war set him at naught, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe and sent him again to Pilot.

The events recorded in Mathew xxvii. 27 to 30, and John xix. 1 to 3, probably refer to what transpired while before Herod. The main difference is that in Luke xiii-11.

11. A gorgeous robe, while Jno. xix-2 calls it a purple robe, and Mathew xxvii-28 calls it a scarlet robe. Of course it is possible that he was twice robed and scoffed.

Jesus is returned to Pilot probably on Tuesday the 19th of Nisan, and early in the morning of Wednesday, the 20th of Nisan. Pilot again gathers them together the record says.

Luke xxiii-13. and Pilot when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people.

14. Said unto them, ye have brought this man unto me as one that perverteth the people, and behold I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof you accuse him.

15. No, nor yet Herod, for I sent you to him and lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

16. I will chastise him and release him.

Please notice the fact as set out in the 13th verse, that the Jews did not follow him from Pilot to Herod, then from Herod to Pilot, but when Pilot wanted them, called them together, and it was early in the morning. This agrees with the record. 1st, He is crucified at the third hour, which corresponds to 9 o'clock as we reckon time; from 12 to 3 it is dark, and as the Sabbath draws nigh, he is laid in the tomb.

Of his crucifixion I wish to say nothing, but there are a few facts I wish to note. It was the custom for a malfactor to carry his own cross. Jesus starts with his, but is too weak to carry it.

Mark xv-21. And they compel on Simon a Cyrenean, who passed by coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross.

He has been held prisoner and buffeted about, and been scoffed and spit upon and abused for five days, and was too weak to bear his own cross. Jesus starts with his but is too weak. Question. Would a strong man in his prime be so weak after but a few hours? And now comes a peculiar record. John, Mathew, Mark and Luke each mention that it was the preparation.

Luke says, and that day was the preparation and the Sabbath drew on.

And John xix-31 says, The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation day (for that Sabbath day was an high day), besought Pilot that their legs might be broken and that they might be taken away.

Nowhere throughout the Bible is it mentioned that the seventh day Sabath is proceeded by a day called the preparation, and it is not referred to at all except to this peculiar high and holy Sabbath day. This day therefore was the 21st day of Nisan. His body is begged by Joseph of Arimathaea, and Nicomemus brought an hundred weight of spices and assists in preparing the body, and

Jno. xixi-42. There laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation day.

Jno. xix-14. It was the preparation of the Passover.

The record continues Jno. xxii: The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalena early when it was yet dark unto the sepulchre and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre. Luke says, Luke xxiv-6 and 7. He is not here, but is risen; remember now he spake unto you when he was yet in Gallilee.

7. Saying, the Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

Now to show the harmony of the Scriptures: Ex. xii-1-3 Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb according to the house of their father, a lamb for an house.

6. And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month, and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.

The tenth day to the fourteenth day in the evening was five days.

Jesus was taken on the morning of the 15th day of Nisan, Friday, and was crucified on the morning of Wednesday the 20th day of Nisan, just five days.

Ex. xii-46. In one house shall it be eaten, thou shalt not carry forth aught of the flesh abroad out of the house, neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

Num. 9-12. They shall leave none of it until the morning nor break any bone of it, according to all the ordinances of the Passover, they shall keep it.

Psa. xxxiv-20. He keepeth all his bones, not one of them is broken.

Jno. xix-33. When they came to Jesus and saw that he was dead, they break not his bones.

Isaiah Liii-7. He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

In his trial before Herod, Luke xiii-9. Then he questioned him with many words, but he answered him nothing.

Isa. Liii-8. He was taken from prison and from judgment.

I know of no other time that he was ever even a prisoner, yet here was he kept in prison from Friday evening until Wednesday morning, except such time as he was before Herod and passing back and forth. Shall we believe the prophet or man? Peter says, We have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto ye do well to give heed as to a light that shineth in a dark place.

If we need any more evidence let us hear what the Master himself says. Math. xii-39 and 40: But he answered and said unto them, an evil and adulterous generation seek after a sign and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of the Prophet Jonas. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

Crucified on Wednesday, the preparation day, laid in the tomb on the going down of the sun, at rest Thursday, Friday and Saturday. And his glorious resurrection, after the going down of the sun Saturday. Three days and three nights.

Submitted in love, hoping that I also may know the power of his resurrection.

EUGENE C. WEBSTER.
709 Catalina St.
Los Angeles, Cal.

"If they receive the Truth, Why Trouble about Inspiration?" Asks a Josephite Supporter.

The answer is palpable, though not discerned by all. First, it is a sin against God to attribute to man the work that is His own by the Spirit. It was a sin so heinous in another form, that Jesus declared there was no forgiveness for it—when men ascribed his miracles to the diabolical art. We may not fellowship blasphemy. A man receiving the truth has a claim to fellowship if it be not nullified by his attitude in some other relation. A drunkard, to-wit, or an extortioner, or a fornicator, was ineligible for apostolic fellowship, though "a man called ceiving the truth," so, if a man receiving the truth, do at the same time blaspheme the Scriptures, or lend himself to those who do, he raises an obstacle which no amount of "receiving the truth" can remove. Secondly, the divine inspiration of the Scriptures is part of the truth; and any man denying this, denies a part of the truth, and therefore cannot be described as in the absolute sense "receiving the truth." Thirdly, if the Scriptures are partly human and erring, there is no foundation on which the truth can, with certainty, be received. The foundation of all truth in our day, when God hides his face, is the divine authority and infallibility of the Scriptures of Moses, the prophets and the apostles. If men do not assent to this authority, their receiving of what truth they have is a mere exercise of opinion; and it is not opinion but faith that is the basis of fellowship.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject: The Multitudinous Son of Man Glorified, No. 2.

Text: Rev. 1:15, 16.

I. His feet like fine brass. v. 15. I. Import of feet—treading upon. Rev. 14:19, 20; Psa. 18:32-49. II. This is the work of the saints. Psa. 58:10, 11; 75:10; 76:12; 149: 6-10. III. Meaning of brass in symbol—the saints. Exo. 17:15; Numb. 31:22; 16:37, Exo. 29:12; Heb. 3:3-6; 1 Cor. 9:13; 10:18; Heb. 13: 10, 12.

II. As if they burned in a furnace. v. 15. I. The furnace in which they glow—"the wilderness of the people." Ezek. 20:33-38; Mal. 3:2; Jer. 30:7; Mal. 4:1, 2; Mi. 4:13; Ezek. 1:7; Mi. 5:8; Zech. 12:9; Rev. 2:26, 27.

III. His voice as the sound of many waters. v. 15. I. The voice of a great multitude. Rev. 17:15; Dan. 10:6; Ezek. 1:24; Rev. 7:9; Isa. 18:3; 27:12, 13; Zech. 9:14, 15.

IV. Out of his mouth a two-edged sword. v. 16. I. Symbol of war from the commander in chief; its two edges indicating its two effects converting and destructive both. Gen. 45:21; Numb. 3:10; Heb. 4:12; 2 Thess. 2:8; Isa. 11:4; Hos. 6:5; Rev. 2:12, 16; 19: 11-16.

V. His Countenance (whole aspect) as the sun v. 16. I. The divine glory of the Mystic Body is first hidden, "as the sun shineth in his strength," the finale. Heb. 3:4; Zech. 14:6, 7; 2 Pet. 1:16; Isa. 24:23; Col. 3:4; 1 Jno. 3:2; Rev. 3:21; Mt. 13:43; Psa. 19:5; Judges 5:31.

TARES;

Or the Works of the Flesh.

From a Christian standpoint, the question of tares in your field, in my field, is a difficult one. If we were speaking of tares in the Christian world, it would be much easier to decide what they are. We are satisfied they are not the sins of people that are manifestly such; but they are sins that deceive the people. They cannot mean the wicked people of the world that have never made any profession of Christianity, but they are within the ranks of professed Christians, and when we discover the tares in such a person we call them hypocrites. The tares in our Lord's parable in Matt. 13:24-30 no doubt refer to the weed called darnel, and when growing it is almost impossible to detect it from wheat. In fact many cannot tell the difference until the berry is ripe, which illustrates so-called Christianity, each sect claiming to preach the gospel that Paul preached. Many do not, and they shall be accursed, Gal. 1:8. This class we consider the tares in the Christian world.

But the tares in our Christian life, what are they? If we wish to be the grain that the master will gather into his barn, we must eradicate all the tares. We find certain things enumerated in Gal. 5:19-21 that we must not do if we are to inherit the kingdom of God. The first we will notice is uncleanness. Are we unclean? Have we filthy habits? Is our conversation unchaste, impure and immoral? If so, do we deceive ourselves, and say the habit is so fixed we cannot overcome it? Beware, when the Master comes in the gathering time: the unclean persons will be bound in a bundle. Idolatry. Is there anything we worship more than God? If so, it is a tare. Witchcraft. Do we believe in the arts of magic, or sorcery, or as it is called today, "hypnotism?" Hatred. Do we hate those that are not just to our liking? Variance. Do we continually differ, disagree and strive with our fellowman? Emulations. Do we strive to excell, to vie with our neighbors in worldly affairs? Wrath. Do we get angry and let the sun go down on our wrath? Strife. Are we continually trying to outdo our neighbor? Seeking to have a contest with a brother, always taking the opposite side of an argument? Sedition. Are we striving against law and order? Continually rebelling against articles of faith to guide the church? Heresies. Are we contending for a doctrine not taught in Holy Writ? Envyings. Do we feel uneasy or mortified at another's superiority? Have we a feeling of hatred or ill will towards another because they have better success than we? Murders. . Drunkenness. Do we get in that state, or indulge in that which causes intoxication, either in body or mind? Revellings. Do we carouse or associate with a noisy or unlawful element?

If we do any of these things, we must overcome and eradicate them before we can present ourselves to the Master, as pure and worthy to be gathered into his kingdom. And when we have rid ourselves of all the tares we will live pure and show to the world the fruit of the spirit, which is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. Then we will be law abiding citizens in the sight of God and man. The signs of the times point to the soon coming of the blessed Redeemer—we have but a short time in which to get rid of the tares in our field, and let us strive to take the whole armour of God that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having overcome all, to stand firm and united, crying, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

E. W. KNAPP.

Moakland, Oregon.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Faith - Repentance - Baptism.

The above question is or ought to be the most important of all questions; and he who is careful should we all be in seeking a truthful answer to it. Now, I believe that if we seek to know the true answer of this question in the Bible where it is given, we will be richly paid for all our search and trouble.

In the first place, we must have faith for without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. 11:6. Faith cometh by hearing the word of God. Rom. 10:17. When the jailer asked Paul and Silas what he must do to be saved, they said to him, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house: and they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house; and he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his straightway. And they rejoiced, believing in God." Acts 16:30 to 34. And he Quesaid unto them (the apostles), "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, (or person): he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We see how necessary it is for us to believe and be baptized in order to be saved. Mark 16:15-16. When they believed what Peter preached on the day of Pentecost, those that heard cried out to know what they should do. Peter told them to repent and be baptized every one of them in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. Acts 2nd 39-35. We see from this how necessary it is for us as soon as we believe to obey the commands if we want to be forgiven our sins. Paul says "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. 1:16. We learn from the above text that it is necessary for us to believe the gospel if we want to be saved. Jude exhorts the called in Christ to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Verse 3. There is one faith and one baptism. Eph. 4:5. It seems from this Scripture that there is but one true faith. Let us be careful to have that faith.

Repentance. Our Saviour says: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Luke 13:3. Peter said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. Acts 2:38. Peter also said, "Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the time of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy apostles since the world began." Acts 3:19-21. And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent. Act 17:30. Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance. Rom. 2:4.

We find from the above that it is the goodness of God that leads us to repentance; also that he commands all men to repent, and that except we do repent we shall all perish.

3d. Baptism. When Jesus commissioned his apostles to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he said, "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned (or condemned). Mark 16:16. Peter told them on the day of pentecost when they asked him what to do, repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. Acts 2:38. But when they believed Philip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. Acts 8:12. And he commanded the chariot to stand still, and they went down both into the water both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him, and when they were come up out of the water, the spirit caught away Philip that the eunuch saw him no more, and the eunuch went on his way rejoicing. Act 8:38-39. Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death, therein we are buried with him into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the father even so we also should walk in newness of life. Rom. 6:3-4. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then ye are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. 3:26-27-29. After repentance and baptism we still must live as the Scriptures teach us; and beside this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. 2 Pet. 1:5, 6, 7. If we do these things we have the promise of an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. In Christ alone can we be saved, and there is salvation in no other way.

MRS. C. P. LELAND.

Argos, Ind.

COMMUNICATIONS.

(Following letter from one of our esteemed brethren is given, because it has the "ring" of truth. As it is marked "private" we withhold both name and adress.—Editor).

Dear Brother Huggins:

It would not be indulging upon your valuable time I would like to express my appreciation of your valuable book, "The Bible," etc. I have noted its contents carefully, and find so much good sound thought in it, I cannot keep still. I am glad we have men that have back bone enough to express their honest convictions, though you may draw as keen razor edged and many think, established ruts. You so well hammer the Christian minister that I venture to say he will keep still for some time. Then the Enoch and Elijah translations and go to heaven question, with thinkers should forever be set at rest. For some time I have thought that Enoch and Elijah did die, but saw so much from abler minds teaching that they did not, that I feared to write on the side on which I stood, and feared I might be mistaken, so only mentioned my thoughts to those of my most intimate brethren. But you have so completely knocked the theory in the head that it seems to me "he who runs should read," and also understand. I hope you will have a large sale for your book, and that many will be benefited by it.

I am trying to proclaim the glad tidings of the kingdom here with the help of a brother whom I have baptized into the one name. It is seldom I meet with brethren of the Church of God. Last Sunday I preached on the kingdom from the standpoint of conditions of entrance into it, showing that one is not in the kingdom now because it takes their life and the resurrection change to place him there. One Methodist lady said she enjoyed my effort, so I am encouraged to fight on. I had been dormant and quiet for a while on account of ill health, and was undecided where to go, as so many Josephites, Sabbatians, and Universalists had crept into the church. I am glad the church is taking a definite stand on those points, and that the good Old Restitution is for sound doctrine. I am yours with Christian feelings.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

Mr. Beecher to Young Men.—Young men who come here to get good advice. Now hear it. I tell you there is nothing in the world so profitable as are lying and stealing—I should not like to drop down now before I finish this sentence—so profitable in the beginning, but so sure to be hit by God's lightning in the end. You can gain fast, but you will lose fearfully and rapidly.

When suspicion begins to touch you, the end is near. And when that time comes, if the rocky would fall from their everlasting bed and crush you and hide you, it would be unutterable mercy, compared with the burden of shame and contempt that you must bear.

My heart is toward the young yet. Only when I look in the glass, and see how the grey hairs are coming on my head, do I know that I am growing old. By the beating of my heart I should never know it. My heart is toward the young yet. Would that I could warn them so that they would heed; but they hear me, and they will go away and remember naught. They will follow their footsteps who are as sure to topple and go down as rain as the sun is to rise and shine.

Loving and Hating.—If you love, love more. If you hate, hate less. Life is too short to spend in hating anyone. Why war against a mortal who is going the same road with us? Why not expand the flower of life and happiness by learning to love, by teaching those who are near and dear the beautiful lesson? Your hands may be bent or ugly, but do you not know that the most beautiful flowers grow in the most rugged, unsheltered places?

No Place.—A great many boys complain that there is no places. Perhaps it is hard to get just such a place as you like. But when you get a place—and there are places—this big country we are sure, has need of every good boy and big girl and man and woman in it—when you get a place, we say, make yourself necessary to your employers; make yourself so necessary by your fidelity and good behavior, that they cannot do without you. Be willing to take a low price at first, no matter what the work is, if it be honest work. Do it as well as you can. Begin at the very lowest round of the ladder and climb up. The great want everywhere is faithful capable workers. They are never a drug in the market. Make yourself one of these, and there will always be a place for you, and a good one, too.

Some facts about Kansas.—There are a half million young men and women in Kansas over fourteen years of age who have never seen a saloon in that state; there is not a Kansas newspaper which publishes a liquor advertisement; one-third of the counties of Kansas have not a prisoner in their jails, nor a pauper in their poor houses; one-half the counties of Kansas did not send a convict to the penitentiary last year. Kansas stands first in the per capita valuation of assessed property.

IS A PAID MINISTRY SCRIPTURAL?

A correspondent in Chicago writes:

You have a paid ministry which reminds me of God's word by Malichi: "Who is there among you that would shut the doors for naught, neither do you kindle fire on mine altar for naught." Of course we know the laborer is worthy of his hire, and that we are not permitted to muzzle the ox; still Paul of whom it is said, "He labored more than they all, yet not I, but the grace of God that was with me," wrought with his own hands and was chargeable to no man. 2 Thess. 3:7-12; 1 Thess. 4:11. I like the Restitution and will try and subscribe for it the first of the year."

Editor's Reply

This writer objects to a paid ministry, and because she represents quite a band in this objection, we feel that good for the cause of truth will result by subjecting the scriptures quoted against the practice of a paid ministry to a critical examination. Are Bible teachings opposed to a paid ministry? Let us see.

The text first quoted is from Mal. 1:10. It was addressed to Israel, verse 1, not to the ministers of the sanctuary. The priests are not mentioned until you get to Mal. 2:1. The text, I repeat, was spoken to Israel, the people in general; the people who had so apostatised from God's law which required the best, Lev. 22:20, 24, that they brought the worst! They brought the blind, the lame, the sick, for sacrifice (verse 9); and the rebuke of the 10th verse is right here. The very people who made such niggardly gifts to God would not serve as a door keeper unless paid! If it is insited that the ministering priests are meant, and that they only had the right to "kindle a fire" on God's altar, then I have to tell you that they were allowed "to live of the things of the temple." (1 Cor. 9:13); the law cutting them off from all secular employment, and making their living wholly depend upon the offerings of the people. Lev. 6:16; Deut. 10:9; Numb. 18:20. Malichi 1:10 is not condemning but merely recognizing as a fact the custom then in vogue, and in vogue by the express command of God, that those who shut the door of the temple (the janitor) and those who kindled a fire on God's altar for sacrificial purposes (the priests if you will,) were paid for their services. To condemn this custom is to condemn God's law which created the custom. The inadequacy of this text for the purpose of condemning ministerial support is perceptibly felt by the writer, for she speedily dismisses it to point to the example of Paul.

Will you allow us to say before we study the example of Paul that it is a freakish characteristic of all opponents of a paid ministry to skip Christ, the perfect example, and take Paul, the imperfect. There must be some reason for dodging the example of Him whose steps we are to follow. 1 Pet. 2:21. Paul says we are to be followers of him certainly, but only by to this extent: "As I am of Christ." 1 Cor. 11:1. He is only to be followed when he follows the Christ. What light does the example of Christ shed on the question of a paid ministry? He was a carpenter, you say, and made his own living at secular work. Yes, until he began to preach the gospel. He never worked at his trade again. "He went about doing good" (Acts 10:38); but if his followers had been drilled against paying or supporting him, and had not given him a helping hand, he would soon had to cut short going about "doing good," and go back to the carpenter's bench at Nazareth. How did Christ manage to live for three years and one-half and not do secular work? Luke answers the question, and will our no-pay-minister advocates listen to him? "And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. * * * And Joanna and Susanna, and many others ministered to him of their substance." 8:1-3 Luke only mentions a few of the brethren and sisters who supported our Lord in his ministry; but that their action in the matter represented the general sentiment of believers at that time he shows by stating that "many others" participated with those he names in this work of love. If paying a minister is wrong, is it not strange that these disciples of Christ were not corrected by the Saviour, and, if it were wrong, marvel of marvels, that our Lord should accept their "substance!"

The example of our perfect pattern speaks loud as thunder in justification of a paid ministry. This explains why those who oppose the compensation of ministerial labor evade the Savior, and go on aggressively fighting the example which he has left us to follow. 1 Pet. 2:21. They are great on Paul and his example. Well, if Paul or any other saint in the world, however good, has acted differently to our Lord, fleeing to the Lord's. Let us then settle it forever before we study Paul's example in this matter, that if he acted different to his master, the servant is wrong and his Master is right.

What then about the example of Paul? Just a sample of his teaching and example in 1 Cor. 9. He begins by saying to those who examined him, one-pay-minister advocates doubtless, v. 3: that he had the "power" or right to have a wife and take her with him in his ministerial journeys, if he wanted to; so did the "other apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas." (v. 5); that Barnabas had quit working, and he had the "power" or right to quit! (v. 6); that the brethren paid all the charges or expenses of his trips. (v. 7); that the ox must be fed for his work (v. 9); that he preached "in hope" of receiving "carnal things" in the way of compensation (vs. 10, 11); that preachers of the gospel should make a living of the gospel. v. 14. Why the servant talks just like his Master! They are both agreed that the minister is to be supported.

Our sister grants as much, but nullifies her concession by saying, "Still Paul, of whom it is said, 'Be ye followers of me,' wrought with his own hands," etc. She refers to 2 Thess. 3:7-10. To understand Paul on this occasion we must take into consideration the circumstances. A report had spread among the brethren of Thessalonica that Paul had written a "letter" to the effect that the day of Christ is at hand. This had "shaken them in mind," 2:2. They began to act like people did in the "Miller Movement:" they sold out their property and quit work. To sober them and put them on their feet again, to stop their "disorderly" conduct, he reminds them how orderly he behaved among them, how he "wrought with labor," and how that "if any would not work, neither should he eat." Owing to this extraordinary condition in Thessalonica he worked himself to show the brethren by example how they should remain faithful to their duties; and that the Lord's coming was not possible for a long time to come. Though he acted thus to solve their fanaticism, he boldly here asserts, "Not because we have not power." 2 Thess. 3:9. The lawless, "disorderly" condition of things in this church caused him to act among them the part of a laborer, while having "power" to do otherwise. Whether he was justified in doing as he did, is another question. To the Corinthians he says he did not use his "power" (1 Cor. 9:12), but afterwards confessed that he did wrong, and asked their forgiveness. He also frankly admits that they were inferior to other churches. His words are: "For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? Forgive me this wrong. 2 Cor. 12:13.

In conclusion we ask opponents of a paid ministry to note two truths that are contained in 2 Cor. 12:13:

1. That the church at Corinth did not pay Paul for his preaching, and that this made them "inferior to other churches."

2. And that Paul confesses he did "wrong" to preach without pay, and asks their forgiveness.

The Second Advent.—The second coming of Christ is the great event of the near future. From it the flaming beacons of prophecy on every hill top of the ages have caught their fire. Toward it all the movements of history point the way. In it all the radiating lines of prophecy meet. It is that glorious hope that morning star of the endless day, which shines clear and serene above and beyond all the darkness and storms of time. The hope of the church is not fulfilled, the salvation of the saints is not complete the victory of redemption is not finished and cannot be until Jesus comes the second time. "Hold fast, that no man take thy crown;" just a little in the future we shall reap life everlasting. Sorrow will be forgotten, tears wiped away, friend will greet friend, there will be no more pain, nor any more death. Blessed time! Endless day! Eden restored! Jesus reigning on his throne! Oh, to reap the reward of the blessed, and be among the gathered saints, and hear the soul-thrilling words, "Well done," from the blessed Saviour.

Everything of fame, wealth and glory must pass away. "But the things which are not seen are eternal." There is a glory which shall never fade, an empire on the rock of ages, which (when all evil shall have been entombed) shall be seen towering in sublimity and gleaming with the effulgence of the eternal tabernacles.

The heavenly bridegroom is soon coming. Are we ready for His appearance? Do we sufficiently realize that the heavenly bride-groom must have a heavenly bride? There must be a perfect correspondence in character and in nature. What are our characters and dispositions when compared with the spotlessness of the son of God? Our Christianity must become a living power within us: a mere outside profession will be unavailing.

The Test of Education.—A professor in the University of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider them educated in the best sense of the word when they could say yes to every one of thirteen questions that he should put to them. It may interest you to read the questions. Here they are:

Has education given you sympathy with all good causes and made you eager to espouse them?

Has it made you public spirited?

Has it made you brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them? Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life?

Do you think washing dishes and hoeing corn just as compatible with high thinking as piano playing or golf?

Are you good for anything to yourself? Can you be happy alone?

Can you see out on the world and see aught except dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see the clear sky? Can you see anything in the puddle but mud?

Can you look into the sky at night and see beyond the stars? Can your soul claim relationship with the Creator?

Try It—If you would be less sensitive and more sensible, less "touchy" and more touching, less sour and more sweet, less cranky and more pleasant, and take a good dose of "cheer up," you could wear off the wrinkles, put life and vigor into your young cranky form, inject smiles, and put on the appearance of a man or woman who represents the proverb that "a merry heart doeth good."

Our Heavenly Father sends us frequent troubles to try our faith. If our faith be worth anything, it will stand the test. Gilt is afraid of fire but gold is not. The paste gem dreads to be touched, but the true jewel fears no test.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Oh that people could see the nonsense of fretting and worrying over every little care of life. How much more God would be able to have his way in their hearts and lives it they would only be as the lilies. God created them and He created us. "They toil not neither do they spin." Let us learn the secret of the flowers, and God will take care of us.—Edith Clark.

The Art of Having Time—The people who work the hardest and accomplish the most are not those who complain of lack of time. Those who constantly put their time to good use do not excuse themselves from duty on the plea of lack of time. The people who have the most irons in the fire are those most ready to receive and forge another. Goethe, one of the busiest men that ever lived, has said, "Time is endlessly long, and every day is a vessel into which much may be poured, if one will readily fill it up." And again, "Use time as if you knew the value of it." And has always time enough if he will improve it well."

Manager's Column

Well, here we are again after an absence of two weeks. Business kept accumulating till something had to wait, and as Bro. Huggins always has lots of good things to fill into empty columns, the space was well used.

The census blanks have been coming in a little faster during the las few weks, and a good many names are now on hand, but these are but a small part of the whole; many, many more should be heard from. There are churches with larger memberships from which not a single name has come; evidently the members have no interest in the help others may relieve through this work, or else they do not realize what an important work it is. Did you read what was in this column on November 14? It was entitled, "The Sin of Doing Nothing." The following is a quotation from it: "How many easy going idlers and silent partners we have in our churches. Perhaps only one in ten is engaged in active Christian work. Where are the nine?" If you are one of them you know. This world is so full of little things, little helps, little duties, little kindnesses. What a lot of big things we fail to accomplish because we forget the little things. As Bro. Joblin used to say, "Even salvation is a matter of memory."

Elsewhere on this page is a special Christmas offer which we trust a good many will take advantage of. It is certainly a very liberal offer, in fact the premiums offered are valued at about half of what the subscription will bring in, so instead of receiving $1.50 for them, we will net about half of that amount. But we want to get the paper in the home of every brother and sister in the country; we want it to be the help to each brother that it is intended to be; we want it to reach as many outside of the "little flock" as possible, that the gospel may be preached and the glad tiding sent to a world that is perishing in ignorance of God's plan of salvation. There is nothing exclusive about The Restitution, on the contrary, we should see that it is sent everywhere that all might benefit by its doctrines; and any publicity you can give it will help immeasurably. Why not change a few "Silent partners" to active, wide awake salesmen? Here is a fine opportunity.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Alex McFarland	.50
J. H. McClary	.50
Sarah Huntoon	1.50
Sarah L. Lashe	2.00

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Book in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only $1 a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 29,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

THE MESSENGER.

Is the name of a religious monthly magazine advocating the coming of the Kingdom of God, the return of the Lord Jesus, and the hope of eternal life. Published in Glasgow, Scotland. Subscriptions received by the American agent, William G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. 1 copy 37 cents, two copies 69 cents, three copies 97 cents, five or more copies 25 cents each copy per year. Sample copy on application.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 318 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

An Appropriate Christmas Gift

This is the time of year when we begin to think of appropriate Christmas gifts for friends and those near and dear to us. Here is a good suggestion. Send them the Restitution for a year, it will go to them fifty-two times, each time with messages of faith, hope, love, courage and gladness. A loving remembrance and a blessing each week of the year. For the balance of the year we are going to make this

GENEROUS OFFER

ALL FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR AT $1.50 { The Restitution for the balance of 1911. The Restitution for ALL of 1912. One Beautiful Art Calendar for 1912. (No advertisement). One copy of "A Letter to a Friend," One copy of W. H. Wilson's Students' Text Book.

We will send all to one address or The Restitution to one address and the premiums to another This is for new subscribers only, and certainly a very generous offer. For two new subscribers you can substitute The Pine Woods Bible Class, or "The Bible, Its Principle and Texts," for the Students' Text Book. When requested we will send a card to those to whom the above may be sent as a gift, giving the donor's name and best wishes.

Send names today, so as to get all the advantages of this offer.

The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College
Special Library

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37), the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 • CLEVELAND, OHIO, NOVEMBER 28, 1911 No. 46

GOODNIGHT.

Good night dear faces round me.
Night's hours will swiftly run,
And we shall say "Good morning"
At the ascending sun.

The farewell hour is coming,
The last "good night" is near,
When I shall part in silence
From those that love me here.

Then all my farewells over,
Just passing out of sight,
Uncraping and untrembling,
I'll say my last good night.

"Good night" to all but Thee,
My God, who ever art with me.

M. JOBLIN.

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

His Greatness and Humility.

"Verily I say unto you, Among them that are Born of Women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist."—Matthew xi. 11.

He must indeed have been a great man of whom our Lord used these words—"Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater;" and we may be sure that his judgment is true. It is not the fallible judgment of a mere human mind, but of that divine mind which "needed not that any should testify of man" to him, "for he knew what was in man." There is a restfulness in such a judgment. It is final. There is no appeal from it; but neither have we any desire to call it in question.

The same restfulness will be felt regarding the future judgments of this one in the kingdom of God, when He reigns as king of kings and Lord of lords, for upon Him the spirit of God is poured without measure, making "Him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth." There will be no appeal against such righteous judgments, for they shall satisfy all but the incorrigibly bad.

We are not hindered however, from enquiring for our edification upon what grounds our Lord's judgment rested regarding John the Baptist. And again we may be sure that he did not follow the ordinary methods of the world in judging greatness. "What went ye out for to see?" He asks. "A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts." The world counts such great; but John the Baptist's clothing was of the coarsest, and his meat and manner of life of the simplest.

In one respect he was great as the world counts greatness, for he had obtained a wide notoriety. When he preached in the wilderness, the fame of it went abroad, and the people flocked to him from all the parts of Judea and round about Jordan. His own words to the people—"He that cometh after me is mightier than I"—imply that he was a mighty man in the eyes of the people. And even after his death, his reputation was so great among them, that the chief Scribes and Pharisees were afraid to answer the Lord Jesus that John's baptism was of men (as they would doubtless like to have said) because they feared the people would stone them, for all held John to be a prophet.

Notoriety, or even fame, does not constitute greatness however. Our Lord has taught us to judge greatness not according to outward show, but rather by the inward perfection of moral character. And John the Baptist showed true greatness in the brave fidelity with which he discharged the mission laid upon him by God, for he was "a man sent from God." When he stood a solitary man, with no power behind him save the unseen power of God which had commissioned him, and saw the powerful Pharisees and Sadducees coming to him, who were powerful enough in latter days to put the Lord to death, yet he flinched not to address them thus: "Ye generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." It required a bold man to speak so boldly. To this probably our Lord referred when He asked: "What went ye out for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?" That would have been a very trivial object to occasion a long journey into the wilderness. But doubtless it is a figurative allusion to John's immovable steadfastness; he was not one to be moved or bent like a reed with every breath of wind.

John was a prophet commonly called in the Old Testament "a man of God," and I know no higher aspiration that one could have than to be called to such a special high honor. But Jesus said of John the Baptist that he was much more than a prophet." He was the special messenger sent before the Lord to prepare the way for Him. Doubtless it was in this respect that our Lord spoke of him as greater than any other prophet (So reads Luke's version) who had arisen. The greatest of the one to follow John the Baptist made the latter's mission the greatest ever committed to man, and also made the man to whom it was committed the greatest of all born of women.

But God, who knows all things chooses His servants well, and John the Baptist's fitness for the greatness put upon him is evidence in his perfect humility of spirit. This is beautifully exemplified in a passage in John iii., where some sought to stir up his jealousy by reports of how many were going to be baptized of Jesus and His disciples. He replied: "Ye yourselves bear me witness that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before Him. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease" verses 28-30. What a humble position does this greatest of men take! Merely to stand by and hear the voice of the bridegroom as a friend was sufficient joy to fill his whole soul! In nothing was John's greatness more proved than in this trait of his character, for our Lord has so taught us to judge true greatness. When He passed through Jericho, He specially took notice of little Zaccheus, who although rich was still a despised publican and who although rich yet showed a great simplicity and humility of character which pleased the Lord Jesus, and brought salvation to Zaccheus's house that day. And again, when our Lord was watching people casting their gifts into the treasury, He selected the poor widow woman, who put in only two mites, as the greatest of all the givers, because she had given her all out of the fulness of her faith and love. And the Lord's own injunction to His disciples was: "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your master; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

R. K. STRANG.

"OUR FATHER WHO ART IN HEAVEN, HALLOWED BE THY NAME."

It is strange how one error leads to another, and how complicated the tangle becomes until it almost seems impossible to distinguish right from wrong. A short time ago I heard a discussion between two men: one stood for hell and the other for purgatory. Now where can we begin to straighten out a thing like that? Again, the other day I listened to a Carnahan Scotchman who endeavored to enlighten us on theology, maintaining that Jehovah's "justice had to be satisfied" by the sacrifice of Christ "to bring in perfect reconciliation."

I confess it is difficult to controvert an idea so exceedingly false, so preposterously absurd, in the face of the entire revelation of the love of God. It is like arguing against the statement that the sun is dark, or that the moon is green cheese; but for all that the absurdity holds good with multitudes of church going folk who consider it part and parcel of their theology; and theology, of course, is not always considered compatible with ordinary common sense.

In this "substitution" theory, God is an angry being whose wrath has to be appeased by the blood and misery of an innocent being in order in some way to cancel the "iniquity of us all;"—and the innocent one has to be made to suffer in our room and stead all the suffering that we ought to suffer, even in some extreme cases going as far as eternal torture in hell. Thus divine justice somehow gets quid pro quo or one hundred cents on the dollar as it were, and we are bought off from divine wrath. Hence the Creator is thus put under obligation somehow to give us all life again by the resurrection where we will have a better chance than now. That is the theory of "the ransom" that has gained so much ground among Christian people from time to time. It is precisely the same idea that is held by the Hindus and Buddhists in regard to acquiring merit by certain painful acts, the same as the Romanists purchasing absolution. It is the human sacrifice of the Mexican Indians. It is the idea of the heathen one and all the appeasing of an angry and malevolent God. It is a shame that even a vestage of such a foolish and God-dishonoring idea should still remain with any people who name themselves with the name of Christ.

Would it be any satisfaction for a sane human parent to have his one good boy punished for the bad ones? Would Jacob have rejoiced at the maltreatment of Joseph? Where could there be any sense of satisfaction to justice in such a thing? Then go over the story of the death of Christ and find out if possible where it is stated or inferred that the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ was satisfied with the transaction? Even Pontius Pilate's sense of justice was shocked at the whole proceeding, and he ostentatiously washed his hands. And what was Christ's opinion of it that he exposed to the weeping women that followed him? "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but for yourselves and for your children; for behold the days come when they shall say, Blessed are the wombs that never bear, and the paps that never gave suck;" and again at another time: "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers: that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon earth." If it was such a necessity that Christ had to be sacrificed to satisfy the divine wrath, the generation of vipers ought to have been commended for offering up a sacrifice that was so acceptable. And such even has been the blasphemous conclusion that misled theologians have come to in some instances.

What we have to do, brethren, in this generation, is to stand for the honor of God, the only God, who ever occupy no second place in our esteem or our adoration, instead of the Christ interfering to stay the Father's vengeance or wrath, it was the Father that interfered to stay the wrath and malice of an erring world. The "satisfaction" of God was with the conduct of his faithful son. Gentle reader, get your theology set plumb with the doctrine of Divine Love, and the rest will straighten out in time.

J. F. GELLERLA.

Baltimore, Md.

GOD'S WORD IS TRUTH;

Or the Voice of Fulfilled Prophecy.

God's word is truth (John 17-17), and will accomplish that whereunto it was sent. Isa. 55-11. In support of the above I invite your attention to the word of God concerning Ammon. The Ammonites were descendants of Benammi, who was the son of Lot. Gen. 19-38. The children of Ammon seem to have been a strong nation and dwelt east of the Jordan, beyond the Amorites. Numb. 21-24; Josh 12-18. They were idolaters and worshiped Moloch. 1 Kings 11-33; 2 Kings 23-13. They were enemies of Israel and were frequently at war with them. Jud. 3-13; 10-9; 11 chap; 2d Sam, 10th chap.; 1st Chron. 19th chap.; 2 Chron. 20 chap. Their enmity against Israel seems to be the cause of God pronouncing terrible judgment against them. Zeph. 2-8; Ez. 25-3.

And thou son of man, prophesy and say, thus saith the Lord God concerning the Ammonites and concerning their reproach; even say thou, the sword, the sword is drawn; for the slaughter it is furbished to consume because of the glittering. Ez. 21-28. And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee, and I will blow against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee unto the hand of brutish men, and skilful to destroy. Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land. Thou shalt be no more remembered; for I the Lord have spoken it. Ezek. 21-31-32. "Son of man set thy face against the Ammonites, and prophesy against them; and say unto the Ammonites, hear the word of God: thus saith the Lord God; because thou saidst Aha against my sanctuary, when it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate, and against the house of Judah when they went into captivity; behold therefore, I will deliver thee to the men of the East for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, they shall eat thy fruit and they shall drink thy milk, and I will make Ribbah (their chief city) a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching place for flocks, and ye shall know that I am the Lord.' Ez. 25- 2to 5. 'Therefore behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in Ribbah of the Ammonites, and it shall be a desolate heap." Jer 49-2. "Ammon (shall be) as Gomorrah, even the breeding of nettles and saltpits, and a perpetual desolation." Zeph. 2-9.

The above prophecies have been wonderfully and literally fulfilled according to proofs submitted by Dr. Keith in his works on the evidences of Christianity, and from which I shall now quote:

"All this country, formerly so prosperous and flourishing, is now changed into a vast desert." The far greater part of the country is uninhabited, being abandoned to the wandering Arabs; the towns and villages are in a state of total ruin.

"At every step are to be found the vestages of ancient tribes, the remains of many temples, public edifices and Greek churches." Many of the ruins present no object of any interest. They consist of a few walls of dwelling houses, heaps of stone, the foundation of some public edifices, and a few cisterns filled up; there is nothing entire, but it appears that the mode of building was very solid; all the remains being formed of large stones." (Burkhardt's travels). The above seems to be conclusive evidence that Zephaniah's prophecy has been literally fulfilled, and Ammon has become a perpetual desolation. Zeph. 2-9

Ribbah (the chief city) was to become a desolate heap. Jer. 49-2. Burkhardt tells us that the ancient site of Ribbah is now covered with the ruins of private buildings, nothing of them remain except the foundations and some of the door posts. The buildings exposed to the atmosphere are all in decay.

Seetzen says, "The whole way we traversed we saw villages in ruins and met numbers of Arabs with their camels; and Buckingham describes one of the ruins in which the Arabs occasionally sheltered their flocks during the night. He relates that he lay down among the sheep and goats, and was almost entirely prevented from sleeping by the bleating of the flocks. Ribbah was to become a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching place for flocks. Ez. 25. The above again indicates that God's word is truth and has again been literally fulfilled.

Ez. 21 says the Ammonites shall no more be remembered. Keith says: "No people is attached to its soil—none regard it as their country and adopt its name." These prophecies were spoken because Ammon hated the children of Jacob. Ezek. 25. We can take warning from Ammon and not disobey God's warning in Gen. 12-3: "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee." There are many people cursing Israel today like the Ammonites of old, but their end will be destruction.

Israel is the only nation God ever knew; and his word will be accomplished, for his word is truth.

W. C. HEACOCK.

Canton, Ohio.

ARE THE RIGHTEOUS BEYOND THE POWER OF SIN?

"Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin because he is born of God." John 3-9. This text has been a source of a great deal of trouble to many people. Some who are sure that poor mortal man cannot reach the point of perfection in this life, have tried to put the text in the next age. Others have taken it as they thought it read, and advocated the theory of being "born of God" now, and therefore cannot sin, hence sinless beings now. These two theories are as far apart as two ages can make them, yet neither of them are in harmony with the facts of Scripture. That the text deals with the present or what we call the "gospel age," is apparent from the connection the text holds to other texts before and after it. A misunderstanding of the meaning of a word leads many times to serious results. Two such words occur in this text: "Born" and "cannot."

We will notice "born" first. Nature teaches us that there is a lapse of time between begettal and birth, but they have been used interchangeable, and some have taken advantage of this to build up a theory. Then some one sees the weak points of the theory, and proceeds to demolish it from that standpoint of weakness, and fails to give the matter the study they should, and so allow some very weak things to creep into their argument. A text in hand is first, Pet. 1-22-23: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth." Here the formula for purification is given. It is, "Obey the truth." Will anything else purify? To obey the truth that purifies leads to the facts of the 23rd verse: "Being born (begotten) again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever."

Now we are prepared to understand the text under consideration. We are "begotten by the word of God." Then we are purified. Our sins have been forgiven, and we stand related to God through Christ, and cannot sin. But here let us pause for a moment and think. Is "cannot" used here in the sense that we could not sin if we so desired? I think not. It is used in the sense of restraint. We are not at liberty after we have been begotten by the word to do the things we did before. If you then swore, you cannot swear now. Not that you do not possess the power to swear, but you are restrained when you are "begotten by the word," and that word remains in you. You are under restraint. This is the sense of Gal. 5 17: "For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." No one would argue that Paul here means that we could not indulge in the lusts of the flesh if we so desired. We understand that walking in the spirit forbids indulging the flesh; therefore, "whosoever is begotten of God doth not commit sin," because he did that before he was begotten; and he "cannot sin" because his relations are changed and forbid it. If we keep under our body (lusts of the flesh), we prove we have been "begotten of God," and his word remains in us, and that we fully realize that we cannot keep on sinning. If we fail to recognize this restraint and go on sinning, we prove we are of the devil. In this chapter we have some good things, but at the same time hard on a great many when applied. "He that doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." Verse 10. Here is all the evidence we need that we are not of God. No matter what we say, the proof is forthcoming, and our relationship to the one or the other made manifest.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Omaha, Neb.

"WHAT SHALL A MAN GIVE IN EXCHANGE FOR HIS LIFE?"

By S. Roxana Wince

"What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" It is a question that every one must meet and answer, no matter who he be or how great or small be his possessions. "Your life," your chance of living eternally, that is what you may barter away. Not the present life; you would give all you own to have that lengthened out when death knocks at your door. But Jesus was not talking of such a lengthening but of a lengthening that would endure for the ages of ages. You may save the fleeting years that belong to you now, by denying your Savior, but in doing it will lose your chance of continuation of life into the endless years, or vice versa, lose the present life for the sake of Jesus and the Gospel, and have your life go on forever.

Being ashamed of Jesus and his words now, he will be ashamed of you when he comes. If you give eternal life in exchange for the love and praise of a sinful and adulterous generation it is not God's fault that you have made a poor swap and have cheated yourself irreparably.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" Again and again does the question come up. Will you have riches instead, though they be unjustly gotten? Go ahead. You have the power of choice, though you may bitterly regret not taking the right path when the end shall come.

Will you have your fill of sinful pleasure in exchange for your life? The way is open to "destroy yourself" if you want to, but remember that a time is coming when you will call, and God will not answer; when he will laugh at your calamity and mock when your fear cometh. He calls you now; He gives you the opportunity to gain eternal life now. Do not sell out that you may swear, or cheat, or lie, or steal, or do any wicked thing. There is glory and pleasure in being clean and true in the eyes of God. A clean, wholesome life is a life of power. It conquers. It builds for eternity.

Pierceton, Ind.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Laug, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co. 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Dec. 5 1911

EDITORIAL

Our membership has been augmented by the coming of Sister Tabor, from England. We give her a cordial welcome among us, and pray for her prosperity both temporally and spiritually.

Bro. Wallace Mason, of Toronto, Canada, has located with us for the winter. During a protracted indisposition of the editor, he has rendered valuable service to the truth by giving doctrinal sermons on Sunday evenings.

We regret the many typographical errors and poor make-up of The Restitution of November 29. Indisposition of the editor which prevented us from correcting all the proofs, and the printer's hurry to get through before Thanksgiving, sufficiently explains. "When the cat's away the mice will play."

Dating December 1, Brother Robison, the Evangelist for Ohio, writes: "We are holding a very interesting meeting five miles northwest of Springfield, in Bro. Alden Overholsers neighborhood. The attendance and attention is very good. Several seem much interested. We are in reasonable health."

Brother S. C. Lehman, of Washington, expresses his gratitude for The Restitution, and then asks, "What coming does the Savior have reference to in Matt. 10:23?" The text was uttered by the Lord, as the context shows, when he sent his disciples to preach the gospel "as sheep in the midst of wolves." (v. 16). When their lives were manifestly in danger he gave them the right to migrate: "When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another," says the Lord permissively. Thus persecution scattered the preachers and the word widely and with alacrity, but says the Savior, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the son of man be come." As John the Baptist went before him and prepared his way (Matt. 3:3), so these ministers were sent two and two "before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come." Luke 10:1. That is, they went "before his face", but he followed closely behind them: and by the time they had "gone over the cities of Israel," he had "come" practically over the same ground. The text has no reference to his second coming.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—The Structure of the Book and the Messages to the Seven Churches in General Outline.

Text: Rev. 2:3.

I. The Structure of the Book. I. Like a telescope: The primary vision of the son of man in the first chapter is like the outer case of the telescope; it contains all the inner cases. When drawn out, however, the primary vision contains the seven churches; the seventh church contains the seven seals; the seventh seal contains the seven trumpets; the seventh trumpet contains the seven vials; and the seventh vial contains the seven thunders. II. All the churches are in the pre-resurrectional state—"A sad retrogression from the post-resurrectional state of glory, depicted in the first chapter," you say; "and why?" because III. The end, which is first revealed, is the last developed. Rev. 1:4; 11; 14; 15; 16.

II. The Messages to the Churches in general outline. I. Each message is prefaced by an allusion to some feature of the son of man revealed in the first chapter, which comports with the nature of the message communicated. II. Each one is written to the "angel of the church," not a bishop nor the Eldership—a plurality. Rev. 2:7, 11, 29, 13, 23. III. To each one he says, "I know thy works"—approves the good and condemns the bad. Rev. 2:2-7. IV. Each one is told that what the "spirit saith" is for all that have "ears to hear." Rev. 2:7; Mt. 13:9. V. To each evil is cumulative and growing. VI. To each one Christ's speedy coming is urged as a motive to repentance. VII. To each a promise is given to the overcomer.

"To the church in Smyrna there are no express words affirming the coming of Christ; but the reason of this omission is because Christ is revealed to this poor and suffering church as the "first and the last, which was dead and is alive." (Rev. 2:8); hence the "crown of life" he promises the faithful (v. 10) is post-resurrectional "life" as opposed to post resurrectional death—"the second death." v. 11. In an epistle so manifestly post-advental it would have been indecorous to introduce the Lord's coming in words.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Have been enjoying The Restitution immensely; it seems I hardly get one paper read and digested until another comes. The Snow Sermon was especially interesting; also Bro. Mason's articles have been read with much interest.

FLORENCE WESTFALL.
Troy, Ohio.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

A Cure for Gloomy Days.—
When days are dark and gloomy,
And things seem all askew,
Just manufacture sunshine,
Just think of skies all blue;
Just think of all things cheerful,
And sing a happy song,
And hunt up things to laugh about,
To help the day along.
Make those about you cheerful,
With merry words and smile;
The clouds can't last forever;
Forget them for a while;
So manufacture sunshine,
And defy the gloomy day;
And almost before you know it,
Clouds will have passed away.

Climate and Soil of Palestine.—Palestine is a small country, but it presents great varieties of soil, climate, and water supply, in various districts. We have the tropical Jordan Valley and the Arctic region of Upper Hermon and Lebanon. We have rich volcanic complanes in Bashan and round Jezreel, and sandstones covered with pines and cedars, and hard limestones, over which perennial streams flow between fine woods of oak and terebinth in Galilee, and yet more in Gilead. We have flat maritime plains, sandy and marshy, hot and malarious, bounded by ever-rolling dunes, but well watered by sluggish streams from the clear springs at the mountain foot. These plains run from Carmel to Gaza, ever widening and supporting rich harvests. We have the low chalk hills, with their luxuriant olive yards and wells of living water all along the eastern side of the maritime plain. Above rise mountains 3000 to 4000 feet high, and on the north attaining to 10000 feet. These are generally rugged and bare, but carefully terraced and partly cultivated. The vine flourishes on the higher ranges, where the frost and mist and the strong reflection of heat from the rock helps ripen grapes. But besides these richer districts we have the old deserts unchanged from the days of Abraham and of David; the flat marly plateau of the Beersheba, where the Nomads feed their flocks and herds, as Isaac did before them; the desolate peaks and gorges of the Jeshimon, where the dun partridge and the brown ibex roam as they did when David hid in these fastnesses from Saul among the "rocks of the wild goats."

Facts about the Bible.—The Bible contains 3,536,489 letters, 773,693 words, 31,173 verses, 1189 chapters and sixty-six books. The sixty-six books were written by about forty men during a period of about 1600 years. The word "and" occurs 46,277 times and the word "reverend" but once.

Ezra 7:21 contains all the letters of the alphabet except "j".

The 19th chapter of 2 Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike.

The middle verse of the Bible is Psalm 97:8.

The first book printed from movable metal types was the Latin Bible in the year 1455.

The first Bible printed in this country was in the Natick Indian language in 1663 by John Eliot.

The first English Bible printed in this country was in 1782.

The first Bible in flexible binding was bound by Bagster in 1810.

The first Bible printed on India paper was published by Bagster in 1828.

MISQUOTATIONS.

The soul is immortal and cannot die: Found in Webster's spelling book. "Behold all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18:4, 20.

The righteous shall go to heaven when they die and live and praise God forever and ever.—Orthodoxy. The heaven, even the heaven's are the Lord's. But the earth hath he given to the children of men." Ps. 115:16. "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that come down from heaven, even the son of man which is in heaven." John 3:13. "For David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts 2:34. Those that wait upon the Lord they shall inherit the earth. Such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever. He shall exalt thee to inherit the land. Ps. 37:9, 22, 29, 34. The righteous shall never be removed. Prov. 10:30.

The wicked at death shall go to hell and be tormented forever and ever—Orthodoxy. The wicked shall be silent in darkness. 1 Sam. 2:9. There the wicked cease from troubling. Job. 3:17. Thou hast destroyed the wicked; thou hast put out their name forever and ever. Ps. 9:5.

Let the wicked be silent in the grave. Ps. 31:17. But the wicked shall perish. The seed of the wicked shall be cut off. The end of the wicked shall be cut off. Ps. 37:20, 28, 38. The wicked shall be cut off from the earth. Prov. 2:22. The wicked shall not inhabit the earth. Prov. 10:30. For in death there is no remembrance of thee. Ps. 6:5. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Ps. 146:4. But the dead know not anything. Eccl. 9:5. I saw the wicked buried and they were forgotten. Eccl. 8:10. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Matt. 6:33.

Be ye temperate in all things. Not found in the Bible. The nearest to it is, "And every man that striveth for the mastery, is temperate in all things." 1 Cor. 9:25.

Reverend is applied to ministers, occurs once in the Bible, and then applies to God. Holy and Reverend is his name. Ps. 10, 3:9.

I and my Father are one. John 10:30. Is not a misquotation, but many Christian people misapply the meaning, by saying it teaches only one person, whereas it teaches that the Father and the Son are two different beings. Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord. Deut. 6:4. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us. Mal. 2:10. One God and Father of all. Eph. 4:6

Jesus was the son of God, begotten of Mary by the Holy Spirit without the intervention of man. Matt. 1:23. Luke 1:26, 35. For there is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus. 1 Tim. 2:5. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son. For God sent not his son into the world to condemn it. The Father loveth the Son. John 3:16, 17, 35. I am come in my Father's name; for the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son, that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. John 5:22, 23, 43. Thou are Christ the Son of the living God. John 6:69. I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me. For I proceeded forth and came from God. It is my Father that honoreth me. John 8:16, 42, 54. I go unto the Father, for my Father is greater than I. John 14:28. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again I leave the world and go to the Father. John 16:28. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one. John 17:11, 22.

This oneness should not be such a mystery. A husband and wife are one and yet two different persons. A father and son in worldly affairs, may go into business together, and the son could truly say, "I and my father are one;" for they certainly are one in that business. All true followers of Christ, are one in Christ. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ: there is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. Gal. 3:27, 28.

Again: pauses are not marks of inspiration, but were invented about 1500 years after the Gospels in the New Testament were written. And we find certain passages with the comma placed so it gives a wrong meaning to the verse. Notice Acts 19:12 with the comma where it now is. It makes handkerchiefs or aprons sick. Place the comma after sick. Again, Luke 23:43: "Verily I say unto thee today, shalt thou be with me in paradise." It changes the meaning very much by placing the comma after today. And does not conflict with John's statement of the same scene. Let us see: "Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the thieves." When they came to Jesus, he was dead already. Breaking a man's leg does not kill him. The last account we have of the thief, he had his legs broken, and taken down from the cross. Christ was dead, was buried, so the thief did not die when Christ did. Christ is soon coming to his paradise. Will we be prepared to meet him?

E. W. KNAPP.
Monkland, Ore.

HEARER OR DOER

Hearer or doer, which are you? This thought arises from the oft repeated remark: "Well, I love to hear the gospel, but I just can't—following this assertion is a flimsy excuse best suited to the individual's present need. It is true that to be an attentive listener and to be able to grasp all that is being said, instead of being carried away by surrounding thoughts and surrounding environments, is an accomplishment.

But now the why of our not progressing beyond the "good listener" stage. Do we put into practice what we hear? How many of us think and reflect on Monday concerning the good messages we have heard the day before? No, we rush straightway into business and the world till another Sunday. Thus we have a so-called Christian spending perhaps two hours a week out of the 168 listening to the all-important word.

Wonder what our returns would be if we spent only two hours a week on our particular line of work? No, not satisfactory results, but what else could you expect? Now do you see where we stand in the Lord's vineyard?

But listen to James: "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only; for if any man be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like a man beholding his natural face in a glass, then straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. If he be not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, he shall be blessed in his deed."

Now to recall the example Christ gave when he said, "Whosoever heareth my sayings and doeth them, he is like a man which built a house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock; and when the flood arose the stream beat vehemently upon the house and could not shake it; for it was founded upon rock."

And the other house built on sand—well, you know what happened to it, and he who hears and doeth not will meet a similar fate. "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified."

We see that it behooves us to move a little farther in on the solid Rock each day, or when a whiff of the world comes along, we will be too near the precipice. Oh, let us be up and doing, lest we be the loser at the pay day.

"Ever to him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is a sin.

M. FLORENCE WESTFALL.
Troy, Ohio.

A GOOD NAME RATHER THAN GREAT RICHES

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold. Proverbs 22:1.

In the first part of this quotation, "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," we instantly recognize an old and good saying repeated many times and by some of the best authors both of prose and poems.

To have a good name in the sight of our Lord certainly is worth all the riches this present world could supply. A man may have millions upon millions of dollars, and the more millions he has the less chance he has of ever reaching the kingdom of God.

One who has great wealth does not have sufficient time to serve his Lord the way he ought. He may go to church on Sunday, pay his tribute and all that, but when he is outside in his beautiful carriage or fine automobile he thinks no more of church than some who never visited it. He goes maybe just to show his finery and to be talked about. His mind is all taken up with money matters and business outside of religion.

On the other hand, one who is searching the scriptures and teaching others of the true way of life may have a clear conscience, and that the Heavenly Father is guarding and directing his steps to a great and glorious reward.

In Psalms, twentieth chapter seventh verse, we read: "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we will remember the name of the Lord our God."

This verse well explains the whole story. The rich love their horses and carriages and automobiles better than the name of the Lord.

Another verse in the Psalms is like this: "A horse is a vain thing for safety, neither shall he deliver any by his great strength." I think this verse means that a horse may be very strong but will not have strength or power enough to deliver any wicked one to safety at the appearing of our Lord.

One more reference to this part of the verse is found in Proverbs 21:31: "The horse is prepared against the day of battle, but safety is of God." This verse explains that a horse may probably bring anyone to safety through the present wars and tumults, but can never save anyone from the clutches of the hands of our Heavenly Father.

"Loving favor rather than silver and gold" is a separate and distinct saying. A great many people seek and find silver and gold, where only a few seek and find the "loving favor" of one who can save them. Those who do the latter shall never be sorry, but shall be exceeding joyful when the time comes for the judgment of the just and unjust. They shall receive the great reward which is awaiting them; but it is better had the others never been born, for the punishment that shall be inflicted upon them shall be terrible.

My prayer is that we all may be among the just and receive an abundant entrance into the great and glorious kingdom which is so near at hand.

B. A. MEERMANS.
Cleveland, O.

THE TRUE CHRISTIAN

"But if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." (1 Pet. 4:16.)

Brothers and Sisters, it is my desire to present to you the type of a true Christian. By a true Christian I mean a real, not a false one. One who has forsaken all earthly powers and is now dependent upon the power of God, which is attainable through the blood of Christ.

A true Christian will live up to the great step which he has taken in life, that of baptism. He will follow Jesus' example of suffering patiently, blessing his persecutors, forgiving his enemies, refraining from revenge, returning good for evil, committing all to God, and enduring for others.

He will not be selfish, but aid others by scattering a word here and there, and especially by being an example to others. He will bring others to follow Christ; he will also be a waymark in the paths of righteousness, a beacon for guidance, and a copy of Christ the perfect example.

The true Christian will love Christ and manifest his love in service, forbearance, kindness, helpfulness, compassion, patient endurance, and self-sacrifice. He will bring to Christ the best gifts, his heart, thanks, loving thoughts and words, a portion of what he has, and in fact his whole being. He will accept willingly the gracious invitation of our Lord, of coming and following Him, being satisfied, abiding in Him and resting. When he die he will not fear death but look on it as a triumph, a sleep into which he is falling for a blessed rest until the day of the Lord's appearing.

There are divine gifts awaiting the receiving hand of faith. They are life, assurance, answers to prayers, victory, joy, hope, confidence, peace, salvation and all the promises. "That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." (Heb. 6:12.)

We have freely received love, forgiveness, life, grace, supply of all needs, sympathy, encouragement, comfort and counsel. Therefore should we freely give. The true Christian will forgive the same as Christ did; readily, freely lovingly, full, abundantly, according to his infinite love, and casting sin into oblivion. He will not be a rebel against God, a mocker, crucifier, wicked, an evildoer, he will not reject Christ, or be heedless of His call, but he will be with Christ and abide in Him; and when he has Christ he has the great Light of truth, knowledge, and holiness, sanctification and redemption.

The true Christian understands that Christ redeemed himself for us. He realizes that Christ the Lamb of God, purchased an entire world, full of sin and sinners, out of the bondage of sin, giving himself as the Redeemer. A great and a dear price was the one which our Lord paid in order that "He might redeem us from all iniquity." The iniquity from which He redeemed us was the bondage, guilt and pollution of sin. He came to enlighten men, secure their pardon, and purify them by regeneration. Blessed is he who is in the state of regeneracy, for if not in this state he must be in the state of degeneracy; and a sad state is that, which is in harmony with moral discrepancy. A great mistake is being made when one thinks he will be saved because of his good morality, without any reference to his faith. Faith comes first, after which all virtues will be added. Faith is the foundation. "And beside this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:5-8.)

The true Christian will walk in God's way; he will not turn from Jesus, but will ever hear Him; he will be faithful, believing; he will live with Christ and die in Christ. He will cleave to the Lord, study the Bible, and rely upon God instead of himself. He will have true courage; realizing dangers he is in, he will still go forward, relying upon God, sure of a righteous cause, committing all to God, realizing His presence, standing firm, and enduring to the end.

He will be accustomed to diligence in service, to godly living, to fearless testimony, patient suffering, vigilant activity, holy constancy, purity of life, patient expectancy, irreproachable conduct, and comfort in sorrow. He will study the Bible, because there is great value therein. It points out the way of material prosperity, affords mental enlightenment, guide in right living shows the way to spiritual salvation, opens the way to eternal life, strengthens character and enables one to be helpful. He will be of the choicest divisions ordained by God. The divisions being between believers and infidels, godly and ideaters, lovers of God and followers of Satan, the ready and the unready, the righteous and the wicked, the selfish and the Christlike, the loving and the unloving. The true Christian will make the right choice.

He will confess Christ out of gratitude, because it pleases and honors Him, and shows that he is not ashamed of Him. He knows that Christ's blood cleanses him from sin and redeems him. By this redemption he is under an obligation to devote himself to his Redeemer. He therefore devotes his entire being to Christ and is ever guided by Him in the path of righteousness.

These are requirements which I consider essential on the part of every true Christian.

I pray, Brothers and Sisters, that we may all be true Christians and follow in the footsteps of our Master, accepting Him as our Guide and Keeper, so that when he comes we may all hear Him say those blessed words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of the Lord."

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

A PATTERN OF GOOD WORKS.

Titus 2, 7-8.

"In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing incorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having one evil thing to say of you." Pattern means the original plan or model of that which is to be made or built. Character building is our great work here, to perfect which we must follow our great pattern, Jesus Christ.

We must have wisdom and experience. We all frequently feel the lack of this, for wisdom is the best use of knowledge: knowledge applied to practical things in our daily life, so that we may live as becometh those professing to have the high calling.

James 1:5 reads: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." And in the second and third verses, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

How to take trials wisely and joyfully, is our great need, and we want to know how best to arm ourselves against them that we may be on our guard.

Paul, the faithful apostle teaches us that they are from within ourselves, through our natural desires, ambitions and even the ties of nature.

The need of restraining and overcoming these is shown in Titus 2, 11-12-13: "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and Godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." "Teaching us," Who? Every man that hath heard and learned of the Father, John 6:45. "It is written in the Prophets and they shall be all taught of God." Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me."

Godliness implies bearing some resemblance to the Father in works and words. Ungodliness the reverse. See 2 Tim. 3, 1-5: "Having a form of Godliness but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." The wrath of God is revealed from heaven heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness, because that when they know God they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but their foolish hearts were darkened." How often temptations enter through the eye; what we see we desire. It is so natural and easy for the flesh to imitate worldly ways and the eyes of mammon are never satisfied. Therefore we are told in Psalms 1-1. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the council of the ungodly, nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful."

To walk godly and become a pattern, we must delight ourselves in the Lord and in his law meditate day and night. We must follow the example of our dear Savior which necessitates a great and continued fight within ourselves. We must aim to be followers of him at all times.

Thinking on these things will be the means of keeping us a peculiar people, the peculiarity consisting in not being worldly. How prone we are to fall into ways of foolish speaking, using language of the world, full of slang, thus becoming living exponents of the truth uttered about "Evil communications corrupting good manners." The great fight is with ourselves, to live godly, to fight the good fight of faith, and doing our best to bring others to the knowledge of the truth.

None of us, I am sure, could be tempted to believe any other gospel than that of the glorious kingdom of God. May we realize the danger of one losing the great prize and reward through our neglect in following out pattern with gravity, solemnity and sincerity and earnestness.

Jesus says "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Let us all try and remember the words in Mat. 7-12: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

Cleveland, O. HATTIE GOSS.

PAUL'S DESIRE.

We are often asked, What do you do with Paul's desire to depart and be with Christ? Those who ask this question honestly should have a reasonable answer. The text alluded to can be found in Phil 1:23. This text as rendered or translated, makes Paul's desire to go where Christ is, which is heaven. If this is Paul's desire, he will express the same sentiment throughout his writings.

First, we wish to notice the Greek word in this text rendered "depart." Referring to the diaglott we find it to be analusia. This same word in Luke 12:36 is rendered "return." Since Christ is the one with whom Paul desired to be with, it must have been his (Christ's) returning, and not Paul's departing, that the apostle desired. In examining the Greek text of John 14:3, we find the word por eonmat, rendered "go." (I am going): In Matt. 25:41 this same word is rendered "depart." The strangest thing is that these two words are derived from two entire different Greek roots, and they are opposite in meaning. In Luke "analsia" could not be rendered "depart" without destroying the entire text. Now in Phil. 1:23, as rendered, it destroys Paul's desire by making him say in this text what he contradicts in a number of others. The gospel by Christ and his apostles teaches that he will return to this earth. In John 14:4 he says: "If I go away I will come again." When he left this earth in the presence of his disciples, two angel messengers announced; "ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go up into heaven." Acts 1:11. Peter states to the Jews, "He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the time of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Acts 3:20, 21. Our desire is created by either a written or spoken message. Paul was taught the gospel by the revelation of Jesus the Christ, and he pronounced a curse upon any one who should preach another gospel. Gal. 1:9. So we find the gospel came to Paul through revelation. The same gospel was revealed to us by faithful men who were able to teach. Paul declares in Heb. 1, that Jehovah spake in times past to the fathers by the prophets, but in these last days he hath spoken unto us by his son.

I call attention to the above to show the importance of believing in what has been written. We now wish to call attention to Paul's desire as expressed in his writings. Please note that his desire was for the Lord's return, and not his departure into heaven. In this letter (Phil.) we read, verses 4, 20, 21 Ch. 3): "Our conversation is in heaven; from when also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Paul's desire to the Philippians was for the return of Jesus the Christ, that he might change his vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body. This Jesus will accomplish in the resurrection. In Col. 3:4 he wrote, "When Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." In his letter to Titus, ch. 2:13, we read, "Looking for that blessed hope (desire), and the glorious appearing of the great God and Savior Jesus Christ." Just before his death he wrote to Timothy, 4:8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth (from this time) there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love (or desire) his appearing." In 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, we read, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel, and with the triumph of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." He then says, comfort one another with these words.

These testimonies all point to the coming of Christ. This evidently was the basis of Paul's desire. The same must be our desire. I wish to close this article with Paul to the Corinthians church, 1 Cor. 15:51-53: "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep (die), but we shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." This can only be done when Jesus comes again. To this same church Paul's desire was, that "mortality might be swallowed up of life." May some honest hearts be led to see the truth as we have shown it from the words of Scripture, is my prayer.

D. C. ROBISON.

Salem, Ohio.

NEB. EVANGELIST REPORT FOR OCT.

Sermons.

Blair	3
Bible reading	1
Total	4

Expense.

Omaha to Blair 2 trips	$ 1.80
Money rec. of treasurer	15.00
	1.80
	$13.20

Amount received less expense.

Salary	$65.00
	13.20
Amount due	$51.80

Some good local work has been done as well as some other important work.

ALMUS ADAMS, Evangelist.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR NOVEMBER

When I made my last report I was at Iowa Center, Iowa. We continued the meetings until over Sunday, December 5th, preaching eighteen sermons in all at Iowa Center. We could have easily taken in to our number eight or ten people if we had taken them in as the other denominations do. We thought best to let the spirit strive with them awhile longer, and let it quicken them to obedience to the gospel that frees from sin. We feel that we had a profitable and pleasant time sowing the seed at Iowa Center, and we are trusting God to give the increase.

Our next point was at the Kline school house, midway between Wilmont and Reading, Minn. We began meetings November 9th, and continued until November 22, preaching to an attentive audience. One decided to take a stand for the truth. November 22 we officiated at the wedding of Bro. John Howard's son, Oscar, to Miss Hulda Paplow. Brother Howard and family came up from Marathon. We enjoyed a visit with them as well as their presence at one of the meetings.

November 23rd we began a series of meetings in the Presbyterian church at Reading, arrangements having been perfected by Bro. J. H. Baker, who formerly lived at Gladbrook, Iowa, but for twelve years has lived near Reading; standing alone in the faith, it seemed good to meet him and his family. Bro. Baker has a fine family, consisting of five girls and a baby boy. He and his estimable wife are doing their best to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. This is the first opportunity they have had to hear the gospel since they came here. We have preached eight sermons to splendid crowds who have listened very attentively. Our doctrines have never been preached here before. Brethren, there is plenty of opportunity to spread the gospel. To me it seems much more necessary to preach the gospel in new fields like this than to be spending our time preaching at old places where the brethren know more than the evangelist himself, and are adding daily to their already large bank accounts, or debating on our differences of opinion. We expect to remain here until over December 2nd; and if the interest and attendance continues, will hold over Sunday, December 10th. Pray for us, brethren, that the door may be opened for the truth, and we may be given strength to preach the gospel wherever the opportunity offers.

Herewith report of expenses and receipts for the month of November, 1911:

Expenses.

Hall rent, Iowa Center	$12.75
Oil	.40
Fare Maxwell to Ft. Dodge	1.51
Ft. Dodge to Reading	3.34
Dinner, Livermere	.50
Supper, Estherville	.30
Hotel Worthington	1.50
Oil, School house	.40
Total	$20.70

Receipts.

On hand Nov. 1	$10.95
Mr. and Mrs. J. Fish	6.00
Jim Dickinson	1.00
John Rea	.50
Mrs. Sam. White	1.00
Oliver Vincent	.50
J. Nowning	.50
J. Smith	1.00
J. Benathum	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. I. Fish	12.75
J. J. Bronson	20.00
Mae Stowe	5.00
Total	$60.24
Total receipts	$60.24
Total expenses	$20.70
Balance on hand Dec. 1.	$ 39.54

O. J. ALLARD.

Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

OBITUARY.

Cora R. Fetters.

Cora R. Osborn-Fetters was born June 8, 1873, in Stark county, Indiana. She was the daughter of Samuel and Henrietta Osborn, and one of a family of four children, one brother and three sisters. She grew to womanhood under the care of her parents at the place of her birth, receiving the advantages of a common school education. She obeyed the message of the gospel at the age of sixteen, and was baptized by Elder N. H. Geiselman, January 28, 1890, and received into the Church of God at North Union, Stark county, being one of the charter members of that organization.

She was united in marriage to Benjamin F. Fetters, March 23, 1894, and became the mother of six children, namely: Lester O., Earl E., Grace L., and three others who died in infancy. The family lived in the neighborhood of her birthplace until a year ago, when they removed to their present home in Culver. Sister Fetters was taken sick the first of September, but grew better until the first of November, when she was taken worse and it became necessary to remove her to the Epworth hospital at South Bend, to undergo a surgical operation. Hopes of her recovery were good until last week, when a turn for the worse came, and she gradually sank until relieved by death at noon, Wednesday, November 22, 1911. She had lived to the age of 38 years, 5 months and 14 days.

Sister Fetters was a member of one of the pioneer families of our country, and inherited many of the sterling qualities of character developed by the industry and perseverance that it took to turn the wilderness and waste places into fields of productiveness. She was of a mild, kind disposition, ever endeavoring to live in harmony with her profession as a Christian. She has fought a good fight, she has finished her course, she has kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness.

She leaves her husband and three children of her own household, her father and two children, many others of kin and a host of friends to mourn because of her death. Funeral services were held from the M. E. church in Culver, Indiana, November 25, 1911, conducted by the writer, and burial was made in North Union cemetery, where our sister rests, awaiting the coming of the Saviour Jesus Christ and his resurrection.

D. E. VANVACTOR.

Argos, Ind.

Sister Martha M. Holman, wife of Bro. R. L. Holman, fell asleep in Jesus Nov. 20, 1911, 11 a. m. Her maiden name was Martha M. Hildreth. She was born Jan. 23, 1834, was married to R. L. Holman May 3, 1853. They came from Worcester Mass., in 1854 and settled in Springfield, Ohio. In 1875 they moved to Cedar Lawn farm, five miles north of Springfield, where they have resided since. They came to a knowledge of the truth through the efforts of Bro. Martin Wayland. They were baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus 50 years ago. Both have earnestly contended for the truth ever since. Bro. Holman says: "Never was a kinder, more patient, lovable woman born. During all the fifty years that we have been in the truth she has stood with me."

We have known Sister Holman for six years, and we can say that she was indeed a lover of the truth. When able she was found in her place in the little hall where the ecclesia meets each first day. We shall all miss her, but we have the assurance that when the Master shall appear we will clasp hands with her in the kingdom of God. She leaves a husband, three loving sons and grandchildren to mourn her loss.

The funeral was held at the home. The writer spoke words of comfort from 1 Cor., 15th chapter and 1 Thess. 4th chapter. She was laid to rest in Fern Cliff cemetery until the trumpet sounds.

D. C. ROBISON.

Salem, Ohio

WILL BELIEVING ONLY IN JESUS CHRIST SAVE US?

What shall we do to be saved? It is said in these days to the thousands going the broad way, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." And neither is there salvation any other way to those striving to enter the narrow way; "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." "For the son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me."

Is believing on the Lord Jesus Christ all that is required of us? We shall see. A Christian life is not a life of works only, but of belief in Christ and his promises; a hope which works in our minds by love and proves itself by good works.

A good life without a knowledge of Christ is good in its way, but it is not Christian life, unless Christ is in it. And Christ can only enter our lives through the influence of his written word—which enters our minds through our eyes and ears.

We cannot believe in him until we know him; and we cannot know him until we hear of him. That is why he came and sent men to tell us about him by preaching the gospel. The word of God would not have been written unless we needed it to tell us how to serve him.

For without faith, which is hope in his promises, it is impossible to please him.

Salvation is made conditional on believing the gospel and the promises of God: "He that believeth the gospel and is baptized shall be saved." So you see there is more to do than to just believe in Jesus, openly confessing him before men in a belief that will save souls. So verily, for the word says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." These are the Master's own words, and mean that salvation depends upon believing and obeying the gospel. But we cannot believe it until we learn it, and we can learn it only from the written word.

The gospel is the good news of the kingdom of God. Jesus came preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. He said to his disciples: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved. Luke says, "He sent them to preach the kingdom of God." In Acts he says Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them. "And when they believed Philip's preaching" they were baptised, both men and women.

We cannot believe in God until we know him; and we can only know him by his written word.

Israel rejected Christ because they did not understand the prophets, and it is needful to understand them to be ready when he comes again, for he will appear unto salvation to them that look for him.

Paul says: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed, and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? Jesus says: "This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus whom thou hast sent." Who so readeth let him understand. Again. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep these things which are written therein."

The heavenly country which God has promised to his people is located on the earth. The nations to the uttermost parts of the earth are promised to Jesus as the seed of Abraham, who is the heir of the world, together with the meek who wait on the Lord, and shall inherit the earth, being joint heirs with Christ. "The meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace," Jesus says: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

Now I think my question is answered. I have not been able to find anywhere in the book, that if we give our hearts only to Jesus Christ, we will be saved. No, we are to believe Jesus Christ came into the world to save those that believe on him, accept his gospel and are baptised. Then, and only then, can we hope for life eternal.

We are to keep ourselves in the love of God looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

MARRIE KAUFFMAN.

Springfield, Ohio.

FAITH—KIND AND QUANTITY.

Faith is one of the oldest subjects known, yet a general understanding of the subject has not improved much with age. It must be apparent to every one who stops to think as has lately been said, that "faith and works stand or fall together." Faith in its primary sense always refers to the thing believed. To "contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," means to uphold the doctrines of the ancients, and in doing this we will have the same belief or doctrine they had: therefore there can be no change of faith from their time. If there is any change, it is a corruption of their faith. There can never be such a thing as progress in faith. God started with a definite plan in view, and if God "changes not" then his faith is just as unchangable; therefore all people in all ages must look for and believe in the same thing. This would make them of "one faith," and also at one with God. Can two walk together except they be agreed?" Amos 3:3: If God had a definite plan in view at the beginning, and delivered it to the ancients (who believed in God), as something to be believed, and we contend for the same, are we not all agreed? And have we not all the same faith? And if we can change in belief, which would cause us to look for a different thing, and expect God to recognize us then, does not God have to change too? If so, then God begins to vary, and becomes like corruptible man. There is but "one faith," and that is laid in God's plan, and is unchangable. Paul says (Heb. 11-1: "That faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." How can we then be of the one faith, and at the same time looking at a different "substance?" The farmer plants his corn by faith. He believes the elements in the sunshine, rain and earth, combining and working together will produce corn. In planting the corn he shows his faith. How does he show it? By his works. Here hope springs into life. By faith he sees the corn in the crib, and is hoping for corn. But what would you think of a farmer that planted corn and by faith looked down to the end of the season and saw wheat, as the "substance?" How do you think he would come out in the end? If God has said "the meek shall inherit the earth," by what law of faith or stretch of imagination can you see yourself in heaven? To do so you must manufacture a faith or belief to correspond with the substance, and to do this one must ignore what God has said.

We believe there is one God: and when the pure in heart see God, will they see one or three? And if they see three, will the faith and substance agree? If we believe in one God, we truly and fully believe we will never see but the one true God. He who changes the faith to say there are three God's, is not walking with God, for he does not agree with God: and if not walking with God, then not with those who are in fellowship with him.

Now as to quality of faith, we believe in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." But how much do we believe in these things? It is easy to say we believe certain things, but does our works prove that we believe them with all our hearts? We say we believe Jesus is soon coming, but how are we proving to the world that we believe it? If we really believe Jesus is soon coming, will we let anything come between us and our duty? Won't we do everything possible to realize the things the faith holds in store for us? Suppose you do hold to the one faith, and contend for it, did you ever realize how much you may lose by having a poor quality? The farmer who plants his corn and is too lazy to tend it, and lets weeds sap the ground, and then hauls off his chaffy corn to market, begins to realize what he has lost in quality. It is weighed in the balance and found wanting. He lost in weight and in price: and as a result he and his family forgo some of the necessaries and comforts of life. Now brethren and sisters, we may be in "the faith," but is the quality the best on the market or up to the standard? Remember your inactivity does not always effect you alone, your indolence will produce fruit in others as well as yourself, so all must suffer loss alike.

(Continued on Page 5)

Manager's Column

UNTIL JAN. 1ST, 1912

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts," the most widely circulated book ever published by our people, can be obtained for 40 cents per copy. This special offer is made only until the first of the new year. The money received from this special sale of the book will go partly to The Restitution Pub. Co., and partly to the author, who is now taking a course in proofreading and who needs a few extra pennies to meet the expenses of completing his education in this profession.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The Chicago Bereans will make their annual Christmas distribution of food and money to the poor and needy of their great city. Friends who wish to help in this work of Christmas cheer, please send their contributions to Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

By order of Committee.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The lessons for our new Berean books for 1912 are ready for the printer. It is necessary for us to have an idea of the number of books needed before placing the work in his hands. Several societies in other states purchased their present books from the Illinois state society. If these societies or any others wish to buy their new books from us, will they please send an approximate number of the books they will need to the chairman of the committee, Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario street, Chicago, Ill., before December 18th. This does not apply to any society in Illinois. Send no money now—just an estimate of the number of books needed. For further information send to the above address.

ANNA E. DREW.
President Illinois Bereans.

We are grateful to friends who are remembering the poor in donating to the helping fund. Christmas is especially an opportune time for such liberality.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund:

W. A. Haynes	.50
Mrs. Albert Burton	.50
Lizzie C. Byrne	1.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress well while at moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send 6c for sample copy.

McCall Patterns will make your clothes in your own home. With each one in hand—a thing for any and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Prices none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free premium catalogue and full Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles", in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

FAITH—Kind and Quantity

(Continued from Page 3)

The seed that produces the right kind of faith won't produce the quality without cultivation. We all believe in the fact that Christmas is coming, but a great many will put off their shopping till the last day. So I imagine there will be a great activity when the trumpet sounds that ought to be now. God takes into account only those who by faith are agreed with him, and weighs them in the balance. Jesus said he did not come to condemn the world; for they were condemned already. Then the thing to do is to show some of the quality of faith; by our works show how much we believe. The efforts we put forth to promote the one kind will prove the quality. Can any one read Heb. 11 without getting this idea? Those ancient people suffered everything for the faith. They not only had the right kind but had the right quality. Will your faith stand the test as to kind and quality?

ALMUS ADAMS.
Omaha, Neb.

Faith, hope, love; these three, but the greatest of these is love. —Paul.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 318 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg. $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

An Appropriate Christmas Gift

This is the time of year when we begin to think of appropriate Christmas gifts for friends and those near and dear to us. Here is a good suggestion. Send them the Restitution for a year, it will go to them fifty-two times, each time with messages of faith, hope, love, courage and gladness. A loving remembrance and a blessing each week of the year. For the balance of the year we are going to make this

GENEROUS OFFER

ALL FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR AT $1.50

The Restitution for the balance of 1911. The Restitution for ALL of 1912. One Beautiful Art Calendar for 1912. (No advertisement). One copy of "A Letter to a Friend," One copy of W. H. Wilson's Students' Text Book.

We will send all to one address or The Restitution to one address and the premiums to another This is for new subscribers only, and certainly a very generous offer. For two new subscribers you can substitute The Pine Woods Bible Class, or "The Bible, Its Principle and Texts," for the Students' Text Book. When requested we will send a card to those to whom the above may be sent as a gift, giving the donor's name and best wishes.

Send names today, so as to get all the advantages of this offer.

The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that It is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Walter Tomlinson #1
10825 Orville ave

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints (assistors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-54); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as pre-requisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 5-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 50 CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER 12, 1911 No. 47

THE TREE OF LIFE.

To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. Rev. 2:7.

Oh, blessed, blessed, tree of life!
Whose leaves the nations heal;
Whose fruit, each month shall be of different kind,
Within whose shade the saints shall rest,
And of they fruit partake.

Blessed, thrice blessed, they,
Who shall that feast enjoy
With him their Lord and King;
While ages roll uncounted by,
And sweet peace reigns supreme.

LILLIE D. WILLIS
Galva, Ill.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

VII.—The Rise of Immortal-Soulism.

Many and great were the changes that took place in the church during the second century, although we have seen that not much change took place in faith and practice during the first century. Prominent among these changes during the second century was the introduction of heathen philosophy in various forms. Various theories ultimately prevailed and became "orthodox," particularly the philosophy of Plato, the prominent feature of which was the "immortality of the soul." When once this theory was adopted as the belief of the church the whole of the Scriptures had to be recast, and then they could be understood only by learned men, that is, men who were learned in Greek philosophy. The word soul is frequently used in the Scriptures, and it was seized upon by these philosophers and used to prove that the Scriptures taught that man was an immortal soul; whereas they teach the very reverse, and assert that "God only hath immortality" (1 Tim. vi. 16.) We are told also that Christ hath "abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. i. 10); and that to those who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, God will render eternal life (Rom. ii. 7). But the philosophers asserted that Adam was created an immortal soul.

The word used in reference to man in the scriptures does not prove that he is immortal; for if it did, on the same assumption all the animals are immorta' souls. Precisely the same words are used of the animals in their creation in Genesis i. as are used in speaking of the creation of man in Genesis ii. 7, namely, the Hebrew words nephesh chayah, and there translated a living soul. Nephesh chayah occurs in Genesis i. 20, and in the margin is given living soul; verse 21 translated living creature, also verse 24; verse 30 translated wherein there is life, margin, a livi g soul. Gesenius, the great Hebrew lexicographer, renders the words nephesh chayah—animal of life living creature. It is very evident from the command given by God to Adam that man was not created immortal: "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die"—marginal reading, "dying thou shalt die." (Gen. ii 17). The serpent said to the woman: "Ye shall not surely die," and the woman believed him. After the transgression God said to Adam: "In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. iii 19.) That is surely plain enough language that a child might understand. God did not say: "Your body will go to the dust, and your soul will go somewhere else;" but He said that he made the man of dust, and he would return there. Before the end of the second century the serpent's lie was adopted by some of the so-called fathers, and the immortality of the soul freely discussed by them.

The way that the word soul is used in the Scriptures entirely precludes the idea that immortality is an attribute of it. The Hebrew word translated soul, as we have seen, is nephesh, and the equivalent word in the Greek is psyche. Genesis ix. 4 says: "But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat;" the word there translated life is the Hebrew word nephesh Lev. vii. 27: "Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from the people." It is very evident that it is a living corporeal person that is here meant by the word soul. Again, Deut. xii. 23: "Only be sure that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life (nephesh); and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh;" so that soul according to the Scriptures can be eaten, for it adds: "Thou shalt not eat it; that is, the soul life or blood; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water." Sometimes the whole person is spoken of as a soul; there were three-score and six souls that came out of the loins of Jacob that went down into Egypt with him (Gen. xlvi. 26). Dead souls are spoken of in the Hebrew Scriptures; not spiritually dead, as theologians teach. Numbers ix. 6: "Now there were certain men who were defiled by the dead body of a man," (the word here rendered body is the Hebrew word nephesh; and they said, 'We are defiled by the dead body of a man" (dead nephesh). Verse 9 and 10: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, speak unto the children of Israel, saying, if any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body" (nephesh). Literally, if any one is unclean by touching a soul which is dead. Ezek. xviii. 20: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." That they did die, and were slain is evident. Joshua x. 35: "And they took Ezbon on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword; and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachish." And he took Debir, and (verse 38) "smote them with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein;" and so on with many other places. Immortal souls could not die, be slain, or be utterly destroyed by Joshua and his armies.

As an illustration of how the translators of King James' version understood this word nephesh, it occurs in Ezek. xvii. 17, where they have rendered it, "to cut off many persons." The Latin version gives animas, the Greek psychas, the Douay or Catholic version souls; it was souls or persons which Pharaoh built forts, etc., to cut off. In Ezek. xiii. 19 the Lord says: "And will ye pollute Me among My people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to My people that hear your lies?" This is in perfect harmony with other portions of Scripture which teach that souls can be slain or saved alive; the Scripture knows nothing of "never-dying souls to save." David says in Ps. vi. 4, 5: "Return, O Lord, deliver my soul: O save me for thy mercies' sake! For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave (Hebrew word sheol) who shall give thee thanks?" Here the words soul and me are synonyms, a frequent form of expression in the Hebrew, and the soul David or the me knew that when he was dead and went to shed he could not then give God thanks. The same word here translated grave occurs in Ps. xvi. 10: "For Thou wilt not leave my soul (or me) in hell; neither wilt thou suffer Thine holy one to see corruption." This is quoted by Peter (Acts ii. 27) as being fulfilled in Christ, and at the same time he tells his hearers that David is both dead and buried, that he has not ascended into heaven, and as a proof of this he asserts that David's sepulchre was with them still. David then had no belief in immortal souls, or sand years. We have perceived, in their going to heaven at death, which if they did they could ever certainly praise God. And Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, asserted that David was dead and not alive, that he was still in his grave and not in heaven. Hezekiah, another one of God's servants, to whom God gave a gift of fifteen years more life (Is. xxxviii.), after the Lord had delivered him from death, said: "I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave (sheol): I am deprived of the residue of my years. I said, I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord in the land of the living: I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world . . . . Behold, for peace I had great bitterness; but thou hast in love to my soul (or me) delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind Thy back. For the grave (sheol) cannot praise Thee, death cannot celebrate Thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for Thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day." So Hezekiah, like David, had no hope that dead men could praise the Lord.

Instead of Christ coming to save immortal souls, and to make the immortality of the soul more clear, as is contended by theologians both ancient and modern, He came to bring life and immortality to light by the gospel. He will fulfil to His people Hosea xiii 14: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave (sheol); I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues: O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from Mine eyes." This was the only hope of the early Christians when they died; they took the comfort, and gave it to others, of this given by Paul: "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." (1 Thess. iv. 16-18).

There were many professed followers of Christ, however, who very soon adopted the heathen doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and taught that they had a never-dying soul to save. It was in reference to this class that Justin Martyr, who was put to death in Rome probably about the year 165, wrote the following in his dialogue with Trypho the Jew: "I pointed out to you that some who are called Christians, but are godless, impious heretics, teach doctrines that are in every way blasphemous, atheistical and foolish. . . . . For I chose to follow not men or men's doctrines but God and the doctrines by him. For if you have fallen in with some who are called Christians, but who do not admit this, and venture to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; who say there is no resurrection of the dead, and that their souls when they die are taken to heaven; do not imagine that they are Christians. . . . But I, and others who are right minded Christians on all points are assured that there will be a resurrection of the dead, and a thousand years in Jerusalem, which will then be built and adorned and enlarged, as the prophets Ezekiel and Isaiah and others declared." He then quotes from Isaiah lx. and lxv., and says: "Now we have understood that the expression used among these words, 'According to the days of the trees shall be the days of My people: the works of their toil shall abound,' obscurely predict a thousand years. For as Adam was told in the day he ate of the tree he would die, we know that he did not complete a thousand years. We have perceived, moreover, that the expression, 'The day of the Lord is as a thousand years,' is connected with this subject. And further, there was a certain man with us, whose name was John, one of the apostles of Christ, who prophesied by a revelation that was made to him that those who believed in our Christ would dwell a thousand years in Jerusalem; and that thereafter the general, and in short the eternal, resurrection and judgment of all men would likewise take place, just as our Lord also said, 'They shall neither marry nor be given in marriage, but shall be equal to the angels, the children of God of the resurrection.'"

This doctrine of the immortality of the soul, however, adopted from heathen philosophy, was not long after this made popular in the church. The first writing to this effect received as belonging to the church is in the epistle of Mathetes to Diognetus. There is very much controversy about this epistle among learned men as to when it was written; some claiming a very early date for it, and others claiming that it was written very late in the second century. It comes out very strongly on the immortality of the soul, and so it suits our orthodox friends to put it as early as possible. The editors of the work, The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Rev. Alexander Roberts, D. D., and James Donaldson, D. D., says in their preface of this letter: "The following interesting and eloquent epistle is anonymous, and we have no clew whatever as to its author. For a considerable period after its publication in 1592 it was generally ascribed to Justyn Martyr. In recent times Otto has inserted it among the works of that writer, but Semisch and others contend that it cannot possibly be his. In dealing with this question we depend entirely upon the internal evidence, no statement as to the authorship of the epistle having descended to us from antiquity." The internal evidence shows clearly that Justyn Martyr did not write it. The editor of the American edition of The Ante-Nicene Fathers, A. Cleveland Coxe, B. D., has this to say about this epistle: "The anonymous author of this epistle gives himself the title Mathetes, 'a disciple,' of the apostles, and I venture to adopt it as his name. . . . . Mathetes was possibly a catechumen of St. Paul or one of the apostle's associates. . . . . Altogether the epistle is a gem of purest ray; and while suggesting some difficulties as to interpretation and exposition, it is practically clear as to argument and intent." It certainly brings in a clear ray of heathen philosophy. The following is the sixth chapter of this letter to Diognetus:

"To sum up all in one word—what the soul is in the body, that are Christians in the world. The soul is dispersed through all the members of the body, and Christians are scattered through all the cities of the world. The soul dwells in the body, yet is not of the body; and Christians dwell in the world, but their godliness remains invisible. The flesh hates the soul and wars against it, though itself suffering no injury, because it is prevented from enjoying pleasure; the world also hates the Christians though in no wise injured, because they abjure pleasure. The soul loves the flesh that hates it and the members; Christians likewise love those that hate them. The soul is imprisoned in the body, yet preserves that very body; and Christians are confined in the world as in a prison, and yet they are preservers of the world. The immortal soul dwells in a mortal tabernacle; and Christians dwell as sojourners in corruptible, looking for an incorruptible dwelling in the heavens. The soul when but ill provided with food and drink becomes better; in like manner the Christians, though subjected day by day to punishment, increase the more in number."

These ideas became orthodox in the third century, but till very late in the second century were repudiated as heathenish by the "fathers."

The Scriptures place a very different estimate upon the body from this Gnostic Christian. "What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body." (1 Cor. vi. 19, 20); an officious Gnostic believer added his idea to this verse which is in King James' version, but omitted in the revised edition because it was not in the original, viz., "and in your spirit, which are God's." "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." (1 Cor. xv. 53). Surely it is not the immortal soul of this Gnostic writer that is to put on immortality. It is very evident that whoever this writer was, or at whatever time he wrote he was no disciple of the apostle Paul; but might easily have been a disciple of those in Corinth whom Paul is exposing in this fifteenth chapter. For if the immortal soul is the all-important part of man, and goes to heaven at death, it would be a great shame to again put it into this body, which is such a trouble to it at present according to this writer.

It was this idea of the body being a clog or encumbrance that led ultimately to thousands fleeing into the deserts and living on roots and herbs, and getting themselves into all kinds of constrained positions so as to emaciate their bodies and get to heaven as quickly as possible; and he was the greatest saint latterly who could invent the most cruel torture to put himself to. But that was not the spirit of the church in the second century, although some of them sought martyrdom too readily; they did not always follow the Master's instruction, "But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." (Matt. x. 23). They had a bad example set them by Ignatius, one of the early fathers, who was put to death at Rome under Trajan. When he was a prisoner, he wrote to the church at Rome when he was on his way there, and said: "I write to all the churches, and impress on them all that I shall willingly die for God, unless ye hinder me: I beseech of you not to show an unseasonable goodwill towards me. Suffer me to become food for the wild beasts, through whose instrumentality it will be granted me to attain to God. I am the wheat of God and am ground by the teeth of the wild beasts that I may be found the pure bread of God. Rather entice the wild beasts that they may become my tomb, and may leave nothing of my body, so that when I have fallen asleep I may not be found troublesome to any one."

A. WALLACE MASON
Cleveland, O.

"BY AND BY HE IS OFFENDED."

By S. Roxana Wince.

"By and by he is offended." Strange! He received the word with joy. He obeyed it. He took the Christ-name. It would be grand he thought, to follow one who could give endless life and enduring thrones to all his disciples. It would be grand to live in that promised kingdom, where wicked men would have no place, and no one would be sick or die. But he had not understood. He evidently expected to have a rose-path all the way, that his royal master, being a king, would be honored as a king and that his disciples would share in his honor. He had not counted on being laughed at, it had never come into his mind that he would be reviled and persecuted, and have all manner of false stories told about him, wherever they went, the multitudes that came to listen to Jesus and to have the lame, the blind, the paralyzed, the lepers, the epileptics, the fevered, the palsied, the crazy ones among them restored to health again, were numbered by the thousands and many times repeated. No scribe nor Pharisee could draw such crowds; no Roman ruler could get such a hearing as this Jesus. He was the hero of the hour among the people.

But his own countrymen would not believe, and the great men of Judah did not like his teaching and were alarmed because of the hosannas and the homage he was receiving, and began consulting with one another how they might put him to death.

And Jesus himself began telling of a cup of which he must drink, and of a baptism with which he must be baptized, that all his disciples must share. They would be delivered up to councils, be beaten in the synagogues, be brought before rulers and kings for his sake, be betrayed by brother, by father and by son, and be hated by all men because of bearing the name of Christ. But still the stony ground hearer "endured." Like Peter, "he thought he would never deny the Master." But the crowd of armed men came into the garden and Jesus was taken. Then the man was "offended" and ran away, and never came back.

He could not bear to have it cast in his teeth that "he too, was also with Jesus of Nazareth," that "he surely was one of them for his speech betrayed him." "It was easy to go with the crowds when fame was blowing loud her clarion trumpet," but not to stand up for one who was being borne away to a shameful death, and to bear for his sake, affliction, persecution, and to come at last to the same dreadful end. Are we of these days any stronger? Do not some of us become "offended" and refuse to walk any more with Jesus, not because of "affliction or persecution for his sake," but because of some personal grievance, bitter and cruel it may be, but that ought to be looked over! Yet, alas! how few of us have the grace to put self out of sight, and look only at the glory of God and the safety of the cause. The grievance may seem to have destroyed our lives, and wrecked our usefulness, but it has not if we put it behind us and go on in the fight. We are the servants of Christ, and no "troubles of our own" must interfere with the work he has put into our hands. "Bought with a price", what right have we to lay down our swords? What right have we to "forsake the assembling of ourselves together?" Would Jesus have won the crowns of the world if he had become "offended," because of trials, and stopped in the race? No more can we win if we give up now. Put your lights on a candlestick and let them shine! The troubles are but for a moment anyway. Do not fling away eternal life because of a word. Do not in "time of temptation fall away."

Pierceton, Ind.

Faith, hope, love: these three, but the greatest of these is love. —Paul.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 5-7 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Dec. 12, 1913

EDITORIAL

Ernest Weakley, of the British Board of Trade, says that in spite of some drawbacks and economic disadvantages, Palestine is filling up with Jewish settlers.

We are now taking two lessons a week on proofreading under the final proofreader of The Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia. We regret that our duties are so many and pressing that we cannot answer correspondents.

We have lost Bro. and Sister Sterling Groves by removal to Los Angeles, Calif. We commend them to the brethren of that city, and wish them the richest of God's blessings in their far away home.

In 1897 the Jewish population of Jersalem was only 28,000; today it is easily double that number. They are flocking to the land of their fathers from every part of Europe. Some are driven out of Russia by fear of pogroms; others flee from the turmoil of the Balkan provinces; others still are just led to the cradle of their race by the homing instinct.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: Christ's Message to the Ephesian Church

Text: Rev. 2:1-8

I. History of the Church. 1. Its formation, progress, and partial apostacy. Acts 18:18-28; 19; 20:17-38; Rev. 2:5,11. "Holdeth fast," Greek, Kraton, vs. 1, 25; 3; 11; Jno. 10: 28; Psa. 21: 8, 9.

II. Things in the church which Christ approves. 1. Labor, patience, v. 2; Jas. 1: 22-25, 3, 4; Rom. 6:3; Heb. 6:12; 10:36. 11. "Canst not bear them that that are evil." v. 2; 1 Cor. 5; 2 Cor. 7: 8-12; 2 Thes. 3:6. III. "Tried them," v. 2; 1 Jno. 4:1. IV. Apostles, v. 2; 2 Tim. 4:10,15-18; 2 Cor. 11:4, 13-15; 2 Pet. 2:1 V. The Nicolaitanes (vanquishers of the people), corrupt in both doctrine and deeds, they had withstood, and had not "fainted" in the warfare. vs. 6, 15, 3; Gal. 6:9; Heb. 12:3, 4.

III. Things in the Church which Christ Condemns. 1 Fervency of "first love" had cooled. A return to "first love" is a return to "first works." vs. 2, 4, 5; 2 Jno. 6; Jno. 14:21; Rom. 2:7; Mat. 24:13; Jer. 2:2.

IV. The promise. 1. Vikontas, the overcomers, is translated "gotten the vitory" in Rev. 15:2. Gen. 49:19; 1 Jno. 6:4; 2:10; Titus 2:12. II. Paradise, a garden. Gen. 2:8; Neh. 2:8; Eccl. 2:5; Cant. 4:13. III. The tree of life on earth before sin; reappears on earth after sin. Gen. 3:22; Prov. 11:30; 13:12; Rev. 22:2; 21:5, 6.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Readers of The Restitution:—I have been much interested during the past week in reading Elder Huggins' work on "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts." I want to say Amen to the many good things and words of "sound doctrine;" also to many good articles in the Restitution of late.

The article on Three Nights and Three Days in the Tomb is worthy of the consideration of every Bible student. Let me suggest that all read a small tract, "Was Jesus the Christ?" published and for sale by Wm. Frederick, the author, Box 435 Clyde, Ohio. It sells for about 25 cents. I think, or a larger, more complete work by the same author for those who care to purchase same. The calendar of "Nisan" and "Zif," with explanations, is worth the price of the tract. It seems plain to me that Christ was crucified on Wednesday, and three means three, not one and one-half.

It was my pleasure to spend a day recently with our editor. I was delighted to know that he is so desirous of bringing about a closer fellowship and unity among the various societies of people who hold the same views upon so many Bible themes. I am certain if we will all come together upon the Word of God we shall all speak the same thing, and there will be unity. It is the opinions of men that divide the church. As long as we exalt man above God we may expect this, but when we all follow the Divine plan we shall reach that place where we shall all be one.

Is our difference upon the name question? God's word settles that for us, both as to the church itself, and the individual members. Is it a question of man's salvation? What must he do? God's word answers the question with no mistaken sound.

And so all matters which pertain to the church and our relationship to it are settled for us in the word which is "all sufficient." If we will let it speak we shall have unity upon all questions.

In conclusion, may I exhort all to be faithful. We have "the more sure word of prophecy," and it will be well that we read and study it with care that we may know the enemies' land through which we journey. Some are falling asleep, but by and by they shall awaken and we shall live together on the new earth.

Let us be faithful in the few things and be at last accounted worthy to be a ruler over many.

In the Blessed Hope.

ELDER CHARLES MAPLE.
North Ridgeville, O.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: I notice in our family paper of November 28th that Brother Adams has not made his trip yet. We sent our money some time ago, and we were rejoicing, thinking that our able Brother Adams had gone and was sounding out the glad tidings of the soon coming kingdom. Dear ones of the family of God, oh what an exalted name! do not delay this trip. It makes me feel sad to think of the time going to waste, all for the sake of money in this land of plenty. Oh, how God has blest us. All who intend to give or are able, please take enough time to send a money order to Sister Free, and our Brother will soon be on his way to labor. Oh, that we could get the right view of the work the Lord has left for us to do. We that have not the talent to preach are to furnish means for those that have the talent. The work is not all left for the ministers. It is a wonder that our preachers are not discouraged; they have to face so much opposition, and bear many things that are unpleasant. They need all the help and encouragement we are able to give them.

Let me give you a lesson I got several weeks ago; it was given to me in kindness. I was teaching the truth to a friend of mine. I gave her my Restitution to read. She enjoyed it much and was learning fast. Once when I called on her she asked, "Why are there so many calls for money in your paper and so few responses?" She also asked, "Why are all your ministers so poor?" She had learned that to be a fact in various ways.

"Preachers so able to teach people as your preachers are, ought to be well paid," she continued; "look what other preachers get, and they do not preach good Bible sermons as yours do." Brothers and sisters, how do you think I felt? Our preachers are few in number, and they must have food and raiment as well as we. They have the same right to have a home of their own as we.

The signs of the times proclaim the time short, in which we have to work; the Lord's return is near at hand. God grant that all who have learned the true gospel as it is in Christ and have been buried in the likeness of his death, and thus have made a covenant with God to leave all and follow our blessed Jesus, may be found ready to enter into that glorious kingdom when he comes, is my prayer.

MRS. W. H. EIDEMILLER.
Troy, O.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

The Bible an Eastern Book, Yet Influential in Western World.—There is another features of the Bible which is scarcely less remarkable. The Bible is an Eastern Book: its writers all belong to one single Eastern race: its geography is almost entirely limited to Eastern lands; yet it is popular and influential in the Western world. It is altogether singular and alone among Eastern religious books in this respect. No other sacred volume coming from Asia has penetrated and moulded the peoples of Europe and America. As a rule Eastern writings have little hold upon the Western mind. The interests, the mental habits, the literary tastes of families of the rising sun are altogether dissimilar from those of the families of the setting sun. The sacred books of China, or Persia, or India, or Arabia, are familiar to none but the lettered few in the Western hemisphere. Western nations do not, as a rule, read Eastern literature. The Bible, however, is a striking exception to this general rule. It is an Eastern book; written and compiled by men of the East. It is rich in Eastern idiom, Eastern imagry, Eastern turns of thought, yet the nations of the West read and revere it. There is nothing Western in the book, yet not all the writings of the Western world combined have exerted upon Western civilization an influence commensurate with that of this single Eastern volume. No Western book is so famous, so treasured among the masses of the West as their vernacular translation of this sacred book imported from the East. It has been the study of the German peasant; the friend of the American citizen; the bulwark of the English home; the consolation, the pride, the joy of the Western multitude.

The Bible More Influential in West than in East.—The Bible, indeed, now exercises a great power over the lands of its adoption in the West than over the lands of its birthplace in the East. Cities and regions honored in its pages, localities whose imperishable renown depends solely upon their relation to its history, have either driven it into exile or have forgotten it; while continents unknown to its writers, regions unmentioned in its chronicles, recognize its authority and are subjugate to its teachings. The Bible is the sacred volume of America and the British Empire; but the sacred volume of Jerusalem and Mount Sinai is the Koran. Gradually the Bible may return and win back the people of its home in the East; but as yet the realm of its largest influence has been among the peoples who received it in the West.

ASKING OF GOD

As Children—In the Name of Christ—With Assurance—Unselfishly—With Deference to His Wisdom—Obedient Hearts—Thankfully—Confidently—Always In Christ

It is customary to ask of God in prayer. At the same time there are conditions which are essential in order that our prayers may be acceptable and answerable. Christ says, "And all things, whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." (Matt. 21:22.

The various ways which I consider essential on the part of every true and earnest believer are as follows:

To ask God: 1. As children of a father. 2. In the name of Christ. 3. With assurance. 4. Unselfishly. 5. With deference to His wisdom. 6. With obedient hearts. 7. Thankfully. 8. Confidently. 9. Abiding in Christ.

We are children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; we have become adopted sons of God by baptism. When Christ is teaching His disciple of alms, prayer and trust in God, He says to them "Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for everyone that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. Or what man is there of you whom if his son ask bread, will he give a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in Heaven give good things to them that ask Him?" (Matt. 7:7-11.) If we ask God in the right way there is no fear of our prayers being unanswered. While reading recently I came across a line which I think is worth remembering: "They were never sought in vain, who sought the Lord aright."

James says, "Ye lust and have not: ye kill and desire to have and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." (Jas. 4:2-3.)

When we ask of God we should ask with deference to His wisdom, considering the station of God in comparison with our station. "If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not and it shall be given him." (James 1:5.)

If we ask, willing to obey, we shall receive, for we read in 1 John 3:22, "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him, because we keep His commandments and do those things that are pleasing in His sight." If we ask with obedient hearts our prayers will be answered, for God loves obedient children. We know this because Paul says: "Let no man deceive you with vain words, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." (Eph. 5:6.)

We should ask God with our hearts full of thanksgiving and praise, and glorify His name. Paul says: "Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us; unto Him be glory in the church of Christ Jesus through all ages world without end." (Eph. 3:20-21.) "But in everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." (Phil. 4:6.)

We must pray with confidence and without wavering. James says: "But let him ask in faith, not wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." (James 1:6.) "And this is the confidence that we have in Him, that if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us." (1 John 5:14.) We must be able to look up in the sight of God and have confidence to talk to Him with the expectation that He will hear us. Christ says: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (John 15:7.)

It seems to me that if we follow closely after the different ways of praying, as given in this study, we will not fail to pray to God in a worthy and acceptable way.

VIOLA GAZELEY.
Cleveland, Ohio.

THE ALL IN CHRIST

For As in Adam All Die, So Also in Christ Will All be Made Alive 1. Cor. 15:22

The above text has been a source of much controversy among different expositors. One class see in it universal resurrection and universal salvation for all mankind; others limit it to those who are asleep in Christ. Both views cannot be true. Prof. C. F. Hudson presents a critical point in the text which is quite generally overlooked. He says: "We think the verse applies to the subjects of Paul's previous discourse, the pronoun being contained in the verb, as in Luke 20:38: "For as in Adam they all die, even so in Christ shall they all be made alive." This understood, the harmony of the passage with vs. 45-48 appears at once." ("Christ our Life," page 15.)

The first question which presents itself is: Do the believers die in Adam, and do sinners die in Christ? To avoid the force of the above point, it requires a change in the construction of the text as follows, "By Adam all die, even so by Christ all will be made alive." The reader will at once see the force of the above statement. The phrase "in Christ" occurs nearly one hundred times in the writings of Paul, but it never refers to any one but to those who are believers in Christ. And when the death of believers is mentioned, they are represented as "Asleep in Christ," or "dying in the Lord," or "dead in Christ," etc. In the 18th verse of this same chapter (1 Cor. 15), the apostle refers the phrase directly to those who are believers: "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished"—Then again, it is stated by the apostle that if any man be in Christ, "he is a new creature." (1 Cor. 5:17. The wicked do not die in Christ, neither do the believers die in Adam. The wicked do not sleep in Christ, while in the state of death: they are yet in Adam, and therefore cannot be raised in Christ. Our Lord makes it plain that the believer is raised to life, but that other class "to condemnation." He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son, hath not life." Hence it will be impossible to raise the wicked dead "in Christ" whatever views we may have of human destiny. We must adhere to the one great fact that wicked men cannot be raised in Christ, as they were never inducted into Him. They are not in Christ while alive; they do not die in Christ, and are not in Christ while dead. There is only one way to evade this position, and that is to adopt the Catholic purgatory system, and reform the whole world of the wicked dead, and have them purified and made new creatures in Christ, so that they all may be raised in him and be of them who are Christ's at his coming! But the wicked dead who die in Adam cannot be raised in our Lord at "the resurrection of the just." As all in the Adam die, so all in the Christ will be made alive, and will put on immortality at his coming. This view presents a complete harmony of the whole chapter of 1st Corinthians. Christ is the first fruits of those who sleep in him. He who sows to the flesh, will reap corruption; and he who sows to the spirit, will reap life everlasting. So it appears to me.

H. V. REED.
Chicago, Ill.

THE TREE OF LIFE.

Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. Rev. 22:14.

The subject of the tree of life as found in the Scriptures is one to which Bible students have given much study and thought. It is a deep yet simple thing whereby God manifests his wisdom. In Gen. 2:8-9 we read: "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil."

One commentator says that "whether or not the tree spoken of is to be considered as having had a real existence, is the question which has perplexed all." If not a "real existence,"—what kind of "existence" would a tree have? Imaginary?

It is evident that this student and commentator did not accept the written word as of much consequence, or as very reliable as to facts. Yet Jesus appealed to it, saying: "What saith the Scriptures?" or, "It is written." He ever quoted that story of Jonah and the great fish as a fact no less positive than the resurrection of which it was a type. Our commentator propounds the question: "Are we to consider the tree of life as having had properties within itself of giving life, or is it a figure or type of something higher?"

It—like the other tree—grew "out of the ground;" it was then a real tree — not an imaginary tree. Then it had a "real existence."

Let us just consider the principle on which the question is based that philosophy, which, while professing wisdom, is empty of sense and reason when considering spiritual truths. Looking at the question—"Are we to consider the tree of life as having properties within itself of giving life, or is it a figure or type of something higher"—we may divide the question and consider the parts separately.

First. Are we to consider the tree of life as having properties within itself of giving life. In view of the acknowledged typical nature of the tree, we could cut short all necessity of argument by asking the questioner if the anti-type had not the power to give life? Would the questioner ask whether the manna which came down for Israel had any food value? Jesus likened himself to that bread, saying, "I am the bread of life; your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. If any man eat my flesh and drink my blood, he shall never die." If now the manna had had no food value, wherein would it have been of any use as a type of Christ? So we can with equal reason say of the tree of life, if it did not represent by reason of the possession of certain properties some fact in connection with the great anti-type, it would be unfit as a type. On this basis we are forced to conclude that the tree of life must have had within itself properties of giving life. Reason demands this of us if we profess to accept what is said of it in the account.

Why did God place at the east of the garden of Eden cherubim and flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life? "Lest the man put forth his hand, and take of the tree of life and eat, and live forever." What kind of a critic can ask the question, "had the tree of life properties within itself of giving life," after reading those words "Eat and live?"

But let us look at the other question: Is it a figure or type of something higher?"

The soundest philosophy and reason sometimes find the best answer to a question in a return question, and we might right here use that method of showing the weakness of the question we propose to answer. The question implies that literality of the tree and its actual value to sustain life in those who partook of its fruit, would militate against its use as a type while the contrary is the truth. This thought is harmonious with all the teachings of all the apostles and prophets, as well as of Christ. Can anyone think of a type in all the Scripture which had only an imaginary existence? All are of necessity "real"—are literal facts used by divine wisdom to illustrate great principles and truths of His plan of salvation.

Yes, it was certainly a figure or type of something higher—just as was every other type in the whole Bible. To be a complete type it not only must exist as a tree, but also must embody in itself the properties it is intended to typify.

But let us not overlook the fact that the type and the thing typified by it are never identical. Now consider anti-type. Some have supposed that because the words "tree of life" appear in such passages as Rev. 2:7 and 22:1-2, that the literal tree as at the beginning would be restored in the kingdom age. These are but symbolic words which borrow their meaning from the typical we have been talking about.

Deut. 20:19: "When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, thou shalt not destroy the trees by forcing an ax against them, for the tree of the field is man's life." Prov. 13:12: "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; but when the desire cometh, it is a tree of life."

Isa. 61:3: "Trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord." Matt. 7:17: "Good tree bringeth forth good fruit." If the righteous are fitly represented as trees, how much more fit is Christ to be represented as the tree of life?

Cleveland, O. CHAS. A. GOSS

THE LORD'S COMING NOT A GRADUAL SPIRITUAL COMING.

"Evil Men and Seducers, Shall Wax Wose and Worse."

1. Do any of the following phrases describe a spiritual coming? "Shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven?" "Descend from heaven with a shout?" "The dead shall rise" living caught up, "Coming in the clouds with all the holy angels." "His feet shall stand at that day upon the Mount of Olives?"

2. Whom shall we believe, the Lord who compared His coming to the suddenness of the deluge in the "days of Noe," and to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, or shall we believe those extraordinary individuals who say that the Lord was a pessimist?

3. When the disciples were permitted for a short time to "see the kingdom of God" on the Mount of Transfiguration, was Christ visible or invisible?

4. Did not Christ say after He had His resurrection body, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have?"

5. Did not doubting Thomas find that Christ's spiritual and resurrection body was both visible and tangible?

6. If a man spiritualizes the Old Testament prophecies about Christ's second coming how can he convert the Jew who spiritualizes the less evident prophecies about His first coming? How can such a man blame the more consistent Jew?

7. Was Daniel's image, representing the Gentile governments, smashed gradually?

8. If I Thessalonians was written, as is said, to correct the Thessalonians' pre-millennial ideas, why did Paul encourage their delusion by saying in the second epistle, "to you—rest when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel?" If the world is converted at His coming, whom will he destroy?

9. Is not the theory that the "kingdom is within you" (marginal reading) based on a mistranslation? If it not contrary to fact, since the remark was addressed to Pharisees whom Christ afterward denounced?

10. Can the kingdom come without the king?

11. Does the sentence "the kingdom of God" cometh not with observation" mean a spiritual coming?

12. Is not the idea contradicted by all the rest of the chapter, which says the coming will be like the lightning and like the flood? When a man is struck by lightning does he have much time for observation?

13. If the gradual conversion of the world is the Lord's coming, why is His sudden appearing used as a warning to the unfaithful churches?

14. How can the coming be gradual if "the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come?"

15. How can the coming be gradual if "the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come?"

16. Does not Acts 7:52 prove that the Lord's first literal coming was even more unpopular than His second coming? "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted—and they have slain them which shewed before the coming of the Just One."

17. Which were right the illiterate followers of Christ who took the Bible literally, or the literary Pharises who took the Old Testament liberally?

18. If Christ said, "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have written" to those who did not believe the prophecies about His coming to suffer what shall be said about those who do not believe the more evident promises about His coming to reign?

19. Were Old Testament saints "mistaken" in looking for Christ's first coming, because the seed prediction made in Eden was not fulfilled until centuries afterward? Are modern saints who are looking for the Lord's second coming "mistaken" even if the divine plan for the universe does not culminate in their lifetime?

20. Does the kingdom come every time a Christian nation launches a new war vessel?

21. Does the mushroom crop of lectures on the "New Theology," "New Humanism" convert sinners? Is human nature new? Is the devil new?

22. If in no part of the world all have been converted by those who believe the Bible how long will it take the advanced critics and liberal theologians?

23. Which is the most popular with those having "itching ears," optimism or the Lord's coming?

24. Which of the prophets were stoned for being optimists?

25. Is there anything in the Bible to indicate that the devil is to lose his power and influence gradually? May he not continue to deceive the nations until he is chained in spite of evolution and optimism?

26. May he not almost deceive "even the very elect" by means of this same optimism?

27. If the Lord's coming is spiritual is it not strange that New Tesrtament writers so thoroughly misunderstood the subject? If they were mistaken whom shall we believe?

28. If the Lord is now coming spiritually and invisibly, "how can we watch" for His coming? How then can it be true that "every eye shall see Him?"

29. Judging from the present commercial tendencies, must not the time of universal trades unions and boycott be in the future, when, "no one might buy or sell save he that had the mark of the beast?"

30. Is there no difference between Christianity and civilization?

31. If, "not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble, are called," may not Christianity and civilization become antagonistic?

32. Did Peter have optimistic evolutionists in mind when he said "scoffers" should come in the "last days" saying "Where is the promise of His coming, for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

33. When will all the sects be united? Will it take longer than to convert the world?

34. Is the rapid growth in a Christian country of Mormonism, ritualism, atheistic socialism, a sign of the millennium?

35. Is there no difference between optimism and opthalmia?

36. Is the pessimism of Carlyle or Matthew Arnold the result of any lack of insight into human nature?

37. Does not Paul in Romans give quite as pessimistic a view of human nature? But is not pre-millennialist most optimistic in spite of the dark facts of human history because he knows "the Lord will come," and with Him "the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began?"

38. If a man shut his eyes to evils predicted in the Bible should he be called an optimist or an ostrich?

39. If the predicted punishment for rejecting the Messiah was so literally fulfilled upon the Jews, God's chosen people, may there not be some literal punishment for the Gentile "tares" when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on those that know not God and obey not the Gospel of His Son?"

40. Have not earthquakes and volcanoes occurred even recently? Is there any scientific reason why they may not occur in the future? Does not the Bible say, the last earthquake will be the greatest? "An earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth?"

41. Are the terrific catastrophes of the end time intended to stimulate optimism?

42. May we not conclude with considerable certainty, and with Saint Peter, "The earth is stored with fire against the day of judgment?

43. When John and Peter speak of a new heaven and earth, immediately after renovating fire and catastrophe, does it not suggest the possibility of some disturbance to the march of civilization?

44. Are all things moving irresistibly forward with one grand hurrah towards the golden age? Is not this the theory of unbelievers, liberal Jews, advanced thinkers, evolutionists and optimists? Should a Christian hold a theory contradicted by the Bible and police records?

"For as it was in the days before the flood—so shall the (spiritual) coming of the Son of Man be." "Two women shall be grinding at the mill—one shall be (spiritually) taken and the other (spiritually) left."

"Therefore be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye (spiritually) think not the on of Man cometh (spiritually)."

"But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart "My Lord delayeth His (spiritual) coming" and shall begin to smite his fellow servants—the Lord of that servant shall (spiritually) come in a day that he looketh not for him, and shall (spiritually) cut him asunder." The Lord's Coming, by C. C. Cook.

CONTROVERSY.

Selected by Dr. T. E. Reed.

The object of controversy should be to convince persons who are in the wrong of the error of their ways, and to set them right. It is a duty incumbent upon every Christian having a thorough understanding of Holy Scripture so to do wherever it is possible; "in meekness, instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." (2 Tim. 2: 25). We read of a controversy between God and His people Israel, because they refused to be subject to His laws. For example, in the fourth chapter of the prophet Hosea we have these words:—"Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for Jehovah hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth (or reacheth) unto blood;"—wickedness giving rise continually to fresh murders. It was rebellion against God that necessitated controversy.

We sometimes meet with Christians who object to any discussion upon religious subjects. They deem it quite sufficient to set before men the word of Scripture without any comments upon error, barefaced falsehoods, blasphemy, priestcraft, or professed infidelity. They make no attempt to bring home to men's minds the difference between right and wrong, and the injurious consequences to themselves both temporally and spiritually. It may be admitted that controversy is not suitable on every occasion; but it does not therefore follow that discussion is to be always avoided. Every person has his or her particular gift or gifts, and they are given for use to the glory of God. It would be wrong in him who has the power to set forth Scripture, and to reason thereupon, to be silent; when by the proper use of his talents he might be exposing evil, and convincing men of the infinite good to be found in the knowledge of Christ, who became incarnate to bestow light and life upon all who shall hunger and thirst after immortality and honor, by a living faith in Him as their God and Savior.

So far as I can judge, the Scriptures show that, from the period when Adam and Eve committed the sin of disobedience, there has ever been controversy between such as give heed to the will of God, and those who follow the doctrines and commandments of men. As recorded in the word of God, there was controversy between Cain and Abel; between Noah and the people of his time; between Moses and Pharoah; and on several occasions between continued all of us, even to this day, groaning under the bondage of the Pope and the Papacy—slaves of sin, and to the "mystery of iniquity." For freedom of thought, of speech, and of action, in spiritual things, men are indebted to the power of revealed truth; therefore did our God and Savior say—"If ye continue in My word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free!" (John 8:31, 32). Set you free from everything that is false—free from all dependence upon men—free from all priestcraft and superstition—to depend only upon God, and resolutely to follow Him in doing His holy will!

Be it remarked, that it is not the well-disposed—not those who are in the right and who are walking consistently with God's word—that are afraid of discussion. They rather court it; because fair and free discussion leads to inquiry—and inquiry to information—and correct information, which is knowledge, leads to action of "a godly sort," namely, "godly sorrow which worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of," and which conduces to "fellowship with the Father, and with his son Jesus Carist.' Discussion and inquiry are shunned and denounced only by the evil-minded who are afraid of the exposure of that craft by which (but for God's over-ruling providence) they would have annihilated that "kingdom which is not of this world;" and over which there is but one ruler—the Lord Jesus Christ—and no other. It is His sacred word which teaches, that "no man cometh unto the Father but by Me (Christ)." (John 14:6). "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12). "There is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave Himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2: 5, 6). "To Him give all the prophets witness that through His name, whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." (Acts 10:43).

Priestcraft, which is the very essence of Popery, is the root of all the evils now existing in the Christian churches.

Middletown, O.

MARRIED.

Brother Glenn O. Logan and Sister Mary L. S. Chesney were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, at 2 o'clock p. m., November 30, 1911, by the writer, in the presence of their parents, brothers and sisters, and a few friends.

Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations, the assembled company partook of a bountiful Thanksgiving repast in honor of the bride and groom.

Brother Logan is the only child of brother and sister Hugh Logan. He is a graduate of the Plymouth High school and is one of the bright, strong young men of our county and of the church.

Sister Logan is the oldest daughter of brother and sister Ignatius McChesney. She is an estimable and accomplished young lady, fully equipped with those noble traits of character that richly qualify her to assume the duties of a true helpmeet, and to preside over the destinies of this newly established household.

This is surely a felicitous union. They have grown from childhood to maturity within the knowledge of each other, and with such an auspicious beginning we can only predict a life of righteous achievment. They are both members of the church at North Salem, and will be among the substantial supporters of that organization.

May the God of love and of peace, in the name of our Lord and Savior be and abide with them in their journey of life, is our prayer.

Brother and sister Logan will go to housekeeping on the farm of the groom's father, who will remove to another farm nearby. They have made agriculture their choice as an avocation and are prepared by education and training to succeed in this the most independent field of usefulness.

D. E. VANVACTOR.

Argos, Ind.

JEHOVAH IS ONE JEHOVAH

The above is Young's translation of Deut. 6:4. I also give Leeser's translation of the same text: "The Lord our God is the one eternal being." Through traditions and false teachings the Deity has been driven from the minds of a great many of the people. The following is an article of faith found in a book of discipline of one of the popular churches: "There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body or parts, of infinite power, wisdom and goodness; the maker and preserver of all things visible and invisible. And in unity of their Godhead there are three persons of one substance—power and eternity—the Father the son, and the holy spirit." The above is taken from "the creed of St. Anthanasius," which some claim was established about the eighth or tenth century A. D. At this time false doctrines had so covered up the truth that but few believed it or dared to teach it. Think of the statement, viz.: "Without body or parts," yet having power and wisdom. In unity of this Godhead (Deity), there are three persons of one substance, (and yet without body or parts), power and wisdom. What a monstrous error we find in the above creed and yet intelligent men and women subscribe to and teach it.

It is our purpose to give to the readers of The Restitution the true doctrine of the "eternal one being." The authorized version of the Bible does not distinguish between the eternal one and the angels which he used as his instruments in creation and in visiting his created creatures. We have from the Hebrew Elohah, Elohim,) rendered "God" and "Lord God" without distinguishing them from the eternal one. In Gen. 1:26 the word God is rendered from Elohah, and means a might one, a member of the heavenly host. "God (Elohah) said, let us (Elohim) make man in our image, after our likeness." Now if man was made after the image and likeness of the (Elohim) they must have had a form or likeness. This must relate to their physical structure. There is no truth more plainly taught than that angels have forms. Adam conversed with them. Abraham entertained them. He furnished water that they might wash their feet, and provided food for them. He walked and talked with them. Lot also was visited by them and was taken out of Sodom. Many of the prophets speak of the angels of strength, "that do his commandments." His minister that do his pleasure."

By careful investigation we find that there are several Hebrew words that are translated by the Anglo-Saxon word "God." In Gen. 17:1 we have the expression "Almighty God." This is from the Hebrew word Ait Shaddai, or Ail. This message came from the eternal one, the all powerful one. This is the Theos or deity of the New Testament. The same being that appeared to Moses at the "burning bush," under the name of Yahweh. By this name He was not known to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The Yahweh name is a memorial name. He was to be known by that name through the ages. The Ail made the covenant with Jacob as he journeyed to his uncle's home of his place was called Bethel. This promise the "Ail" will keep thru all generations. He has made an everlasting covenant through Immanuel, Immanu-ail, the Yahweh-Eloah,) the powerful one. Jesus is the Yahweh of the new race or creation. He was made powerful through the resurrection from the dead.

Jesus, in speaking of the Father say, John 4:24, "God (Theoss), Greek; (Yahweh), Hebrew is a spirit." The one eternal being, not immaterial. God is a being. John in 5:26 says: "The Father hath life in himself." Here we see personality plainly; the eternal being possessing life in himself. This one gave life to his son that he might have life in himself. In our investigation of this subject we find that the (Elohim) had human forms, but were possessed of a nature that can not die. Luke 20:36: They are the (Ail) messengers or (Elohim). After His resurrection we find that Jesus appeared in human form to the women at the sepulchre and to his apostles. While they were in a room he appeared in their midst. They were terrified and thought that he was a not a phantom. He had flesh hold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see; for a spirit (phantom) hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." He was a spirit being and not a (phantom). He had flesh and bones, and these a phantom has not. All Bible testimony verifies the fact that Jesus remained a spirit being and went thus to the Father.

Dear reader what have we proven?

First that the translators have not distinguished between Elohah, Elohim, Ail, or Yahweh. All are translated by the one word "God."

Second, that the (Elohim) have human forms. They are called Ail messenger or angels.

Third, that Jesus is constituted the Ail or Yahweh-Eloah of the new creation. Also that he was changed from flesh to spirit, and still possessed a body. Paul says: "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. The first man Adam was made an animal body; the last Adam (Christ) was made a quickening spirit," or spirit-body.

Fourth, we have proven that the eternal is a being. Need we say, as some do, that this is a great mystery that no man can explain? Jesus says, this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus the Christ whom thou has sent."

D. C. ROBISON.

Salem, O.

GOLD DUST.

Hoping for the best from a man helps him toward it.

We must tramp upon our feelings when principle is at stake.

If a man measures life by what others do for him, he is apt to be disappointed; but if he measures life by what he does for others, there is no time for despair.

Do little things now; so shall big things come to thee by and by, asking to be done.

Jealousy is said to prove love—it may be so; it certainly weakens it, and certainly shows its want-ingness in love's strongest pillow-trust. If we loved a little more, we should not be jealous. Indeed jealousy is only a polite word for the most subtle selfishness.

Let us be equipped with the full armor of God and then we will be ready for service.

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

The downfall of the rich may sometimes be necessary for the uplifting of the poor.

Manager's Column

Some time ago we notified our subscribers through this column of our intention to send each delinquent subscriber a notice stating the amount due and unpaid. This notice was mailed and a great many responded by paying up their subscriptions or writing us to the effect that they were unable to pay at the present time; a great many, however, paid no attention to our notice, not even extending the courtesy of a reply. We have decided to send another notice to these delinquents to again call their attention to the fact that they are in debt to The Restitution is an effort to collect the four or five hundred dollars still outstanding; and we earnestly ask that those receiving the notices to at least acknowledge receipt of same, and also notify us as to whether they expect to pay the amount due. We are very sorry it is necessary to have to again refer to this matter, and trust this will be the last time.

Census blanks keep coming in each day, and we have many from every state in the union. In a couple of weeks the work of placing them in alphabetical order in our Census Book will be started; so if you have not sent your blank or list in yet, you will have to hurry. Everybody wants to be in the Census Book.

There is always a steady demand for Bro. Huggins' book, but at the special price he has advertised it until Jan 1, 1912, this demand will doubtless be much greater. Better take advantage of this offer.

AND DONT FORGET THE SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OFFER.

UNTIL JAN. 1ST, 1912

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts," the most widely circulated book ever published by our people, can be obtained for 90 cents per copy. This special offer is made only until the first of the new year. The money received from this special sale of the book will go partly to The Restitution Pub. Co., and partly to the author, who is now taking a course in proofreading and who needs a few extra pennies to meet the expenses of completing his education in this profession.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

W. B. Townsend 1.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

